

Publication of the University of the Panjāb, Lāhore, Pākistān

KASHIR

A History of Kashmīr

by

Al-Hājj Dr. G. M. D. SUFI

FIRST VOLUME

By the Author of "Kashīr"—

(1) Al-Minhāj—Being the Evolution of Curriculum in the Muslim Educational Institutions of India.

[Shaikh Muhammad Ashraf, Kashmīrī Bāzār, Lāhore, Pākistān. Price—Rs. 5.]

(2) Common sense on Pākistān (First Edition).

[The Bombay Muslim Students' Federation, Juma' Masjid Building, Grant Road, Bombay 8. Price—Re. 1.]

Second Edition (Revised). Maktaba-e-Adab, Bombay 8.

[Publisher—M. Sanāullāh Khān, 26, Railway Road, Lāhore. Price Rs. 2/-.]

Urdu Translation of the first edition by Taskīn (Alig.) published by the Maktaba-e-Adab, Bombay 8. Re. 1/4.

(3) Sughra—Being a discussion of the Status and Schooling of Muslim Women in India.

[Printed draft awaiting revision for the press for publication.]

Note.—A.C. in "Kashīr" represents After Christ, and stands for Anno Domino or A.D.

Dr. G. M. D. Sufi has presented his Kashīr to the University of the Panjab. The University has accepted it. Kashīr now appears as a Panjab University Publication. Dr. Sufi has no interest in its sale.

4th December, 1943.

M. AFZAL HUSAIN,
Vice-Chancellor,
University of the Panjab.

KASHĪR

BEING A HISTORY OF KASHMĪR

From the Earliest Times to Our Own

BY

G. M. D. SUFI, M.A., D.LITT. (Sorbonne, Paris)

Sometime Visiting Student at Columbia University, New York

Central Provinces and Berar Educational Service (Retd.)

Formerly Registrar, University of Delhi

In Two Volumes — Volume I

The University of the Panjab

Lahore, Pakistan

1948

To the Memory of
SIR MUHAMMAD IQBAL

WHO SAID—

تم گلے ز خیا بان جنت کشمیر
دل از حریم حجاز و نواز شیراز است

[In Kashmīr's garden, in the heaven
Of Kashmīr, was my body formed,
Hijāz the Holy gave my heart
Its life-beats, and Shirāz its songs.]

PREFACE

It is strange that the Valley of Kashmīr has had so many to describe its hills, its dales and its lakes, its snows and streams and shades, but hardly any to narrate its history or tell the story of what the Valley has given to the world. Kalhana's Rājataranginī, literally, "River of Kings," certainly scans its history in Sanskrit verse from the earliest times up to 1149 A.C. But, at best, this "River of Kings" remained, as it were, the Shāh-nāma of Kashmīr in the sense of a loose, versified narrative. It is to the industry and assiduity of the late Sir Aurel Stein that we owe the monumental annotated English translation which has clarified the contents of Kalhana's "Chronicle of the Kings of Kashmīr" for the serious student of the early history of Kashmīr.

Kalhana's chronicle was continued in Sanskrit verse till 1450 A.C. by Pandit Jonarāja in his Rājāvalī; by his pupil Pandit Shrivara in his Jaina-Rājataranginī till 1486 A.C.; by Prājyabhatta in his Rājāvalīpatākā till 1512 A.C.; and by Shuka in his Rājataranginī up to the conquest of Kashmīr by Akbar in 1586 A.C., and even a little further till 1596 A.C. These versified Sanskrit chronicles are available to the English reader in the Kings of Kashmīra by the late Mr. Jogesh Chunder Dutt. But this series too is far from satisfactory. My own view finds corroboration from the remarks of Sir Aurel Stein, when he says: "Jonarāja was a scholar of considerable attainments but apparently without any originality. Shrivara was a slavish imitator of Kalhana. The work of Prājyabhatta and Shuka is inferior in composition even to Shrivara's chronicle." (The Ancient Geography of Kashmīr, page 42).

Besides, the Sanskrit text of Jonarāja used by Mr. Dutt, viz., the Calcutta edition of 1835, contained 980 shlokas, while Dr. Peterson's Sanskrit text of Jonarāja, viz., the Bombay edition of 1896, contains 1334 shlokas. Moreover, the actual work of Prājyabhatta, entitled Rājāvalīpatākā, has not yet been taken notice of. And Shuka's Rājataranginī has been mistaken for the joint work of Prājyabhatta and Shuka by Mr. Dutt, Dr. Peterson and Sir Aurel Stein, obviously on account of the confusion caused by the accession of Sultān Fath Shāh thrice to the throne of Kashmīr. When Shrīvara closed his chronicle, Fath Shāh was ruling for the first time. When Shuka began his chronicle, Fath Shāh was again Sultān. As the same ruler was reigning for the second time, the link to these three scholars appeared to be continuous. But the fact is that the Rājāvalīpatākā of Pandit Prājyabhatta deals with the intervening period of 25 years, from 1487 to 1512 A.C., when Sultān Fath Shāh and Sultān Muhammad Shāh deposed and succeeded each other twice.

There are several histories in Persian relating to pre-Mughul, Mughul and post-Mughul periods, a few in Urdu too, but there is no reliable, up-to-date record of the history of Kashmīr available as a trustworthy guide for students interested in the subject.

Consequently I have made an attempt in this direction. In view, however, of Sir Aurel Stein's English translation of Kalhana's chronicle, a standard work on the ancient history of Kashmīr, and in view of the great learning we find in the River of Kings by the late Ranjīt Sītārām Pandit who brings out noteworthy contributions made during the Vedic, Buddhist and Brahmanical periods of the history of Kashmīr, I have confined my task to a somewhat fuller treatment of the mediæval period, chronicling events, however, up to our own times. Rather than give a bare sketch of the doings of the kings of Kashmīr during the particular period under review, it appeared to me to be more important to treat the subject from the cultural point of view. Therefore, though I am presenting a more or less continuous record of the political history of Kashmīr from the earliest times till our own, some prominence has been given to the exposition of Muslim Polity in the Valley of Kashmīr as this interesting and important aspect of the history of Kashmīr has seldom had any special notice taken of it.

Kashir, the title of this book, is the name given to the Valley of Kashmīr by the Kashmīrī, who calls himself and his language—"Koshur." or "Kāshur." The use of the word Kashmīr, as Sir George Grierson points out in his Dictionary of the Kashmīrī Language, page 481, is more Hindustānī and Irānian than properly Kashmīrī.

The late Sir Aurel Stein worked at the Rājataranginī while he was Registrar of the University of the Panjāb. It is a coincidence that it fell to my lot to undertake the writing of Kashīr, styling it Islamic Culture in Kashmīr, while I was Registrar of the University of Delhi. And now this book is for the first time being published, in its present form and under its revised title, by the University of the Panjāb, the old University of Sir Aurel Stein, in two volumes like Sir Aurel's. At this time also, the revised edition by Sir Aurel of his English translation of Kalhāna's Chronicle of the Kings of Kashmīr is reported to be under publication by the State of Jammu and Kashmīr. But unfortunately Sir Aurel died in 1943 at Kābul in Afghānistān.

In Chapter I of Kashīr the reader will find a general description of Kashmīr and observations on the character and condition of the Kashmīrīs.

In Chapter II an attempt is made to epitomize the history of Kashmīr from the earliest times to the advent of Islam in the land. The propagation of Islam on account of its outstanding mark on the Valley is discussed in Chapter III.

Chapters IV and V deal with the early Muslīm rulers of the land. These two chapters cover a period of over 260 years from 1320 to 1586 A.C., roughly parallel in Indian history to the period from the accession of Muhammad Tughluq to about the middle of Akbar's reign, or in English history from the reign of Edward II to nearly the middle of that of Elizabeth. Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, who ruled from 1354 to 1373 A.C., was the first Muslim ruler of Kashmīr to extend his conquest to Kābul and Kāshghar, and to defeat the Jām of Sind. The greatness of Kashmīr reached its zenith under Zain-ul-'Abidīn, popularly known as Bad Shāh or the 'Great Sovereign,' who conquered Tibet and the Punjāb, and established his kingdom from Purshāwar, the modern Peshāwar, to Sind and Sarhind. His rule extending over 50 years, from 1420 to 1470 A.C., constituted the Golden Age of Kashmīr in its mediæval days. Zain-ul-'Abidīn's reign was almost contemporaneous with the times of the Sayyid ruler, Khizr Khān's son, Mu'izz-ud-Dīn Mubārak, his two successors—Muhammad and 'Alā-ud-Dīn 'Alam Shāh—and Buhlūl Lodī. The enlightened rule of the Sultān of Kashmīr presented a striking contrast to the chaos and confusion then prevailing in and around Delhi, the centre and symbol of the glory of Hindustān.

An effort has been made to straighten the puzzle, presented by Kashmīr chronology during the period of the later Sultāns of Kashmīr, by means of coins, inscriptions, chronograms and a careful comparison of the records left by contemporary Hindu and Muslim chroniclers.

The conquest of Kashmīr by the Mughuls and their rule, extending over a period of 164 years, is the subject of Chapter VI. Chapter VII treats of Kashmīr under the Afghāns, who held it for 67 years till 1819 A.C., when Muslim rule in Kashmīr came to a close after lasting for a period of about 500 years.

A chart of important contemporary events in politics and culture in the world, during the period of Muslim rule in Kashmīr from 1320 A.C. to 1819 A.C., has been added. A glance at this chart will emphasize the importance of a viewpoint which, it is hoped, will be at once interesting and instructive: Here Volume I of Kashmīr ends.

A broad general survey of Islamic culture in Kashmīr is given in Chapters VIII, IX and X under the heads: (i) Letters and Litterateurs in Kashmīr under Muslim Rule, (ii) Arts and Crafts in Kashmīr under Muslim Rule, and (iii) Civil and Military Organization under Muslim Rule in Kashmīr. In these Chapters, with which Volume II of Kashmīr opens, the reader will find a summary of the important influences exercised by the impact of Muslim State and Society on the people of Kashmīr.

Chapter XI, Kashmīr under the Sikhs for 27 years from 1810 to 1846, is followed by Chapter XII, the last one, Kashmīr under Dogrā rule, which carries the narrative down to the death of Mahārājā Pratāp Singh on 23rd September, 1925.

The system of transliteration adopted is mostly that used in the Cambridge History of India as far as the resources of the press have permitted, while variants in English spelling are those which are preferred by the Concise Oxford Dictionary.

I must tell the reader beforehand that Kashir is intended as a source-book for workers in the subject, and therefore I have not hesitated to quote copiously from specialists and eye-witnesses who had an appeal on the point concerned. I have abstained from rehashing their observations or reproducing their accounts in my own words.

At times verses, couplets and short passages from Persian or Urdu have not been translated into English. They appear in original in Kashir for their exquisite expression in Persian or Urdu. In translation "the personal idiom, the music of the verse, and the ramification of the imagery involved" must necessarily be blurred. A prosaic and pedestrian translation is but "an opaque screen," and consequently has not been attempted, for which the indulgence of the purely English-knowing reader is craved.

Several scholars, friends, acquaintances and others have read Kashir here and there, some complete, some in parts in which they were interested or were specialists. Some read the book to eliminate error in phrasing and punctuation. All these are too numerous to be mentioned individually. I am very grateful to them all.

If I have presented this labour of love of mine to the University of the Panjāb and if the Syndicate of the University has accepted it, the stimulus has come mainly from the Hon'ble Justice Dr. Dīn Muhammad, M.A., LL.D., Judge, High Court of Judicature Panjāb.*

* GHULĀM MUHYI'D DĪN SŪFĪ.

Chinār Bāgh, Srīnagar, Kashmīr.

26th Maghar, 2001 Bikramī.

Sunday, 10th December, 1944 A.C.

23rd Zu'l-Hijja, 1363 A.H.

*Now (1948) His Excellency the Hon'ble Dr. Dīn Muhammad, M.A., LL.D., Governor, Sīnd (Pākistān).

Acknowledgment for varied assistance—Names of persons who have assisted me by typewriting parts or pages of the manuscript for the press:—Lieutenant Ahmad Muhiy'd Dīn Sūfi, B.A. (Luck.), ex-R.I.N.V.R., Urban Rehabilitation Officer for Sind, Karāchī, formerly Resettlement Advice Officer, Bombay. Mr. Mahmūd Muhiy'd Dīn Sūfi, M.A. (Bomb.), Exchange Bank of India & Africa Limited, Karāchī. Miss Maimūna Sūfi, B.A., B.T. (Panj.), 81, Narimān Road, Karāchī. Mr. 'Abdullāh Hasan Khān, B. A., LL. B. (Bomb.), Bombay. Mr. Muhammad Shafi' Quraishī, Panjāb University Library, Lāhore. Mr. G.K. Reddi, formerly Editor, The Kashmir Times, Amira Kadal, Srinagar. Pandit Prithvī Nāth Kaul Bāmizāi, B.A. (Panj.), Ra'īs, Kaul Manor, Zaina Kadal, Srinagar. Khwāja Ghulām Ahmad, B. A. (Alig.), LL. B. (Panj.), Residency Road, Srinagar. Mr. Ya'qūb Santrām, Stenographer, office of the University of Delhi, Mr. Bhagat Rām, formerly of the office of the University of Delhi. Maulavī Muhammad Hamīd-ud-Dīn, formerly Accountant, in the same office. Mr. Muhammad Shafi', Typist, office of the Director of Education, Jammu & Kashmir State. Pandit Jānkī Nāth, Typist, office of the Municipality, Srinagar. The late Mr. Vaidya and Mr. Bāpat, Typists, office of the Bombay University Library, Bombay. Typist to Mr. Bahmanjī Dubāsh, Colāba, Bombay. Mr. Hātīm, Stenographer, Exchange Bank of India & Africa Ltd., Karāchī. Mr. Ghaus Muhammad Khān Lodī, Typist, The C. & M. G. Press, Lāhore.

Mr. G. Mu'in-ud-Dīn, P.A.S., Mr. 'Ināyatullāh Khān, P.A.S., Khwāja Ghulām Muhammad, P.C.S. (retd.), deputed their Stenographers for typing portions of Kashīr.

The staffs of the (i) Panjāb University Library, Lāhore, specially Mr. Muhammad Shafi' Quraishī, Qārī Muhammad Zarīf, Maulavī 'Abdus Subbūh, Khalifa 'Abdur Rahmān and M. Ghulām Muhammad ; (ii) of the University of Bombay, under its enthusiastic Librarian, Dr. P.M. Joshi, M. A., Ph.D. (London), his former Assistant, Mr. Bhusle, and principally Mr. Saudāgar, Mr. Nārvekar, Mr. Rege, Mr. Nāyak, Mr. Joshi and Mr. Wali Ahmad Kamālī ; (iii) Sri Pratāp Singh Library, Srinagar, and the Librarian Mr. J. Sapru, B.A. ; (iv) the Archaeology and Research Library, Srinagar, and particularly the Assistant, Khwāja Ghulām Ahmad Mushtāq ; (v) Khān Bahādur Khalifa Muhammad Asadullāh, B.A., when Librarian of the Imperial Library, Calcutta, promptly answered all references about books, maps, etc., in his Library and attended to the dispatch of books whenever addressed.

CONTENTS

Volume I

Dedication to the late Sir Muhammad Iqbāl ..	The Opening Page
Preface	i—vi
Contents	vii
Table of Contents	viii—xxviii
List of Maps and Illustrations in Kashīr ..	xxix—xxxiv
Note on Maps, Portraits and Illustrations ..	xxxv—xxxviii
Bibliography—
(i) Section I—Some Important Original Sources	xxxix—xlii
(ii) Section II—Manuscripts—Persian and Urdu	xliii—xlix
(iii) Section III—Published Works—English, Persian, Urdu, Hindi Kashmiri, Gurmukhi	l—lxviii
(iv) Section IV—Periodicals ..	lxix—lxxv
Kashīr Chronology	lxxvi
Errata—Volume I	lxxvii

Chapter I.— Kashīr and the Kōshur or Kashmīr and the .. Kashmīr	1—29
Chapter II.—Early History, Buddhist and Brāhmanical	30—74
Chapter III.—The Spread of Islam in Kashmīr ..	75—116 d
Chapter IV.—The Sultāns of Kashmīr	117—216
Chapter V.— Kashmīr under the Chaks	216 a —238
Chapter VI.— Kashmīr under the Mughuls	239—295
Chapter VII.— Kashmīr under the Afghāns	296—342
Chart of Contemporary Events in Politics and Culture in the World during the period of Muslim Rule in Kashmīr from 1324 A.C. to 1819 A.C. ..	1—82
Index to Volume I	83—148

Volume II

Chapter VIII.—Letters and Littérateurs in Kashmīr under Muslim Rule	343—500
Chapter IX.—Arts and Crafts in Kashmīr under Muslim Rule	501—598
Chapter X.—Civil and Military Organization under Muslim Rule in Kashmīr	599—698
Chapter XI.— Kashmīr under the Sikhs	699—750 a
Chapter XII.— Kashmīr under the Dogrās	751—832
Errata—Volume II	833
Index to Volume II	149—258

Some Opinions on Kashīr I, II, III.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

VOLUME I

CHAPTER I

KASHMİR AND THE KÖSHUR OR KASHMİR AND THE KASHMİRĪ

	Page.
Kashmīr and Switzerland	2
Kashmīr and Greece	2
The Beauty of the Dal	3
Other Attractions	5
Climate	6
The Valley of Kashmīr	7
Area	8
Population	8
Kashmīr a Vast Lake in Prehistoric Times ?	9
The Legend of the Lake	9
Geological Evidence	11
The Name Kashmīr	12
Kashmīr Made Known Abroad	13
The Stone Age in Kashmīr	15
The Aborigines as the First Settlers	15
The Āryans	15
The Jews	15
The Ārabs	18
The Character of the Kashmīrī	19
The Women of Kashmīr	22
Criticism of the Kashmīrī	25
The Future of the Kashmīrī	29
Addenda to Chapter I	73

CHAPTER II

THE PRE-ISLAMIC PERIOD

Genealogical Table of the Kings of Kashmīr during the Pre-Islamic Period	30—34
(a) The earliest known Kings of Kashmīr
Gonanda I	35
Damodara I	36

	Page
(b) The Pāṇḍu Dynasty
A gap of 35 Kings	36
Rāmadeva	37
Sundarasena	37
(c) The Maurya Dynasty
Aśoka	37
Jalauka	39
Dāmodara II	40
"Christ in Kashmir?" Saṁdhimati	40
(d) The Kushāna Dynasty
Yueh-chi	41
Kadphises I A.C. 15	41
Kadphises II A.C. 45	41
Kanishka A.C. 78	41
Huvishka A.C. 123	43
Vasudeva or Juskha A. C. 140	43
Abhimanyu I	43
(e) The Gonanda Dynasty
Gonanda III	43
Nara	43
(f) The White Huns
Mihirakula A.C. 528	43
Kālidāsa	46
Yudhishtira I	47
Vikramāditya	47
Pravarasena II A.C. 580	47
[Srinagar]	47—49
Bālāditya	49
(g) The Kārkoṭa Dynasty
Durlabhavardhana A.C. 627—663	49
[The Nāgas]	49—50
Durlabhaka A.C. 663—713	51
[Excavations at Tāpar]	51
Chandrāpīḍa A.C. 713—721	52
Tārāpīḍa A.C. 721—725	52
Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa A.C. 725—753	52
Ṣajrāditya	54
Jayāpīḍa A.C. 753—782	54
Avantivarman A.C. 855—883	55
Çaṁkaravarman A.C. 883—902	57

Yaçaskara A.C. 939—948	58
(i) The First Lohara Dynasty
Kshemagupta A.C. 950—958	58
Abhimanyu II A.C. 958—972	58
Diddā A.C. 980—1003	58
Sultān Mahmūd's Invasion	59
Harirāja A.C. 1028, Ananta A.C. 1028—1063, Kalaça A.C. 1063—1089	59
Abhinavagupta, the Çaiva Philosopher	59
Kshemendra	60
Bilhaṇa	61
Harsha A.C. 1089—1101	61
(j) The Second Lohara Dynasty
Ucchala A. C. 1101—1111	62
Two Centuries of Misrule	63
Sussala A.C. 1112—20. Restoration A.C. 1121—28	63
Jayasimha A.C. 1128—1155	63
Mammaṭa and other Poets of the Period	63
Mañkha	64
Kalhana (Kalyāṇa)	64
The Rājatarāṅgiṇī	65
Jayasimha's Successors	66
Sahadeva A.C. 1300-1 and 1319-20	67
[The Valley of Kishtwār]	67—68
Riñchana A.C. 1320—23	69
Udayanadeva A.C. 1323—38	69
Koṭā Rānī A.C. 1338—39	69
Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mīr or Mīrzā A.C. 1339—1392	69
Causes of the Ruin of Hindu Rule in Kashmīr	69
Brāhmans' Cultural Contribution Summarized	70
[Çankara Āchārya]	71
Kashmīr Çaivism	71
[Sir Mark Aurel Stein]	72—73

CHAPTER III

THE SPREAD OF ISLAM IN KASHMĪR

Earliest Contact with Sind	75
Islam and Hinduism	78
Another Contrast of the Two	79

Beginning of Islam by Friars and Darvishes	80
Bilāl or Bulbul Shāh's Conversion of Rīfīchana	81
Conversions to Islam by Sayyids	84
Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī	84
Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī	92
Conversion of Malik Sūhabḥaṭṭa	93
Revival of Interest in Religion under Calamities ..	94
The Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr	96
Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī	98
Sultān Sikandar's Share in the Persecution of Hindus ..	103
Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī	109
Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm	112
Shāh Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī	115
After all, the Fuqarā' Spread Islam in Kashmīr ..	116
Appendix to Chapter III—the Mausoleum of Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī at Khatlān, now called Kolāb in Tājikistān, U.S.S.R., 116 a, b, c, d.

CHAPTER IV

THE SULTĀNS OF KASHMĪR

[A.C. 1320—1555]

The Last Phase of Hindu Rule in Kashmīr before the Sultāns	117
Dulcha's Invasion	117
Rinchen, Rinchaña or Rintan	119
Rinchaña becomes King of Kashmīr	120
Rinchaña's Sense of Justice	121
Rinchaña's Conversion to Islam. Becomes Sadr-ud-Dīn ..	123
Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn's Death	126
Chaos in Kashmīr. Islam suffers a Reverse	127
Koṭa Rānī's Religion	127
Udyānadeva's return; his Reign from A.C. 1323—1338 ..	128
Invasion by Achala or Urwan or Urdil. Udayanadeva's Flight	128
Koṭa Rānī's Appeal to her subjects: United Resistance and the Invader's Retreat	129
Udyānadeva Re-appears in Kashmīr	129
Koṭa Rānī Rules from A.C. 1338 to 1339	130
Shāh Mīr's Ancestry	130
The End of Koṭa Rānī	131
Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I [A.H. 740—743 or A.C. 1339—1342]	132
The Genealogical Table of the First Muslim Dynasty of Kashmīr,	132A

Sultān Jamshīd [A.H. 743 or A.C. 1342]	134
Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn A.H. 743—755 or A.C. 1342—1354]	134
The Sultanate	135
Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn [A.H. 755—775 or A.C. 1354—1373]	136
Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn [A.H. 775—794 or A.C. 1373—1389]	141
Sultān Sikandar [A.H. 791—816 or A.C. 1389—1413]	143
Timūr's Invasion of India. Exchange of Courtesy with Sikandar	144
Sikandar's Patronage of Learning	145
Sikandar's Zeal for Religion	146
Architecture of Sikandar's Time	146
Sikandar's Regard for Sayyid Muhammad Hamadānī	147
Sikandar's Death	147
Sikandar's Share in the Persecution of Hindus	148
Sultān 'Alī Shāh [A.H. 816—823 or A.C. 1413—1420]	155
Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn [A.H. 823—874 or A.C. 1420—1470]	157
Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's Passion for Architecture	158
[The Wulur Lake]	158—9
Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's Patronage of Arts and Crafts	161
Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's Patronage of Letters	162
Baḍ Shāh's Army and His Conquests	170
His Statesmanship and Foreign Relations	170
Baḍ Shāh's Attitude towards Hindus	172
Baḍ Shāh's Suavity in effecting Reforms	174
Baḍ Shāh's Sources of Income	175
Zain-ul-'Ābidīn and Akbar Compared	175
The Family Lives of Baḍ Shāh and Akbar	177
Baḍ Shāh and Akbar in their General Habits	179
Baḍ Shāh's Closing Days and Death	179
Sultān Haidar Shāh [A.H. 874—877 or A.C. 1470—1472]	184
Sultān Hasan Shāh [A.H. 877—889 or A.C. 1472—1484]	185
The Struggle Between Muhammad Shāh and his Father's Cousin Fath Shāh for the Throne of Kashmīr	187
Sultān Muhammad Shāh (i) [A.H. 889—892 or A.C. 1484—1486]	187
Sultān Fath Shāh (i) [A.H. 892—898 or A.C. 1486—1493]	189
Sultān Muhammad Shāh (ii) [A.H. 898—911 or A.C. 1493—1505]	190
Sultān Fath Shāh (ii) [A.H. 911—920 or A.C. 1505—1514]	191
Sultān Muhammad Shāh (iii) [A.H. 920—921 or A.C. 1514—1515]	193
Sultān Fath Shāh (iii) [A.H. 921—922 or A.C. 1515—1516]	193
Sultān Muhammad Shāh (iv) [A.H. 922—934 or A.C. 1516—1528]	194
Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh I [A.H. 934—935 or A.C. 1528—1529]	195
Sultān Nāzuk Shāh (i) [A.H. 935—936 or A.C. 1529—1530]	195

Sultān Muhammad Shāh (v) [A.H. 936—943 or A.C. 1530—1537]	196
Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn II [A.H. 943—944 or A.C. 1537—1538]	198
Sultān Ismā'il Shāh I [A.H. 944—945 or A.C. 1538—1539]	199
Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh II [A.H. 945—946 or A.C. 1539—1540]	199
Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt	200
The Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī	203
Sultān Nāzuk Shāh (ii) [A.H. 946—958 or A.C. 1540—1551]	204
Sultān Ismā'il Shāh II [A.H. 958—961 or A.C. 1551—1554]	210
Sultān Habib Shāh—The Last of the Shāh Mirīs [A.H. 961—962 or A.C. 1554—1555]	211
Addenda to Chapter IV	212
Chronology and Genealogy of the Shāh Mirī Dynasty	213
Chronology and Genealogy of the Chak Dynasty	213
Dates of the Shāh Mirīs and the Chaks according to the Ā'in-i-Akbarī of Abū'l Fazl	214
Dates of the Shāh Mirīs and Chaks according to Jonarāja, Çrīvara, Prājyabhaṭṭa and Çuka	215-216

CHAPTER V

KASHMĪR UNDER THE CHAKS

[A.C. 1560—1586]

The Genealogical Table of the Chak Dynasty	216A
Origin of the Chaks	217
Ghāzī Chak [A.H. 962—970 or A.C. 1555—1563]	219
Husain Shāh Chak [A.H. 970—978 or A.C. 1563—1570]	221
'Alī Shāh Chak [A.H. 978—987 or A.C. 1570—1579]	225
Yūsuf Shāh Chak (i) [A.H. 987 or A.C. 1579]	227
Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī [A.H. 987 or A. C. 1579]	228
Lohur Shāh Chak [A.H. 987—988 or A.C. 1579—1580]	228
Yūsuf Shāh Chak (ii) [A.H. 988—994 or A.C. 1580—1586]	229
Ya'qūb Shāh Chak [A.H. 994 or A.C. 1586]	233
[Pakhlī]	228

CHAPTER VI

KASHMĪR UNDER THE MUGHULS

[A.C. 1586—1752]

The Mughul Rulers concerned with the History of Kashmīr [A.C. 1586—1752]	239
The last Effort of the last of the Chaks	241
The End of Yūsuf Shāh Chak	243

Akbar's Reign in Kashmīr	244
Three Well-known Qasīdas on Kashmīr	244
The Building of the Nāgar-Nagar	24 ^c
[Khawāja Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad]	249-250
Jahāngīr	251
[The Chinār]	252
Thomas Moore on Jahāngīr and Nūr Jahān in Kashmīr	253
[Malik Haidar Chāḍura]	257-258
A Dutch Protestant's View of Kashmīr under Jahāngīr	259
Shāh Jahān	266
[Zafar Khān Ahsan]	271
A galaxy of famous Poets	273
Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr	273
Lala Rookh	278
Later Mughuls	286
Muhammad Murād Kashmīrī	288
Immigration of the Nehrūs	288
Muhammad Shāh	289
Mīr 'Ināyatullāh Khān Kashmīrī	290
Beginning of the Transfer from Mughul to Afghān Rule	293
Summary of the Benefits of Mughul Rule	294

CHAPTER VII

KASHMĪR UNDER THE AFGHĀNS

[A.C. 1752—1819]

The Genealogy of the Durrānī Dynasty of Ahmad Shāh	296
Ahmad Shāh Durrānī	297
Timūr Shāh	300
Zamān Shāh	300
The Genealogy of the Bārakzaī Dynasty of Afghānistān	302
Shujā'-ul-Mulk	304
The Afghān's Bad Start in Kashmīr	308
Rājā Sukh Jīwan Mal Khatri, Governor of Kashmīr under the Afghāns. Other Afghān Governors	309
How Ranjit Singh was Interested in Kashmīr	324
[The Kūh or Kōh-i-Nūr Diamond]	325-326
The End of Muslim Rule in the Valley of Kashmīr	337
[Pandit Mohan Lāl Kashmīrī alias Āghā Hasan Jān]	338

VOLUME II

CHAPTER VIII

LETTERS AND LITTERATEURS IN KASHMĪR UNDER MUSLIM RULE

	Page
Promotion of Learning in Kashmīr	344
[Muftī Muhammad Shāh Sa'ādat]	345
Under Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn	346
Under Sultān Sikandar	347
Under Baḍ Shāh	347
Under Sultān Hasan Shāh	349
Under Husain Shāh Chak	349
Under the Mughuls	350

SOME MEN OF LEARNING

Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī	358
Mullā Muhsin Fānī	365
The Dabistān & its unsettled Authorship	367
[Khawājā Muhammad A'zam Kaul (?) Mustaghni]	373
[Pir Hasan Shāh]	374
Akhund Mullā Kamāl	375
['Allāma 'Abdul Hakīm Siālkotī]	377
[Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq]	377
[Shaikh Ahmad Sarhindī]	379
['Allāmi Sa'dullāh Khān Chiniōṭī]	379
Khawāja 'Abdul Karīm	380
Khān 'Allāma Tafazzul Husain Khān of Lucknow	382
Maulavi Sayyid Muhammad Anwar Shāh of Lolāb	383

SOME WOMEN OF NOTE

Lalla 'Ārifā	383
Bībī Tāj Khātūn	387
Bībī Bārī'a	387
Bībī Haura	387
Bībī Bahat	388
Lachhma Khātūn	388
Gul Khātūn	389

Bibi Sāliha	389
Habba Khātūn	389
Hāfiza Maryam	391
Hāfiza Khadīja	391
Begam Sumrū	391

THE KASHMIRI LANGUAGE

The Origin and Growth of the Kashmiri Language	..	395
Kashmiri Literature	..	398
A Dictionary of the Kashmiri Language	..	399
Kashmiri Proverbs	..	399
Kashmiri Riddles	..	400
Kashmiri Folk-Tales	..	401
Newspapers & Broadcasts in Kashmiri	..	401
The Kashmiri Script	..	402

KASHMIRI POETRY

Some notable Kashmiri Poets and their Works	..	404
Some Features of Kashmiri Poetry	..	414
The Akanandan	..	417
Lalla 'Ārifā	..	423
Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī	..	423
Parmānand	..	423
Mrs. Bhawānidās Kāchru	..	425
Lakhshman Bhaṭṭ	..	426
Wahhāb Khār	..	426
'Azīz Darvīsh	..	427
Fīrzāda Ghulām Ahmad Mahjūr	..	427
Master 'Abdul Ahad Āzād	..	428
Master Zinda Kaul, B.A.	..	428
'Abdul Quddūs Rasā Jāvidānī	..	429
Asadullāh Mīr	..	429
The First Period of Kashmiri Poetry	..
Lalla 'Ārifā	..	430
Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī	..	430
The Second Period of Kashmiri Poetry	..
Habba Khātūn	..	431
Khawāja Habībullāh Nau-shahrī	..	432
Mrs. Bhawānī Dās Kāchru	..	432

The Third Period of Kashmīrī Poetry

Mahmūd Gāmī	433
Maqbūl Shāh Krālawārī	434
Rasūl Mīr Shāhābādī	436
‘Abdul Ahad Nāzim	437
Swāmī Parmānand	438
‘Abdul Wahhāb Parē	440
‘Azīzullāh Haqqānī	441

The Modern Period of Kashmīrī Poetry

Pīrzāda Ghulām Ahmad Mahjūr	441
Mīrzā Ghulām Hasan Beg ‘ Arif , M.Sc.	445

KASHMIR'S CONTRIBUTION TO PERSIAN POETRY

Part I—By Muslims

The Advent of Persian Poetry into the Valley and its brief Evaluation	446
The Three Periods of Persian Poetry in Kashmīr	..		453

Section—I. Poets during the Period of the Sultāns and Pādshāhs
[A.C. 1324—1586]

Amīn Mantiqī Baihaqī Uwais or Wais	456
Amīn Mustaghni	456
Shaikh Dā‘ūd Khākī	457
Shaikh Ya‘qūb Sarfi	458

Section—II. Poets during the Period of Mughul and Afghān Rule in Kashmīr

[A.C. 1586—1819]

Mazharī	459
Mullā Muhsin Fānī	461
Mullā Tāhir Ghanī Ashāī	462
Hāji Aslām Sālim	469
Auji Kashmīrī	470
Fīratī	471
Furūghī	471
Najmī	472
Abdul Hakīm Sātī	473
Mullā Muhammad Taufiq	473
Khwāja Habībullah Hubbī	474
‘Abdullāh Mizahī Farībī	475

Bābā Nasīb-ud-Dīn Ghāẓi	475
Mullā Zihni	476
Mirzā Akmal-ud-Dīn Kāmīl	476
Mirzā Muhtasham Khān Fidā	477
Khwāja Rafī' Rāfi'	478
Mullā Ashraf Dāirī	479
'Abdul Wahhāb Shā'iq	480

Section III—Poets during the period of Sikh and Dogrā Rule in Kashmir

[A.C. 1819—1925]

Mullā Bāhā'-ud-Dīn Bahā	480
Mullā Hamidullāh Hamīd	481
Mirzā Mujrim	481
Khwāja Hasan Shī'rī	482
Mirzā Mahdī	483
Sir Muhammad Iqbāl	483

Part II—By Kashmiri Pandits

Kashmīrī Pandits' Interest in Persian Poetry	485
Proficiency in Persian paid the Pandit	487
Extracts from the Persian Poetry of a few noted Kashmīrī Pandits	488

MEDICINE IN KASHMIR

Introductory	492
Under Baḍ Shāh	495
Under the Mughuls	495
Under the Afghāns	496
Under the Sikhs	496
Under the Dogrās	497

CHAPTER IX

ARTS AND CRAFTS IN KASHMĪR UNDER MUSLIM RULE

Diferent Phases of Kashmīrī Art	502
ARCHITECTURE	505
The Tomb of Sultān Sikandar's Queen	506
Sayyid Muhammad Madanī's Tomb	506
The Wooden Architecture of Kashmir	508

Zain-ul-'Ābidin's Palaces	509
The Mosque of Madanī or Madyan Sāhib	511
The Jāmi' Masjid of Srinagar	512
The Shāh Hamadān Mosque	514
The Tomb of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī	514
The Jāmi' Masjid of Shupiyān	515
The Mughul Architecture of Kashmīr	515
The Nau (New) or Patthar (Sangin) or Shahrī (Royal) Masjid			515
The Parī Mahall	516
The Harī Parbat Fort	517
Mughul Rest-Houses	520
The Hammām or the Turkish Bath	521
Bridges	521
Sculpture	522
The Lapidary's Work	523
GARDENS	..	.	524
The Shālāmār Garden	528
The Meaning of the Word "Shālāmār"	529
The Design of the Shālāmār	531
The Nashāt (commonly misspelt as Nishāt)	532
The Chashma-i-Shāhī	533
The Ver-Nāg Spring	535
Archaeological Remains in Kashmīr	535
[The River Jhelum]		..	537
The Kukar-nāg Spring	539
The Achabal (Sāhib-ābād Spring)	539
Other Mughul Gardens	542
The Alapathar	543
The Chinār's Glamour	543
[The Bulbul]	546
MUSIC	546
Bad Shāh's love of Music	549
Çrivarā's description of Kashmīrī Dances	549
Sultān Haidar Shāh's interest in Music	551
Sultān Hasan Shāh's encouragement of Music	551
Mīrzā Haidar's impetus to Music	553
Akbar and Tān Sain	553
Yūsuf Shāh Chak	553
PAINTING	555
Mānī in Kashmīr	555

The Kashmīrī Qalam	556
The Hāshiya or the Border	556
CALLIGRAPHY	557
Muhammad Husain "Zarrīn Qalam"	558
INDUSTRIES	560
Shawls	561
Shawls made of kel-phamb	562
Origin of the Shawl Industry	562
Shāh Hamadān's initiative in the Shawl Industry	563
Classes of Shawls	563
Shawls under the Mughuls	563
Shawls under the Afghāns	564
Prices of Shawls	565
How Shawls became fashionable in the West	565
Kashmīr Shawl not successfully copied	567
Embroidery	569
The Gabba	569
[Islāmābād]	570
Carpets	571
Silk	572
Paper	576
Papier Mâché	577
Book-binding	579
The Lacquer-binding	580
Jewellery	581
Silver-Work	583
Copper-Work	584
Enamels	585
Woodwork	585
The Khatam-band	586
Boat-Making, the House-boat and the Hānjī	586
Mat-Making, etc.	589
Wicker-Work	589
The Kāngrī	589
Leather	591
Furs	592
Arms	592
Transport of Arts and Crafts in Kashmīr	593

CHAPTER X

CIVIL & MILITARY ORGANIZATION UNDER MUSLIM RULE IN KASHMĪR

PART I—CIVIL ORGANIZATION

Supremacy of the Sharī'at	599
Head of the Islamic State Elected	600
The Vazīr	601
The Qāzī	602
The Shaikh-ul-Islam in Kashmīr	604
The Muhtasib	605
The Vazīr-i-Māl	606
Regency in Kashmīr	607
Islamic Law	609
Islamic Law and the Swiss Civil Code	612
The Condition of Women	613
The Seclusion of Women	614
Legal Education	615
LL.B., LL.M., and LL.D. Degrees in the Islamic System of Legal Education	615
Administration of Law	616
Application of Islamic Law in Kashmīr	617
The Making of Laws	619
The Attitude of Islamic Law towards non-Muslims	619
Five concrete cases of strict Justice in Muslim courts against Muslim monarchs and a Muslim Empress.	621
Muhammad Tughluq sued by two Hindu Complainants	621
Sher Shāh Sūr's drastic action against his own Son on a Hindu Complaint	622
Sultān Ghiyās-ud-Dīn of Bengāl sued by a Woman	623
The Empress Nūr Jahān accused of Murder	623
Administration of Hindu Law under Muslim Rule	624
Under Baḍ Shāh in Kashmīr	625
Under Akbar	625
Under Jahāngīr	626
Under Shāh Jahān	626
Under Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr	626
No Capital Punishment under Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr	626
Captives of War—Women and Children exempted	627
Suits against the State. Government Advocates	627

Administrative Units	628
The Revenue System of Kashmīr	630
The Coinage of Kashmīr	637
Coins of the Sultāns and Bādshāhs of Kashmīr	637
Mughul Coins	640
Afghān Coins	640
Coins struck in the name of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rishī	641
Sikh Coins	642
Dogrā Coins	643
The Value of Coins	643
Weights and Measures	643
The Kharwār	644
		[The Bīgah]	..	645
Agriculture—Rice	645
Saffron	646
Pure Honey from Saffron	649
Floating Gardens. 'Stealing Land' in Kashmīr	650
Fruits	651
Arboriculture	651
The Willows for Human Limbs	652
Irrigation	652
Famines	653
Roads	653
Routes and Rāhdārī	654

PART II—MILITARY ORGANIZATION

Introductory	657
Filing of Armies in the Field	658
The Battle-ground and the War Council	660
The Army in Kashmīr	661
Foreign Relations	665
The Rājā of Jammu a Refugee in Kashmīr	666
Ibrāhīm Lodi a refugee in Kashmīr	666
Local Militia under Mughul Rule	668
The Afghān method of Attack and Encampment	668
The Soldier's Pay	670
The number of Troops stationed in Kashmīr	670
Vicissitudes in the Political Conditions of Kashmīr	671
System of Government to blame for making people Cowardly	672

Mughul Rule began to break the spirit	675
Afghān Rule rough and harsh	676
Sikh Rule tyrannical, brutal and barbarous	677
Heartlessness of early Dogrā rule	679
Kashmīrīs concealing their Identity	683
The Dawn of Awakening	684
Need for Tawhīd	685
Right Form of Education necessary	688
Hygiene and Sanitation	691
No Condemnation of one's own People	692
Existing signs of Awakening to be Utilized	697

CHAPTER XI

KASHMĪR UNDER THE SIKHS

[A.C. 1819—1846]

A brief account of the earliest Sikh Contact with Kashmīr.
Also the Sikh Gurūs	699
The Lineal Order of the Sikh Gurūs	705
[The Granth Sāhib. Kabīr, Farid, Bhikan and others' contributions to the Granth Sāhib	706
The Arrangement of the Granth Sāhib	707
The Language of the Granth Sāhib]	709
A brief outline of the rise of Ranjīt Singh till the end of his Dynasty	708
Ranjīt Singh's Ancestors and Descendants	710
Sidelights on Ranjīt Singh	711
The Last Days of Ranjīt Singh	712
Kashmīr under Mahārājā Ranjīt Singh	720
The Conquest of Kashmīr extends Ranjīt's Kingdom and increases his Revenues	721
Condition of Kashmīr under Ranjīt's Rule	721
The Administration of ten Governors under Sikh Rule in Kashmīr			725
1. Misr Diwān Chand	725
2. Diwān Motī Rām	726
[Genesis of Sikh-Muslim Misunderstanding]	727
The Departure of the Ancestor of the Nawwābs of Dacca	729
3. Sardār Harī Singh Nalwa	729
4. Diwān Chūnī Lāl	730
5. Diwān Kirpā Rām	730
G. T. Vigne on Kirpā Rām's régime	730

6. Bhīmā Singh Ardālī	732
Victor Jacquemont's Observations	732
[Sayyid Ahmad Shahīd]	733
Jacquemont on Fruits and Trees	734
Comments on the Ugliness of Female Faces	735
Jacquemont's Praise for Ranjit Singh	736
Jacquemont's Audience with Ranjit Singh	736
7. Prince Sher Singh	736
8. Colonel Mehān Singh Kumedān (Commandant)	738
G. T. Vigne meets the Darvīsh , Sudu Bayu	739
Baron Hügel, the well-known Austrian Botanist, on Colonel Mehān Singh	740
G. T. Vigne's comments on the Colonel	741
[A Statistical Account of Kashmīr]	742
The Basant Bāgh	744
Pandit Bīrbal Kāchru's History of Kashmīr	744
9. Shaikh Ghulām Muhyī'd Dīn	744
Baron Schönberg's Sketch of Contemporary Kashmīr	745
10. Shaikh Imām-ud-Dīn	747
[The Two Shaikhs]	747
Close of Sikh rule in Kashmīr	749

CHAPTER XII

KASHMĪR UNDER THE DOGRĀS

[A. c. 1846—]

Gulāb Singh enters Kashmīr with a Sikh army nominally commanded by Prince Pratāb Singh, the son of Mahārājā Sher Singh, to restore order on Colonel Mehān Singh's Murder in Srinagar	751
A Brief History of the Dogrās	752
The origin of the term Dogrā	752
Miyān the title of the Dogrās	752
The descent of the Dogrā royal line	753
The Beginning of the Dogrā Rājās of Jammu	753
The Dogrā Family of Jammu	753
Dogrās in the time of Akbar, Jahāngīr and Shāh Jahān	754
The appearance of the Dogrā	754
Ranjit Dev's rule over the principality of Jammu	754

Gulāb Singh's claim to Jammu Rule	756
Gulāb Singh's start in Life	757
[Fūnch]	760
[Rajaurī or Rājāpurī]
[Rāmnagar]
Gulāb Singh's Distinguished Appearance	761
An awkward time in Gulāb Singh's Life	762
Gulāb Singh's understanding with the English	763
Treaty (of 1846) with Mahārājā Gulāb Singh	764
The Receipt for Rs. 75,00,000	766
Fauq's comment on the Sale of Kashmīr	767
The "Quit Kashmīr" Movement of 1946	768
Reasons for the transfer of Kashmīr	769
Observations on the Sale of Kashmīr	771
Lord Hardinge's visit to Kashmīr	773
The actual Possession of Kashmīr by Gulāb Singh	778
Expansion of Gulāb Singh's Possessions	775
The Importance of the State of Jammu and Kashmīr	776
Gulāb Singh's greed for Money	777
Gulāb Singh would not spare a Gurū	778
Complaints against Gulāb Singh	780
Gulāb Singh's Repression	781
Gulāb Singh's principle of personal Rule	781
Fowls, sheep and provisions cheap	782
Christian Mission Reconnoitring	782
The Trigonometrical Survey of the Valley and the First Map of Kashmīr	782
Chief Officers of Gulāb Singh	783
Dr. Honigberger proposes Sugar-cane and Tea-plantations in the State in the year 1852	784
Gulāb Singh's Hospitality to Europeans	785
Estimates of Mahārājā Gulāb Singh's Character	786
Gulāb Singh quarrels with Jawāhir Singh	787
Gulāb Singh's Death	787
Concluding Remarks on Gulāb Singh's Career	788

Ranbīr Singh's Patronage of Sanskrit Learning	790
---	----	----	-----

[The Dharmārth]	791
Mahārājā Ranbīr Singh a strict Hindu	793
Attempt on Ranbīr's Life	794
Mahārājā Ranbīr Singh's Help to the British	794
Ranbīr's Additions to his Father's Territory	795
Miserable condition of Kashmīr under Ranbīr	796
Taxation heavy and arbitrary	799
Severity of famine in 1877	800
The Advent of the Church Missionary Society in Kashmīr	801
Ranbīr's Gatherings on Akbar's Model	802
Dīwān Kirpā Rām	802
Mahārājā Ranbīr Singh's Appearance	803
Ranbīr's application to his Duties	804
Mahārājā Ranbīr Singh's attitude toward the British Government	804
Death of Mahārājā Ranbīr Singh	805

MAHARAJA SIR PRATAP SINGH [A.C. 1885 to 1925] 807

Mahārājā Pratāp Singh deprived of his Powers	..	808
Deplorable condition of Kashmīr under Mahārājā Pratāp Singh	..	809
Natural calamities in Pratāp's Reign	..	810
Pratāp Singh President of the Council	..	810
Appointment of Lawrence for the Settlement of the Valley	..	810
The main feature of the Settlement of Kashmīr	..	811
Persian as Court Language replaced by Urdu	..	812
Works of Public Utility under Pratāp Singh	..	813
The British Residents' share in Reforms	..	815
Military Reforms	..	815
The Conquest of Hunza and Nagar. The Chitrāl War	..	815
Abolition of the Old Council in 1905	..	815
Miyān Harī Singh	..	816
A Sensational Episode in Miyān Harī Singh's Life	..	817
King George's visit as Prince of Wales	..	817
The State Darbārs	..	818
The Beginnings of the first Newspaper in the State	..	818
Mahārājā Pratāp Singh's Orthodoxy	..	819
Pratāp Singh's food and drink, and other habits	..	820
Pratāp's Riverine Processions	..	821
Doḡrā rulers scrupulous about the honour of Women	..	821

xxvii

Pratāp's interest in Cricket	821
Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq 's remarks	822
A patriotic Kashmīrī Pandit Publicist's Observations on Dogrā rule in Kashmīr	823
A Balanced Appraisal of Dogrā rule	828
The death of Mahārājā Pratāp Singh	829
The Accession of Shri Mahārājā Sir Harī Singhjī Bahādur	831
Birth of Shri Yuvrāj Karan Singhjī	831
Farewell to the Reader	832

LIST OF MAPS AND ILLUSTRATIONS

Frontispiece

1. The Dargāh Āsār-i-Sharīf or the Shrine at Hazrat-bal, Srinagar (coloured)

CHAPTER I

	To face page
2. Map of the Valley of Kashmir (coloured) ..	6
3. The Dal with its Clouds ..	2
4. The Āesha-nāg Lake ..	4
5. The Glacier at Kolhai ..	4
6. Sonmarg ..	5
7. A Glimpse of Glorious Gurēz ..	5
8. Map of Bārāmūla (coloured) ..	10

CHAPTER II

9. Map of Ancient Kashmir (coloured) ..	35
10. Buddhist Remains at Hārvan ..	42
11. Map of Ancient Srinagar (coloured) ..	47
12. Map of Modern Srinagar (coloured) ..	48
13. The Ruins of Tāpar, four miles from Paṭan, Bārāmūla-Srinagar Road ..	51
14. Map of Parihāsapura and the Confluence of the Vitastā and the Sindhu (coloured) ..	52
15. The Temple of Mārtāṇḍa ..	53
16. The Ruins of the Temple at Avantipura or Vāntipōr ..	56
17. Ratnavardhana's Miniature Temple at Paṭan ..	57
18. The Temple of Meruvardhanasvāmin at Pāndreṭhan, near Srinagar ..	58

CHAPTER III

19. Map of Trans-Pakistan Lands and Localities in Kashīr (coloured) ..	75
20. Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī or Shāh Hamadān (coloured) ..	84
21. The Gunbad-i-'Alaviyān, Hamadān, Īrān (Interior) ..	85
22. The Gunbad-i-'Alaviyān, Hamadān, Īrān (Exterior view) ..	85
23. The Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (Shāh Hamadān) in Khaltān, or Khotl, now called Kolāb, in Tājikistān, U. S. S. R.—three different views, and the Mutawallis (or custodians) of the Mausoleum ..	116a
24. The Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā or the Mosque and Shrine of Shāh Hamadān, Srinagar ..	88

25.	The Interior of the Shāh Hamadān Mosque	..	89
26.	A general view of the Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srīnagar	..	89
27.	A distant View of the above	..	89
28.	Shāh Hamadān's Khānqāh-i-'Ālī at Trāl, 7 miles south-east of Avantipura (Vāntipōr)	..	92
29.	The Tomb of Bibī Bārī'a known as Didah Mōji, wife of Mir Muhammad Hamadānī, Krālāhpōr, near Srīnagar (inset)	..	93
30.	Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rishī (coloured)	..	98
31.	Chrār (General view)	..	99
32.	Map of Tsrār (Chrār) (coloured)	..	99
33.	The Chrār Mosque	..	100
34.	Coins struck in the name of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rishī (inset)	..	101
35.	The Ziyārat at 'Aish Maqām—Tomb of Bābā Zain-ud-Dīn on the Islāmābād-Pahalgām Road	..	102
36.	The Tomb of Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī at Chādura (inset)	..	112
37.	Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm (coloured)	..	112
38.	The Ziyārat of Makhdūm Sāhib	..	113
39.	Shāh Farīd-ud-Dīn of Baghdād and his son (coloured)	..	115

CHAPTER IV

40.	Into the Zōji-Lā Pass (inset)	..	119
41.	The grave of Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn at Bulbul Lānkar, 'Alī Kadal, Srīnagar	..	126
42.	The Tomb of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mīr, Andarkōṭ, near Sumbal	..	134
43.	The Tomb of Abdāl Rīnā, Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's Commander-in-Chief, near Chādura, about 10 miles south of Srīnagar (inset)	..	137
44.	Map of the approximate Extent of the Kingdom of Kashmīr under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn (coloured)	..	138
45.	The Tomb of Sultān Sikandar's Queen, Zaina Kadal, Srīnagar	..	148
46.	The Grave of Sultān 'Alī Shāh at Chādura (inset)	..	156
47.	Map of the Wular Lake (coloured)	..	158
48.	The Zaina-Lānk of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn in the Wular	160
49.	The Khānqāh at Saidapōr, Zainagīr, further up Sopōr, District Bārāmūla	..	165
50.	Map of India at the time of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn (coloured)	..	169
51.	Map of the World at the time of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn (coloured)	..	172
52.	The Grave of Makhdūma Begam, the Queen of Bad Shāh (inset)	..	178
53.	The Grave of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, in the enclosure of the Māzar-us-Salātīn, Zaina Kadal, Srīnagar	..	181

54. The Grave of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, Zaina Kadal, Srinagar, and Dr. William Moorcroft's inscription in Persian on this grave 208

CHAPTER V

55. Camping on the Snows before entering Deosai on the way to Skardu 218
 56. A Waterfall on the way to Skardu 219
 57. An Apricot Garden in Skardu 220
 58. The Zakh used as a raft on the river Shighar which joins the Indus near Skardu 220
 59. Map of Gulmarg (coloured) 230
 60. A Beauty Spot in Gulmarg (coloured) 230
 61. The Grave of Ya'qūb Shāh Chak in Kishtwār (inset) .. 237

CHAPTER VI

62. A Saffron Field of Pāmpar (coloured) 245
 63. The Jāmi' Masjid at Pāmpar on the Srinagar-Islāmābād Road 245
 64. The Mosque built by Jāhāngīr, at Bhimbar, on the old Mughul Road from the Punjāb to Kashmīr .. 251
 65. The Grave of Haidar Malik at Tsōdur or Chādura (inset) 258
 66. The Mughul Sarāi built by Nūr Jahān at Chingas on the old Mughul route from the Punjāb to Kashmīr.. 263
 67. The Mughul Sarāi at Thanna in the Rajaurī Tahsil .. 272

CHAPTER VII

68. The Kōh or Kūh-i-Nūr or the 'Mountain of Light' (inset) 325
 69. Ranjīt Singh making obeisance to Zamān Shāh on the conferment of the rulership of Lāhore 328
 70. Sardār Muhammad 'Azīm Khān, Nāzim or Governor of Kashmīr, 1813-19 (inset) 329

CHAPTER VIII

71. The Mazār-ush-Shu'arā on the Dal Gate, Srinagar .. 350
 72. The Parī Mahall, higher up the Royal Spring or the Chashma-i-Shāhī, Srinagar 351
 73. The Tomb of Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī, Mahalla Hazrat }
 Īshān, Zaina Kadal, Srinagar }
 74. The Grave of Mullā Muhsin Fānī, Zaina Kadal, }
 Srinagar } 364
 75. The Grave of Mullā Tāhir Ghanī, Zaina Kadal, }
 Srinagar }
 76. The supposed Site of Tāhir Ghanī's Hut, Srinagar }
 77. The Grave of Khwāja Muhammad A'zam Dīdamarī, }
 Srinagar (inset) 374

78.	A small group of Dards from Drās	397
79.	Parinānand, a noted Kashmirī poet (inset)	407
80.	‘Abdul Wahhāb Parē, another noted Kashmirī poet (inset)	409

CHAPTER IX

81.	The Tomb of Madyan Sāhib, Jaḍi-bal, Srinagar (inset)	506
82.	The Mosque of Madyan Sāhib, Jaḍi-bal, Srinagar (inset)	510
83.	The Jāmi‘ Masjid of Srinagar	.. 511
84.	The Spire of the Jāmi‘ Masjid, Srinagar	.. 511
85.	The Cloisters of the Jāmi‘ Masjid, Srinagar (inset)	.. 512
86.	The Patthar (stone) Masjid or Nau (new) or Shāhi (Royal) Masjid of Nūr Jahān, Srinagar	.. 515
87.	The Kūh-i-Mārān or the Hari-parbat Fort built by Sardār ‘Atā Muhammad Khān, Nāzim or Governor of Kashmīr, the lower wall, known as Nāgar-nagar, not visible in the photograph, was built by Akbar (inset)	.. 516
88.	The Mosque of Mullā Shāh Badakhshānī, Hari-parbat, Srinagar	.. 517
89.	The Kāthī Darwāza, the principal entrance to the Hari-parbat Fort	.. 518
90.	The Shālāmār, Srinagar	.. 528
91.	Two different Views of the Fountains of Shālāmār	.. 530
92.	The Entrance to the Nashāt, Srinagar	.. 531
93.	The Nashāt Bāgh, Āsaf Khān’s ‘Garden of Gladness,’ Srinagar	.. 531
94.	The Royal Spring or the Chashma-i-Shāhī, Srinagar	.. 532
95.	The Chashma-i-Shāhī Bāradārī, Srinagar	.. 533
96.	General View of the Vēr-nāg Spring	.. 535
97.	Jahāngīr’s first Inscription in Persian at Vēr-nāg	.. 536
98.	Jahāngīr’s second Inscription in Persian at Vēr-nāg	.. 537
99.	The Spring of Achabal, a general view	.. 539
100.	The Spring of Achabal, Bāradārī and the Fountains	.. 540
101.	Kashmīrī Singers and a Dance (coloured)	.. 550
102.	Muhammad Husain Kashmirī’s Specimen of Calligraphy	558
103.	The Curve of the River Jhelum above Srinagar	.. 561
104.	Specimen of a Kashmirī Carpet in the Irānian design	564
105.	Specimen of a Shawl prepared during Afghān rule in Kashmīr	.. 565
106.	Specimen of the Gabba . The Kāngar or the Kāngrī	.. 569-70
107.	Map of Islāmābād (coloured)	.. 570
108.	How hand-made Paper is produced in a suburb of Srinagar. Also a design of modern Silver work	} 577
109.	Specimen of Woodwork—a walnut screen of floral design
110.	Coarse type of Silver Jewellery worn with the cap by small Kashmirī girls	.. 583
111.	Specimen of Kashmirī Copper work (Salvers)	.. 584
112.	A House-Boat and a Shikāra on the Dal or on the Jhelum in Srinagar	.. 587

CHAPTER X

113.	Copper Coins of the Kings of Kashmīr—Non-Muslim Rājās and Muslim Sultāns	637
114.	Coins of the Sultāns, Pādshāhs, and Shāh-in-Shāhs of Kashmīr	638
115.	Mughul Coins found in Rehārī, Jammu Town ..	640
116.	Miscellaneous Coins of Mughul, Afghān, Sikh, Dogrā Rulers and some old Non-Muslim Rājās of Kashmīr	642
117.	The Burzil Pass (inset)	655

CHAPTER XI

118.	Mahārājā Ranjit Singh	720
119.	Mahārājā Sher Singh	737
120.	Mahārājā Dalip Singh at the time of the conquest of the Punjāb by the British	749

CHAPTER XII

121.	Mahārājā Gulāb Singh, Founder of Dogrā Rule in Kashmīr	753
122.	Facsimile of the Receipt of Rs. 75,00,000 (Nānak- shāhī), now estimated to be equivalent to Rs. 50,00,000, for the transfer of Kashmīr	768
123.	Shaikh Muhammad ‘Abdullāh who initiated the “Quit Kashmīr” Movement in 1946	770
124.	Map of the Jammu and Kashmīr State (coloured) ..	777
125.	Group Photograph of the Dogrā Rulers of Jammu and Kashmīr	808

NOTE ON MAPS, PORTRAITS AND ILLUSTRATIONS IN “ KASHĪR ”

The Frontispiece is the work of Lady Chenevix Trench who presented it to the late Khān Sāhib Munshī Sirāj-ud-Dīn Ahmad, Mīr Munshī to the British Residency, Srinagar, and was obtained for the author by Nawwāb Maulā Bakhsh, C.I.E., ex-Home Minister, Jammu and Kashmir State.

For the maps of (i) Ancient Kashmir (ii) Ancient Srinagar and (iii) Parihāsapura and the Confluence of the Vitastā and the Sindhu, reproduced from the English Translation of Kalhana's Rājatarangīnī I am grateful to the late Sir Aurel Stein.

The maps of (1) the Valley of Kashmir, (2) Bārāmūla, (3) Srinagar, (4) Tsrār or Chrār Sharif, (5) the Wulur, (6) Gulmarg, (7) Islāmābād and (8) Jammu and Kashmir State are reproduced with the permission of the Surveyor-General of the Union of India. The author is indebted to the Surveyor-General of the Union of India also for waiving all “royalty” charges for the publication of these eight maps.

The maps of (1) Trans-Pakistan Lands and Localities, (2) India at the time of Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn, and (3) The World at the time of Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn, were prepared under the author's direction by Pandit Rām Narāin Lāl, Drawing Master, New English High School, Hoshangābād, C.P., who also prepared for the press six Survey of India maps, 2 to 7, given above.

The Map of the extent of Kashmir under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn has been prepared from a modern production.

Muhammad Husain Kashmirī's specimen of calligraphy was obtained from Mr. Ashfāq ‘Alī, ex-Curator, the Museum, Fort, Delhi.

The portrait of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rishī was supplied to the author by the late Pandit Ānand Kaul Bāmzai, ex-President, Srinagar Municipality, and also a second copy by Pandit Bala Kāk Dar, Retired Wazīr-i-Wazārat, Srinagar, who sent his copy through the late Khān Sāhib Munshī Sirāj-ud-Dīn Ahmad, Mīr Munshī, and Khān Sāhib Khurshīd Ahmad, lately Political Assistant, Ladākh.

Copper Salvers are from the Journal of Indian Art, Volume IV, Nos. 33-37, January, 1892.

The photos of (1) the tomb of Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn ‘Irāqī, (2) the grave of Sultān ‘Alī Shāh, (3) the tomb of Abdāl Raina, (4) the grave of Haidar Malik Chādura, (5) the Mazār-ush-Shu‘arā, (6) the grave of Mullā Muhsin Fānī, (7) the tomb of Shaikh Ya‘qūb Sarfī, (8) the grave of Khwāja Muhammad A‘zam Didamari, and (9) the tomb of Bibī Bār‘a, called Didah Mōji, the daughter-in-law of Shāh Hamadān, were specially taken for the author by Pīrẓāda Muḥammad Amīn ibn Pīrẓāda Ghulām Aḥmad Mahjūr, Tenkīpōr, Srinagar.

The photo of the grave of Ya'qūb Shāh Chak at Kishtwār was similarly specially taken for the author by Pandit Jagmohan Kaul, formerly of "Kashmīr Blossoms," Srinagar, in November, 1942.

The portrait of Sayyid Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī with his son Shāh Ahkyār-ud-Dīn was reproduced by Mr. Subu Tāgore from the original in a Pīr family of Kishtwār in November, 1942.

The photo of the poet 'Abdul Wahhāb Pare was secured by Khwāja Ghulām Muhyī'd-Dīn, M.A., LL.B. (Alig.), Lecturer in Arabic, Gāndhī Memorial College, Jammu.

The portrait of the Kashmīrī poet, Parmānand, was borrowed from Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz, B.A., Editor, The Hamdard, Srinagar.

Mr. Mohan Bhavanānī, Film producer of Bombay, gave me (i) two views of Shāh Hamadān (ii) two views of the Fountains of Shālāmār (iii) the Curve of the Jhelum (iv) the Dal with its clouds (v) the Qeshanāg (vi) Entrance to the Nashāt (vii) the Chashma-i-Shāhī and (viii) coarse type of Silver Jewellery worn with a cap by small girls in Kashmīr.

Lālā Mulkrāj Sarāf, B.A., Editor, the Ranbīr, Jammu, lent me his block of the Dogrā rulers of Kashmīr.

Pandit Baldeo Prashād, B.A., Journalist, Jammu, gave me his photo of the Mughul coins found at Rehāṛī Jammu.

The Director-General of Archaeology in the Union of India has permitted through Dr. Muḥammad Nāzim, M.A., PH.D. (Cambridge), Superintendent, Archaeology, Lāhore, the reproduction of the portraits of Mahārājās Ranjīt Singh, Sher Singh, Dalīp Singh and Gulāb Singh from the Museum, Fort, Lāhore.

The coins struck in the name of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rishī in Kashmīr by 'Atā Muḥammad Khān, governor of the Valley under the Afghāns, are inserted with the permission of the ex-Curator, the Central Museum, Lāhore, Mr. Muḥammad Ismā'īl Chaudhūrī, M.A.

(1) The Musicians' Band and the Dance and (2) A Beauty Spot in Gulmarg are the work of Pandit Somnāth of Srinagar, Artist, formerly in the "C. & M. Gazette" Ltd., Lāhore.

The late Munshī Muḥammad-ud-Dīn Fauq kindly allowed me the use of three blocks of his Ta'rīkh-i-Baḍ Shāhī, viz. (1) the grave of Makhdūma Khātūn, Baḍ Shāh's Queen (2) the Mosque of Madyan Sāhib, and (3) the grave of Madyan Sāhib.

The four photographs of the (i) Camping on the Snows before entering Deosai on the way to Skardu (ii) Waterfall, (iii) the Apricot Garden and (iv) the Zakh, used as a Raft, on the Shīghar river in Chapter V were taken by Mirzā 'Abdul Hamīd Beg, M.Sc., Professor of Physics, Islamia College, Lāhore.

The two photos of the Gunbad-i-'Alaviyān, Hamadān, Īrān, were obtained for the author by the Consul for Īrān in Bombay, from the Ministry of Education, Īrān, for which thanks are due to him.

Monsieur A. Semenov of the Academy of Sciences in Tājikistān in Stālīnābād, kindly took, in August 1947, the photo of the Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (Shāh Hamadān) in Khatlān, now called Kolāb, in the Tājik Soviet Socialist Republic, at the instance of Professor E. N. Pavlovsky, Membre de l' Academie des Sciences d' U. R. S. S., whom I saw at Bombay when he visited India for the Science Congress held at New Delhi in December, 1946.

The water colour of the saffron field is by Mr. J. Mukerji, F. R. S. A. (London), F. I. B. D., (Eng.), then Superintendent, Sir Amar Singh Technical Institute, Srīnagar.

The Afghān Governor Sardār 'Azīm Khān's sketch was lent to me by Mirzā Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidā, formerly Secretary, Municipality, Srīnagar.

Miyān Muhammad Sa'dullāh, M.A., Keeper of the West Punjāb Government Records, secured permission for me of the Punjāb Government for the reproduction of (i) the receipt of Rs. 75,00,000 (Nānak-shāhī) for the transfer of Kashmīr to Mahārājā Gulāb Singh by the representatives of the East India Company, and (ii) the painting of Mahārājā Ranjit Singh making obeisance to King Zamān Shāh of Kābul on receiving the rulership of Lāhore.

The Proprietor of the Lion Press, Lāhore, Shaikh 'Abdul Latīf, was good enough to allow me the use of his block of the photograph of Shaikh Muhammad 'Abdullāh, who initiated the "Quit Kashmīr" movement in 1946.

The reproduction of the Floating Gardens and the Achabal is from the album of Mr. M. A. Rashīd, Under Secretary, Government of the West Punjāb, Department of Public Works, Lāhore, by the courtesy of Messrs. Muhammad Nāzir, B.A. (London), Vice-Principal, Central Training College, and Mr. M. A. Bārī, M.A., Head Master, Central Model School, Lāhore.

I borrowed from Shaikh Muhammad Habībullāh, Divisional Audit Officer, N. W. Ry., his copy showing a part of the bāradarī of the Shālāmār, Srīnagar.

The house-boat (two photographs) are from Miyān Bashīr Ahmad, B.A. (Oxon), Barrister-at-Law, Editor, The Humāyān, Al-Manzar, Lawrence Road, Lāhore. The third one is from the collection of Sayyid Hamīd 'Alī, of the Dār-ul-Ishā'at, Punjāb, Railway Road, Lāhore.

(1) An old Kashmīr Carpet in an Īrānian design (2) Wood-work—a walnut screen, and (3) How hand-made Paper is produced in a suburb of Srīnagar are from Jammu and Kashmīr Information for January 1947.

The choice of Sir Muhammad Iqbāl's photograph in the Dedication, I am glad to say, is by that great man's son, Shaikh Jāvid Iqbāl, M.A., and was brought to me by Mr. Muhammad Shafi', M.A., who was Sir Muhammad Iqbāl's Secretary, and is now on the reporting staff of the Pākistān Times, Lāhore, and Dawn, Karāchi. The photograph was taken by the scholarly Sardār Umrāo Singh Shergil when Sir Muhammad Iqbāl was at Paris in 1933.

The remaining photos and portraits were purchased from the Superintendent, Archaeology, Museum and Research, Srinagar, and are reproduced with the permission of Khān Bahādur Mirzā Ja'far 'Alī Khān Asar, M.B.E. then Home Member, His Highness' Government, Jammu and Kashmīr.

Caution.—It is very difficult to claim complete accuracy or perfect genuineness for the portraits of saints given in Kashīr. They may, at best, be looked upon as the artists' nearest approach to real likenesses.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

This Bibliography is divided into four Sections. Section I notes most of the known original sources, period by period. Section II gives a list of Manuscripts mostly Persian. Section III is a list of printed books on the subject in Urdu, Persian and English. Section IV is a list of periodicals relating to Kashmir published in and out of the Valley.

Section I

SOME OF THE MORE IMPORTANT ORIGINAL SOURCES

The Pre-Islamic Period

(From the Earliest Times to 1149-50 A.C.)

1. Sir Mark Aurel Stein's English Translation of Kalhana's Rājatarangīnī, Vols. I and II. (From the earliest times to the year 1150 A.C.). 18th May, 1900.

[French Translation of the Rājatarangīnī by M. A. Troyer. Vols. I—III, Paris, 1840-52.]

2. Rājatarangīnī—The Saga of the Kings of Kashmir. Translated from the original Samskrt of Kalhana by Ranjit Sītā Rām Pandit. 18th July, 1934.

Note.—There are brief references in Al-Bīrūnī's India, and in Mas'ūdī's Murūj-uz-Zahab (Meadows of Gold), translated from the Arabic by Aloys Sprenger, M. D. (John Murray, London, 1841). Volume I only is available.

Also the French Translation with the Arabic text of the Murūj-uz-Zahab by Meynard and Courteille. Vols. 1-9. Paris, 1861.

The Early Muslim or the Pre-Mughul Period

(1150 to 1586 A.C.)

The Shah Miris

(1150 to 1555 A.C.)

3. Pandit Jonarāja's Rājāvalī in continuation of Kalhana's Rājatarangīnī (From 1150 to 1459 A.C.)

4. Pandit Gṛīvara's Jaina-Rājatarangīnī (From 1459 to 1486 A.C.)

5. Pandit Prājyabhaṭṭa's Rājavalīpatākā (From 1486 to 1512 A.C.)

6. Ta'rikh-i-Nādirī by Mullā Nādirī. MS. Written during Baḍ Shāh's reign. Referred to by Haidar Malik Chāḍura, Khwāja Muhammad A'zam, and Pir Hasan Shāh. Also Ta'rikh-i-Waqā'i-Kashmīr by Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī, written at this time, is not traceable.

7. Ta'rikh-i-Qalamraw-i-Kashmīr by Qāzī Ibrāhīm son of Qāzī Hamīd, Mutawallī, Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srinagar. MS. Believed to have been written in Fath Shāh's second reign, viz., 1505-1514 A.C.

8. Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī—Asl (1544-5), and Mukhtasar (1541-2)—of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt.

9. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Sayyid 'Alī bin Muhammad, Muta-wallī, Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srinagar. MS. Believed to have been written in Muhammad Shāh's fifth reign, viz., 1530-1537 A.C.

The Chaks

(1555 to 1586 A.C.)

10. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Mullā Husain Qārī. MS. Believed to have been written, during Chak rule, up to 1580 A.C.

The Mughul Period

(1586 A.C. to 1752 A.C.)

11. Pandit Ćuka's Sanskrit Chronicle entitled the Rājatraṅgīnī. (From 1512 to 1596 A.C.).

12-13. Ā'in-i-Akbarī and Akbar-nāma of Abu'l Fazl 'Allāmi.

14. Muntakhab-ut-Tawārikh by Hasan Beg, MS., written in Akbar's time.

15. Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī of Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad.

16. Gulzār-i-Ibrāhīmī or the Ta'rikh-i-Firishta of Muhammad Qāsim Firishta.

17. Ma'āsir-i-Rahīmī of Mullā 'Abdul Bāqī Nihāwandī.

18. Tūzūk-i-Jahāngīrī.

19. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr written during 1027-30 A.H. = 1617-20 A.C., by Ra'īs-ul-Mulk Haidar Malik Chāḍura. MS.

20. Bahāristān-i-Shāhī, author anonymous, but supposed to be Sayyid Muhammad Mahdī, a Shī'a writer, on account of the special exposition of Shī'a tenets and the exploits of Shī'a heroes. MS. 1022 A.H. = 1613 A.C.

21. Dr. Francis Bernier's Travels, 1656—68. Edited by V. A. Smith.
22. Muntakhab-ut-Tawārīkh by Narā'yan Kaul 'Ājiz. MS. 1122 A.H.=1710 A.C.
23. Navādir-ul-Akhbār by Rafi'-ud-Dīn Ahmad Ghāfil, MS. 1136 A.H.=1723 A.C.
24. Wāqī'āt-i-Kashmīr or Ta'rīkh-i-A'zamī by Khwāja Muhammad A'zam Kaul (?) Mustaghni Didamarī, 1747 A.C.
25. Gauhar-i-Ālam by Abu'l Qāsim Muhammad Aslam Mun'imī, son of Khwāja A'zam Didamarī. MS.

The Afghan Period

(1752 to 1819 A.C.)

26. Shāh-nāma-i-Kashmīr by Mullā La'l Muhammad Taufiq, Muhammad Jān Shāmī, Mullā Hasan, Muhammad 'Alī Khān Matīn, and Rahmatullāh Navīl and others. Prepared under the auspices of Rājā Sukh Jiwan Mal, Governor of Kāshmir under Ahmad Shāh Durrānī. MS. 1175 A.H.=1761 A.C. Professor C. A. Storey calls it the Maṭhnawī of Ahwāl-i-Kashmīr, see his Bio-bibliographical Survey, Section II, Fasciculus 3, page 682.
27. Bāgh-i-Sulaimān by Mīr Sa'dullāh Shāhābādī, MS. 1194 A.H.=1780 A.C.
28. Ta'rīkh-i-Maulavī Hidāyatullāh Mattu or Takmila-i-Ta'rīkh-i-A'zamī by Shaikh-ul-Islām Mullā Hidāyatullāh Mattu. MS. 1206 A.H.=1791 A.C. Cf. No. 2 above. This author died in 1206 A.H.=1791 A.C.
29. Waqā'i-Nizāmī or Nizām-ul-Waqā'i by Nizām-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh Muftī, 1240 A.H.=1824 A.C.
30. George Forster's Journey from Bengal to England [performed in 1783 A.C.]. London, 1808.
31. Ta'rīkh-i-Kashmīr by Maulavī Khair-ud-Dīn.
32. Lubb-ut-Tawārīkh by Bahā-ud-Dīn Khānayārī. MS. 1243 A.H.=1827 A.C.
33. Shujā'-i-Haidarī by Muhammad Haidar, MS. 1256 A.H.=1840 A.C. Āsfīyāh Library, Hydarābād, Deccan.

The Sikh Period

(1819 to 1846 A.C.)

34. Amar Nāth Akbarī's Zafar-nāma-i-Ranjūt Singh. MS.
35. Ghulām Muhyī'd Dīn Būṭī Shāh 'Alavī Qādirī Ludhiānavī's Ta'rīkh-i-Punjab. MS. British Museum, Or. 1623, Rieu's Catalogue, Volume III, pp. 953-4.
36. William Moorcroft's Travels in the Panjab, Ladakh, Kashmir, etc., 1819—25, Vols. I and II.

37. Pandit Bīrbāl Kāchur's Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr called in a place Mukhtasar-ut-Tawārīkh, in another Majma'ut-Tawārīkh, and in yet another place Majmū'ut Tawārīkh, commenced in 1251 A.H.=1835 A.C. MS.

38. Travels in Kashmir, Ladakh and Iskardu [June to December, 1835 A.C.] by G. T. Vigne. Vols. I and II.

39. Letters from India, written during 1828-1831 A.C., by Victor Jacquemont.

40. Baron Charles Hügel's Travels in Kashmir (in 1835 A.C.) and the Panjab.

41. Travels in India and Kashmir by Baron von Schönberg. (1843-4 A.C.). Vols. I and II. Volume II deals with Kashmir.

The Dogra Period

(From 1846 to the present time.)

42. Khulāsāt-ut-Tawārīkh by Mirzā Saif-ud-Dīn Beg. MS. 1247 A.H.=1857 A.C.

43. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Mullā Muhammad Khalīl Marjānpurī. MS.

44. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Mīr 'Azīzullāh Qalandar, during the time of Mahārājā Gulāb Singh.

45. Diwān Kirpā Rām's Gulzār-i-Kashmīr (1864) and Gulāb-nāma (1865).

46. Where Three Empires Meet by E. F. Knight, 1893.

47. The Valley of Kashmir by Walter R. Lawrence, 1895.

48. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, MS., by Pīr Hasan Shāh (1832—1898) of Khūhāma (Bāndapōr or Bāndipur) embraces the Hindu and Muslim periods. Deposited by the author at the Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srinagar.

49. Kashmir by Sir Francis Younghusband, 1909.

50. Mukammal Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq, Editor, The Kashmīrī, Lāhore, in 3 Vols., embraces Hindu (Vol. I), Muslim (Vol. II), and Dogrā Rule (Vol. III). 1910 A.C.

51. Gulab Singh, 1792-1858, Founder of Kashmir, by Sardar K. M. Panikkar, 1930.

52. Inside Kashmir, by Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz B.A., 1941.

Also—Administration, Census and "Royal Commission" Reports, etc.

Note.—Nos. 1, 2, 21, 30, 36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 46, 47, 49, 51 and 52 are in English. Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 11 are in Sanskrit. No. 50 is in Urdu. The rest are in Persian.

Details of particular editions of some of the above works will be found in Section III.

Section II

LIST OF MANUSCRIPTS ON THE HISTORY OF KASHMIR

No.	Author	Manuscript	Language	Obtainable from—
1	'Abdul Qādir Khān bin Qāzī'l-Quzāt, Maulavī Wāsil 'Alī Khān.	Hishmat-i-Kashmār* (wrongly written Hashmat)	Persian	British Museum, London, Rieu's Catalogue , Vol. III, pages 1015-16 (Or. 1748).
2	'Abdul Wahhāb Shā'iq	Shāh-nāma-i-Kashmār (poetry)	Do.	The family of the late Khān Sāhib Mirzā Ghulām Mustafā, Retired Wazīr-i-Wizārat, Srinagar.
3	Abū Rafī'-ud-Dīn Ahmad Ghāzī Balkhī Kashmīrī.	Navādir-ul-Akhdār.	Do.	British Museum, London. (Add. 24029), Rieu's Catalogue , Vol. I, page 299b.
4	Abu'l Qāsim Muhammad Aslam Mun'imī .	Gauhar-i-'Ālam.	Do.	Bengal Asiatic Society, Calcutta.
5	Ahmad ibn As-Sabūr Kashmīrī.	Tārīkh-i-Hādī.	Do.	Sri Ranbir Library, Jammu, [MS. No. 5698].

*The Hishmat-i-Kashmār by 'Abdul Qādir Khān bin Qāzī'l-Quzāt Maulavī Wāsil 'Alī Khān was completed at Benares in A.H. 1245 A.C. 1830. The work, which contains an historical account of Kashmir and some neighbouring countries, is based upon an earlier account of Kashmir written about 1183 A.H. by Muhammad Badī'-ud-Dīn Abu'l Qāsim Aslam, poetically surnamed Mughnū, and entitled Gauhar Tuhfa-i-'Ālam Shāhī, to which the author made considerable additions. It is divided into four books (Chaman) treating respectively of Kashmīr, Tibet, Qalmāqistān, Badakhshān, and the highlands of Afghānistān. The author of the book 'Abdul Qādir Khān, whose family had settled, for some generations, in the Sūbah of Ilahābād, and was staying with John Lumsden when Sa'ādāt 'Alī Khān succeeded to the regency of Oudh (A.H. 1212=A.C. 1796), named it after Mr. Wm. Aug. Brooke, the English Agent whose Persian title was Hishmat-ud-Daula. Maulavī 'Abdul Qādir Khān is mentioned in Col. Wm. Kirkpatrick's account of Nepāl (pp. xi and 367), as a member of the mission sent to Khatmandū in A.C. 1793.—Abstracted from Rieu's Catalogue of the Persian Manuscripts in the British Museum, Volume III, 1883, Or. 1748, pages 1015-16.

A copy of the MS., Hishmat-i-Kashmīr, was lent to me by Khān Sahib Muhammad Jamil-ud-Dīn, B.A. (Alig.), Retired Deputy Collector, Mahalla Qāzī-tola, Badāūn, U.P., Ex-General Minister, Bharatpur State, 1943-45, and in active service in France during the World War I. This MS. is in the handwriting of Lachhmi Narāyan, and is dated Lucknow, the beginning of Rabi'-ul-Awwal, 1255 A.H.=1839 A.C. The full title of Mr. William Augustus Brooke is given as Hishmat-ud-Daula Intishām-ul-Mulk Fīrūz Jang, and he is represented as British Resident of Benares at the time. The MS., inside the border, is slightly over 7 inches long, and slightly over 3½ inches broad, and has 15 lines a page. The number of folios is 100, including the Khatima, or the epilogue. 'Abdul Qādir Khān, the author of the MS., utilized, as he notes in folio 5, the following works in the preparation of his Hishmat-i-Kashmīr :—“(i) Khwāja A'zam Didamari's Wāq'at-i-Kashmīr, (ii) History of Kalhana Pandit, known as the Rājatarangīnī in the Sanskrit language, (iii) The Ta'rīkh-i-Mullā Husain Qādārī, (or Qārī ?), (iv) The Ta'rīkh-i-Malik Haidar, (v) Miscellaneous Histories written by Chak Pādshāhs, and known as the Nūr-nāma, (vi) The Ta'rīkh-i-Rashādī, (vii) The collected works of Mullā Ahmad, (viii) The Ta'rīkh Hasan Beg, (ix) The Ta'rīkh-i-Babā Nasīb, (x) The Ta'rīkh-i-Asrār-ul-Abrār, (xi) The Risālah Shaikh Muhammad Murād Naqshbandī, (xii) The Iqbāl-nāma-i-Jahāngīrī, (xiii) The Navā'id-i-Ashbār, (xiv) The Magālas-ul-Muminīn, (xv) The Dastūr-ul-'Anal of Sayyid Mubārak Khān, (xvi) The Rameat-ush-Shufā—this last being a historical collection in Hindi, Persian, Arabic, Turkish and Kashmirī.” The Hishmat-i-Kashmīr closes with the end of Mughul rule in the Valley, and refers to Afghān rule and Sikh rule in but a line. Then follows a small chapter on “the wonders and enchantments” of Kashmīr, another chapter treats of the trade of the Valley. Chaman II, III and IV deal with countries as noted by Rieu.

- | No. | Author | Manuscript | Language | Obtainable from— |
|-----|--|--|----------|--|
| 6 | Amar Nāth Akbari | Zafar-nāmah-i-Ranjūt Singh. | Persian | Panjab University Library Descriptive Catalogue , No. 161, p. 110. |
| 7 | A'zam Kaul (?) Mastaghnī Didamari, Khwāja Muhammad.
[Rieu adds "Kaul" after A'zam's name and quotes no authority for it. A'zam's ancestors came from Bukhārā and, therefore, the addition of 'Kaul' is rather mystifying.] | Wāqī'āt-i-Kashmūr. | Do. | Panjab University Library, Lāhore, No. 174, p. 118.

(Note. — Ta'rikh-i-A'zamī has been published twice, the last edition was edited by Mufti Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat of Srinagar.) |
| 8 | Bahā-ud-Dīn Khushnavīs, Mullā. | Lubb-ut-Tawārīkh-i-Kashmūr | Persian | British Museum. Rieu's Catalogue Vol. III, p. 957a. |
| 9 | Bīrbāl Kāchūr, Pandit.
The Author's name is not given in Rieu's Catalogue , Vol. III, p. 957a. | Mukhtasar-ut-Tawārīkh-i-Kashmūr. (Written during 1251 A.H.=1835 A.C. and 1262 A.H.=1846 A.C.) | Do. | Borrowed from the late K.B. Firzāda Muhammad Husain 'Arif, M.A., C.I.E., formerly Chief Justice, High Court, Srinagar. |
| 10 | Ghulām Muhyī'd Dīn surnamed Buṭī Shāh 'Alavī Qādirī Ludhiyānavī.* | Ta'rikh-i-Panjāb. | Persian | Panjab University Library, Lāhore, No. 165, p. 112. Also India Office Library, see Ethé, Vol. I, p. 198. |

*Ghulām Muhyī'd Dīn surnamed Buṭī Shāh 'Alavī Qādirī Ludhiyānavī wrote his Ta'rikh-i-Panjāb in A.H. 1258=A.C. 1842 at the request of Captain Murray, Resident at Ludhiana, in whose office he was a Munshī.

No.	Author	Manuscript	Language	Obtainable from—
11	Ghulām Nabī Khānayārī, Qāzī	Wajiz-ut-Ta'rikh , in three parts, pp. 604. Part I 50 pp., Part II 454 pp., Part III 100 pp. Written during the reign of Mahārāja Ranbir Singh in 1274 A.H.=1857 A.C.	Persian	Muftī Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat, Nauhaṭṭa, Jāmi' Masjid, Srinagar.
12	Haider Malik Chādura	Tawarikh-i-Kashmīr .	Do.	Khān Bahādur Maulavī Zafar Hasan, B.A., O.B.E., Retired Director- General of Archaeology, Delhi, now at the Museum, Lahore. Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srinagar.
13	Hasan Shāh-i-Khuyhāma, Pīr	Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr commonly known as Tarikh-i-Hasan	Do.	Muftī Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat, ex-Municipal Commr., Nauhaṭṭa, Jāmi' Masjid, Srinagar.
14	Khalil Marjānpūrī, Muḥammad	Ta'rikh-i-Khalil	Do.	M. Ghubār, c/o the Aryāna , Jadah Ibn Sina, Kābul, vide the Aryāna , Number 23, Volume XI, Second Year, Avwal Qaus, 1323. This MS. was written in 1019 A. H.=1610 A.C. during the reign of the Emperor Jahāngīr.
15	Hasan bin Muhammad al- Khākī Shīrāzī	Muntalhab-ut-Tawārīkh	Do.

- 16 Mahādev Jān, Pandit, Translator of Pīr Hasan Shāh's Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr Urdu Sri Partāp Singh Public Library, Srinagar.
- 17 Muhtasham, Mirzā Ta'rikh-i-Tanwīr Persian Imām-i-Masjid, Bandūq Khār Mahalla, near Ra'nāwārī, Srinagar.
- 18 Mustafā Za'im-ul-Dīn Rīshī's Tazkira or Biography Kashmirī, 1307 A.H.=1889 A.C. Sri Partāp Singh Public Library, Srinagar.
- 19 Āṇṇī, Muhammad Zamān Ta'rikh-i-Nāṣirī Persian Mufti Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat, Nautāṭṭa, Srinagar.
- 20 Narāin Kaul 'Ajiz, Pandit Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr Do. Sri Partāp Singh Public Library, Srinagar. Also British Museum, Add. 11,631, Rieu's Catalogue, Vol. I, page 298.
- 21 Nizām-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh, Muftī Nizām-ul-Waqā'ī Do. Khwāja Ghulām Muhammad Naqshbandī Ahrārī Mujaddadī, Khānayār, Sayyidwārī, Srinagar.
- [This MS., in the handwriting of the author, has 288 pages, each page having 13 lines. The length of the page is 9", the breadth is 5½", leaving the margin, the space used for writing is 6" x 3½".]
- 22 Qāzī Ibrāhīm Ta'rikh-i-Qalamraw-i-Kashmīr Persian Mufti Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat, Nautāṭṭa, Srinagar.

No.	Author	Manuscript	Language	Obtainable from—
22	Saif-ud-Dīn Beg, Mirzā*	Khulāsat-ut-Tawārīkh	Persian	Mirzā Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidū, B.A., President, Municipal Committee, Jammu.
23	Sayyid 'Alī ibn Sayyid Muhammad	Do.	Do.	Mufti Muhammad Shāh Sa'ādat, Nauhaṭṭa, near Jāmi' Masjid, Srinagar.
24	Anonymous . Supposed to be by a Shī'a gentleman of Kashmir, presumed in Kashmir to be Sayyid Mahdi Kashmiri.	Bahārīstān-i-Shālī .	Do.	British Museum, London (Add 16,706), Rieu's Catalogue Vol. I, pages 296-7. Events from A.H. 986/1578-9 being treated fully.
25	Sayyid Sa'dullāh, Shāl- ābādī, Mīr	Bāgh-i-Sulaimān (poetry)	Do.	Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srinagar. Also Pīr Muhammad Shāh, Kalāldūri Mahalla, Srinagar. The latter has 252 folios.
26	Sohan Lal, Ranjīt Singh's Court Vakīl and historian	Umdat-ut-Tawārīkh	Do.	Oriental Library, Bānkīpur, Patna. The MS. closes at 1831 A.C. The copy printed in 1885 goes down to 1849.

*The Khulāsat-ut-Tawārīkh-i-Kashmīr, folios 71, 8 in. by 5 in., 13 lines, each 3 in. long; written in good nasta'liq, dated A.H. 1278 (A.C. 1861). Author's name Mirzā Saif-ud-Dīn, record-writer in Kashmīr, who brought it down from the earliest times to 1277 A.H. (1860 A.C.). Mirzā Muhy'īd Dīn, the brother and successor in office of the author, continued it, and completed it on the 22nd October, 1861, at the request of General Courtland, then recently appointed British Agent in Kashmīr. The MS. is No. 234 in the Catalogue of Arabic and Persian MSS. in the University of Edinburgh, 1925, pp. 199-200.

The manuscripts on the history of Kashmīr in the British Museum, London, are nine in number. They are according to Rieu's Catalogue, Volume III, page 1195, as follows :—

- 1 Rājataranīkī, folios 131, written in 599 A.H.=1586 A.C.
- 2 Bahārīstān-i-Shālār, folios 180, written in 1023 A.H.=1614 A.C.
- 3 Ta' rīkḥ-i-Kashmīr, folios 224, written in 1030 A.H.=1620 A.C., by Haidar Malik of Chādura.
- 4 Ta' rīkḥ-i-Kashmīr, folios 125, written in 1122 A.H.=1710 A.C., by Pandit Nārāyan Kaul 'Ajiz.
- 5 Nawādir-ul-Ashbār, folios 131, written in 1136 A.H.=1723 A.C., by Abū Rafī' ud-Dīn Ahmad and completed in Shāhjahānābād in the month of Safar 1136 A.H.
- 6 Wāq'at-i-Kashmīr, folios 315, written in 1160 A.H.=1747 A.C., by Muhammad A'zam son of Khair-uz-Zamān Khān. Also Ta' rīkḥ-i-Kashmīr by Hājī Muhammad A'zam Pashawarī is noted by Rieu (see his Catalogue, Vol. III, p. 1013a, III.)
- 7 Gauhar-i-'Ālam, folios 91, written in 1188 A.H.=1774 A.C. One copy by Badī' ud Dīn Abū'l Qāsim Aslam in 1188 A.H., and another copy by Abū'l Qāsim Aslam Mun'imī in 1850 A.C.=1267 A.H.
- 8 Hishmat-i-Kashmīr, folios 20, written in 1245 A.H.=1829 A.C., by 'Abdul Qādir Khān bin Wāsīl 'Alī Khān and completed at Benāres.
- 9 Lubb-ul-Tawārīkḥ, folios 123, written in 1262 A.H.=1845 A.C., the author's name is not given.

Wladimir Ivanow's Catalogue of the Persian Manuscripts in the collection of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengāl (No. 189, p. 59) calls No. 7 above, Gauhar-nāma-i-'Ālam, and says that the copy in question is a history of Kashmīr up to 1200 A.H.=1786 A.C., or thereabout. The work is dedicated to Shāh 'Ālam (1173 A.H.=1759 A.C. to 1221 A.H.=1806 A.C.) and was originally composed in 1160 A.H.=1747 A.C., but subsequently completed about 1200 A.H.=1786 A.C. It is divided into a muqaddama (containing a general description of Kashmīr), six *tabaqa*s and a Khātima, but the Khātima is missing in the copy.

A copy of No. 8, of the above, viz., Hishmat-i-Kashmīr, is in the Curzon Collection of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengāl, No. 42, page 21.

Persian Literature : A Bio-bibliographical Survey by Professor C.A. Storey, in Section II, Fasciculus 3, M. History of India, Luzac & Co., London, 1939, pages 678-87, gives the names of Manuscripts, almost all of which have been noted in this Bibliography, except the Shujā'-i-Haidarī by Muhammad Haidar (See Catalogue of the Āsafiyyah Library, Hydarābād, Deccan, iii, p. 96, No. 1384 (A.C. 1840)).

Section III

LIST OF PUBLISHED WORKS

A

- Abruzzi, Duke of, & Filippi (Fillippode) .. Karakoram and Western Himalayas, 1909. Constable & Co., London, 1912. Two Volumes.
- ‘Abdul Bāqī Nihāwandī. .. Ma’āthir-i-Rahīmī, written in 1025 A.H.=1615 A.C. Part I “The Rulers of Kashmīr,” pp. 199-265. Published by the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengāl, Calcutta, 1924. [Persian]
- Abu’l Fazl .. Ā’in-i-Akbarī, edited by Blochmann, Calcutta, 1867. [Persian]
- Do. .. ————English Translation, Vol. I by H. Blochmann, M.A., 1873, Calcutta. Second Edition, revised by Lt.-Col. D. C. Phillott, Calcutta, 1927. Vol. II by Colonel H. S. Jarrett, 1891, Calcutta. Vol. III by Colonel H. S. Jarrett, 1894, Bengāl Asiatic Society, Calcutta.
- Do. .. Akbar-nāma, edited by Maulavi ‘Abdur Rahīm, Professor of Arabic, Calcutta, Madrasa, Calcutta. Three Volumes, 1877, 1879 and 1886. [Persian].—English Translation, Vol. I, II, III by H. Beveridge, I.C.S., Retired. 1902, 1905, 1939. Royal Asiatic Society of Bengāl, Calcutta.
- Adams, A. L. .. Wanderings of a Naturalist in India. Edmondstone and Douglas. Edinburgh, 1867.
- Akbar Shāh Khān of Najībābād .. Maulānā Ghānī—Mullā Tāhir Ghānī, Poet of Kashmīr. Publisher—Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq, Lāhore. [Urdu]
- ‘Alā’ud-Dīn Muhammad, Muftī, son of Muftī Nūr-ud-Dīn (Ghulām Shāh). .. Mukhtasar Ta’rīkh-i-Kashmīr, Matba’ Gulshan-i-Rashīdī, Lāhore, 1301 A.H. Price As. 3. Pp. 48. [Urdu]
- Al-Bīrūnī, Abū Raihān .. India. Translated by Dr. Edward C. Sachau. Trübner, 1910.
- Anand Kaul Bāmīzāi, Pandit .. History of Kashmīr, J.A.S.B., New Series, Vol. VI, No. 4, April, 1910, pages 195—219.

A—contd.

- Ānand Kaul Bāmīzai, Pandit .. History of Kashmir, J.A.S.B., New Series, Vol. IX, No. 5, 1913.
- Do. .. Jammu and Kashmir State. Thacker, Spink & Co., 1913. Second revised edition. 1925.
- Do. .. Shawls. East and West, January, 1915.
- Do. .. Kashmir Carpet Industry. East and West, October, 1915.
- Do. .. Kashmir Papier Mâché Industry. East and West, July, 1916.
- Do. .. Life Sketch of Laleshwari.—A great Hermitess of Kashmir. British India Press, Bombay, 1922. Reprint from the Indian Antiquary, Vol. L, 1921.
- Do. .. The Kashmiri Pandit. Thacker, Spink & Co., Calcutta, 1924.
- Do. .. A Life of Nand Rishi. The British India Press, Mazgaon, Bombay, 1930. Reprint from the Indian Antiquary, Vol. LIX, 1930, pp. 28-32.
- Do. .. Archaeological Remains in Kashmir. Mercantile Press, Lāhore, 1935.
- Do. .. Lalla Yogeshwari. Her life and sayings with an introduction by Dīwān Bahādur Rājā Narindra Nāth. The Mercantile Press, Lāhore, 1942.
- Anant Rām and Hīrā Nand. Census Report of Jammū and Kashmir of 1931. Ranbīr Government Press, Jammū, 1933.
- Ansley, Mrs. Murray .. Our Visit to Hindustan, Kashmir and Ladakh. H. W. Allen, London, 1879.
- Arbuthnot, James .. A Trip to Kashmir. Thacker, Spink & Co., Calcutta, 1900.
- Archaeological and Research Department Reports, Kashmir, 1909 to date.
- Archaeological Survey of India Reports.
- Arora, R.C., B.Sc. (Ag). .. In the Land of Kashmir, Ladakh and Gilgit. C.M.S. Press, Sikandra, Āgra, 1940. Price Rs. 7/- Pp. 303.

A—conclud.

- Arnold, Sir T. W. .. The Preaching of Islam. Constable, London, 1913.
- A'zam Khwāja Muhammad .. Wāqī'āt-i-Kashmīr (Ta'rīkh-i-Kashmīr A'zamī), Muhammadī Press, Lāhore.

B

- Bābur Tūzūk-i-Bāburī. The Bābur-nāma in English. Translated from the original Turkī Text by Annette Susannah Beveridge. Vols. I & II. Luzac & Co., London, 1921.
- Badāyūnī, Mullā 'Abdul Qādir .. Muntakhab-ut-Tawārīkh. Published by the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta.
- Bakhshī Ghulām Muhammad .. Kashmir Today. "Thru Many Eyes." Published by the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee, Congress House, Bombay 4. Price Rs. 2/-/- July 4, 1946.
- Bamber, C. J. .. Plants of the Punjab...N.-W. F. P., and Kashmir, 1916.
- Bashīr Ahmad .. The Administration of Justice in Medieval India. Published by the Aligarh Historical Research Institute for the Aligarh University, 1941. Printed at the Law Journal Press, Allahabad, U. P.
- Basu, J. C. .. Kashmir and its Prince. Calcutta, 1889.
- Bates, Captain, and Brevet Major Charles Ellison .. A Gazetteer of Kashmir and the adjacent districts of Kishtwar, Badamrah, Jammu, Naoshera, Punch and the Valley of Kishen Ganga. Superintendent, Govt. Printing, Calcutta, 1813.
- Bazāz, Pandit Prēm Nāth. .. Inside Kashmir. First Edition. The Kashmir Publishing Co., Srinagar, 1941. Printed by S. A. Latif, Managing Proprietor, Lion Press, Lāhore.
- Inside Kashmir*, printed by the Superintendent, Government Printing, West Punjāb, Lāhore, August, 1948. Pp. 62 and 8 Appendices. This pamphlet gives an account of the happenings "Inside Kashmir" since its accession to the Indian Union.
- Bellew, Surgeon Major H. W. .. Kashmir and Kashghar (Journey 1873-74). Trübner & Co., Ludgate Hill, London, 1875.
- Bernier, Dr. François .. Travels in the Mogul Empire, A. D. 1656-1668. Second edition revised by V.A. Smith. Oxford University Press, 1914.

B—conclld.

- Bhān, Dr. Rādhā Krishn, Economic Survey of Carpet Industry in Kashmir, pp. 34. Price -/8/-. Economic Survey of Gabba Manufacture in Kashmir, pp. 50. Price -/12/- Economic Survey of Silverware Industry in Kashmir, pp. 29. Price -/8/-. Economic Survey of Wood-carving Industry and Trade in Kashmir, Pp. 29. Price -/8/-. Printed at the Virjanand Press, Lāhore. Published by the Department of Industries and Commerce, His Highness' Government of Jammu and Kashmir. Publications Nos. 1 to 4. August, 1938.
- Biddulph, Major J. .. Tribes of the Hindoo Koosh, Calcutta, 1880.
- Bingley, Capt. A. H. .. Dogras. Simla. 1899.
- Birdwood, George C. M. .. The Industrial Arts of India. Chapman and Hall, Limited, London, 1880.
- Biscoe, Tyndale .. See under Tyndale Biscoe.
- Blacker, J. F. .. The A. B. C. of Indian Art. Stanley Paul and Co., London, 1922.
- Briggs, John .. History of the Rise of the Muhammadan Power in India. John Briggs' English Translation of the Ta'rikh-i-Firishta in four Volumes. R. Cambray & Co., Publishers. Calcutta, 1910.
- Brown, The late Mrs. Chenar Leaves: Poems of Kashmir. With an Introduction by Lady Linlithgow, Thacker, Spink & Co., Calcutta.
- Bruce, Hon. Mrs. C. G. .. Kashmir (Peeps at Many Lands Series) A. & C. Black, Ltd., London, 1915.
- Budh Singh, Gyānī, Teacher, Chōnwe Rattan or Sikh History of State High School, Pūnch. Pūnch and Kashmir, Part I, Price Rs. 5. [Gurmukhī]

C

- Campion, Evelyn Russell .. Daughter of the Dahl.
- Carter, G. E. L. .. The Stone Age in Kashmir. 1924.
- Carus-Wilson, B. A. .. Irene Petrie, Missionary to Kashmir. 6th edition. Hodder & Stoughton, London, 1900.
- Chirāgh Hasan Hasrat .. See under Hasrat.

C—concl'd.

- Chatterjee, J. C. .. Note on the Vitasta, etc., in Kashmīr and Jammu. 1900.
- Cole, Henry Hardy .. Illustrations of Ancient Buildings in Kashmir. W. H. Allen & Co., London, 1869.
- Do. .. Indian Art in South Kensington Museum, London, 1874.
- Coomaraswamy, Dr. A. K. Arts and Crafts of India and Ceylon. G. T. Foulis, London, 1913.
- Coventry, B. O. .. Wild Flowers of Kashmir. Raithby Lawrence and Co., London, 1923.
- Cunningham, Major-General Sir Alexander Ancient Geography of India. The Buddhist Period. Trübner, 1871. Pp. 89-103.
- Do. .. Archaeological Report—1833 to 1834, Vol. 23.
- Do. .. Coins of Medieval India from the 7th century down to the Muhammadan conquests. Bernard Quaritch, London, 1894.
- Cunningham, Captain Joseph A History of the Sikhs. Edited by Davey. H.L.O. Garrett, M.A., I. E. S., Oxford Univeristy Press, 1918. Also the author's original editions of 1849 and 1853.

D

- Darrah, H. Z. .. Sport in the Highlands of Kashmir. Rowland Ward, London, 1898.
- De, Brajendranāth and Dr. Baini Prashād .. English Translation of the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī of Khwāja Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad. Three Volumes. Baptist Mission Press, Calcutta. Published by the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta, 1935.—Section, The Sultāns of Kashmir, Vol. 3, pp. 632-761.
- DeBourbel .. Routes in Jammu and Kashmir. Calcutta, 1897.
- dela Mare, Walter .. The Romantic East and Burma, Assam, and Kashmir. Adam & Charles Black, London, 1906.
- Denys, F. Ward .. Our Summer in the Vale of Kashmir. James William Bryan Press, Washington, D.C., U.S.A., 1915.
- "Dermot, Norris" .. Kashmir: The Switzerland of India. Crown 8vo., W. Newman & Co., Calcutta, 1932.

D—concl'd.

- Dhar, M. A., Pandit S. N. .. Kashmir—Eden of the East with an introductory essay by Pandit Jawāhirlāl Nehrū. Kitāb Mahal, 56-A, Zero Road, Allahābād, U. P. July 1945. Pages 139. Price Rs. 3/12/-.
- Digby, William .. Condemned Unheard—The Government of India and the Mahārāja of Kashmir. London. 1890.
- Doughty, Marion .. Afoot through the Valleys of Kashmir. Sands, London. 1902.
- Douie, Sir James .. The Punjab, North-West Frontier Province and Kashmir. University Press, Cambridge, 1916.
- Drew, Frederic .. The Jummoo and Kashmir Territories : A Geographical Account. Edward Stanford, London, 1875.
- Do. .. The Northern Barrier of India. Edward Stanford, London, 1877. Abridged from the above work.
- Duke, Col. .. Kashmir and Jammu.
- Dutt, J. C. .. Kings of Kashmīra. English Translation of the Rāgataranginī. Three Volumes. 1879-87. Vol. III, Elm Press, Calcutta, 1898.

E

- East India (Kashmir) .. Parliamentary Paper No. C. 6072 of 1890. London, 1890.
- Educational Problems of Muhammadans in Kashmir*, All-India Muslim Educational Conference Bulletin No. 13. Aligarh, U. P.
- Elliot and Dowson .. History of India as told by its Historians. Volumes II, VI and VII.
- Elmslie, Dr. • .. Kashmiri English Dictionary. 1876.

F

- Fergusson, Dr. Jas. .. Archaeology in India. Trübner. 1884.
- Firishta, Muhammad Qāsim .. Gulzār-i-Ibrāhīmī or Ta'rīkh-i-Firishta by Mullā Muhammad Qāsim Hindu Shāh. Newal Kishōr Press, Lucknow. Pp. 420. Another edition, in two volumes, printed in Bombay in 1823, is in the Bombay University Library. It is in fine hand. Volume I was originally copied by Mīrzā Hasan Shīrāzī, and the Second Volume by Mīrzā Hamza Māzandrānī. [Persian]

- Forrest, G. W. .. Letters, etc., in the Foreign Dept. of the Government of India, Calcutta, 1890, Vol. I.
- Forster, George .. Journey from Bengal to England, through the Northern Part of India, Kashmire, Afghanistan, and Persia, and into Russia by the Caspian Sea. Two Volumes. R. Faulder & Son, New Bond-Street, London, 1808.

G

- Ganeshī Lāl, Munshī .. Tuhfa-i-Kashmīr. 1846. [Urdu]
- Ghulām Ahmad Khān .. Census Report of Kashmir for 1901. C. & M. Gazette Press, Lāhore, 1902.
- Ghulām Ahmad Mahjūr, .. Hāyat-i-Rahīm. Rāwī Printing Works, Lāhore, 1840 A. H.=1921 A. C. [Urdu]
- Ghulām Husain Tabātabāī, .. Siyar-ul-Muta'akhhirīn. Newal Kishore Munshī Press, 1866, Volume I, pp. 195-201.
- Ghulām Sarwar .. Khazīnat-ul-Asfiyā (Lives of Saints). Newal Kishore. 1284 A.H.
- Grierson, Sir George .. Manual of the Kashmīrī Language, 1911, 2 Vols.
- Do. .. Dictionary of the Kashmīrī Language. Royal Asiatic Society, Bengāl, Calcutta, 1932.
- Do. .. Grammar of the Kashmīrī Language.
- Girdlestone, Charles .. Memorandum on Kashmir.
- Griffin, Sir L. H. .. Punjab Chiefs.
- Do. .. Rajas of the Punjab.
- Do. .. Ranjit Singh.
- Growse, E. S. .. Architecture of Kashmir. The Calcutta Review, January, 1872. Reprinted in Selections, Vol. I, February-May, 1894.
- Gwāsha Lāl, P. .. A Short History of Kashmir. Mercantile Press, Lāhore, 1933.

H

- Haig, Lt.-Col. T. W. .. The Chronology and Genealogy of the Muhammadan Kings of Kashmir. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1918, pp. 451-468.

H—concl'd.

- Haig, Sir T. Wolseley .. "The Kingdom of Kashmīr" in the Cambridge History of India, Vol. III, 1928. Also Volume IV of the same series.
- Haidar Dūghlāt, Mirzā .. The Tarīkh-i-Rashūlī of Mirzā Muhammad Haidar Dūghlāt [Persian]. Edited by E. Ney Elias, Consul-General for Khurāsān and Sistān. Translated into English by Dr. F. D. Ross. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., London, 1895.
- Harcourt, Captain A.F.P. Himalayan Districts of Kooloo, Lahoul, and Spiti. Wm. H. Allen & Co., London. 1871.
- Hargopāl Kaul Khasta, .. Guldasta-i-Kashmīr. Fārsī Ārya Press, Pandit, Pleader. Lāhore, 1883. [Urdu]
- Hasrat, Chirāgh Hasan .. Kashmīr. Ittihad Press, Lāhore, 15th January, 1948. Publisher : Shaikh Muhammad Nāsir Humāyūn, B.A., Qaumī Kutub-khāna, Railway Road, Lāhore. Pp. 240. Price Rs. 2/8/-. [Urdu]
- Havel, E. B. .. History of Aryan Rule in India. Harrap. 1918.
- Hedin, Dr. Sven .. Adventures in Tibet. Hurst & Blackett Limited, London, 1904.
- Hishmatullāh Khān, .. Mukhtasar Tarīkh-i-Jammu wa Rayāsat
Maulavī Al-Hājj .. hāi Maftūha. Matba' Muhammad Tegh Bahādur, Lucknow, 1939.
- Honigberger, Dr. John .. Thirty-five Years in the East. Ballière, Martin London. 1852.
- Hervey, Mrs. .. Adventures of a Lady in Tartary, Tibet, China and Kashmīr. Hope, London, 1854.
- Hügel, Baron Charles, .. Travels in Kashmīr and the Panjab.
Translator : Major T. B. John Petheram, London, 1845.
Jervis
- Hutchison, J. and J. Ph. .. History of Jammu State. Journal of Vogel. .. the Panjab Historical Society, Vol. VIII.
- Do. .. History of Kishtwār State, Journal of
.. the Panjab Historical Society, Vol. IV.
- Do. .. History of Bhadrawah State, Journal of
.. the Panjab Historical Society, Vol. IV.

I

The Imperial Gazetteer of India, Volume containing: 'Kashmīr';

I—concl'd.

- Ince, Dr. John .. The Kashmir Handbook : A Guide for Visitors. Re-written and much enlarged by Joshua Duke, Surgeon-Major, Bengal Medical Service. Thacker, Spink & Co., Calcutta, 1888.
- Ishtiāq Husain Qureshī, M.A., Ph.D. The Administration of the Sultanate of Delhi. Shaikh Muhammad Ashraf, Kashmirī Bāzār, Lāhore, May, 1942.
- ‘Izzatullāh, Mir .. Travels in Central Asia in the Year 1812-13 [Persian]. Translated into English by Captain Henderson. Printed at the Foreign Department Press, Calcutta, 1872.
- Intelligence Reports concerning the Tribal Repercussions to the Events in the Punjab, Kashmir and India*. Printed by the Superintendent, Government Printing, West Punjāb, 1948, pp. 36 and Appx.

J

- Jacquemont, Victor .. Letters from India during the years 1828, 1829, 1830, 1831. Edward Churton, London, 1834. Two Volumes.
- Do. .. Letters from India 1829-1832. Translated with an Introduction by Catherine Alison Phillips. Macmillan & Co., Ltd., London, 1936.
- Jahāngīr .. The Tūzuk-i-Jahāngīrī.
English Translation of the Tūzuk-i-Jahāngīrī by Alexander Rogers and Henry Beveridge. Vols. I (1909), II (1914). Royal Asiatic Society, London.
- Jalālī, M.A., Jaya Lāl Kaul .. Economics of Food Grains in Kashmir, Mercantile Press, Railway Road, Lahore, 1931.
- Jammu & Kashmir State—List of Ruling Princes, Chiefs, and Leading Personages. Pages 31. Government of India Central Publication Branch, Calcutta. 1925.

K

- Kāhan Singh Balāvaryā of Basohlī, Thākar Sawānīh ‘Umarī Mahārāja Ranbīr Singh Bahādur [Urdu]. Matba‘ Girdhar Steam Press, Lāhore, 1980 Bikramī. Pp. 56.
- Kāk, Rām Chandra, B.A., Ancient Monuments of Kashmir. The Rāi Bahādur, ex-Prime India Society, 3 Victoria Street, Minister, Jammu and London, S.W. 1., 1933.
- Kashmīr State.

K—contd.

- Kāk Rām Chandra, B.A., Handbook of the Archaeological and Rāi Bahādur, ex-Prime Numismatic Section of the Sri Partāp Minister, Jammu and Singh Museum, Srinagar. 1923.
Kashmir State.
- Kalhaṇa, or Kalyāṇa Pandit Rājataranginī: A Chronicle of the Kings of Kashmir; trans. by M. A. Stein. 1900, Two Vols. (Also see under Stein.)
- Kanhaiyā Lāl .. Zafar-nāma-i-Ranjīt Singh. Lāhore. [In Persian Poetry.]
- Kaul, M. F., Shiv Nāth .. Forest Products of Jammu and Kashmir. Pratāp Steam Press, Srinagar, 1928.
- Kaul, Jaya Lal, M.A., .. Kashmiri Lyrics, selected and translated into English by the author. Rinemisry, Lambert Lane, Srinagar, Kashmir. September 1945. Pp. 172. Price Rs. 3/8/-.
LL.B.
- Kaul, Sansār Chand .. Birds of Kashmir. The Normal Press, Srinagar, 1939.
- Do. .. Beautiful Valleys of Kashmir (Illustrated). P. K. Steam Press, Srinagar, 1942.
- Khushi Muhammad, .. Census Repor Kashmir for 1921.
Chaudhri, Khān Bahādur Parts I and I Mufid-i-‘Ām Press, Lāhore.
- Kipling, L. .. Kashmīr and Jammu Industries. Brass and Copperware.
- Kirpā Rām, Dīwān .. Gulzār-i-Kashmīr. Kūh-i-Nūr Press, Lāhore, 1850. Printer—Sayyid Jawād ‘Alī Shāh. Pages 516 + 34 + 2.
- Do. .. Gulāb-nāma. Jammu Press. 1922 Samvat=1865 A.C. Pages 421. Second Edition, Tuhfa-i-Kashmīr, Srinagar, 1932 Samvat. Pages 419.
- Knight, E. F. .. Where Three Empires Meet. Longmans, Green & Co., London, 1893.
- Knowles, Rev. J. Hinton .. A Dictionary of Kashmiri Proverbs & Sayings. Trübner, London, 1885. Pp. 263.
- Do. .. Folk-Tales of Kashmir, Trübner, London, 1893.
- Kotak, H. M. .. A. I. S. A. Kashmir Guide. All-India Spinners’ Association, Srinagar. Printed by P. C. Ray, Sri Gouranga Press, 21/1, Mirzāpur St., Calcutta. 1938.

K—concl'd.

- Kremer, von The Orient under the Caliphs. Translated by S. Khudā Bukhsh. Calcutta University, 1920.

Kashmīr Before Accession. Printed by the Superintendent, Government Printing, West Punjab, Lāhore, 1948. pp. 53 + xxxvii.

Kashmīr on Trial—The Historic Trial of Shaikh Muhammad Abdullah, President, All-India States Peoples' Conference. Introduction by Jawahirlal Nehru. The Lion Press, Lāhore, 1947. Price Rs. 4/- Pp. 224.

The Kashmīr Story. Publisher—Director, Publications Division, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, Government of India, Old Secretariat, Delhi. Printed by F. Borton for G. Cloridge & Co., Ltd., at the Caxton Press, Bombay. Pp. 72. Rs. 2/8/- August, 1948.

L

- Lambert, C. A Trip to Kashmīr and Ladakh. H. S. King, London, 1877.
- Latif, Sayyid Muhammad .. History of the Panjāb. Calcutta Central Press Company Ltd., Calcutta, 1891.
- Law, Narendra Nath .. Promotion of Learning in India during Muhammadan Rule (by Muhammadans). Longmans, 1916.
- Lawrence, Walter R. .. The Valley of Kashmīr. Henry Frowd, Oxford University Press, Warehouse, London, 1895.
- Leitner, Dr. G. W. .. Section 1, Linguistic Fragments discovered in 1870, 1872 and 1879, 1881.
- Do. .. Dardistān in 1866, 1886, and 1893. Oriental University Institute, Woking, England.
- Do. .. Languages and Races of Dardistān. Government Central Book Depôt, Lāhore, 1877.
- Loewenthal, Rev. I. .. "Some Persian Inscriptions found in Srinagar, Kashmīr." Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Volume XXXIII, No. 295, 1865, pp. 278-290.
- Lucullus (Pseudonym) .. The Cashmere Raj. Newal Kishōr Press, Lucknow, 1867. Part I. Pp. 200.

M

- Marco Polo Travels, 1904.
- Massy, C. F. .. Chiefs and Families of Note in the Punjab. Allahābād. 1890.
- Matin-uz-Zamān Khān .. Census Report of Kashmīr for 1911. Newal Kishōr Press, Lucknow, 1912.

M—contd.

- Mhaffe, A. De (?) .. Road to Kashmir. Ripon Press, Lāhore. Price Rs. 8/8/. Pp.* 206 + xxiii, royal octavo size, 1948. Pages 167-195 deal with the beginning of the present trouble in Kashmīr.
- Milne, James The Road to Kashmir. Illustrated. Hodder and Stoughton, London.
- Modi, Dr. Sir Jamshedji J. "Cashmere and the Ancient Persians." Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XIX, pp. 237-249, 9th December, 1895.
- Do. "The Pundits of Kashmīr." The Journal of the Anthropological Society of Bombay, Volume X, 1913-16, No. 6, pp. 461-485.
- Do. "The Mogul Emperors at Kashmīr." The Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Volume XXV, No. 71, 1922, pp. 26-75.
- Do. "A Few Persian Inscriptions of Kashmīr." Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society (New Series), Volume II, 1926, pp. 184-212.
- Do. "A Pārsi High Priest, Āzar Kaiwān." Proceedings of the Sixth Oriental Conference held at Patna in Dec., 1930. Note—For Dr. Modi's collected papers on Kashmīr, the reader is referred to Asiatic Papers, Part III, British India Press, Bombay, 1927, Section I, pp. 1-46.
- Molony .. History of Kashmir. Christian Literature Society for India, 1920, pp. 31.
- Moorcroft, William and George Trebeck .. Travels in the Himalayan Provinces of Hindustan and the Panjab; in Ladakh and Kashmir; in Peshawar, Kabul, Kunduz and Bokhara, from 1819 to 1825. Prepared for the Press from original Journals and Correspondence by Horace Hayman Wilson, M.A., F.R.S. Volumes I and II. John Murray, London, 1841.
- Moore, Thomas .. Lalla Rookh. George G. Harrap & Co., Ltd., London and Sydney.—The Choice Books. 1846.

M—concl'd.

- Morison, Margaret Cotter .. A Lonely Summer in Kashmir. Duckworth, London, 1904.
- Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq, Mukammal Ta'rīkh-i-Kashmīr. Rifāh-i-Ām Steam Press, Lāhore, 1910.
- Do. Rahnumā-i-Kashmīr. Paisa Akhbār, Lāhore. 1923.
- Do. Safar-nama-i-Kashmīr. 1907.
- Do. Ta'rīkh-i-Baḍ Shāhī. Ittihad Press, Bull Road, Lāhore, 1944. Publishers: Zafar Brothers, Zafar Manzil, Outside Sherānwāla Gate, Lāhore.
- Do. Shālāmār Bāgh. Paisa Akhbār, Lāhore 1924.
- Do. Ta'rīkh-i-Aqwām-i-Kashmīr. Three Vols. } Zafar Brothers,
Do. Kalām-i-Fauq. } Zafar Manzil,
Do. Khawātīn-i-Kashmīr. } Outside
Do. Kashmīr kī Rāniān. } Sherānwāla
Do. Lalla 'Arīfa. } Gate, Lāhore.
- Do. MSS.—(i) Gulāb-nāma, (ii) Mazār-ush-Shu'arā, (iii) Kashmīr kā Nādir Shāh, (iv) Rājā Sukh Jīwan Mal. [Urdu].
- Muhammad-ud-Dīn Hanafī, Rarzat-ul-Abrār or Tazkira-i-Hazrāt-i-Qādirī, M.O.L., Maulavī Kashmīr. Sirāj-ul-Matābi, Jhelum, 1302 A.H.=1883-4 A.C. Pp. 80. [Urdu].
- Do. Rafiqī-nāma or Tazkira-i-Hazrāt-i-Rafiqiyyah Ashāiyah. 1303 A.H. Victoria Press, Yakkī Darwāza, Lāhore. Pp. 24.
- Muhyi'd-Dīn Miskīn of Serāibal, Kashmīr .. Ta'rīkh-i-Kabīr. Only one volume printed. Suraj Prakāsh Press, Amritsar, 1322.
- Mukhtār Shāh Ashāī, Hājī. Risālah dar Fann-i-Shālbāfi. Kūh-i-Nūr Press, Lāhore. 1887. Pioneer Press, Allāhābād, 1896.
- N
- Neve, Earnest F. .. Beyond the Pir Panjal: Life among the Mountains and Valleys of Kashmir. Church Missionary Society, London. 1915.
- Do. A Crusader in Kashmir. Seeley, Service & Co., London. 1928.

N—concl'd.

- Neve, Earnest F. .. Things Seen in Kashmir. Seeley, Service & Co., London, 1931.
- Neve, Major Arthur, F.R.C.S. (Ed.) R.A.M.C. Picturesque Kashmir. Sands, London, 1900.
- Do. .. Thirty Years in Kashmir. Edward Arnold, London, 1913.
- Do. .. The Tourists' Guide to Kashmir, Ladakh, Skardo, etc. [15th edition], 1933. The Civil & Military Gazette Press, Lahore. [16th edition, 1938, actually printed in 1939. 17th edition printed in 1942].
- Newall, Lieutenant D. J. F. "A Sketch of the Muhammadan History of Kashmir." J. A. S. B., No. V, September, 1854.
- Do. .. "Some Account of the Rishis or Hermits of Kashmir." J. A. S. B., November, 1870.
- Do. .. Highlands of India. London [1882-1887]. 2 Vols.
- Nicholls, W. H. .. "Muhammadan Architecture in Kashmir." Archaeological Survey—Annual Report, 1906-1907. Government Printing, Calcutta, 1909.
- Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad Bakhshī, Khwāja .. Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī [Persian]. 1229 Hījrī. Edited by B. De and Hidāyat Husain. Three Volumes. Royal Asiatic Society of Bengāl, Calcutta, 1927-35, Section—The Sultāns of Kashmir, Vol. 3, pp. 424-506.

O

- O'Connor, V. C. Scott .. The Charm of Kashmir. Longmans, Green & Co., London, 1920.
- Orlich, Captain Leopold von .. Kashmir : its Government contrasted with that of Multan. 2 Volumes. Longman, Brown, Green, London, 1845.
- Osborne, The Hon. W. G. .. The Court and Camp of Ranjeet Sing. Henry Colburn, London, 1840.

P

- Pandit, Ranjit Sitā Rām .. Rājataranginī—The Saga of the Kings of Kashmir. Indian Press Ltd., Allahābād. October, 1935.
- Panikkar, Sardār K. M. .. Gulab Singh, 1792-1858, Founder of Kashmir. Martin Hopkinson Ltd., London, 1930.

P—concl'd.

- Parbury, Florence .. The Emerald Set with Pearls.
Simpkin, Marshall, London, 1909.
- Petrocokino, A. .. Three Weeks in a Houseboat. Longmans, London, 1920.
- Pirie, P., of Lucknow .. Kashmīr, the Land of Streams and Solitudes. John Lane, The Bodley Head, London, 1908.
- Prinsep, V. C. .. Imperial India, London, 1879. Pp. 212-49.

R

- Rashīdī, The Ta'rikh-i-* .. See under Haidar Dughlāt.
- Ratan Devī (Compiler) .. Thirty Songs from the Punjab and
& A. K. Coomaraswamy Kashmīr. February, 1913. Luzac, Great (Translator) Russell Street, London.
- Risley, Sir Herbert Hope .. The People of India. Second Edition, edited by W. Crooke, B.A. W. Thacker
& C., London, 1915.
- Rodgers, C. J. .. "The Copper Coins of the Sultāns of Kashmir." J.A.S.B., Vol. XLVIII,
Part I, No. 4, 1879.
- Do. .. "The Square Silver Coins of the Sultāns of Kashmir." J. A. S. B., Vol. LIV,
Part I, No. 2, 1885.
- Rothfeld, Otto .. With Pen and Rifle in Kishtwar. Tārāporevāla Sons, Bombay, 1918.
- Royle, J. Forbes .. Illustrations of the Botany. . . Natural History of the Himalayan Mountains and of the Flora of Cashmere. 2 Vols.
Wm. H. Allen Co., London, 1839.

S

- Sa'adat and Amīr .. Hayāt-i-Jāwīd, Pratāb Steam Press,
Srinagar. [Urdu]
- Sa'adat, Muftī Muhammad Shāh Bayān-i-Wāqī. An account of the Jāmi' Masjid, Srinagar. Muslim Printing Press, Srinagar. 1351 A.H.
- Do. .. An Account of Sultān Sikandar and the Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā. Sābir Electric
Press, Lāhore, 1355 A.H.
- Do. .. At-Tabshīr. An account of Hazrat
Amīr-i-Kabīr Mīr Sayyid 'Alī
Hamadānī. Broca Press, Srinagar,
1358 A.H. 1939 A.C.

- Sa'ādat, Muftī Muhammad Shāh Tazkiratu'l-Muttaqī. An account of the Baihaqī Sayyids. Sābir Electric Press, Lāhore. 1356 A.H.=1937 A.C.
- Do. .. Manāqib-us-Sādāt. An account of the Indrābī Sayyids. Sābir Electric Press, Lāhore. 1356 A.H.
- Do. .. Yādgar-i-'Ajā'ib. An account of Sayyid Madyan Sāhib. Mārtand Press, Shītalnāth, Srīnagar. 1351 A.H., 1933 A.C.=1989 Bikramī.
- Do. . Futūhāt-i-Rabbānī. Account of the 'Ulamā' of Kashmīr. Muslim Printing Press, Srīnagar, 1352 A.H.
- Do. .. Halāt-i-Yūz Āsaf. National Printing Press, Srīnagar.
- Do. .. Hayāt-i-Sarfī. Account of Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī. Sābir Electric Press, Lāhore, 1356 A.H.
- Do. .. Bulbul Shāh Sāhib. An account of Sayyid 'Abdur Rahmān. Maqbūl-i-'Ām Press, Lāhore, 1360 A.H.
- Do. .. Kalām-i-'Ālī. An account of the 'Ālī Masjid and the 'Idgāh of Srīnagar. Nashāt Electric Press, Srīnagar, 1360-1, A.H.
Muftī Muhammad Shāh Sa'ādat's works noted above are in Urdu.
- Saif-ud-Dīn Pandit Kashmīrī, Muhammad. Ta'rīkh-i-Jadvalī mausūm ba Mūjiz ut-Ta'rīkh. Khādim-i-Punjab Press, Lāhore.
- Sahnī, Dayā Rām, and Francke, A. H. . References to the Bhoṭṭas or Bhautṭas in the Rājatarangīnī. The Indian Antiquary, Bombay, Vol. 37, July, 1908, pp. 181-192.
- Saprū, M.A., Arjun Nāth .. The Building of the Jammu and Kashmir State—Being the Achievement of Maharaja Gulab Singh. Government Printing, Punjab, Lāhore. 1931. Price Rs. 3/12 or 5s. 8d.
- Sarkār, Sir Jadu Nāth .. History of Aurangzeb. Vols. I—V. Sarkār & Sons, Calcutta, 1924.
- Do. .. The India of Aurangzeb. Bose Brothers, Calcutta, 1910.

S—contd.

- Sarkār, Sir Jadu Nāth .. Studies in Mughal India. Sarkār & Sons, Calcutta, 1919.
- Do. .. Mughal Administration. Sarkār & Sons, Calcutta, 1924.
- Schönberg, The Baron Erich von. Travels in India and Kashmir. Hurst and Blackett, London, 1853. Vols. I & II. Printed by Schulze & Co., 13 Poland Street, London.
- Sedgwick, Major, W.R.E. .. India for Sale : Kashmir Sold. Printed by W. Newman & Co., Ltd. at the Caxton Steam Printing Works, 1, Mission Row, Calcutta, 1886. Pp. 30.
- Shahāmat Ali, Indian Secretary with the Wade Mission of 1839 The Sikhs and Afghans. John Murray, London, 1847.
- Shamīm, Rāi Bahādur Pt. Kashmīrī Music. The Zamāna, Cawn- Shiv Nārā'in. .. pore, November, 1916. [Urdu].
- Do. .. Kashmiri Pandit. 1895. Jullundur. [Urdu].
- “Single Barrel” (?) .. Rambles in Kashmir. The Pioneer Press, Allāhābād, 1896.
- Sinha, Dr. Sachchidananda, D. Litt. Kashmir : “The Playground of Asia.” A Handbook for Visitors to the Happy Valley. Rām Nārāin Lal, 2 Katra Road, Allāhābād, 1942. Also Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, 1943.
- Smith, V. A. .. A History of Fine Art in India and Ceylon. Oxford, 1911. Also the edition revised by K. de B. Codrington, 1930.
- Do. .. Akbar the Great Mughal. Oxford, 1919.
- Sohan Lāl .. ‘Umdat-ut-Tawārīkh, Lāhore. 1888. [Persian]
- Stein, M. A. .. Memoir on Maps illustrating the Ancient Geography of Kashmir. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengāl, Volume LXVIII—part I, Extra Number 2, 1899. Baptist Mission Press, Calcutta, 1899. Also reproduced on pp. 345-494 of his English Translation of Kalhaṇa's Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Vol. II.
- Do. .. Kalhaṇa's Rājatarāṅgiṇī. Two Vols. (also given under Kalhaṇa). Archibald Constable & Company Ltd., Westminster, 1900.
- Stein and Grierson .. Hātīm's Tales. John Murray, 1919.

S—concl'd.

- Stuart, Mrs. C. M. Villiers .. Gardens of the Great Mughals (Gardens of the Dal Lake and Summer Gardens of Kashmir, Pp. 153-197). Adam & Charles Black, London, 1913.

T

- Tabātabāī, Munshī Ghulām . Siyar-ul-Muta'akhhkirīn. [Urdu]
Husain Khān Lucknow, March 1897. See Ghulām Husain.
- Tavernier Travels in India. Translation by Prof. V. Ball. 2 Vols. Macmillan, 1889.
- Temple, Sir Richard, .. Journals kept in Hyderabad, Kashmir, and Captain Richard Sikkim, and Nepal. W.H. Allen & Co., Carnac Temple London, 1887. Two Vols. Volume II, pages 1-150, deals with Kashmir.
- Temple, Sir Richard Carnac The Word of Lalla the Prophetess.
Cambridge University Press, 1924.
- Terra, H. De and T. T. .. Studies on the Ice Age in India and Paterson. Associated Human Cultures. Carnegie
Institution of Washington, Washington,
D.C., U.S.A., 1939.
- Tyndale Biscoe, C. E. .. Kashmir in Sunlight & Shade. Seeley, Service & Co., Ltd., London, 1922.
- Do. .. Fifty Years Against the Stream. The History of a School in Kashmir, 1880-
1930. Wesleyan Mission Press, Mysore.
1930.
- Thrope, Robert Kashmir Misgovernment. Dedicated (without permission) to Her Majesty's Government of India. Wyman Bros.
Hare Street, Calcutta. 1868. Pp. 74.
- Torrens, Lieutenant-Colonel Travels in Laddāk, Tartary and Kashmir.
Henry D. Saunders, Otley & Co., London.
Second Edition, 1863.

Trade & Tour, 1946. Kashmir Guide & Business Directory.
Publishers : Rinemisry, Srinagar. Printed by Mr. N. K. Raina at The Times Press, Srinagar, Kashmir. Pp. 512. Price Rs. 6/-.

V

- Vigne, G. T. .. Travels in Kashmir, Ladak, Iskardo and the Himalaya, North of the Panjab.
Vols. I & II. Henry Colburn, London, 1842.

W

- Wade, T. R. .. Grammar of the Kashmīrī Language. 1888.
- Wadia, Ardaser Sorabjee .. In the Land of Lalla Rookh. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd., London and Toronto,
1921.

W—concl'd.

- Wakefield, G.E.C., C.I.E. Recollections—50 years in the Service of India. The Civil and Military Gazette Press, Lāhore, 1943.
- Wakefield, M.D., Dr. W. .. The Happy Valley. Sampson Low, Marston, Searle & Rivington, London, 1879. Pp. 300.
- Ward, Colonel A. E. .. Sportsman's Guide to Kashmir & Ladak. Calcutta Central Press Co., Calcutta. 3rd and Revised Edition, 1887. 120 pp., 3 maps. 4th Edition, 1896.
- Wardle, Sir Thomas .. Silk Industries. London, 1884.
- Warren, Henry Clarke .. Buddhism in Translations. Harvard University Press, 1896.
- Wilson, Andrew .. The Abode of Snow. William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London, 1875.
- Wilson, H. H. .. Travels in Himalayan Provinces. Murray, London, 1841.
- Do. An Essay on the Hindu History of Kashmir. The Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV. Mission Press, Serāmpur, 1825.
- Workman, F. B. and W. H. Workman .. Ice-bound, Heights of the Mustagh. Constable, London, 1908.
- Wright, Nelson .. Catalogue of Coins in the Indian Museum, Calcutta. Volumes II, III.
- Y
- Younghusband, Sir Francis. Kashmir. Adam & Charles Black. Painted by Major E. Molyneux. 1909. Reprinted 1917.
- Z
- Zuhūr-ul-Hasan Nāzim .. Nigāristān-i-Kashmīr [Urdu]. Jayyid Sehōrvī, Qāzī. Barqī Press, Ballīmārān, Delhi. A.H. 1352=A.C. 1933. Rs. 2-8-0.
- Zakāullāh, S. U. Maulavī .. History of Indīa [Urdu]. Vol. IV, pages 1-58. 1897. Also Volume IV, pages 77-134 printed at the Institute Press, Aligarh, U. P., 1917.
- Ziā-ul-Islām .. The Revolution in Kashmīr. Pākitsān Publishers, P. O. Box 802, Karāchī. June 1948. Pp. 141. Price Rs. 5/8/-.

Note.—For Hijra and Christian years, Dr. O. Codrington's Table in A Manual of Musalmān Numismatics, published by the Royal Asiatic Society, Monograph, Vol. VII, 1904, has been used. Also as a check, Lt.-Colonel Sir Wolseley Haig's Comparative Tables of Muhammadan and Christian Dates, Luzac & Co., London, 1932.

Section IV

PERIODICALS

Miyān Muhammad ‘Abdullāh Quraishī, B.A., known in Kashmīrī circles as co-author, with the late Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq, of the Ta’rīkh-i-Aqwām-i-Kashmīr, Volume III, has kindly prepared the following list of Periodicals that have, from time to time, discussed the various aspects of life in the Valley of Kashmīr and of the Kashmīrīs abroad. This literature is valuable as throwing light, from a point of view a little different from that of a book or a manuscript on Kashmīr, and should be helpful to the student of latter-day history, political, social and cultural, of Kashmīr. With certain additions and alterations this list is given below :—

1. The Khair-Khwāh-i-Kashmīr. Urdu weekly, published from Lāhore and edited by Pandit Hargopāl Kaul Khasta during 1882-83. Critical of Mahārājā Ranbīr’s régime. Khasta was exiled by the Mahārājā and lived in Lāhore for some time. He ventilated his grievances through this paper. See page 348 and footnote 2 of Kashīr, Volume II.

2. The Rāvī, Lāhore. As above.

3. The Public News, Lāhore. As above.

4. The Akhbār-i-‘Ām, Lāhore.—Urdu weekly, established in 1881 by Pandit Mukand Rām Gurtu, subsequently edited by his son Pandit Gopī Nāth. It was, later on, converted into a daily. It stopped publication some ten years back.

5. The Murāsala-i-Kashmīr.—An organ of the Kashmīrī Pandits, published weekly from Lāhore during 1880 and 1890.

6. The Kashmīr Prakāsh.—A monthly magazine of Lāhore, edited by Pandit Maṅka Meshar. It began to be issued in 1898 and ceased publication in 1901. It worked for the social uplift of the Kashmīrī Pandits.

7. The Kashmīr Darpan, Allahābād.—It was a bi-lingual monthly magazine in Urdu and Hindi edited by Pandit (now Sir) Tej Bahādur Saprū, M. A., LL. D., during 1898-1904. Some of its files are available in the Kaifi Collection of the Panjāb University Library, Lāhore.

8. The Shumālī, Rāwalpindī.—It appeared from Rāwalpindī some fifty years ago, and stopped publication after two years.

9. The Gulshan-i-Kashmīr, Lāhore.—An Urdu weekly, edited by Maulāna Tāj-ud-Dīn Ahmad Tāj in 1901. Now defunct.

10. The Panja-i-Faulād, Lāhore.—An Urdu weekly, edited by the late Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq during 1901-1906. It discussed affairs in Kashmīr and Jammu. Its files are available at Messrs. Zafar Brothers, Booksellers, Zafar Manzil, Outside Sherānwāla Gate, Lāhore.

11. The Kashmīrī Gazette, Lāhore.—An Urdu monthly, established by Chaudhrī Jān Muhammad Ganāī and edited by Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq during 1901-1904. It worked for the social and political awakening of Kashmīrī Musalmāns. Its files are available with Chaudhrī Allāh Bakhsh of Messrs. Allāh Bakhsh Jān Muhammad, Book sellers, Kashmīrī Bāzār, Lāhore.

12. The Kashmīrī Makhzan, Lāhore.—An Urdu monthly, edited by Khwāja Kamāl-ud-Dīn, B.A., LL.B., Muslim Missionary for England, and Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq during 1905 for the social uplift of the Kashmīris.

13. The Kashmīrī Magazine, Lāhore.—An Urdu monthly, established by Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq in 1906. It was converted into a weekly in 1912. It was devoted to the historical, social and political movements that agitated the mind of the people of Kashmīr in the time of Mahārājā Pratāp Singh. Its files are preserved by Zafar Brothers, Zafar Manzil, Outside Sherānwāla Gate, Lāhore.

14. The Akhbār-i-Kashmīr, Lāhore.—This was the name given to the Kashmīrī Magazine by Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq in 1912 when converting it into a weekly. It ceased publication in 1935. It is a mine of information about Kashmīr for about a quarter of a century from 1912 to 1935. Its files are available with Messrs. Zafar Brothers, Zafar Manzil, Outside Sherānwāla Gate, Lāhore.

15. The Safīr, Lāhore.—Urdu monthly of the Kashmīrī Pandits, edited by Pandit Lachhmī Nārāin Kaul during 1914-1916.

16. The Subh-i-Kashmīr, Lāhore.—Urdu monthly, edited by Pandit Lachhmī Nārāin Kaul and Pandit Dīnā Nāth Mast in 1916 onwards. It was the successor of the Safīr, Lāhore, and a bold critic of Kashmīr politics.

17. The Bahār-i-Kashmīr, Lāhore.—“Bi-lingual, Urdu and Hindi, monthly of the Kashmīrī Pandits’ Association. It was edited, from time to time, by some of the well-known scholars and poets among the Kashmīrī Pandits. It continued till the Partition of India. Some of its files are available with Messrs. Zafar Brothers, Zafar Manzil, Outside Sherānwāla Gate, Lāhore.

18. The Rafiq-i-Hindustān, Lāhore.—An Urdu weekly published during 1885 and 1890-91. It discussed Kashmīr affairs.

19. The Āīna-i-Hind, Lāhore.—Urdu weekly, published by Bābū Ghulām Muhammad in the beginning of Mahārājā Pratāp Singh’s reign against the policy of the Council appointed by the British Government in 1887.

20. The Hamdard-i-Hind, Lāhore.—An anti-Pratāp paper, edited by Pandit Sarab Dyāl during 1894. It condemned Mahārājā Pratāp Singh and supported the rival party and the Council. It was the first paper issued from British India, which was proscribed in the State.

21. The Rājput Gazette, Lāhore.—Urdu weekly, established by Thākar Sukhrām Chauhān in the beginning of this century. It continued till the Partition of India. During this long period, it discussed specially the affairs of Kashmīr for many years when it was edited by Pandit Rāj Nārāin Armān Dehlavī.

22. The Kashmīr, Amritsar.—Urdu weekly edited by Khwāja Ghulām Muhyī'd Dīn during 1924-1927.

23. The Kashmīrī Musalmān, Lāhore. } The Daily Inqilāb,

24. The Mazlūm-i-Kashmīr, Lāhore. } Lāhore,

25. The Maktūb-i-Kashmīr, Lāhore. } wrote strong articles against the administration of Mahārājā Harī Singh about 1929-31. When its entry into the State was banned, the Kashmīrī Musalmān was issued. When this paper was also banned in 1931, the Mazlūm-i-Kashmīr took its place. When this paper was also proscribed in the State, the Maktūb-i-Kashmīr took up the work. This paper was also banned. The Glancy Commission and the Reforms following it may be said to be due to the powerful writings of these papers coupled with the Ahrār Movement, the advice and assistance of the Kashmīr Committee, and the agitation within the Valley of Kashmīr under the leadership of Shaikh Muhammad 'Abdullāh, Chaudhrī Ghulām 'Abbās, and others.

So far, efforts were made from outside for the uplift of the people of Kashmīr. But now the Kashmīrīs themselves began to issue periodicals from Srinagar, Jammu, Muzaḥḥarābād, Pūnch and Mīrpur. The following is the list of some of the papers which were issued during this period, viz., 1932-1948. These are important in respect of current topics and noteworthy events that took place from time to time.

26. The Vatistā, Srinagar.—The first Urdu weekly issued by Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz B.A., in 1931. After a suspension of many years, it has been converted into a Hindi monthly since 1947.

27. The Sadāqat, Srinagar.—Urdu daily, published to support the movement initiated by Shaikh Muhammad 'Abdullāh and his associates in 1932-33. It was at one time edited by Maulavi 'Abdur Rahīm, M.A., LL.B., recently city Judge, Srinagar, but now in jail. Defunct.

28. The Daily Haqīqat, Srinagar.—It was a successor of the Sadāqat, Srinagar, which was believed to be edited by Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz, B.A., under the assumed name of S. Q. Qalandar. It ceased publication in 1933-34.

29. The Mārtand, Srinagar.—Urdu daily, published by the Sanātan Dharm Yūvak Sabhā since 1931. In the beginning it was edited by Pandit Keshab Bandhu, but till recently by Pandit Prēm Nāth Kanah.

30. The Islām, Srinagar.—Urdu bi-weekly, belonging to the party of Maulavī Yūsuf Shāh Mīr Wā'iz. It was started in 1933 under the editorship of Muhammad Amīn but did not survive long.

31. The Kashmīr-i-Jadīd, Srinagar.—Urdu daily edited by the late Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq during 1933-34.

32. Albarq, Srinagar.—Urdu bi-weekly, edited by M. A. Sābir during 1935-40.

33. The Bekār, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, brought into being by Mr. Sadr-ud-Dīn Mujaḥhid in 1932-33.

34. The Khālīd, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, a successor of the Bekār, Srinagar, edited by Mr. Sadr-ud-Dīn Mujaḥhid. It supports the cause of the Jammu & Kashmir National Conference.

35. The Hidāyat, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, published under the guidance of Mīr Wā'iz Hamadānī.

36. The Kesarī, Srinagar.—Leaving the editorship of the Daily Mārtand, Srinagar, Pandit Keshab Bandhu issued the weekly Kesarī till 1938, when he was imprisoned, and the paper was stopped. This paper used to write against Capitalism.

37. The Desh, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, a successor of the weekly Kesarī, Srinagar, edited by Pandit Keshab Bandhu since 1940. It generally advocates Communist ideas.

38. The Rahbar, Srinagar.—Urdu daily, established by M. Ghulām Muhyī'd Dīn in 1933, now a weekly, edited by Pandit Dīna Nāth Mast.

39. The Daily Hamdard, Srinagar.—Edited and owned by Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz, B.A., since 1933. It is a strong supporter of Roy's Radical Democratic Party, and is anti-'Abdullāh politics. It is well-edited and popular among Muslims. Its illustrated weekly issues have been informative regarding the history, sociology and literature of Kashmir. Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz is now imprisoned (1948).

40. The Daily Khidmat, Srinagar.—Being edited since 1939 by Maulavī Muhammad Sa'īd Mas'ūdī, Maulavī Fazīl, lately lecturer in Arabic, Prince of Wales College, now (1948) named Gāndhī Memorial College, Jammu. It is an organ of the Jammu & Kashmir National Conference. It is now edited by Maulavī Ghulām Ahmad Mīr, Kashfī, Maulavī Fazīl.

41. The Dehātī Dunyā.—Urdu organ of the Rural Development Department, Jammu & Kashmir Government. It is edited by Shaikh Ghulām Qādir. It is devoted to Dehāt Sudhār or rural uplift, adult education, and the formation of Panchāyats throughout the State.

42. The Paighām, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, edited by Quraishi Muhammad Yūsuf and Nizām-ud-Dīn Chishtī, B. A., in 1939-40.

43. The Kashmīr Guardian, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, under the editorship of Pandit Baldeo Prashād Sharma, B.A., now in the State Publicity Department.

44. The Islāh, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly edited by Chaudhri ‘Abdul Wāhid and Maulavi ‘Abdul Ghaffār, Maulavi Fāzil, who are now refugees in the West Punjāb. It has been a strong supporter of the Muslim cause and is anti-‘Abdullāh. It was started in 1934 under the auspices of the Ahmadiyya Movement of Qādiān, East Punjāb.

45. The Vakīl, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, published by Pandit, Shambu Nāth Kaul since 1935.

46. The Mahābīr, Srinagar.—Hindi weekly, popular among Hindu women.

47. The Ittihad-i-Jāgīrdārān, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly started by the Jāgīrdār of the State but was shortlived.

48. The Swāstaka, Srinagar.—A monthly magazine.

49. The Kashmīr Times, Srinagar.—English weekly, owned by Sardār ‘Abdur Rahmān Miṭhṭhā of Bombay, and edited by Mr. G.K. Reddi coming from the Madras Presidency. It had to stop publication on the recent change of administration in Kashmīr. It advocated the views of the Communist Party and was anti-‘Abdullāh. At one time owned by a Kashmīrī Pandit, and edited by Mr. J. N. Zutshī, B.A., LL.B., who subsequently edited the Kashmīr Sentinel.

50. The Kashmīr Chronicle, Srinagar.—English weekly, edited by Pandit Gwāsha Lāl Kaul, B.A., author of A Short History of Kashmīr.

51. The Hurriyat, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, published by Maulavi Yūsuf Shāh Mīr Wā‘iz’s party. It was a successor of the Islām, Srinagar.

52. The Mirror, Srinagar.—English weekly, owned by Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz, B.A. It is now defunct.

53. The Nūr, Srinagar.—Urdu weekly, being issued since 1939 by Mr. M. D. Nūr.

54. The Rambīr, Jammu.—Urdu weekly, began to be published in 1923 by Lāla Mulk Rāj Sarāf, B.A. It was subsequently converted into a bi-weekly. Some of its ‘special numbers’ have proved very interesting. It was the first paper in the State. See pp. 820-1, Vol. II, of Kashīr. It generally wrote in favour of H. H. Government and its high officials, and was generally favoured by them and was believed to be subsidized.

55. The Amar, Jammu.—Urdu weekly, representative of the Dogrās, and the Mahāsabhāists, and was edited by Lāla Sheo Rām Gupta.

56. The Chānd, Jammu.—Weekly Urdu, was edited by Diwān brothers. It advocated moderate views, tried to uplift the poor and rural population and labourers though the editors themselves were reported to be capitalists. Instructive stories published in this paper were read with great interest. Now it is a daily in Urdu.

57. The Dēsh Sewak, Jammu.—No longer in existence.

58. The Sudarshan, Jammu.—Weekly, writes in favour of Nationalism and Hindu-Muslim unity.

59. The Dīpak, Jammu.—Bi-lingual, Hindi and English. It discusses political affairs in English and social affairs in Hindi.

60. The Karn Kashmīr, Jammu.—Urdu weekly, edited by Mr. Muhammad Shafi' Chak in 1931. Now defunct.

61. The Pāsān, Jammu.—Urdu weekly, a successor of the Karn Kashmīr, and a supporter of the policy of the All-Jammu and Kashmir Muslim Conference. It is edited by Mi'rāj-ud-Dīn Ahmad since 1932. He is now (July 1948) a refugee in Siālkōṭ.

62. The Ratan, Jammu.—Urdu weekly owned by Lālā Mulk Rāj Sarāf, editor The Ranbīr. It is sanctioned by the State for use in Schools. The Kisān was also issued by Lālā Mulk Rāj Sarāf from Jammu and is now defunct.

63. The Jamhūr, Jammu.—Urdu weekly, owned and edited by 'Abdul Majīd Qarshī.

64. The Khurshīd, Jammu.—Urdu weekly, edited by Qais Shirwānī.

65. The Inkishāf, Jammu.—Now defunct.

66. The Naujawan, Jammu.—Urdu weekly issued by Munshī Muhammad Husain Ghāzī in 1933.

67. The Watan, Jammu.—It was a fearless critic. Its security was forfeited by the State and it ceased publication. It was edited by a patriotic Sikh.

68. The Sādiq, Pūnch.—It is edited by Ziyā-ul-Hasan Ziyā and upholds the cause of the Muslims of Pūnch.

69. The Parbhāt, Pūnch.—Its aim was to support the cause of Hindus and Sikhs. It was edited by Lālā Dyā Nand Kapūr.

70. Al-Mujāhid, Pūnch.—Urdu weekly, edited by Shaikh Nabī Bakhsh Nizāmī since 1933; it is now defunct.

71. The Āftāb, Pūnch.—Urdu weekly published by Hakīm Sarvan Nāth Āftāb since 1937.

72. The Zamīndār, Muzaffarābād.—A Sikh organ, but soon disappeared.

73. The Togh or Sher Babar, Muzaffarābād.—As above.

74. The Sadāqat, Mīrpur.—Published by Lālā Gyān Chand. It is an advocate of the rights of the Hindus,

75. The Himmāt, Mīrpur.—It was issued by the late Rājā Muhammad Akbar, who was, in the beginning, a supporter of the Muslim Conference, but subsequently changed over to the Kashmīr National Conference.

76. The Jāvid, Urdu weekly, Jammu.—Very ably edited by Mr. Allāh Rakkhā Sāghir. Well got-up. Followed the Anjuman-i-Taraqqī-i-Urdu in its style of writing Urdu. Mr. Sāghir is imprisoned now (1947-8). The Jāvid has ceased publication.

77. Al-Insān, Jammu.—An Urdu weekly organ of the J. & K. Gujār Jāt Conference, edited by Chaudhrī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Barnālvī.

78. Kashmīr, weekly, Srinagar.—Edited by Pandit Prēm Nāth Kanah. Mouthpiece of a party of State's Peoples.

79. The Nau-Yug, Urdu daily, Srinagar.—Supports the Kashmīr National Conference. Edited by Pandit Nand Lal Wātal, B.A. It was owned formerly by the Ārya Samāj, Huzūrī Bāgh, Srinagar.

80. Mention must be made of the Gāsh, the Pratāp and the Lāla Rukh, that publish contributions in Kashmīrī. For them the reader is referred to page 401 of Kashūr, Volume II.

KASHIR CHRONOLOGY

The Pre-Muslim Period of the History of Kashmīr embracing Vedic, Buddhist and Brāhmanical Times	} From the earliest times to 1320 A.C.
The Sultāns of Kashmīr beginning with Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn (Rinchana) to Sultān Habīb Shāh	} 1320 to 1560 A.C. or 240 Years. [From 1323 to 1338 A.C. the interval of 15 years is taken up by Udayana-deva's and Koṭā Rānī's rule.]
The Chaks	} 1560 to 1586 A.C. or 26 Years.
The Mughuls	} 1586 to 1752 A.C. or 166 Years.
The Afghāns	} 1752 to 1819 A.C. or 67 Years.
The total length of Muslim Rule in Kashmīr	} $240 + 26 + 166 + 67 = 499$ Years.
The Sikhs	} 1819 to 1846 A.C. or 27 Years.
The Dogrās —From Mahārāja Gulāb Singh to Mahārājā Pratāp Singh excluding the present ruler Mahārājā Hari Singh.	} 1846 to 1925 A.C. or 79 Years. In 1946 Dogrā rule in Kashmīr completed its century.

Facsimile, 3rd line, read Nashāt for Nishāt.

Page 15, 2nd line, read Hönigberger for Höningberger.

- „ 26, below the verses, read نَشَا for نَشَا.
- „ 35, read the heading as Early History, Buddhist and Brāhmanical, instead of the Pre-Islamic Period.
- „ 37, line 3, in paragraph 3, read Samdhimatnagar for Samdhimatnnagar.
- „ 44, line 5, from above, read Shaikhupura for Sheikhupura.
- „ 53, last para, in two places, read 753 for 751.
- „ 65, line 8, from the bottom, read shall for sh ll.
- „ 69, read Udayanadeva for Udyānadeva in three places in the second paragraph; also on page 123 in paras. first and second; and pages 129, in paras. first, second and third.
- „ 92, No é but e in Rieu and Blochet. Also pp. 164, 242, and 250 in Rieu.
- „ 112, line 14, from the bottom, read 1494 for 1394.
- „ 124, in لب جو the pesh has jumped to the next hemistich, where it is not required at all.
- „ 135, space is required between by and Sir in the footnote No. 2.
- „ 141, line 3, from below, accent on the ī in Ghaznī.
- „ 147, the comma, after appraised, is thrown away further than it should be.
- „ 171, lines 4 & 21, read Gujarāt for Gujrāt.
- „ 173, footnote No. 4, the f is broken, and the i is to be accented í and not ī in the name of the book.
- „ 178, line 2, below the inset, read Baḍ for Bād.
- „ 205, delete the comma after first in line 8 from the bottom.
- „ 207, line 11 from above, read Nazr for Nazar.
- „ 222, read Qāzī'l-quzāt for Qāzī-ul-Quzzāt.
- „ 224, i in Akbarī is to be accented, and so also in jāgīr.
- „ 225, line 7, from the bottom, I in Īrān is wrongfont.
- „ 236, line 2, from the bottom of the text, read 1587 for 1887.
- „ 237, read صداه for صداه in the last hemistich.
- „ 250, read 1594 for 1694 in the date of Nizām-ud-Dīn's death, line 18 from above.
- „ 251, lines 6, 7, 8, from above, Kashmir was included in the Sūba of Kābul, and not Kābul in Kashmir.
- „ 257, line 19, from the top, the hyphen is superfluous between B.A. and P.B.
- „ 263, line 8 from above, read Gujarātī for Gujrātī.
- „ 298 Zulfiqār and Zulfaqār are both permissible, although some people vehemently insist on Zulfaqār.
- „ 300, read temper for emper in the last line of the top paragraph.
- „ 312, read آن in the first line of the Persian couplet for ان.

Errata—Volume I (continued)

- Page xxx, the Map of India at the time of Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn should face page 170, and not page 169.
- „ xxxi, the order of the illustrations Nos. 62 and 63 may be inverted, and pages 244 and 245 be presumed instead of 245 in both places.
- „ 28, in the last line in the second paragraph, the Arabic word for the undergarment referred to is القُتُون (Al qutūn) or cotton, anglicized as acton.
- „ 42, the photograph of Buddhist remains in old Hārvan, near Srinagar, should have been here, i.e., facing page 42, and not facing page 44. The photograph itself is inverted.
- „ 115, in the coloured portrait of Sayyid Muhammad Farīd-ud-Dīn Qadīrī, the young man with the black beard is his son.
- „ 124, in the 6th line of the Urdu couplet, read ثَر for پَر
- „ 134, in the photograph of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mīr facing this page, delete the at the end of the first line of the letterpress.
- „ 178, in the 2nd line of the letterpress, read Baḍ for Bād.
- „ 268, in the 2nd line of the first couplet, read عدالت for عدالت.

BIBLIOGRAPHY (addenda, etc.)

- „ lviii, at the top, add—
- Imrānī, M. R. Paradise under the Shadow of Hell : India's War on Kashmir as seen by Non-Muslims and Neutral Observers. In five parts. Imperial Printing Works, 61 Railway Road, Lāhore, September, 1948, pp. 193.
- „ lix, first line at the top, add a comma after Kāk.
- „ lxiv, add before the letter R—
- Puri, Dr. G. S., The Flora of the Kārewa Series of Kashmir and its Phytogeographical Affinities with Chapters on the Methods used in Identification. The Indian Forester, Dehra Dun, U. P., India, March, 1948, Vol. 74 No. 3 pages 105-122.
- Department of Botany and Geology,
Lucknow University.

The Dargāh Asār-i-Sharif, Hazrat-bal, Srinagar.

The Dargāh is credited with the Sacred Hair of the Prophet brought to Srinagar by Khwāja Nūr-ud-Dīn of the Ishbar village on the opposite bank of the Dal, half a mile to the north of the Nishat Bāgh. Nūr-ud-Dīn then owned a Commercial House at Shāhjahānābād (Delhi). The Hair was acquired by him in about 1042 A.H.=1632 A.C. during Shāh Jahān's rule, from Sayyid 'Abdullāh who came to India and represented himself as the ex-Mutawalli of the Prophet's Tomb at Madina.

CHAPTER I

KASHMĪR AND THE KÖSHUR¹

OR

KashmĪr and the KashmĪrī

Many a writer has attempted to describe KashmĪr, some even at length, yet KashmĪr still defies description. "The praises of KashmĪr cannot be contained within the narrows of language," said Abu'l Fazl.² And so says Hafiz—

کہینچا تصویر کا لانا ہے جو مے شیر کا

—ابوالاثر حفیظ (تصویر کشمیر)

[Portraying the picture is like drawing³ a stream of milk—by Farhād for his beloved Shirīn from the Mount Bisutūn.]

KashmĪr, verily an emerald of verdure enclosed in a radiant amphitheatre of virgin snow, is such a beautiful country, blest with a fertile soil, glorious climate, grand mountains, fine rivers and lovely lakes, and with such charming flowers and delicious fruits, singing birds and sweet odours, that it "once enjoyed a great fame as the seat of the original paradise of the human race."⁴ It is, therefore, significant to learn from Dr. Terra that KashmĪr and the adjoining plains contain all the essential data for a study of early man in Southern Asia.⁵ And it is from KashmĪr that the first evidence of a Himālayan Ice Age has been forthcoming.⁶ Even though KashmĪr may not be the original Paradise, it is certainly regarded as one of the most blessed spots upon the earth. In fact, it forms an isolated world by itself wherein one is inclined to think each spot the most beautiful of all, perhaps because each, in some particular, excels the rest. The country with which KashmĪr is apt to be compared, says Sir Francis Younghusband,⁷ is Switzerland.

1. In the KashmĪrī language, an inhabitant of KashmĪr is called Kōshur, and so also his language.

2. The Akbar-nāma, English Translation by H. Beveridge, page 828.

3. In the older sense of 'constructing and directing a ditch or canal from one point to another.'—Murray's English Dictionary.

4. The Historians' History of the World—The Times, London, 1907, Vol. II, page 485.

5. Studies on the Ice Age in India and Associated Human Cultures by Dr. H. De Terra and T. T. Paterson, Washington, D. C., 1939, page 1.

6. Ibid., page 1.

7. KashmĪr, Sir Francis Younghusband, 1917, page 2.

Kashmīr and Switzerland.

Switzerland indeed has many charms and a combination of lake and mountain scenery, in which it excels Kashmīr, but it is built on a smaller scale, and has not the same wide sweep of snow-clad mountains. To Vigne,¹ however, the glens, glades, forests and streams of Kashmīr are truly Alpine. Moreover, there is no place where one can see a complete circle of snowy mountains surrounding a plain of about 1,900 square miles, everywhere over 5,000 feet above sea level, of anything like the length—about 84 miles—and breadth—about 20 to 25 miles—of the Kashmīr Valley. From snowfield to snowfield, the Valley has a width of 25 to 30 miles. The main valleys of Switzerland are like the side-valleys of Kashmīr. Many of the peaks of the uninterrupted wall of Kashmīr hills out-top Mont Blanc by thousands of feet and far exceed the loftiest summits of the Caucasus. There is not behind Switzerland what there is at the back of Kashmīr, and visible in glimpses from the southern side—a region of magnificent mountains surpassing every other in the world. On account of its position in the higher Himālaya, Kashmīr is the Indian Piedmont.

Kashmīr and Greece.

Poets have sung of beautiful Greece with its purple hills and varied contour, its dancing seas and clear blue sky. But Kashmīr is more beautiful than Greece. Sir Francis Younghusband² writes: "It has the same blue sky and brilliant sunshine, but its purple hills are on a far grander scale, and if it has no sea, it has lake and river, and the still more impressive snowy mountains. It has, too, greater variety of natural scenery, of field and forest, of rugged mountains and open valley." "And to me," continues Younghusband, who has seen both countries, "Kashmīr seems much the more likely to impress by its natural beauty." My own visits to Switzerland and Greece confirm Younghusband's observations. Sir Muhammad Iqbāl does not exaggerate when he says :

گُوه و دریا و غروبِ آفتاب من خدا را دیدم آنجا بے حجاب

1. Travels, by G. T. Vigne, London, 1842, Vol. I, page 289.

2. Kashmīr, page 133.

The Dal with its clouds.

The Beauty of the Dal.

It has happened not infrequently that people have been unimpressed with the Tāj at first sight, but when they looked at it closer, they realized the charm of Shāh Jahān's 'dream in marble.' The same sometimes happens when the sceptical visitor goes to Kashmīr. Let such a one first of all go up the Takht-i-Sulaimān in the early morning.

نہی چوں پائے بر تختِ سُلیمان شود کشمیر و دشتِ او نمایان

He will feel what conversion the Dal immediately brings about—the sight is grand, too grand for words to describe. The water is so clear that the reflections of the surrounding mountains are perfect. "Chenars and willows, picturesque chalets, dark cypresses, blue distance, and snowy mountains make a picture hard to equal anywhere."

اللہ اللہ ہے کیا حُسنِ چمنِ پانی میں !

سبزہ و لالہ و گل، سرو و سمنِ پانی میں !

کیسے کیسے ہیں دلِ افروزِ نظارے اس میں !

گرہِ پانی میں، چمنِ پانی میں، بنِ پانی میں !

تُوڈہ سیم ہے یہ ڈل کے خزانے میں نہاں

برفِ کھسار ہے یا عکسِ فگنِ پانی میں !

اے طرفِ گرہِ پہ ہے تختِ سُلیمان قائم

اے طرفِ سبزِ پری کا ہے وطنِ پانی میں !

—چوہدری خوشی محمد، ناظر

(نغمۂ فردوس، حصہ اول، صفحہ ۱۱۵)

ز سیرِ ڈلِ دل و جان تازہ گردد بہ ساغرِ عہد و پیمان تازہ گردد

گلستانِ زیرِ آبش بیشمار است مگر آبش نقابِ نو بہار است

ز گلہا رُرمے ڈلِ رشکِ چناں شد بہ شوقش مرغِ آبی میتوان شد

—نواب ظفرخان، احسن

[Nāzīr and Ahsan were both governors of Kashmīr, the one under the Dogrās and the other under the Mughuls.]

The late Justice Miyān Muhammad Shāh Dīn then aptly wished : مر جائیے تو ڈل کے کنارے مزار ہو !

[And dying let my grave be on the Dal!]

The sceptic can no longer remain sceptical : he must soon be vanquished by the graceful charms of the lovely lake. It is not one big sheet of water, but is all the more attractive for that reason. Little canals intersect the floating gardens and small islands, while villages and orchards are dotted about its banks, which enclose an area of about five miles in length and two in breadth.

بہ دور ڈل گلستان بیشمار است کہ ہریک آب وے مد بہار است

—نواب ظفرخان، احسن

Pages have been written in praise of the beautiful milky waters of Gāndarbal,¹ the gushing springs of Achabal,² Kukar-nāg³ and Ver-nāg,⁴ the “peculiar neutral tinted” tarn of Çesha-nāg⁵ 12,000 feet high up in the lovely Liddar valley of which pastoral Pahalgām, ‘The Shepherd’s Village’ (about 60 miles from Srinagar) is a pleasant resort (about 7,000 feet above the sea level), the fresh water lakes of “secluded, profound and silent” Mānasbal⁶ and the lily-embroidered Wular, the heights of Trāgabāl,⁷ the glacier valley of Sonamarg, the glen of Gangabal, the charm of Gulmarg ‘The Meadow of Flowers,’ and the transcendental joys of the deep jade spring that lies below Affarwat⁸ on the

1. The Gāndarbal village, 13 miles from Srinagar, is on the left bank of the Sind river, a tributary of the Jhelum.

2. The Achabal village is about 6 miles south-east of Islāmābād, and contains the shrine of Sayyid Shihāb-ud-Dīn of Baghdād. Achabal is called Sāhibābād on account of Jahān Ārā Begam known as Begam Sāhiba.

3-4. The Kukar-nāg spring is a few miles from Ver-nāg, the reputed source of the river Jhelum. Ver-nāg, the nāg or spring of Vēr also known as Nīla-nāga derives its name from the pargana of Vēr now called Shāhābād.

5. Çesha-nāg is the name of the serpent on which the earth is believed to stand.

6. The Mānasbal lake about two miles in diameter and considered to be the loveliest of all Kashmir lakes is about 16 miles north-west of Srinagar. It is surrounded by majestic hills. Mānas refers to a ‘mountain’ and bal a lake. Hence a mountain lake. It is the deepest lake in the Valley with a maximum depth of 12.8 meters. “The little lake,” wrote Andrew Wilson in 1875, “is not much larger than Grasmere . . . but its shores are singularly suggestive of peacefulness and solitude”. (The Abode of Snow, page 424.) The ruins of a fine Mughul garden are situated on one of its banks.

7. Trāgabāl (with its Chowki and Rest House), 9,160 feet high, is over 10 miles north of Bandipōr which is on the Wular.

8. Affarwat is a hill above Gulmarg.

Shesha-nāg is the popular name of Sushram-nāg Lake, at the north foot of a great glacier descending from the Kohenhār Peak. It lies on the way from Pahalgām to Amarnāth.

The Kolhai Glacier reached by way of Pahlgām. Dr. Sufi sitting to the left.

Sonamarg

A glimpse of glorious Gurāz fringe of the forest, yet words have ever proved hopelessly inadequate to describe beauties that defy description.

Sweet interchange
Of hill and valley, rivers, woods and plains,
Now land, now lake, and banks¹ with forest crowned Rocks, dens and caves !

—Paradise Lost, Book IX, 115-118.

To Abu'l Fazl,² Kashmīr is so enchanting as to be fittingly called a garden of perpetual spring surrounding a citadel terraced to the skies, and deservedly appropriate to be either the delight of the worldling or the retired abode of the recluse. His brother Faizī says:

به حیرتم که چه آثارِ قدرتِ ازلی ست
بهر نظاره بتازد نظر به صنعِ قدیر —فیضی

Other Attractions.

To put it in other words, to the holiday-maker Kashmīr is the chief garden of Asia. "For the lover of sport, a wide range of game is available. The botanist and the zoologist have here a great wealth of flora and fauna. The lovely glens and the shaded mountain spurs in their picturesque settings provide an inexhaustible theme to the genius of the poet and a background for the contemplation of the philosopher. For the linguist, Kashmīr with its surroundings has a variety of dialects belonging to different branches of the human family. For the geologist, it offers an interesting study of soils and rocks with chronological data unobtainable elsewhere in India. For the archæologist, there are numerous monuments of different ages and traces of cultural influences showing the interplay of civilizations. The scholar has an extensive field for research in systems of (Hindu) philosophy peculiar to Kashmīr," and for research in Muslim history, culture, poetry and sociology. "The explorer has mysterious lands on the boundaries and the lofty mountains to merit his attention."³

1. The text has 'sea and shores.'

2. The A'in-i-Akbari, English Translation by Colonel H. S. Jarrett, Calcutta, 1891, Vol. II, page 348.

3. The Annual Administration Report of the Jammu and Kashmir State for 1940-41, combining the views of Vigne, Moorcroft, Elphinstone, and Sir Walter Lawrence—page 11.

And then—living in Kashmīr is cheaper than in most other countries of the world. Srinagar, the Venice in the heart of Switzerland, offers fascinating living in gorgeous house-boats and gay gondolas. And the countryside and the hills have camping grounds for a free and healthy life under canvas. Kolahai is the Matterhorn of Kashmīr towering at 17,800 feet in beautiful surroundings of mountains and glaciers. Lolāb reminds one of Scotland and Wales. The coniferous forests of Kashmīr are the finest in Northern India.

Climate.

Though the Valley is about 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, it is not so cold as might be expected at such an altitude. گرمش نه گرم است، سردش نه سرد است

[Heat there is, but hot 'tis not;
Cold there is, but cold 'tis not.]

The reason is the surrounding high hills, which save the Valley from the cold blasts of the north and scorching winds from the south. And yet, as large a variety in temperature or humidity can be obtained in different parts of Kashmīr as in the whole of Europe, from the shores of the Mediterranean to the North Cape, points out Dr. Arthur Neve. From January to the middle of February, the mean temperature of Srinagar is 35 degree F., and from July to the middle of August, it is 80 degrees; the extremes in the shade being, in the first case, 15 to 45 degrees, and in the second case 55 to 96 degrees and in some years 98 or 99.

The climate of the Valley proper until quite the end of May is very similar to that of Switzerland. As the summer advances, it becomes somewhat relaxing. But the heat scarcely, if at all, exceeds that of South Italy. The autumn months are the pleasantest in the whole year with clear, bright, but fairly cool days. The rainfall is much less than that of any of the other Himālayan hill-stations. At Srinagar the yearly amount seldom exceeds 27 inches. At Gulmarg, it is very much more, but even then not more than two-thirds of that of Murree. For two months, however, even the lower parts of the Valley are seldom free from snow, which formerly lay, eight inches or a foot deep though not quite so much now. Kashmīr is indeed a centre for winter sports. According to Dr. Arthur Neve, the climate of Kashmīr is more suitable than that of England for chest cases.*

* The Tourist's Guide to Kashmir, Ladakh, Skardo, etc., by Major Arthur Neve, F.R.C.S., Edinburgh, R.A.M.C., 15th edition, revised by Dr. E. F. Neve, F.R.C.S., page 4.

The American will find in Kashmīr the cold of Canada, and the warmth of Northern Mexico, or the vigour of San Francisco and the moderation of Los Angeles in climate.

ذَرَّہ ذَرَّہ ہے مرے کشمیر کا مہماں نواز

راہ میں پتھر کے ٹکڑوں نے دیا پانی مجھے

—پنڈت برج نرائن چکبست - لکھنؤی

(صبح وطن - ۱۹۳۶ء - صفحہ ۱۲۱)

[How exceedingly hospitable is the land of Kashmīr
E'en the wayside stones offered me water to drink !]

The Valley of Kashmīr.

The Valley of Kashmīr, with which this book deals, consists of two districts of the present State of Jammu and Kashmīr, viz. the Anantnāg district and the Bārāmūla district. The Anantnāg district has four tahsils : (1) Srinagar (2) Islāmābād or Anantnāg (3) Kulgām, (4) Pulwāma, formerly Awantipōr. The Bārāmūla district has : (1) Bārāmūla, (2) Badgām or Srīpratāpsinghpōr and (3) Handwāra or Uttarmāchipōr. These seven tahsils constitute the Kashmīr Valley proper. An old tradition puts the number of villages in Kashmīr at 66,063. But information, collected in 1400 A.C., and believed by Stein to be accurate, puts the number of villages at 100,000 in plains and mountains together. The census of 1891 A.C. states the number of villages in Kashmīr to be 2,870.* The census of 1931 gives 3,557 as the number of inhabited towns and villages in the Kashmīr Province and that of 1941 as 3,733, or an increase of 863 villages in fifty years. Apparently the information of 1400 A.C. giving the number of villages as 100,000 may have included either the entire territory then under the Sultān of Kashmīr or the entire Kashmīrī-speaking area in and around the Valley viz. the Valley of the Vitasta, the Valley of the Sind, Kishtwār, Pādar, Riāsī, Rajaurī, Ūrī, Pūnch, Karnāh, the Northern and Western banks of the Chenāb, Rāmban, Batōt, and part of Dardistān.

From early times the Valley has been divided into two great parts known by their modern names Kama-rāj and

* Stein's English Translation of Kāḥaṇa's Rājatarangīnī, Vol. II pages 438-39.

Mara-rāj. These terms, Sir Aurel Stein says, are derived from the Sanskrit Kramarājya and Maḍavarājya. Marāj or Marāz comprises the districts on both sides of the Jhelum above Srīnagar, and Kamrāj or Kamrāz those below. Abu'l Fazl also notes likewise. During Muslim rule, it appears that Srīnagar was the chief city of Marāj and Sopōr the headquarters of Kamrāj.

Area.

The area of the Valley of Kashmīr is 6,131 square miles which is over four times that of the Cochin State (1,418 square miles), almost double that of the Alwar State (3,158), bigger than Patialā (5,932), slightly smaller than Bhopāl (6,902), about half the size of Holland (12,582), more than half of Turkey in Europe (10,882), and more than one-third of Switzerland (15,975). In latitude, Kashmīr corresponds to Damascus in Syria, to Fēz in Morocco and to South Carolina in the United States of America.

Though not greatly significant in area, the beauty and variability of the Valley are unique for air, soil and picturesque landscape. It is said of the Valley that "every hundred feet of its elevation brings some new phase of climate and vegetation, and, in a short ride of thirty miles, one can pass from overpowering heat to a climate delightfully cool, or can escape from wearisome wet weather to a dry and sunny atmosphere."¹ To the Mughuls it was known as "the terrestrial paradise of the Indies," and Jahāngīr who first brought it into prominence declared—as Bernier states²—that he would rather be deprived of every other province of his mighty empire than lose Kashmīr. It appears from Badāoni's account that Akbar called Kashmīr his *Bāgh-i Khāss*³ or his "Special Garden."

Population.

The population of the Valley of Kashmīr, according to the census of 1931, was 1,331,771, of which 1,256,274 were Muslims, 64,806 were Hindus, 10,257 were Sikhs and the rest Christians, Buddhists, Pārsīs and others. On March 1, 1941, the total figure for the Valley was 1,464,034.

1. The Valley of Kashmīr by Walter R. Lawrence, Oxford University Press, 1895, pages 13-14.

2. Bernier's Travels, 2nd edition, revised by V. A. Smith, 1914, page 401.

3. The Muntakhab-ut-Tawārīkh, Persian text, Calcutta, 1865, Volume II, page 369.

The shape of the Valley is that of an elliptical saucer, or more precisely a boot-shaped bowl. From the foot of the Kishangangā water-shed to the southeast corner beyond Islāmābād, the floor of the Valley is built of little-consolidated lake beds and alluvial soils. The greatest portion of this area, which is over 2,000 square miles, exhibits silts and sands into which the Jhelum and its tributaries have carved a relief of varying character.

Travellers have commented on the terraces that form conspicuous features¹ of the Valley. Indeed, without these terraces the Valley would be 'a forlorn sight.' "Their green cultivated fields contrast with the bleak, rocky slopes and lend to the scenery a definite air of human planning. On them villages and smaller towns are nestled against the talus-strewn valley flanks, protected, as it were, from the ravaging spring and summer floods. Temple ruins testify to the great antiquity of some of these settlements, which date back to the first millennium of our era."

Kashmīr a Vast Lake in Prehistoric Times?

Geological evidence and mythological tradition agree that the Valley of Kashmīr was once, perhaps a hundred million years ago, one vast lake hundreds of feet deep. Kashmīr legends say that a Çakti manifestation of Çiva (one of the gods of the Hindu Triad) called Satī,² appeared in the form of water; this Çakti is also named Pārvatī and the place, where it appeared, came to be known as Satīsaras, the place where Çakti Satī took the shape of a tarn or lake.

The Legend of the Lake.

The legend runs that Kāçyapa, the grandson of Brahmā, found, when he reached Jalandhara (Jullundur) in the Punjāb, on a pilgrimage from the south, that all the country to the north-west had been laid waste by a rāksas a (demon) Jalodbhava (water-born), who lived in the immense Satīsiras. Distressed at the havoc caused by Jalodbhava and his imps,

1. Studies on the Ice Age in India and Associated Human Cultures by Dr. H. De Terra and T. T. Paterson, Washington, D. C., 1939, page 182.

2. Satī was the daughter of Dakṣa and the spouse of Çiva. She consumed herself in the sacrificial fire of Dakṣa's sacrifice, as he refused to invite Çiva to take his share of the offerings.

Kāçyapa devoted himself to religious exercises, in consequence of which the Hindu Triad, Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Īiva, appeared to aid him. They found that Indra (the thunder god) and other gods had attempted to annihilate the demons on several previous occasions and had succeeded in destroying not a few, but the majority of the demons had escaped by hiding under water. Viṣṇu, assuming the form of Varāha (boar), struck the mountains at Vārāhāmūla (modern Bārāmūla¹) with his tail and cut up the remaining obstacles with his teeth. The waters of the lake rushed out, but the demon took refuge in the low ground, where Srinagar now stands. He baffled pursuit for a time, but was finally caught and crushed to death by the gods. When Jalodbhava was destroyed, the smaller demons lost heart, and the drained basin gradually became inhabited in summer. In winter, however, the people retreated to the drier and warmer regions of the south, leaving Kashmīr to the demons. One winter, an aged Brāhman remained behind, taking up his quarters in a cave. He was seized by the demons and carried off to a place now known as Nilanāga² (the Lord of Serpents), where he was thrown into the lake. He sank to the bottom, but to his amazement he found it to be really a palace in which the king, Nīla Nāga (Kāçyapa's son), was

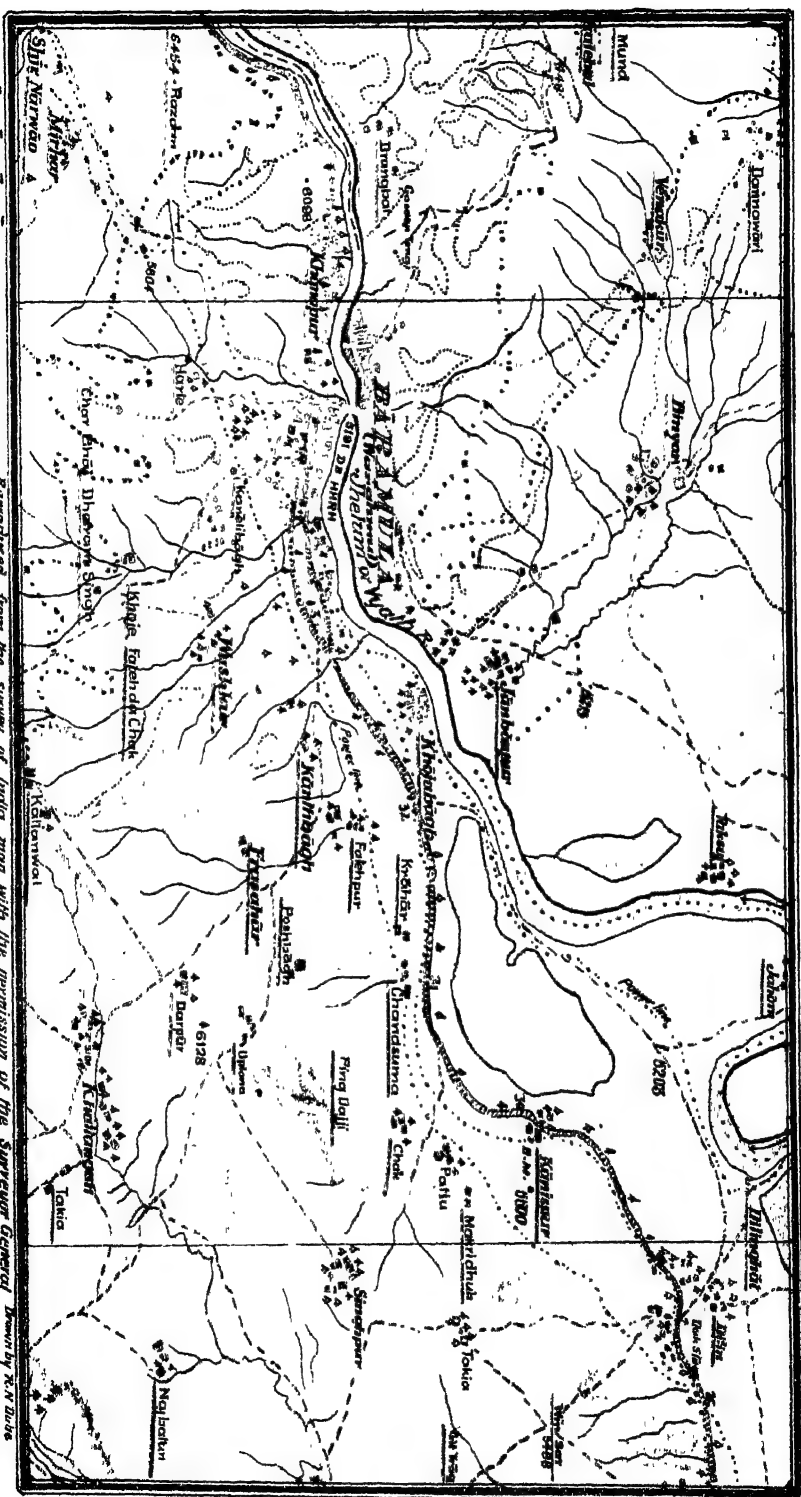

1. Bārāmūla town is situated on both sides of the river Jhelum which are connected by a bridge. The distance between Bārāmūla and Srinagar is 34 miles. The height of the town above sea level is 5,100 feet. The population of Bārāmūla, according to the census of 1931, was 6,886 of whom 5,839 were Musalmāns. In 1941 the population has almost doubled and is 12,722.

Beyond the town, begins the road to Srinagar. This fine road is bordered with tall, erect, white poplar trees.

Huṣkapura founded by Huṣka, a Kushāna king, in the second century A.C., now reduced to and corrupted into the modern village Uṣkara or (Wuṣkur), is about two miles to the south-east of the modern town.

2. Nīla-nāga (Blue Spring) is an oval sheet of water, about 100 yards long 20 yards wide about 40 feet deep, lying in a hollow on the slopes of the hills on the south side of the Kashmīr Valley, in Gogji Pathar village about 4 miles west of Chrār Sharif which is 20 miles from Srinagar. Nīla-nāga is considered holy by the Hindus. Less than 3 miles north-west of Nīla-nāga, the Dūdhgāṅgā leaves the mountains to enter the Karewa Hills.

Abu'l Fazl wrote: "Its waters are exquisitely clear . . . and many perish by fire about its border. Strange to relate, omens are taken by its means. A nut is divided into four parts and thrown in, and if an odd number floats, the augury is favourable, if otherwise, the reverse."—English Translation of the Ā'in-i-Akbarī, Vol. II, page 363. But Stein says it refers to the legends of the famous Nilanāga at Vārāṅg.

BĂRĂMULĂ

Reproduced from the survey of India map with the permission of the Surveyor General Drawn by N.N. Datta sitting on his throne. He sought audience of this king and laid a complaint before him of the rough treatment which he had received. The king was most gracious and gave him the *Nilamata-Purāṇa for his guidance, assuring him that, if he obeyed the precepts of that book and made the offerings therein prescribed, the demons would cease to molest him. In the spring, he was restored to the dry land. He carried out his instructions and imparted them to others. The result was that, from that time, people were able to remain in Kashmīr during the winter and the demons ceased to trouble them.

Geological Evidence.

The above story, legendary as it is, corresponds with the results of early geological observations. In prehistoric times, the basin of Kashmīr contained a lake much larger than that of today. The sand-stone rock at the western corner of the basin, according to these earlier observations, seems to have been rent by some cataclysm followed by attrition ; and the lake was drained by the deepening of the Bārāmūla gorge, which was the result of the slow process of erosion by water, and which must have taken hundreds of years to accomplish. At that period, the climate was so cold, and the winter snows were so heavy and lasted so long, that the country could be inhabited only in summer by nomads who migrated southward in winter. In time, however, the climate became temperate, and Kashmīr came to be the abode of a permanent and prosperous agricultural community. These earlier observations are, however, now contested.

[The alluvial deposits filling up the basin of Kashmir were held by the earlier geologists to have been formed from the waste of the surrounding mountains, and to have been laid down at the bottom of a great lake. It has been stated that these deposits once covered the whole Valley to a height of one thousand feet above its present level, and that the greater portion has been carried away by the Jhelum to the plains of the Punjab. The Wular lake which now measures 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, was regarded by Montgomerie as a last relic of the great

* The Nilamata or Teachings of the Sage Nīla, the chief of the Nāgas, is the oldest extant written record which deals with the holy legends regarding the origin of Kashmīr and its sacred places. Moreover, it is one of the main sources of information used by Kalhaṇa when writing his Rājatarāṅgiṇī. Kalhaṇa refers to it also as the book of rites and festivals prescribed by Nīla for Kashmīrians.

Nilamata, or the Teachings of Nīla, Sanskrit text with critical notes, edited by Dr. K. De Vrees,—pages xxi.—151, was published at Leiden (Holland) by E. J. Brill in 1936.

expanse of water which once covered all Kashmīr. But this idea of a great prehistoric lake has been abandoned by Mr. R.D. Oldham. Mr. Oldham studied the Karewas or plateaus and the present lakes of the Kashmir valley in 1903, and came to the conclusions that the Karewas are of fluviatile and not of lacustrine origin, and that there was never at any time a materially larger lake than at the present day.—A Sketch of the Geography and Geology of the Himalaya Mountains and Tibet by Col. S.G. Burrard and H. H. Hayden, Calcutta, 1907-08, Part III, page 169.]

The Name Kashmīr.

The old name Satīśaras was replaced by Ka-samīra, that may be taken to mean (land) from which water (Ka) has been drained off by wind (Samīra). According to another interpretation, Kashmīr is a Prakrit compound with its components: kas, meaning a channel and mīr, meaning a mountain. Kas-mīr could thus mean a rock trough. In its configuration, Kashmīr is a deep trough (84×20 to 25 miles) with rocky walls. This is one theory.

The other theory—that Kashmīr, or Kashīr as named by its inhabitants, was so called on account of the settlement of a race of men called Kash,¹ who were a Semitic tribe and founded what are now called the cities of Kash,² Kāshān³ and Kāshghar⁴—has yet to be properly investi-

1. See Sir Lucas King's revised edition of the English Translation of Bābur's Memoirs, Vol. I, page lxi. The acceptance of this theory would lead us to discard that which connects Kash with the Khaças of the Himālayan hills, and opens up quite a new field of research. Sir George Grierson has discussed the origin of Khaças in his Linguistic Survey of India, Vol. IX, Part IV, pages 2-8. One conjecture is that Kash is the same as the Semitic Cush, Kosh or Kash and not the Āryan-speaking Khaças.

2. Kash is a town in Bukhārā district on the trade-route between Samarqand and Balkh. Kash is now called Shahr-i-Sabz or 'greentown' on account of the fertility of its surroundings. Shahr-i-Sabz is surrounded by hills on the north, east and south. The present town was built at the beginning of the seventh century A.C.

3. Kāshān is a town in the small province of Kāshān in Irāq-i-'Ajam, Irān. It has a population of 30,000 and is one of the hottest towns of Irān, lying in a fertile plain, 90 miles N.E. of Isfahān and 150 miles from Teherān. The province is divided into the two districts of "garm sir" the warm, and "sard sir" the cold. Great quantities of silk stuffs from raw material imported from Gilān and copper utensils are manufactured at Kāshān, and sent to all parts of Irān. Kāshān also exports rose-water and is the only place in Irān where cobalt can be obtained. Jewellery and carpets are also manufactured. At the foot of hills, four miles west of the city, are the beautiful gardens of Fin.

4. Kāshghar is an important city in the district of Kāshgaria in the extreme west of China in the province of Chinese Turkistān. At present, Kāshghar consists of two towns, Kuḥna Shahr, or 'old city,' gated. In that case, the origin of the word Kashmīr from Kash, the race, and 'īr' a suffix like 'ān' and 'ghar' will permit the belief that the Kasia Regio and the Kasii Montes of Ptolemy, beyond Mount Imaus, were inhabited by this same race of Kash whose domination at some period probably extended from Kāshghar to Kashmīr, in both of which they have left their name.

But the fact is that the name Kashmīr is ancient and, in the words of Stein,¹ linguistic science can furnish no clue to its origin nor even analyse its formation. The earliest Chinese reference to Kashmīr is dated 541 A.C., which calls the Valley Ku-shih-mi. The name Kashmīr has been used as the sole designation of the country throughout its known history. It has uniformly been applied both by the inhabitants and by foreigners. "We can trace back its continued use through an unbroken chain of documents for more than twenty-three centuries, while the name itself is undoubtedly far more ancient."² The inhabitants pronounce it as Kashīr which, according to Stein, is the direct phonetic derivative of Kashmīr with the loss of m. In Kāshur or Köshur—the inhabitant of Kashīr and the language of Kashīr,—u replaces i.

Kashmīr made known abroad.

There is no notice in the accounts of Alexander's expedition which can be shown to imply even a hearsay knowledge of the Kashmīr Valley, says Stein.³ "The first authentic information concerning Kashmīr which appears to have reached Europe," says Baron Hügel,⁴ "was through the Portuguese, whose religious zeal prompted them to promulgate Christianity among the natives; for we attach little credit to the tales we are told of their king marching to the relief of Porus, when he was attacked by Alexander the Great, built in 1513 A.C., and Yangī Shahr or 'new city,' built in 1838 A.C., about 5 miles apart and separated by the Kizil-Su. Kāshghar stands at the meeting-place of several important and ancient routes, and thus has considerable strategical, commercial and social importance. Culturally, it is superior to Yārqand. Kāshghar manufactures silks, carpets, and jewellery and the population is estimated at 62,000.

1. Sir Aurel Stein's English Translation of Kalhaṇa's Rājataranginī Vol. II, page 386.

2. The Ancient Geography of Kashmīr, pages 61-62.

3. Ibid., p. 8.

4. Travels by Baron Charles Hügel, London, 1845, page 4.

although the later Greek authors mention a country they call Kaspatyrus, which would seem to be Kashmir. Setting aside such unsatisfactory accounts, we may repeat that to Europe Kashmir was, in a measure, unknown till the subjects of Portugal first trod its valleys." Jerome Xavier, a Navarese of high birth, is supposed to be the first European who ever had the glory or the courage to penetrate to this remote region. Another of the same family, Francis Xavier, "animated with like fervent zeal to diffuse the light of Christian truth throughout the East, had already gained, and not undeservedly, the glorious title of the Apostle of the Indies." Jerome Xavier appeared at the court of Akbar the Great at Agra and accompanied the Emperor to Kashmir. Xavier's remarks on Kashmir were published in his work, Hajus de Rebus Japonicis, Indicis, etc. (Antwerp, 1605).

The next noted traveller who acquainted the West with Kashmir is Francis Bernier, M.D. of the Faculty of Montpellier, Southern France. Bernier left France in 1654, when twenty-nine, in his desire to see the world. In 1657, during the reign of Shāh Jahān, he came to Sūrat, after having been to Syria and Egypt, at the very period when Shāh Jahān's sons were contending for the Mughul throne, and Aurangzib ultimately ascended the throne of Delhi. Bernier arrived at Delhi towards the end of 1659. "When in Delhi, as he had accidentally lost his property and was in a helpless condition, he tried to get some employment." Having failed in his attempt, he secured a monthly allowance from the State Charity Fund through the intervention of Dānishmand Khān, a noble of Aurangzib's court. After twelve years' abode in India, Bernier returned to France. He fixed himself at Paris where his Travels were published in 1670.

Father Desideri, a Jesuit, was the other important visitor to Kashmir. His observations on Kashmir are contained in a letter entitled Les Lettres Edifiantes from Lhassa in 1716.

Then, in the year 1783, came George Forster, a civil servant in the East India Company's Presidency of Madras. Kashmir had already been annexed to Afghānistān by Ahmad Shāh Durrānī. In fact, Tīmūr Shāh, the son and successor of Ahmad Shāh, had been ten years on the throne enjoying the fruits of his father's conquests. Āzād Khān governed Kashmir.

Other noted visitors are : William Moorcroft, G. T. Vigne, Baron Hügel, Dr. Hönigberger, Victor Jacquemont and the Baron Eric von Shönberg. All of them visited Kashmīr during Sikh rule. The reader will find brief references to these visitors as also relevant extracts from their accounts in due course in the Kashīr.

The Stone Age in Kashmīr.

Hitherto it has been held that there was no Stone Age in Kashmīr. Recent finds, however, of agricultural implements, a tomahawk, tumuli, standing megaliths and prone monoliths, made after careful search at Pāndrēthan, Takht-i-Sulaimān, Vendrahōm, Rangyil, Nāran Nāg and Arhōm in Kashmīr seem to establish the existence of such an Age.¹

The Aborigines as the First Settlers.

The wide prevalence of Nāga-worship before and even after the Buddhist period indicates that the first settlers in the Kashmīr Valley must have been the people, known as aborigines, who had spread over the whole of India before the advent of the Āryans. Nothing is known as to the stage of civilization these early inhabitants had attained when they entered Kashmīr.

The Āryans.

Then came the wave of Āryan invasion from the northwest of India, though this is not accepted by scholars like Keith. As in the Punjāb and Northern India, they mixed with the aborigines and formed one people. They must have come in numbers large enough to put their own racial stamp on the people here.

An attempt has been made to show that Kashmīr was once a Zoroastrian² country, but the references quoted in support of this view are more or less of a legendary nature.

The Jews.

The physical and ethnic characteristics which so sharply mark off the Kashmīrī from all surrounding races have

1. The Stone Age in Kashmīr by Mr. G. E. L. Carter, I.C.S.

The collection of stone implements on which Mr. Carter has based his Note may be seen in the Prince of Wales' Museum, Bombay.

See also Dr. Terra's Studies on the Ice Age in India, page 2. Dr. Terra began the geologic survey of the Kashmīr Valley in 1932 A.C.

2. Sir J. J. Modi, The Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XIX, December 1895, pages 237-248, under Cashmere and Ancient Persians.

always struck observant visitors to the Valley, and have led to several conjectures as to their origin. One such strong conjecture connects the Kashmīris with the Jews or rather one of the Hebraic peoples.

The 'Jewish' cast of feature of many of the inhabitants of Kashmīr has been noticed by scores of modern travellers. Two leading authorities on Kashmīr in recent times, whose profound knowledge of the land and its people can hardly be questioned, namely Sir Walter Lawrence and Sir Francis Younghusband, have admitted the decided 'Jewish' cast of faces among men, women and children. The late Sir Walter Lawrence says¹ that the hooked nose is a prominent feature and the prevailing type is distinctly Hebraic. Sir Francis says² that "here may be seen fine old patriarchal types, just as we picture to ourselves the Israelitish heroes of old. Some, indeed, say, though I must admit without much authority, that these Kashmīris are of the lost tribes of Israel and certainly, as I have said, there are real Biblical types to be seen everywhere in Kashmīr, and especially among the upland villages. Here the Israelitish shepherd tending his flocks and herds may any day be seen." Bernier was hardly less definite. He said³: "On entering the kingdom after crossing the Pir-panjal mountains, inhabitants in the frontier villages struck me as resembling Jews. Their countenance and manner and that indescribable peculiarity which enables a traveller to distinguish the inhabitants of different nations, all seemed to belong to that ancient people. You are not to ascribe what I say to mere fancy, the Jewish appearance of these villagers having been remarked by our Jesuit Fathers and by several other Europeans, long before I visited Kashmīr."

Shāh Hamadān, the great saint, visited Kashmīr in the fourteenth century A.C. He also named the Valley Bāgh-i-Sulaimān or the "Garden of Solomon,"⁴ seemingly supporting the settlement of Israelites in Kashmīr.

Abū Raihān al-Bīrūnī (973—1048 A.C.) 'accompanied' the expedition of Mahmūd against Kashmīr, probably in

1. The Valley of Kashmīr, Oxford University Press, 1895, page 318.

2. Kashmīr, Ed. 1917, pages 129-130.

3. Travels (Smith's Edition), page 430.

4. Beale's Oriental Biographical Dictionary, page 238.

5. The Rāj., English Translation by Stein, Vol. 2, page 360.

1021 A.C., the expedition being unsuccessful on account of the valorous defence by Kashmīrians and heavy snowfall. Al-Bīrūnī, however, utilized every opportunity during his long stay at Ghazna and in the Punjāb (1017-30) for collecting information on Kashmīr. Writing more than a century before Kalhaṇa, about the inhabitants of Kashmīr, al-Bīrūnī says¹ :—“ They are particularly anxious about the natural strength² of their country, and therefore take always much care to keep a strong hold upon the entrances and roads leading into it. In consequence, it is very difficult to have any commerce with them. In former times, they used to allow one or two foreigners to enter their country, particularly Jews, but at present do not allow any Hindu whom they do not know personally to enter, much less other people.”

The possibility of ‘Jewish’ admixture in Afghān blood has been suspected. The researches of Sir George Grierson prove that the Kashmīrī language belongs to the Dārdic, and not to the Sanskrit group, though it must be admitted that Sanskrit has considerably influenced the present Kashmīrī language. It is now definitely known that Pushtu is a member of the eastern branch of the Irānian family, and that Kashmīrī too belongs to the Irānian group, or, to be more precise, to the Indo-Irānian group. Hence, there must be some affinity between Pushtu and Kashmīrī. As already noted, the language as spoken in Kashmīr is not called Kashmīrī by the inhabitants but Kōshur and the land, Kashīr.

It should, however, be admitted that, beyond al-Bīrūnī’s statement, there is no authentic recorded evidence available to establish the existence of any large Jewish or rather Hebraic element in Kashmīr.

[Perhaps the following will be read with interest in this connexion :—

Dr. Jill Cossley Batt, B.A., D.Sc., authoress and explorer, collaborate with Dr. Irvine Baird, says the Montreal Gazette, in meeting mysterious

1. Al-Bīrūnī’s India—English edition by Dr. Edward C. Sachau Vol. I, page 206.

2. Abu’l Fazl writes : “ The roads of the country are of such a nature that if the ruler get news a few days before of the approach of strangers and seize the passes, it would be difficult, or rather impossible, for an army adorned with thousands of Rustams to get possession of the country.”—The Akbar-nāma (English Translation by Beveridge, 1906, Vol. II, page 198.) Abu’l Fazl, however, could not be expected to foresee the invention of the aeroplane in our day !

people, high up in the Himalayas within the borders of Tibet, dwelling in caves, retaining characteristics of an ancient civilization, to whom the name of 'Lost Tribe' has been attributed. The lost tribe is believed to be of Chaldean origin. The theories of Batt and Baird are expected to be outlined in a book entitled 'The Lost Tribe.' The expedition of Dr. Batt and Dr. Baird in 1930-31 A.C. was supported by the Prime Ministers of Canada, Australia, Newfoundland, and forty-two leading British and American firms.—Extracted from the article on the subject in the Montreal Gazette, reproduced in the Bombay Chronicle, Bombay, dated December 17, 1933, page 13.]

The Arabs.

"The first rush of Arab invasion in the Indus Valley during the eighth century had carried Muhammadan arms at times close enough to the confines of Kashmīr." But no permanent conquest was effected even in the Punjāb. The notices of Muslim geographers like al-Mas'ūdī, al-Qazwīnī, al-Idrīsī are restricted to a brief statement only.¹

The Bambas, living on the right bank of the Jhelum, in Kashmīr, however, claim descent from the Banū Umayya,² a section of whom is stated to have migrated to Badakhshān, stayed there for some generations, and to have come to Kashmīr with Dūlcha in 1322 A.C.

Here reference to a similar people may perhaps help us in appreciating the claim of the Bambas. The Russian Orientalist of Bombay, Mr. W. Ivanow, furnishes me with the translation of a paragraph from a Russian work,³ which I should like to reproduce:—"Arabs: (Census, 1924—54,318 individuals). Live as continuous population in the Bukhārā district, and in the Qatāqurghān and Samarqand districts of the Samarqand province. In isolated groups live in many other places of the Uzbek and the Turkomān republics, amongst Uzbek or Tājik population, and chiefly occupied in agriculture. Language:—The majority has lost the original language and speaks Uzbek, Turkish or Tājikī, as the population amongst which they live. The Arabs inhabiting a few villages of the Qarāqul ta'luqa of the Bukhārā district have preserved their original Arabic. In some places they still preserve

1. The Ancient Geography of Kashmīr by Dr. Stein, page 20.

2. The Imperial Gazetteer of India (Vol. XV., 1908 Edition, page 101), says Banū Hāshim but Banū Umayya appears to be more probable. The Bambas, however, are now classed as Rājputs.

3. A List of the Nationalities inhabiting the U.S.S.R., by I. I. Zaroobin. Leningrad 1927, page 21, para 81.

tribal divisions, although the majority are already entirely assimilated with the population around them. Religion :—Sunnīs.”

There is, however, a strong admixture of the Indo-Āryan type, and the extent of this influence can be gauged from the magnitude of the change wrought on the Kashmīrī language by Sanskrit. We have reason to assume that, even in Hindu times, Kashmīr was under foreign rule and the reign of those foreign dynasties was accompanied by settlements of immigrants of the same nationality, though it is not likely that these colonies were extensive.

It can, therefore, be maintained that the present population of Kashmīr is an admixture of aborigines with slight ‘Jewish,’ large Āryan and some other foreign elements. So much for the origin of the Kashmīrī. Let us turn to his character.

The Character of the Kashmīrī.

That the Kashmīrī is essentially mystical and imaginative, those who have known him intimately and studied him closely will readily admit. His environment has made him so. Huge snowy peaks, flowing silvery streams and sublime solitudes have induced this frame of mind. The cult of Buddha from the third century B. C. to the fourth century A.C., viz. for seven hundred years, the teaching of the Vedānta, the mysticism of Islam percolating through Persian sources have, one after another, found a congenial home in Kashmīr. The Pandit and the Pir have striven hard to make him superstitious as well. The result is that mysticism and superstition are now ingrained in the very nature of the Kashmīrī. In fact, he breathes that very atmosphere. He almost fully justifies to this day the observations recorded by Mīrzā Haidar Dughlāt about 1550 A.C. The Mīrzā said* that so many heresies have been legitimized in Kashmīr that people know nothing of what is lawful or unlawful. The so-called ‘pīrs’ (spiritual guides) and ‘sūfīs’ (mystics) are “for ever interpreting dreams, displaying miracles and obtaining from the unseen, information, regarding either the future or the past . . . consider the Holy Law (Sharī‘at) second in importance to the True ‘Way’ (Tarīqat) and that, in consequence, the people of the ‘Way’ have nothing to do with the Holy Law.” The observations of Mirzā Haidar close with the following prayer :—" May the Most High God defend all the people of Islam from such misfortunes and calamities as this, and turn them all into the true path of righteousness." The need of such a prayer must be equally felt even now, and all that tends to 'pir parasti' or saint-worship must be eradicated as completely and as quickly as may be practicable if the Musalmāns of Kashmīr are to make any real advance in the world.

* The Ta’rikh-i-Rashīdī, English Translation by Elias and Ross, 1895, page 436.

What a strange contrast does this state of affairs present to the real teachings of Islam whose Prophet disclaims "every power of wonder-working," and "ever rests the truth of his divine commission entirely upon his Teachings. He never resorts to the miraculous to assert his influence or to enforce his warnings. He invariably appeals to the familiar phenomena of nature as signs of the divine presence. He unswervingly addresses himself to the inner consciousness of man, to his reason and not to his weakness or his credulity."*

The imagination of the Kashmīrī has given some fine poetry to the world, which, however, has never been fully appreciated for lack of presentation in a suitable form. In intellect, he is perhaps the superior of any other Indian and is very quick in argument. The commonest Kashmīrī 'can talk intelligently on most subjects, and has a great aptitude for sarcasm, but, like other artistic people, he is emotional and fond of exaggeration.' He is fond of singing and song-birds too. Some of the songs sung in the rice-fields are full of poetical thought and the airs are sweet and plaintive. Though very loud, voluble and persistent, the Kashmīrī is extremely quiet under calamities such as earthquake and cholera.

The Kashmīrī can turn his hand to anything. He is an excellent cultivator and a fine gardener, and has a considerable knowledge of horticulture. He can weave excellent woollen cloth and can make first-rate baskets. He is a fine wood-carver, silver and goldsmith. He perfectly understands the art of varnishing and is eminently skilful in closely imitating the beautiful veins of a certain wood by inlaying gold thread. He can build his own house, and make his own ropes. In fact, there is scarcely a thing, says Lawrence, which he cannot do. As a fine craftsman, he may have a few equals in the world, but probably none superior to him. The boatman of Kashmīr, says Pirie, is as clever as the gondolier of Venice, and would emerge safely from the riskiest of situations. The Wāza is an excellent cook and could prepare perhaps fifty dainty dishes of meat alone. His way of serving food, however, leaves much to be desired, though he is modifying his mode of service. That the cuisine of the Punjābī has been largely influenced by the Wāza admits of no question. The Wa'in or Woin or Wōñu—not a distinct class apart—is the Baniā or the petty trader and perhaps occasionally the money-lender. The Kashmīrī understands his own business, and does not often make a bad bargain though sometimes the village Kashmīrī would be foolish enough to conceal his goods or fruits from the outside visitor. Normally the city vendor in and around Amīrā Kadal has three rates, the cheapest for his own people, the dearer for Indian visitors to the Valley and the dearest for the European or the American. There may be some logic in these rates so far as the Kashmīrī vendor is concerned, but it is unfair to the purchaser who gets the same commodity for which he pays the cheap, dear or the dearest rate.

* Syed Ameer Ali : The Spirit of Islam, Christophers, London, 1922, page 32.

Conservative the Kashmīrī is, but not altogether impregnable to new ideas. He is kind to his wife and children, and divorce scandals or cases of immorality among villagers, says Younghusband, are rarely heard of. He is hospitable and entertains his guests most cheerfully. The Kashmīrī is neither a murderer nor a marauder, and crimes against person or property seldom occur. The Kashmīrī's dog will not bite, though it may bark. Even his snakes have no poison except the viper in Dachigām rakh, etc. His rivers and lakes are free from dangerous animals. The Hāpūt, or the bear, the stray wolf, the leopard, the panther and the hyena are the only rare terrors of his forests. The Kashmīrī is no drunkard or opium-eater. Except that he is an inveterate snuff-taker, he may be said to be remarkably abstemious. "The Kashmīrīs," wrote Bernier, "are celebrated for wit, and considered much more intelligent and ingenious than the Indians. In poetry and science, they are not inferior to Persians. They are also very active and industrious." The traveller, G. T. Vigne, calls the Kashmīrī 'the Neapolitan of the East.'* But—

نه دیدم در بسطِ دهر هرگز هُرمندے جو اُو محتاجِ نانی
—میر ولی اللہ - وکیل - ایبٹ آباد

* Travels, Vol., I page 325.

“The Kashmirians are gay and lively people, with strong propensities to pleasure,” wrote George Forster* in 1783 A.C. “None are more eager in the pursuit of wealth, have more inventive faculties in acquiring it, or who devise more modes of luxurious expense. When a Kashmirian, even of the lowest order, finds himself in possession of ten shillings, he loses no time in assembling his party and, launching into the lake, solaces himself till the last farthing is spent.”

In many respects, the Kashmīrī cultivator resembles an Irishman, says Sir Walter Lawrence; he certainly possesses the quick wit which is so characteristic of the Irish, and has the same deep-rooted objection to paying rent. There are many points of resemblance between Ireland and Kashmīr. Both are small countries which have been subject to the rule and protection of more powerful nations, and yet have never welcomed any change or improvement. Both the Kashmīrī and the Irish love a joke, are fond of harmless deception, and are masters of good-humoured blarney. Both are kind to their children and to old folk and, continues Sir Walter, both have the same disregard for the first principles of sanitation, though “the interior of a Kashmīrī hut is probably cleaner than that of a similar class of dwelling in Ireland.”

Women of Kashmīr.

Many an outsider has given his impressions about the women of Kashmīr. Two very divergent views, one expressed by an Englishman and the other by a Frenchman, are indeed striking. Colonel Alexander Dow in his History of Hindostan published in 1772 A.C. writes:—

“The inhabitants are astonishingly handsome and the women especially enchantingly beautiful” (Vol. I, p. 41). And Andrew Wilson refers to the legend of the two angels Hārūt and Mārūt having been ensnared by the beauty of Kashmīrī women (The Abode of Snow, p. 420). Victor Jacquemont, a French Naturalist, writes in his Letters from India (Vol. II, p. 65): “Know that I have never seen anywhere such hideous witches as in Cashmere. The female race is remarkably ugly.” Eastern poets, on the other hand, are one in their appreciation of the beauty of the women of Kashmīr, and a typical case is that of the poet

* Journey, Vol. II, pages 25-26.

Zuhūrī who says:—

بہ ترکانِ غارت گر صبر و ہوش بہ کشمیرِ یانِ ملاحِت فرُوش

Foreign visitors very often err in generalizing before they have seen enough to form an accurate estimate of the real state of affairs. Oriental historians of the medieval period, and particularly the class amongst them gifted with the art of rhyme, are notorious for their tendency to exaggerate. The French writer, whom we have quoted above, must have been repelled by the dirt which is the lot of some classes of the women of Kashmir. In the Āina-i-Kashmīr of the late K. B. Pīrẓāda Muhammad Husain 'Arif, M.A., C.I.E., ex-Chief Justice, Kashmir, this fact is accordingly brought out in the following lines:—

ہیں حُسن و رنگ میں مشہورِ عالم عورتیں یاں کی
لباس اُن کا مگر میں نے بہت ہی بدلتا دیکھا
رواں گھر گھر میں ہے پانی، مگر دھوتی ہیں کم کپڑے
ہزاروں میں کسی اک کے نہ کپڑوں کو صفا دیکھا
سوا اک ڈھیلے صُکرتہ کے گلو سے لیکے ٹخنے تک
بجڑ رُومال سر کے اور نہ کوئی بارچا دیکھا
نہ آسائش، نہ زیائش، نہ پردہ اور نہ حفظِ تن
نہیں معلوم کیا واضع نے، اِہیں فائدہ دیکھا؟
زمیندار اور اہل ڈُل تو کچھ معذور ہیں، لیکن
یہ اہل شہر سے پوچھو کہ تم نے اِہیں کیا دیکھا؟
جا و عصمت و عفت تو اب تک اِن میں ہے باقی
جوان اور زال سب کر باحیا اور باوفا دیکھا

Once when a Zenana missionary was impelled to say, "O dear Kashmiri women, why won't you wash?" they looked at her wondering and replied, "We have been so oppressed that we don't care to be clean."* Perhaps this answer explains the fact that under oppressive rule during Afghān and Sikh times, cleanliness involved imposition or abduction, and thus the habit of uncleanness was forced on women.

*Irene Petrie, Missionary to Kashmir, by Mrs. Ashley Carus-Wilson B.A., Sixth Edition, London, 1905, p. 111.

George Forster, who visited Kashmīr in 1783 A.C., likens the women of the Valley to the women of the south of France who are noted for their beauty, adding that women of Kashmīr "would be called brunettes in the south of France or Spain." To an Indian eye the women of Kashmīr are of a make different from their own. Kashmīrī women are fairer in complexion, not uncommonly blue-eyed, supple and attractive in appearance, as compared to the wheat-coloured, hard-boned peasant women of the Punjāb, or the dark-complexioned women of other parts of India. The Panditānī appears to be more delicately featured very often, but the Musalmān-nī is more vigorous and seems to possess a stronger stamina. Apparently one may consider this to be due to caste restrictions in one case and a wider field in the other. But under identical conditions of life there is, perhaps, no such difference at all, though a State survey, 25 years ago, revealed a large incidence of tuberculosis among the Panditānīs. The Kashmīrī woman's large lustrous siyāh chashm (black eye) is on a par with that of a Turkish, Irānian or Afghān beauty, though Khwāja Hāfiz of Shīrāz singles out only Kashmīrīs and Turks when he says in his Dīwān—

ز شعرِ حافظِ شیرازی گویند و می رقصند
سبزه چشمانِ کشمیری و ترکانِ سمرقندی

It is indeed a compliment from the great Hāfiz and from Zuhūrī, the famous court-poet of Bījāpur, that the Kashmīrī should be bracketed with the Turk in the comeliness of his person, for the Turk is admittedly the handsomest of all the races of the Orient. The great Sā'dī gives but an expression to the universal acclamation of the beauty of the Turk when he says:—

سعدیا رُوزِ ازلِ حُسنِ به ترکان دادند

There is, however, no doubt that poverty and ignorance and the political vicissitudes of this unhappy Valley have considerably marred the feminine charm of its womenfolk, and made a visitor to the Valley exclaim:—

حُسنِ کُو چاہئے اندازِ و ادا، ناز و نمک
کیا ہوا اگر ہوئے گوروں کی طرح گال سفید

But given the chances of freedom and decent living enjoyed by the women of the West, there will be an entirely different outlook. And the women of Kashmīr would rank amongst the best of their kind in the world, as some of those gone out to live in the Punjāb, and the United Provinces, etc., tend to show. The health and enlightenment of the women of Kashmīr should, therefore, be of supreme importance in the programme of social uplift. Kashmīrī children are most winsome, wrote Mrs. Ashley Carus-Wilson. Indeed they can compare favourably with children in the West in the evident innocence of their enchanting charm, but the appalling illiteracy of the mother and the surrounding squalor and poverty will not let them grow up winsome.

Criticism of the Kashmīrī.

The Kashmīrī has been classed with the Kambūh and the Afghān as being a scoundrel in the saying very frequently quoted both for amusement and for satire :—

اگر قحط الرجال آفتد از ایشان انس کم گیری
یکے افغان، دوم کبوتر، سوم بد ذات کشمیری which in Colonel Torrens' Travels (p. 299) is translated:

“Should fate decree a dearth of men,
Then, friend of mine, beware ye
Of Afghān—Kambūh, scoundrel too,
But, worst of all, do thou eschew
That ill-bred knave Kashmīrī.”

Here, too, the Kashmīrī is singled out as the worst of the three notorious knaves of Northern India! A clever Kashmīrī, however, once turned the tables on his satirist stating that this saying really means that all Afghāns are bad, all Kambūhs are bad too, but it is the ill-bred Kashmīrī alone, who should be shunned and not every Kashmīrī.

The average Kashmīrī or, in any case, the Hānjī or the boatman, is considered to be rather prolific. This may be due to the usual reason of the poverty of the Kashmīrī in general. Some, however, believe it is due to river and other water containing large quantities of fish, but on that it would not be discreet to hazard judgment. It would indeed be an interesting investigation.

It has been asserted that the Kashmīrī "is a coward, a liar and a dirty fellow."

بہ تعریف کشمیر و کشمیریان بہشتی پُر از دوزخی گفتہ اند

He is a coward because long oppression has made him so. His cowardice is extraordinary. Under the slightest threat of danger, the poor stay-at-home Kashmīrī used to tremble and quake, weep and howl. Not very long ago, it was commonly remarked in the Punjāb that a Kashmīrī would not dare use a gun, but would throw it down in fear and say that "it would go off of itself."

از غلامی جذبہ ہائے اُو بمرّد آتشے اندر رگِ تاشِ قُسرِد

—اقبال - جاوید نامہ

Natives of certain hilly tracts in Northern India have been found to be somewhat cowardly, but those who have observed coolies from Kashmīr and coolies from other hill districts, working together in Simla or Dalhousie, must have noticed that the Kashmīrī coolie is decidedly the more cowardly though definitely more civil, and according to Aldous Huxley "wonderfully cheerful." In fact, the former very often lords it over the latter, and assigns to him the dirtier or the more irksome part of the job.

تلاشِ رِزقِ میں تُو درِ بدر ہر وقت پھرتا ہے

کبھی پنجاب تیرا مُستقر ہے گاہ شملہ ہے

»ہنو« کہکر تیری تحقیر سب اغیار کرتے ہیں

تیری تذلیل یہی اکثر سربازار کرتے ہیں

اگر تُو انقلابِ زندگی سے آشنا ہوتا

تو اتنا نکبت و ادبار میں کیوں مُبتلا ہوتا

—نشاط

[Poverty being always pitiaibly acute, the poor can hardly be blamed for leaving—after the first mild dose of danger—homes where social conditions provide them with so little. Truly the dearth of possessions confers a certain freedom too. Here, it is to leave home and hearth !—Unknown]

Though it is so, it seems strange that the Kashmīrī professional wrestler should be the terror of his opponents in the akhārās or wrestling pits of India. No doubt, therefore, that William Moorcroft¹ should have said, about 1820 A.C., that amongst the peasantry are found figures of robust and muscular make, such as might have served for models of the Farnesian Hercules.² The Kashmīrī is indeed a bundle of contradictions.

Again, "he is a liar because of the peculiar system of government which encouraged a most elaborate scheme of espionage." And in the words of Sir W. H. Beveridge, "in a land, on which terror has once lain like a poisonous mist, truth does not grow easily." Cowardice and lying have, in turn, bred in him envy and malice, self-praise (thekun), and condemnation of others. There is an apparent lack of sympathy though a good deal of lip-service. Like the lower type Anglo-Indian who often uses the curse 'bloody' or the Britisher who repeats 'damn it,' the Kashmīrī curses by invoking 'tapaīl' and 'tāwan.' 'Trath' and 'zaharbād' are frequently on the lips of women, as the Punjābī women use suāh and siyāpa. Again, the Kashmīrī plays havoc with his oaths. BaYād-i-Qur'ān he would repeat fifty times a day, like the lower class Lāhaurī or any such Punjābī who has abuse on the tip of his tongue.

Pessimism, want of education and poverty have made the Kashmīrī dirty.

جان ز اهل خطہ سوزد چوں سیند خیزد از دل نالهای درد مند
—اقبال - جاوید نامہ—

To my mind, his dirtiness is the cause of his degradation in the eyes of an outsider. Aldous Huxley goes to the length of saying that the Kashmīrī has a genius for filthiness. A regular jihād (crusade) against his dirty habits is the one imperative necessity; though it must be remarked, in passing, that this habit of dirtiness is shared, in some cases, by the European in his own native land, where he puts on clean clothes but does not keep the body equally clean, and dreads the bath either from the expense involved or the severity of the climate to which he finds himself, like the Kashmīrī, exposed. Such a European is not ashamed to call the

1. Travels, Vol. II, p. 128.

2. The Farnese Hercules is a marble statue of the first century B.C., and represents Hercules with exaggerated muscles. The statue was in the Farnese palace. Farnese is the name of an Italian ducal house, the ruling dynasty of Parma, Italy, in the 15th to 17th centuries A. C.

Kashmīrī—"that athletic bearded disgrace to the human race."¹

"And do not sneer at the lack of sanitation. Remember the Chinese are desperately poor and have already suffered terribly in this War." This is the advice contained in the handbook for American troops in China in February, 1943. Should the high-browed foreigner forget it when meeting the desperately poor Kashmīrī?

This type of Westerner who despises the Kashmīrī should remember that he too, at one time, evoked such remarks and was the butt of similar ridicule from the Easterner. "To these Saracens we are indebted for many of our comforts. Religiously cleanly, it was not possible for them to clothe themselves according to the fashion of the natives of Europe, in a garment unchanged till it dropped to pieces of itself, a loathsome mass of vermin, stench and rags [like the humble Hatō's head cover?]. They taught us the use of the often-changed and often-washed undergarment of linen and cotton, which still passes among ladies under its old Arabic name."²

It is, however, an undeniable fact that much of the evil reputation of the Kashmīrī in the eyes of the visitor to the Valley is due to the contact of the latter mostly with the low class Kashmīrī, the Hānji or the boatman and the hawker, and in some cases the half-educated Kashmīrī Pandit who has been acting as a Bābu or Munshī, or tutor to the visitor from the West, and who according to Aldous Huxley has more than Spanish objection to manual labour. And, therefore, most of the usual criticism of the character of the Kashmīrī is unjust and unjustified. The common Kashmīrī provokes laughter at his accents in Urdu and is thus a source of merriment to the outsider. His accent in English too is slightly peculiar.

1. Magic Ladakh by Major M. L. A. Gompertz,—Seely, Service & Co., Limited, London, 1928, page 26,—repeating E. F. Knight, author of Where Three Empires Meet, Longmans, London, 1893, p. 111. The poor Kashmīrī is, at least, innocent of crime like that referred to by Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Osburn, D.S.O.—"Not long ago it was stated that thirty per cent. of all cases in which young English girls had been seduced were cases of incest between father and daughter."—Must England Lose India? Alfred A. Knopf, London, 1930, second edition June 1930, page 106, lines 16-19.

2. A History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by John William Draper, M.D., LL.D., Professor of the University of New York. Two Volumes. Revised Edition. George Bell, London, 1875. Volume II, pp. 33-34.

The Future.

To sum up, it may be said: "though superstition has made the average stay-at-home Kashmīrī timid, tyranny has made him a craven-spirited liar, and physical disasters have made him selfish and pessimistic, and, up to recent times, the cultivator lived under a system of begār (carrier service, or forced labour) and having no security of property, he had no incentive to effort, and with no security of life he lost the independence of a free man": yet it is evident that changes are happily taking place, the impact of modern life is having its effect, and the influx of visitors and outside agencies are bringing about gradual awakening. The future is, therefore, not without hope, for the Kashmīrī has in him the qualities that can make a great nation. Among its numerous great sons, the Kashmīrī can number a learned jurist and an eminent politician in the United Provinces, a poet and philosopher in the Punjāb, a territorial magnate in Dacca, and, in other places, a great reformer, an able administrator, and a leading merchant-prince. The Kashmīrī has also taken part in the Great European or World Wars. He has shown his mettle in July 1924 by withstanding, quite unarmed, charges of State cavalry at Śrīnagar, and in 1932 during the disturbances in the Valley. And he has won, at considerable sacrifice, a constitution by which the Prajā Sabhā or the Legislative Assembly was inaugurated on 18th October, 1934. This Assembly, however, is but a recommendatory body subject to the Council of Ministers.

The educated Kashmīrī of the Punjāb, Lucknow, Patna or Dacca holds his own against the most advanced Indian in intellect, culture and refinement, as well as in general appearance, physique and manly qualities.

KINGS OF KASHMĪR DURING THE PRE-MUSLIM PERIOD

[AS GIVEN BY KALHANA.]

Gonanda I.	Accession assumed Kali Samvat
Dāmodara I.	653 (Laukika S. 628).
Yaçovati
Gonanda II.
Thirty-five kings 'lost'
Lava
Kuça
Khagendra
Surendra
Godhara	Aggregate length of reigns
Suvarṇa	1266 years (Laukika S. 628—
Janaka	1894).
Shachinara
Açoka
Jalauka
Dāmodara II.
Hushka, Jushka, Kanishka.
Abhimanyu I.

[The above is according to the English Translation of the Rājatarangīnī by Sir Aurel Stein—Vol. I, pp. 134-5.]

KINGS OF THE GONANDA DYNASTY—GROUP I.

B. C.		reigned for	Ys. Ms. Ds.
1184	1. Gonanda III	„ ..	35
1149	2. Bibhishana I	„ ..	53 6 ..
1095	3. Indrajit	„ ..	35
1060	4. Rāvana	„ ..	30 6 ..
1030	5. Bibhishana II	„ ..	35 6 ..
994	6. Nara I alias Kinnara	„ ..	39 9 ..
955	7. Siddha	„ ..	60
895	8. Utpalāksha	„ ..	30
864	9. Hiranyāksha	„ ..	37 7 ..
827	10. Hiranyakula	„ ..	60
767	11. Vasukula	„ ..	60
707	12. Mihirakula nicknamed Trikoṭihā (killer of three crores of people)	„
637	13. Baka	„ ..	70
		„ ..	63

B.C.			reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
574	14.	Kshitinanda	„ ..	30
544	15.	Vasunanda	„ ..	52
491	16.	Nara II	„ ..	60
431	17.	Aksha	„ ..	60
371	18.	Gopāditya	„ ..	60	..	6
311	19.	Gokarna	„ ..	57	11	..
253	20.	Narendra I alias Khinkhila	„ ..	36	3	10
217	21.	Yudhishthira I	„ ..	No period is mentioned
Total Gonandas, Group I				..	1014	9 9

THE VIKRAMĀDITYA DYNASTY—GROUP 2

B. C.			reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
169	22.	Pratāpāditya I	„ ..	32
137	23.	Jalauka	„ ..	32
105	24.	Tuñjina I	„ ..	36
		Change of dynasty (“ Anyakulajā Rājā ”)
69	25.	Vijaya	„ ..	8
61	26.	Jayendra (dynasty ends)	„ ..	37
24	27.	Samdhitmati alias Āryarāja (Jayendra's minister)	„ ..	47
Total : Vikramādityas and others, Group 2				..	192

THE GONANDAS RESTORED—GROUP 3

B.C.			reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
24	28.	Meghavāhana	„ ..	34
58	29.	Pravarasena I alias Tuñjina II	„ ..	30
88	30.	Hiranya and Toramāna (dynasty interrupted,		30	2	..
118	31.	Mātrigupta, the poet, (Protégè of the great Vikramāditya of Ujjain, defeater of the Shakas)	„ ..	4	9	1
123	32.	Pravarasena II	„ ..	60
183	33.	Yuddhishthira II	„ ..	21	3
204	34.	Narendra II alias Lakhaṇa	„ ..	13
217	35.	Rāṇāditya alias Tuñjina III	„ ..	300
517	36.	Vikramāditya	„ ..	42
559	37.	Bālāditya	„ ..	37	4	..
Total Gonandas after the first restoration, Group 3				..	572	6 1

THE KĀRKOTĀ OR NĀGA DYNASTY—GROUP 4

B.C.		reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
396	38.	Durlabhavardhana alias Prajñāditya	36
632	39.	Durlabhaka alias Pratāpāditya II	50
682	40.	Chandrāpīḍa	8	8	..
691	41.	Tārāpīḍa	4	..	24
		Total Kārkotās up to the end of Tārāpīḍa	98	8	24
		Grand total up to the end of Tārāpīḍa	1,878	..	4

A.D.

695	42.	Muktāpīḍa alias Lalitāditya	36	7	11
732	43.	Kuvalayāpīḍa	1	..	15
733	44.	Vajrāditya Bappiyaka alias Lalitāditya II	7
740	45.	Prithivyāpīḍa	4	1	..
744	46.	Sangrāmāpīḍa	7
751	47.	Jayāpīḍa	31
	48.	Jajja (brother-in-law and minister of Jayāpīḍa usurper)	3
785	49.	Lalitāpīḍa	12
797	50.	Prithivyāpīḍa II, alias Sangrāmāpīḍa II	7
804	51.	Chippaṭajayāpīḍa alias Brihaspati (son of Lalitāpīḍa by a concubine)	12
816	52.	Ajitāpīḍa, son of Chippaṭa's brother, deposed and succeeded by
	53.	Anaṅgāpīḍa (son of Sangrāmāpīḍa)
	54.	Utpalāpīḍa (son of Ajitāpīḍa)	41
		Total up to the end of the fourth Taraṅga	260	5	20

CHANGE OF DYNASTY—GROUP 5

A.D.		reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
857	55.	Avantivarman (son of Sukhavarman, son of Utpala, brother of the concubine above referred to), from Phālg. kr. 1 of 31 to Āshāḍh. sh. 3 of 59	27	4	18
884	56.	Shamkaravarman, up to Phālg. kr. 7 of 77	18	7	19
903	57.	Gopālayarman	2
	58.	Samkaṭavarman	10
05	59.	Sugandhā, queen	2

DYNASTY CHANGED

60.	Nirjitavarman alias Paṅgu (grandson of Śhūrarvarman)
-----	---	----	----	----	----

A.D.		reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
		He hardly reigned at all, when he was succeeded by his son, 10 years old, named ..
907	61.	Pārtha, up to Paush. kr. 1 of 97, i.e. , for 19 yrs., 9 mas., 23 ds., less by 4 ys. 0 ms., 10 dys. of Gopāta Saṃkṛta, and Sugandhā	15	9	13
923		Nirjitavarman or Paṅgu again up to Māgha. kr. 1 of 98	..	1	1 ..
924	62.	Chakravarman, up to Māgha. kr. 1 of 9.	..	11
935	63.	Sūravarma, up to Āṣādh. kr. 1 of 10	..	1
936		Pārtha again, up to Āṣādh. kr. 1 of 11	5 ..
936		Chakravarman again up to Jyeshṭha. ç. 8 of 13	1	11	23
938	64.	Unmattāvanti, up to Āṣādh. kr. 1 of 15	..	2	.. 7

Total years, Group 5, end of the 5th
Taraṅga ..

83 4 0

DYNASTY CHANGED—GROUP 6

940	65.	Yaçaskara, up to Bhād. kr. 3 of 24, including
	66.	Varnaṭa who reigned a few days before Yaçaskara's death	..	9
948	67.	Samgrāmadeva, up to Phālg. kr. 10 or 24	6 8
950	68.	Parvagupta, up to Āṣādh. kr. 13 of 26	..	1	4 4
951	79.	Kshemagupta, up to Pauṣh. ç. 1 of 34	..	8	6 3
960	70.	Abhimanyu, up to Kārt. ç. 3 of 48	..	13	10 3
973	71.	Nandigupta, up to Mārga. ç. 12 of 49	..	1	1 9
975	72.	Tribhuvana, up to Mārga. ç. 5 of 51	..	1	11 23
976	73.	Bhimagupta	..	5
981	74.	Diddā, Queen, up to Bhād. ç. 8 of 79	..	22	9 3

Total years, Group 6, end of the 6th Taraṅga ..

64 .. 23

DYNASTY CHANGED—GROUP 7

1004	75.	Samgrāmarāja, up to Āṣādh. kr. 1 of 4	..	24	9 8
1029	76.	Harirāja, up to Āṣādh. ç. 8 22
1029	77.	Ananta, up to Kārt. ç. 6 of 39, when he crowned his son Kalaça	..	35	3 28
1064	78.	Kalaça, up to Mārga. ç. 6 of 65	..	26	1 ..
1090	89.	Utkarṣa and Harsha, up to Bhād. ç. 5 of 77	..	11	8 29

Totals years Group 7, end of the 7th
Taraṅga ..

97 11 27

DYNASTY CHANGED—GROUP 8

1102	80.	Uchchala, up to Pausha. ç. 6 of 87	..	10	4 1
1113	81.	Raḍḍa alias Shaṅkha
1113	82.	Salhana, up to Vaiç. ç. 3 of 88	8 26

DYNASTY CHANGED

A.D.		reigned for	Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
1113	83.	Sussala up to Phālg. new moon of 3 including 6 ms., 12 ds. of
	84.	Bhikshāchāra	..	15	9 27
1129	85.	Vijayasimha, still reigning in the 25th year or A.D., 1151, i.e. , Shake 1072	..	22

Total to end of Shaka 1072, or A.D. 1151, i.e. 48 5 25

[The above is according to the English Translation of the River of Kings by the late Mr. R. S. Pandit, pp. 581-582 and 585-586.]

[AS GIVEN BY JONARAJA]

A.D.			Period of reign
			Ys.	Ms.	Ds.
1127	Jayasimha (same as Simhadeva of Kalhana)	26	11	27
1154	Pramāṇuka	9	6	10
1164	Vārttideva	9	6	..
1171	Vopyadeva	9	4	2
1180	Jassaka	18	..	10
1198	Jagadeva	14	6	3
1213	Rājadeva	23	3	27
1236	Saṅgrāmadeva	16 ^f	..	10
1252	Rāmadeva	21	1	13
1273	Lakshmaṇadeva	13	3	12
1286	Simhadeva	14	5	27
1301	Sahadeva alias Rāmachandra	19	3	25
1320	Riñchana	3	1	19
1323	Udayanadeva
1338	Koṭā

[The above is according to the English Translation by Jogesh Chander Dutt of Jonarāja's Rājāvali—Vol. III, p. XXI at the end.]

CHAPTER II

THE PRE-ISLAMIC PERIOD

(a) The earliest known kings of Kashmir.

As this Chapter deals with the history of Kashmir during the period when Hindus—Brāhmins and non-Brāhmins—and Buddhists, etc., ruled the Valley we call it the Pre-Islamic Period of the history of Kashmir. In view of the exhaustive exposition of this period by the late Sir Mark Aurel Stein in his English Translation of the Rājatarāṅgī, only a brief outline of the period is presented to the reader of Kashīr.

*Gonanda I.*¹

Gonanda I is the first ruler from whose reign some semblance of a chronological history of Kashmir begins. His reign is dated 20 years before the Mahābhārata war.² Gonanda I went to war with Krishna on behalf of his relative

1. Tradition takes us as far back as the times of Rāmachandra, the hero of the Rāmāyaṇa, who is said to have conquered and visited Kashmir, but of whom nothing more is related. The tradition says that, when the country became permanently inhabited, it was split up into numerous little Kuttarāja's or kingdoms founded by Brāhmins, which began in course of time to fight among themselves with the result that they called in a Rājput named Dayā Karan from the Jammu territory to restore order and rule in the country. [The Gulāb-nāma, p. 52.] Dayā Karan was the son of Pūran Karan and grandson of Jambu Lochan, the founder of Jammu town and of the Jamwāl dynasty of Rājputs. Some historians connect him with the line of the Rājās of Mathurā. Dayā Karan and 35 Rājās of his line are said to have ruled here. This latter part of the tradition, Sir Aurel Stein says, has been added by a Kashmiri Pandit to please the present rulers of Kashmir hailing from Jammu—Introduction to the Rājatarāṅgī, Vol. I, page 73.

Also Gulab Singh by K. M. Pannikar, page 14.

2. Kalhaṇa takes, as the starting point of his chronological calculations, the traditional date indicated by Varāhamihira's Bṛhatsaṃhitā for the coronation of Yudhiṣṭhira, the Pāṇḍava hero of the Epics. . . . The date of this legendary event is accepted by him also for the accession of Gonanda I, the first of the "lost" kings of Kashmir, whose name, as we are told, was recovered by the chronicler (or his predecessors) from the Nilamata Purāṇa. The exact reason for the equation of these dates is nowhere given. But it appears that the story as contained in the earlier version of the Nilamata, which Kalhaṇa had before him, represented Gonanda I in a general way as a contemporary of the Kauravas and Pāṇḍavas.—Stein's Introduction to his English Translation of Kalhaṇa's Rājatarāṅgī, Vol. I, page 59.

Jarāsandha, king of Magadha, and laid siege to the town of Mathurā, but was killed in the battle.

Dāmodara I.

He was succeeded by his son, Dāmodara I, who, impelled by the desire to avenge his father's death, attacked Krishṇa at a svayamvara which was held by the king of Gandhāra, the corridor of India, a territory lying on the banks of the Indus. Dāmodara was killed, whereupon Krishṇa installed the late king's pregnant widow, Yaçovatī, on the throne.

The queen bore a son who was placed on the throne as Gonanda II while yet an infant. The Mahābhārata war occurred soon after; but as the king of Kashmīr was yet an infant, his alliance was sought for neither by the Kurus nor by the Pāṇḍus.

(b) The Pāṇḍu Dynasty.

A Gap of 35 Kings.

Then came thirty-five kings one after the other, whose names and deeds, according to Kalhaṇa, have been lost through the destruction of records. Pīr Hasan Shāh,* a noted local Muslim historian, however, fills up the gap by allotting a rule of one thousand years to twenty-two kings of the Pāṇḍu dynasty. If we give credence to the traditions prevailing among the present-day Kashmīrīs—who ascribe every old monument to the Pāṇḍus calling it Pāṇḍavārīh or Pāṇḍu edifice—Pīr Hasan Shāh's statement may be given a value comparable to that which attaches to the account of Kalhaṇa up to the middle of the 8th century of the Christian era. Hīmāl and Lōlarē, two noted heroines, in two love stories so popular in Kashmīrī folk-lore, belonged to this period. Hīmāl's lover was Nāgrāi. Lōlarē's lover was Bōmbur.

*Zain-ul-'Ābidīn (1420-70 A.C.) is said to have instituted a search for ancient manuscripts, and copies of certain chronicles were found. Of these, Kalhaṇa's chronicles were by far the most important. But the history of thirty-five of the early Hindu kings was still missing. Subsequently, an old manuscript was discovered written on birch-bark. This was called the Ratnākara Purāṇa and was of especial interest, as it contained a record of those kings whose reigns were omitted from Kalhaṇa's history. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn had a Persian translation made, but both this and the original have disappeared, though the historian, Pīr Hasan Shāh, is said to have obtained a copy of the translation. It is, however, impossible to vouch for this story.

According to this account of Pīr Hasan Shāh, Haraṇdeva, a scion of the Pāṇḍus, is said to have taken service with Gonanda II, and risen to the office of minister to the king. As often happened in those days, Haraṇdeva killed the old Rājā, usurped the throne, and founded a dynasty of his own.

Rāmadeva.

The second ruler of this dynasty, Rāmadeva, is said to have been a conqueror, having vanquished as many as 500 kings, and brought under his sway the whole of India from the Arabian Sea to the Bay of Bengal. He assessed land revenue at one-tenth of the gross produce, which was raised to one-fifth by one of his successors.

Sundarasena.

In the reign of Sundarasena, twenty-second in the line, a great earthquake clove open the earth in the middle of the capital Samdhimatnagar, and the whole city was submerged along with its king and inhabitants. The site of the city is now occupied by the Volur (Wular) lake. Lava, chief of Laulaha or Lōlauv (modern Lōlāb), the beautiful and fertile valley, oval in shape and situated on the north-east side of Kashmīr, was then elected King.

(c) The Maurya Dynasty.

Açoka.

We may pass over the next twenty kings whose names, but no deeds, have been preserved, and come down to Açoka. In spite of a number of surmises to the contrary, there is a consensus of opinion among historians that Açoka of Kashmīr history was the Emperor Açoka of Magadha, who reigned from 272 B.C. to 231 B.C., and whose dominions extended eastward to Bengal and westward to the Hindū-kush.* Açoka was a Buddhist who erected many vihāras or monasteries, and stūpas or sacred cupolas. He acted on the policy of religious toleration and patronized all religions.

* The chronological position and genealogical relations of Açoka of Kashmīr as stated by Kalhaṇa show him to have been different from the Açoka of India and to have existed about a thousand years before the latter. But Kalhaṇa's chronology before the ninth century of the Christian era is absolutely unreliable, while his genealogical connexions are mere attempts at arranging kings in one line of descent—Stein's Introduction to his English Translation of Kalhaṇa's Rājatarangīṇī, Vol. 1, page 64.

One of the greatest lessons that he taught to his people was to "overcome all lassitude," and he never spared himself any pains. This description of the Emperor Aṣoka agrees entirely with that given by Kalhaṇa, though the latter's chronology was so vague that he dates the Kashmīr Aṣoka¹ a thousand years before the great Indian emperor of the same name.

The Emperor Aṣoka's rule in Kashmīr is the first great landmark in the history of this country which was then governed through a deputy who had his seat² of government at Taxilā (Pāli—Takkaṣilā or Takshaṣilā). This is about the time when Rome and Carthage were beginning to grapple together in the Punic Wars. Aṣoka built the original town of Srinagar, at a site about four miles above the existing capital and which is now occupied by a small village called Purāṇādhiṣṭhāna (old capital) or Pāndrēṭhan.³ "He had broken through the fetter of Brāhmanism and established friendly intercourse with Greece and Egypt, and it is to this connexion that the introduction of stone architecture and sculpture in Kashmīr is due." Buddhism, offering a higher morality and persuasive argument at the same time, disarmed Brāhman opposition and spread rapidly. It very deeply affected the Kashmīrī character. The extraordinary patience that the Kashmīrī shows under the severest visitations of nature such as cholera and earthquake is clearly traceable to this early Buddhist influence. The outside appearance of most of the present-day Muslim shrines is not unlike that of Buddhist pagoda; though all details are entirely Saracenic as we shall see under the section on architecture. Buddhism lingered on in the Valley right up to the times of Kalhaṇa who was himself an admirer of Buddha though he was a Çivaite. The pond in which the temple of Pāndrēthan was erected has now been drained and the plinth excavated. The domed roof is a fine piece of sculpture. The temple is about 18 feet square with projecting porticos. It was erected in 921 A.C. by King Pārtha whom we shall know later.

1. In the time of Jalauka, the alleged son and successor of Aṣoka, Buddhists are stated by Kalhaṇa to have been "powerful and flushed with success." History tells us that it was Aṣoka who raised Buddhism from the status of a local sect to one of the great religions of the world, and it was he who sent missionaries to Kashmīr. If we accept the chronology of Kalhaṇa, we shall have to place Aṣoka of Kashmīr at least a thousand years before the date of the Emperor Aṣoka, and we also stand a fair chance of falling into the ridiculous anachronism of introducing Buddhism into Kashmīr fully eight centuries before its founder was born.—Stein's Introduction to his English Translation of Rājatarangīnī, Vol. I, page 64.

2. Early History of India by V. A. Smith, 3rd Edition, 1914, p. 164.

3. Originally Purāṇādhiṣṭhāna—Stein's English Translation of Rājatarangīnī, Book I, p. 19.

Jalauka.

Açoka was succeeded by Jaloka or Jalauka, whom, perhaps from the phonetic similarity of names or from the close succession of one by the other, Kalhaṇa states to be the son of the former. His name, however, is quite unknown to Indian history.¹ He may have been a native king of Kashmīr. He may have come to the throne by a coup de main, similar to that by which Chandragupta Maurya, took advantage of the utter confusion and anarchy that prevailed in western India on the return of Alexander the Great, and established the Maurya empire on the ruins of the small states shattered by the great Macedonian conqueror.
During Açoka's later years the country was harassed by Mlecchas, probably the restless Mongolian hordes from the steppes of Central Asia who were always on the move in search of new pastures and new homes. The strong hand of the Emperor was soon after removed by death. The difficult nature of the surrounding country and the cares of an already unwieldy empire may have kept his successor from any attempt at its recovery. At any rate, there was anarchy and confusion in Kashmīr, and the time was ripe for the native adventurer, Jaloka or Jalauka, to try conclusions with the foreign depredators, in which he was successful. Jalauka was a popular hero and a worshipper of Çiva. The first religious edifice on the isolated hill, rising to about 1,000 feet above the plains, and known as Takht-i-Sulaimān and called by Hindus Çankarāchārya,² was built by Jaloka about 200 B.C. The temple is supposed to have been rebuilt in the 6th century A.C. by Rājā Gopāditya.
At first an opponent of Buddhists, Jaloka finally became friendly to them. He is said to have conquered Qannauj and Gandhāra and brought lawyers and other people from those parts to settle in the country. Kalhaṇa gives useful information concerning the administration of the country.
It appears that up to the time of Jaloka, government

1. Early History of India by V. A. Smith, 3rd Edition, 1914, pp. 191-92.

2. Old name Gopādri 'the Gopa-hill'.

consisted of seven main state officials—the Premier, the Judge, the Revenue Superintendent, the Treasurer, the Commander of the army, the Purohita (Ecclesiastical Minister) and the Astrologer. Jalauka increased this number to eighteen¹ of whom no details, however, are given.

Dāmodara.

Jalauka was succeeded by Dāmodara II, whose stories cluster round the Dāmodara Uḍar,² an arid alluvial plateau some eight miles south of Srinagar that served as a dam to bring water to his town of Gudasuth, now a small village of 476 souls, situated on the plateau. There is an aerodrome at Dāmodara Uḍar.

“Christ in Kashmīr?” Samdhimati.

At this stage of Kashīr, though our chronology differs from that of Kalhaṇa, yet the period being the same, we cannot help referring to an event of extraordinary interest. In Taraṅga second of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī of Kalhaṇa, there is a śloka (No. 90) which refers to a certain minister Samdhimati-Āryarāja “the greatest of sages,” and minister to Jayendra (61 B.C. to 24 A.C.). Both Sir Aurel Stein and Mr. R. S. Pandit, in their translations, speak of him as having led a life of poverty, suffered a long imprisonment, and “death at the stake,” and then coming to life again, and having ‘consented to the prayers of the citizens’ ruled Kashmīr for forty-seven years. Finally, this Samdhimati turned Sanyāsī, but whither he went we know not, neither does Kalhaṇa’s chronicle throw any light on this point. This man is not mythical. He seems to have an historical individuality.

There is a tradition, rather persistent, occasionally reinforced by casual accidental occurrences which are given prominence by a certain class of writers, namely, that Christ was buried in Srinagar, some go to the length of calling him Hazrat Yūz Āsaf, and point to his grave at Khānayār in Srinagar. But Yūz Āsaf, supposed to be the descendant of Moses, was sent as an ambassador to the court of Bad Shāh by the ruler of Egypt. Yūz Āsaf, written in Arabic characters, can be also read as Bodhisattva. There is no substantive proof for the visit of Christ to India, but it is indeed a strange coincidence in world history that Christ should have had resurrection somewhat similar to that of Saṃdhimati though certainly not exactly so. The dates of Saṃdhimati and Christ are also almost identical. To say that Saṃdhimati is no less a person than Christ himself would be far too bold an assertion. But the fact remains that the great Prophet of Galilee and the minister of Kashmīr have certain strong resemblances and both the personalities live in the same age though so far apart as Palestine and Kashmīr. It is a mystery indeed to the writer as it must be to the reader. And we leave it at that.

1. These eighteen officers evidently correspond to the eighteen “Tirthas” or court officials, mentioned in the Mahābhārata II, V. 38.—Stein’s Rājatarāṅgiṇī, First Book, verse 120, footnote 120, pages 22, 23.

2. The Dāmodara Karewa (Dāmodara Uḍar) is called by Kalhaṇa Dāmodarasuda. Uḍar is the Kashmīrī word for the Persian term Karewa (plateau).

(d) The Kushāna Dynasty.

Yueh-chi.

We may now come to the Yueh-chi, a Turkish race, who had established themselves in the valley of the Oxus, and overturned the Greek kingdom of Bactria in the second century before Christ. The vanquished people moved southward and conquered the whole of Northern India, which they retained until they were extinguished by the Kushāna section of the Yueh-chi.

Kadphises I, A.C. 15.

In about 15 A.C. Kadphises I, chieftain of the Kushāna clan of the Yueh-chi, welded together all the sections of the Yueh-chi nation, and conquered Afghānistān.

Kadphises II, A.C. 45.

He was succeeded about A.C. 45, by his son Kadphises II, who sent an army to conquer Eastern Turkistān. The expedition ended in disaster, and he was compelled to pay tribute to China.* He subsequently conquered Northern India as far as Benares.

Kanishka, A.C. 78. •

Kanishka succeeded Kadphises II in 78 A.C., and extended his empire as far south as the Vindhya and upper Sind. He annexed Kashmīr, and with this we reach once more the terra firma of historical record in the annals of this country. He was a Buddhist by faith, and had his capital at Peshāwar where the remains of some of his monuments have been exhumed. He erected numerous monuments in Kashmīr, and built the town of Kanishkapura, the modern village of Kānispōr,¹ about six miles from Bārāmūla. Under his patronage the third council of the Buddhist church was held, which carried on its deliberations in the Khandalvan Vihār, near Hārwan in Kashmīr, about 100 A.C., under the presidency of Nāgārjuna and drew up the Northern Canon or "Greater Vehicle of the Law."

*Vincent A. Smith presumes that it was Kanishka and not Kadphises II, whose armies fought against China.—Early History of India, 3rd Edition, 1914, page 253.

The Great Bodhisattva, Nāgārjuna, lived in his time at Hārwan,² higher up the Shālīmār. Nāgārjuna was a Buddhist alchemist of great fame. He was born in the land of Vidarbha (Berar)³ as the son of a wealthy Brāhman who had remained childless for many years. Astrologers were called in and they found that the child could only have a span of seven years. Before the end of the seventh year, his parents, in order to be spared the painful sight of the child's predicted death, sent him on a journey to other places till he arrived at Nālandā and met Āchārya Rāhula. At Nālandā he became a monk, and devoted himself to religious studies. He contradicted the doctrines of the Brāhmins and taught the monks at Nālandā. The Nāgas used to attend his sermons in the guise of young boys. On invitation from the Nāgas, he resided three months in their dwelling place. On account of his connexions with the Nāgas, he received the name of Nāgārjuna. One statement is that his mother gave birth to him under a tree called Arjuna. Hence Nāga and Arjuna combined became Nāgārjuna. In course of time, Nāgārjuna became the head of the whole Buddhist church. Most authorities agree that Nāgārjuna flourished in the first century of the Christian era. He is one of the celebrated teachers elevated to Bodhisattva-ship and is the alleged founder of the Mahāyāna system

1. Stein's English Translation of Kalhaṇa's Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Vol. I, Book First, page 30, footnote 168.

2. According to some Buddhist records, Menander, the Bactrian king of Northern India (155 B.C.), delighted in controversies with Nāgārjuna (Ancient India by R. C. Dutt, p. 119); but local historians are silent about Menander.

"Recent excavations have revealed one of the oldest monuments at Hārwan, containing the only remains of its kind in India. A temple and some tablets have been unearthed, which date the monument as belonging to the Kushāna period, when Kashmīr was closely connected with Central Asia. The remains are situated only a few furlongs below the water reservoir at Hārwan," Srīnagar.—Jammu and Kashmīr Annual Administration Report for 1940-41, published in 1942, page 9 m.

3. The Life of Nāgārjuna from Tibetan and Chinese Sources by M. Walleser, Probsthain & Co., London.

which he is said to have introduced into Tibet. He is represented as at once a poet, a philosopher, a physician and an author of great ability. Perhaps, different Nāgārjūnas have been mixed up in one.

Kanishka conquered Kāshghar, Yārqand and Khutan, then dependencies of China.

Huvishka, 123 A.C.

It is probable that Vasishka and Huvishka, who were the sons of Kanishka, acted in succession as viceroys, but it appears that Vasishka predeceased* his father who was succeeded in his whole empire by Huvishka in 123 A.C.

Huvishka founded Hushkapura, the modern Ushkārā, a small village near Vārāhamūla or the modern Bārāmūla. His rule lasted till about 140 A.C.

Vasudeva or Jushka, 140 A.C.

He was succeeded by Vasudeva, also called Jushka, who died in about 178 A.C., when Kushāna rule came to an end in Kashmīr. The dynasty, however, lasted in Kābul and the Punjāb till they were swept away by the Hun invasion in the 5th century A.C. The Kushāna chronology, it may be noted, is not yet quite definite.

Abhimanyu I.

Jushka was succeeded by Abhimanyu I in whose reign Buddhism received a check in Kashmīr.

(e) The Gonanda Dynasty.

Gonanda III.

Abhimanyu I, was followed by Gonanda III, the founder of the Gonanda dynasty.

Nara.

Gonanda III, revived Brāhmanism and a reaction against Buddhism began. King Nara, the sixth in the line, is said to have burnt down "thousands of vihāras (monasteries)." From this time onward, Buddhism in Kashmīr declined steadily.

(f) The White Huns.

Mihirakula, 528 A.C.

We may pass over the next four kings and come down to Mihirakula, the White Hun, who seized the throne of Kashmīr in 528 A.C. Under his father, Toramāna, the

*Vincent A. Smith, Early History of India, 3rd Edition, 1914, page 270.

Hun empire had been established in the latter half of the fifth century in Afghānistān and Western India.¹ Mihirakula succeeded in 510 A.C., his capital being Čākala in the Punjāb, which may be identified with Siālkot, according to Fleet, or with Sangala Hill in the Sheikhūpurā district or, according to Anspach, Janḍiālā in the Amritsar district of the Punjāb.² He was "a man of violent acts and resembling death," whose approach the people knew "by noticing the vultures, crows, and other birds which were flying ahead eager to feed on those who were to be slain." His revolting acts of cruelty became so abhorrent that the native princes formed a confederacy, and, under the leadership of Bālāditya of Magadha and Yaçovarman of Central India, inflicted a decisive defeat on him. Mihirakula fled to Kashmīr where he was kindly received by the king and placed in charge of a small territory. He repaid the king's kindness by seizing his throne and putting him to death. Then issuing from Kashmīr, Mihirakula attacked and conquered Gandhārā and drowned multitudes of people in the Indus. Kalhaṇa depicts him in the blackest colours of cruelty as being surrounded day and night by thousands of murdered human beings. Mihirakula delighted in acts of cruelty and people still point to a ridge (Hastīvanj—from hastī, elephant, and vanj, to go—the passage for elephants) on the Pīr Pāntsāl (Pīr Panjāl) range, near 'Alīābād Sarāi,³ where the king, to amuse himself, drove one hundred elephants over the precipice, enjoying their cries of agony. He favoured Brāhmanas, and hated Buddhism. He committed suicide about the middle of the fifth century, overpowered probably by the sense of his own misdeeds.

[The Pīr Panjāl Pass is 11,400 feet above sea level, and the neighbouring peaks are upwards of 16,000 feet high. Gulmarg is but one of the many mountain meadows found at different elevations on the northern slopes of the Pīr Panjāl. The Kausar-nāg—the largest mountain lake of Kashmīr 13,000 feet above sealevel, and over two miles long is on the Pīr Panjāl range. The lake is surrounded by some of the most picturesque of the Himālayan peaks. Three of these peaks each about

1. The White Huns or Ephthalites came originally from Eastern Turkistān.—Early History of India by V. A. Smith, 3rd Edition, 1914, pages 315-16.

2. Chakla (or modern Chaklāla, near Rāwalpindī) appears, perhaps, more probable on account of its geographical and phonetic similarity.

3. 'Alīābād Sarāi, about half a mile above Hastīvanj and 46 miles from Srinagar, is a halting place to the north of the Pīr Panjāl Pass. The sarāi which offers some accommodation to travellers, and stands in wild and dreary solitude was a Mughul hospice. During the wintry portion of the year, it is buried in snow and unvisited.

Buddhist Remains in old Hārvaṇ, near Srinagar.

15,500 feet high tower over the Kausar-nāg. G. T. Vigne, in his Travels, Vol. I, page 265, writes : " Panjāl is a Persian word, signifying a range of mountains. The Kashmīrians call it Pansal, which more properly signifies a station where water is provided for passengers." Reference to half a dozen standard dictionaries of the Persian language furnishes no clue to the meaning given to it by Vigne. Grierson's Dictionary of the Kashmīrī Language does not also give the meaning noted by Vigne. Stein says that the Pañcālā is the original of the modern Pāntsal. (Rāj., Vol. II, p. 396.)

Habīb Kaifwī of Jammu evokes patriotic sentiments in the Kashmīrī by his lines on the Pīr Panjāl :—

شفا پرورد تیرے چشموں کا پانی ہواؤں میں نویدِ زندگانی
وطن کی آبرو تیری بلندی سمجھے سونبی وطن نے پاسبانی
تری عظمت تری ہیئت جہاں میں ہماری سر بلندی کی نشانی
تری آغوش میں سوتے ہیں بادل ترے دامن میں ندی کی روانی
ترے دامن میں پھولوں کی قطارس بہت سی زرد اکثر ارغوانی

— حبیب "کیغوی" جوں - از "رہبر" - ۱۶ مئی ۱۹۳۳ء

The Pāḍhsāh-nāma has the following on the Pīr Panjāl :—

معاذ اللہ زراہِ پیہ پنچال کہ شلش دیدہ کم چرخِ کنہ سال
صبا درویش زراں می خرامد کہ نتواند بہ بالایش بر آمد
سراپا گشتہ حیرت چرخ والا کہ رہ ایں کوہ را چوں رفتہ بالا
دیں رہ مُرخ نتواند پریدن بہ مقراضِ پرایں رہ را بریدن
بود مشکل گزشتن زیں رہ تنگ دیں رہ رہر نقشیت بر تنگ
بے افتادہ چوں طول ال پیش کہ درہر کام دارد صد خطر پیش
گروہ ہے دست ازجاں بر نشانہ در آں رہ چوں گروہ بر تار ماندہ
ز قطع رہ بسر غلطیدہ یکسر چناں کہ رشتہ بگستہ گوہر

حاجی محمد جان قدسی

(از "پادشاہ نامہ عبد الحمید لاہوری" جلد ۱ صفحہ ۱۹ سال ہجرت)

It is said that, on clear days, the minarets of Lahore, 130 miles distant as the crow flies, can be seen from the top of the Pir Panjāl Pass—V. A. Smith's edition of Bernier's Travels, 1914, footnote on page 407.]

Kālidāsa.

It was during these troublous times of the Huns, it is believed, that Kālidāsa, one of the greatest poets of India, was born in Kashmīr. He flourished during the latter half of the 5th or the first half of the 6th century A.C. This date is assigned to Kālidāsa on the basis of his reference to the Huns in Kashmīr in the Raghuvamsha. It is pointed out that Kālidāsa left his home in Kashmīr during the unsettled days of its occupation by the Huns, and travelled throughout the length and breadth of the country, halting perhaps much longer at Ujjain than at other places.

[The following points, according to Pandit Lachhmidhar, raise a strong presumption in favour of the view that Kālidāsa was a native of Kashmīr :—

(1) His affectionate description of the rice-fields and the songs associated with the rice-fields.

(2) His description of a living saffron plant which is grown in Kashmīr and which no non-Kashmīrian writer is known to have described. The practice of painting the ladies' breasts with the saffron paste so frequently mentioned by Kālidāsa was also a real practice in ancient Kashmīr.

(3) His description of the Devadāru forests, lakes, tarns, glades, caves with lions, musk deer on the higher altitude of the mountains all point in the direction of Kashmīr as the home of Kālidāsa.

The following arguments give a strong indication that Kālidāsa was a Kashmīri by birth :—

(1) Kālidāsa refers to some sites of minor importance in Kashmīr which have till recently been considered as imaginary; but modern research has identified these sites with their ancient names. The sites are only of local importance and could not be known to one who was not in close touch with Kashmīr. They are in the Sind Valley.

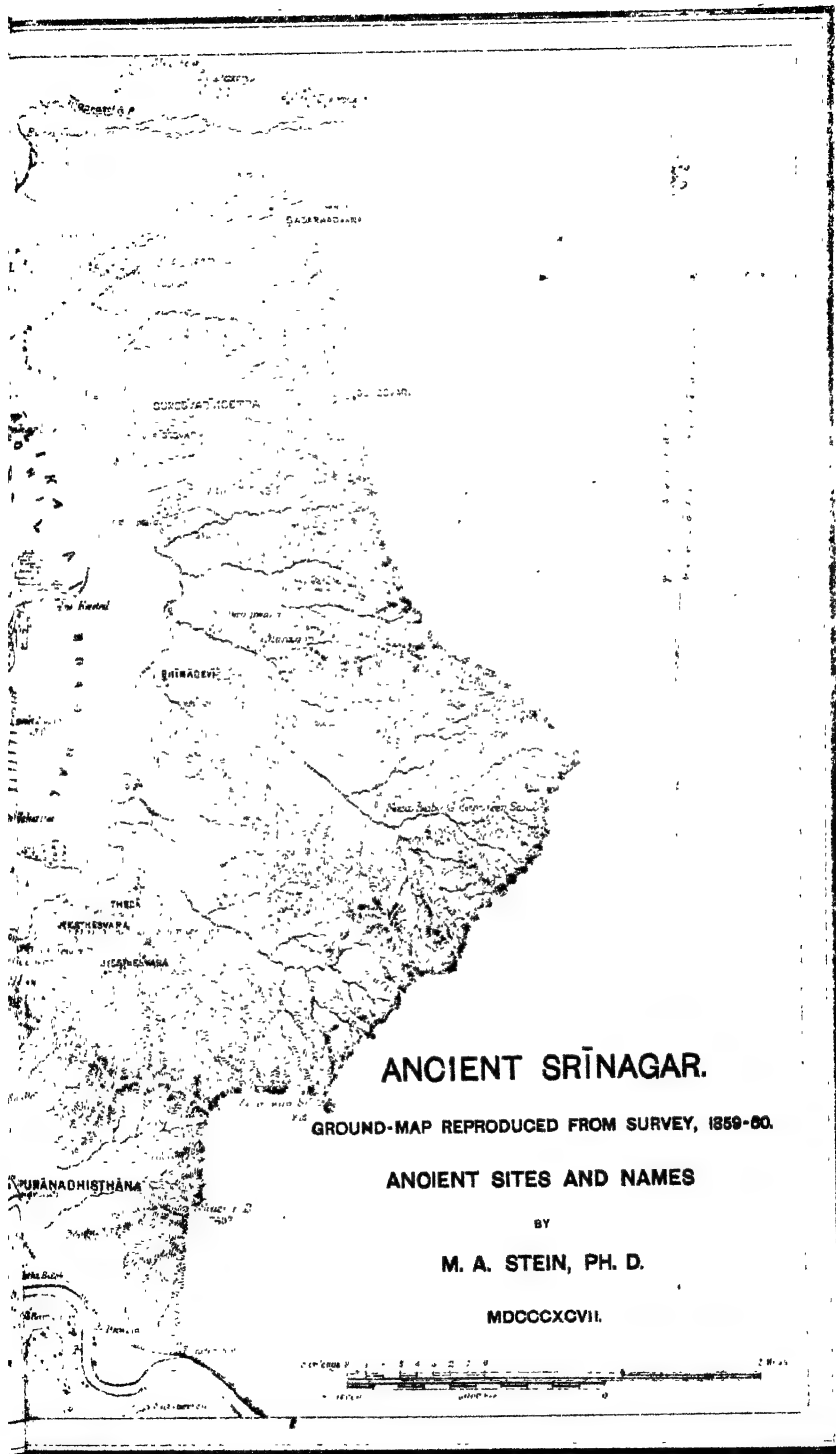

(2) Kālidāsa, in his description of Kashmīr in the Çakuntalā, refers to the lacustrine origin of Kashmīr, which is commonly known to Kashmīris. He shows his partiality for Kashmīr.

(3) Reference is made to certain Kashmīrian legends such as that of Nikumbha which are known only to Kashmīrian writers.

(4) The personal religion of Kālidāsa was the Kashmīri Çaivism based on the doctrine of the Pratyabhijñā philosophy unknown outside Kashmīr. It is a remarkable discovery, it is pointed out, that the drama of Çakuntalā is an allegory of the tenets of the Pratyabhijñā philosophy of Kashmīr. Recently a view has been expressed that there is no evidence in Çakuntalā that there ever existed anywhere Pratyabhijñā philosophy during the period that Kālidāsa lived, as this philosophy originated in

To face page 47 of Dr. Sufi's 'Kashir'.

Reproduced with the permission of the late Sir Aurel Stein for Dr. Sufi's 'Kashir'

Kashmīr in the first half of the 9th century A.C., * Somānanda being the originator of the system. There is, however, no doubt that this tendency of thought may have been developing before it was systematized by Somānanda.

(5) The argument of the Meghadūta points to Kashmīr as the home of Kālidāsa.—Mahamahopādhyāya Pandit Lachhmidhar, M.A., M.O.L., Shāstri, Head of the Department of Sanskrit, University of Delhi, in his University lectures during the month of March, 1925, on "The Birth-place of Kālidāsa." These lectures were printed in book form in 1926 by the University.]

Yudhishthira I.

The last of the Gonanda line, Yudhishthira I, was a worthless ruler, and was turned out by his own subjects who called in a foreign king, and subsequently Kashmīr went under the suzerainty of Vikramāditya Harsha of Ujjayinī (Ujjain).

Vikramāditya.

There is, however, no indisputable proof in the shape of inscriptions and coins, of the existence of Vikramāditya in the first century B.C. The era of which he is held to be the founder was not called by his name till the tenth century A.C.

Pravarasena II, 580 A.C.

On the death of King Harsha, about the third quarter of the sixth century, Kashmīr was conquered by Pravarasena II, a prince of Mālvā who ruled in 580 A.C. Pravarasena-Çreshthasena, alias Tunina II, who is said to have ruled for 30 years, from 88 to 58 B.C., is Pravarasena I. The present city of Srinagar called after him Pravarapura and subsequently Pāndrēthan, was founded by him. According to verse 354 of the third Tarāṅga of Kalhaṇa, this king had "the Great Bridge" constructed of boats for the first time in Kashmīr.

[Srinagar, the City Royal, is the ancient and present name of the city. During Muslim rule, it was called Kashmīr, or locally Kashīr, and Birunī accordingly notes that "the city of Kashmīr covers a space of four farsakhs." (Sachau, Vol. I, page 207). But when the Sikhs took Kashmīr in 1819 A.C., they restored the old name Srinagar, which was originally Shrīnagara or Shrīnagarī, and according to Kalhaṇa, founded by Açoka, on a site near the present city. The site of the present city was selected by Pravarasena II, who called it Pravarasēnapura shortened to Pravarapura. Nagara means the city and Shrī is the name of the goddess Lakshmi and may be taken to mean wealth, or beauty or sovereignty. Shrī here does not mean Sūrya or the sun, and it is a mistake to call Srīnagar the 'City of the Sun.'

* The Doctrine of Recognition (MS.) by Mr. R. K. Kaw, M.A.

Srīnagar has an area 4 miles in length and 2 miles in breadth. It is situated somewhat in the centre of the Valley of Kashmir, and extends along both banks of the Jhelum which is spanned by seven bridges. The river winds its way through the city with an average width of 80 yards. The greater part of the city lies on the right bank. It is strange to note that no two buildings are alike. The city is 5,250 feet above the sea level. In spite of this elevation, July and August are hot and somewhat humid. But the spring and autumn are very pleasant. The mean temperature is 35° in January and 80° in July. The annual rainfall seldom exceeds 27 inches.

The population of Srīnagar, according to the census of 1931, was 1,73,573 of which 1,38,764 are Muslims and 33,670 are Hindus, 870 Sikhs, 257 Christians, 5 Buddhists, 4 Zoroastrians and 3 Jains. The Census of 1941 gives the population of Srīnagar as 2,07,787, which means an increase of 34,214 or 19·71 per cent. during the last ten years. Srīnagar is the terminal of one of the Central Asian trade-routes. Like most ancient capitals, it has been built and re-built at different times and on different sites.

"The suburbs of Sreenuggur call up reminiscences of those of Constantinople with their turbaned tombs of departed Moslems—their green luxuriance of nature and squalid penury of art—but the fancied resemblance grows less and less as you approach the city. To enter it you pass no imperial walls or massive gateways, but little by little the houses huddle themselves closer together, and at last form a street, narrow and dirty and stony enough to induce a relapse into your dreamy memories of Stamboul, while here and there a high-featured face and stately form, in ample turban and flowing robe, stalks by and helps to keep up the delusion. But now a gap in the wall of houses on your right lets in a stream of warm light on the dark, foul footway and through it you see close by you, not the broad bosom of the breezy Bosphorus or the crowded waters of the Golden Horn, but a sluggish stream glittering in the sunlight and covered with boats of all sizes; some heavily laden barges are being slowly punted up stream, while others of lighter build glide past merrily, propelled by the rapid strokes of half a dozen paddles—it is a busy scene. And on the opposite side of the river, you see reproduced as in a mirror a facsimile of the bank you stand on—the same houses, the same landing-places, the same people—for it is the Jhelum that you look on; and on his right bank and on his left stand the crowded dwellings of the capital of Kashmir—Sreenuggur." (Col. Torrens' Travels, pp. 246-47.) But the modern visitor will find a great deal of difference between Istanbūl and Srīnagar now. Istanbūl has dwindled while Srīnagar has considerably expanded. Istanbūl is Europeanized. Srīnagar too has changed but is still essentially Asiatic.

Mayasūm is the island formed by the Tsunt-i-Kol canal. It was called, at one time, the European quarter, on account of the Residency, the hotel, the club, and the Post and Telegraph offices and some European shops and banks in Srinagar.]

Bālāditya.

This dynasty of the White Huns lasted for about half a century, the last of the line, Bālāditya, dying without male issue.

(g) The Kārkoṭa Dynasty.

Durlabhavardhana, 627—663 A.C.

The throne devolved upon Bālāditya's son-in-law, Durlabhavardhana, who was of humble origin stated to have been the son of a Nāga. His family was given to ophiolatory or serpent-worship which had been the prevailing religion of Kashmīr from time immemorial. [The Ancient Geography of India by Alexander Cunningham, p. 92.] He was the founder of the Nāga or Kārkoṭa dynasty.

[The word Kārkoṭa as an appellative indicate different plants; it also occurs as the name of a presumably un-Āryan tribe.² There is probably some connexion between the Nāga name 'Kārkoṭa' and the word Carkoṭa, which in the Atharva-Veda is used to indicate some kind of poisonous snake. In the lists of principal Nāgas found in epic literature, the Nāgarāja Kārkoṭa (ka) takes an honourable place. He is the procreator of this royal house. In the kingdom of Nepāl, Kārkoṭa takes a prominent position in popular worship and legend, and is considered to be foremost among the Nāgas of Nepāl. The country round Mathurā must once have been a great centre of Nāga worship. Bastar, the feudatory state in the south-east corner of the Central Provinces, is ruled by a Nāga dynasty. Most Gond chiefs in this same Province pretend to be descended from the Nāgavaṃṣa. A caste of the Kāyasthas of Bengāl derive their origin from a serpent king. The Nāga Hills is the name of a district in the Surma Valley of Assam. In further India, we meet with royal clans which are believed to descend from a Nāgī ancestress. The story of the Nāgī ancestress is widely spread in the Far East in China and Japan. Nāga is the name of the capital of the province of Camarines Sur, Luzon, Philippine Islands.

1. Like great royal families who trace their origin to the sun or the moon. The Mikado of Japan is a modern example.

2. Indian Serpent-Lore or the Nāgas in Hindu Legend and Art, by J. P. H. Vogel, Ph.D., Professor of Sanskrit and Indian Archaeology in the University of Leyden, Holland, late Superintendent, Archaeological Survey of India.—Arthur Probsthain, London, 1926, pp. 214-15.

The great importance of the Nāgas both in Buddhist and in Brāhmanical lore is reflected in plastic and pictorial art. Among the frescoes of the Ajanta there are several representations of Nāgas.

Regarding the origin and significance of Nāga worship, there prevails a very marked diversity of opinion. According to James Fergusson,¹ the Nāgas were not originally serpents but serpent-worshippers—an aboriginal race of the Turānian stock inhabiting Northern India, who were conquered by Āryans. Dr. C. F. Oldham² is of the opinion that the Nāgas claimed descent from the sun and had the hooded serpent for a totem. Takshaṣilā (Taxila), he says, was the chief city of the Nāga people, and Takshaka was one of their chiefs.

The Nāga somehow or other is mixed up with the cult of Shaivism. Shiva is imagined to have depended for his ornaments on the Nāgas (serpents). And it is claimed that South Indian Shaivism migrated to Northern India, leaving in the south its remnants in the Nāgaras, or Nāyars. The tribe of Nāgas had powerful kingdoms in different parts of India as testified to by the names of important cities called Nāgpur, in many parts of India. (The Origin of Shaivism, by K. R. Subramanian, M.A., University of Madras, 1929.)

Durlabhavardhana of Kashmīr is believed to have been really the offspring of the Nāga Kārkoṭa mentioned in the opening paragraph.]

With the establishment of the Kārkoṭa dynasty, we reach the firm ground of comparatively authentic history. Durlabhavardhana reigned from 627 to 663 A.C. The visit of the Chinese pilgrim Yüan Chwāng (Hiuen Tsiang)³ to Kashmīr (631-633 A.C.) occurred during the time of this king who accorded a hospitable reception to the pilgrim. Hiuen Tsiang “resided in the Valley as an honoured guest for fully two years. The two full years represent a longer halt than any which the pious traveller allowed himself during his sixteen years’ wanderings through the whole of India and Central Asia. The records of this great Chinese pilgrim contain by far the fullest and most accurate description of Kashmīr that has come down to us from a foreign pen during the period.”⁴ Hhüsen Kwān’s description of the people of Kashmīr is :—“Light and frivolous, and of a weak, pusillanimous disposition. The people are handsome in appearance, but they are given to cunning. They love learning and are well-instructed.”

1. Tree and Serpent Worship, 1873.

2. The Sun and the Serpent, 1905.

3. This name has more than half a dozen forms.

4. The Ancient Geography of Kashmīr by Dr. Stein, page 14.

Recent excavations at Tapar, 22 miles from Srinagar, or 4 miles below Patan, on the Srinagar-Baramulla road.
Pratapūra built by Pratāpāditya II, 663—713 A.C., the father of Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa.

Tapar is ancient

Kashmīr is one of the most important and most famous lands in the history of the spread and development of Buddhism.* In the literature of this religion we find frequent reference to the capital, and the country generally, in terms of praise and admiration. But Hsüan Chwang found that "this kingdom is not much given to faith, and the temples of the heretics are their sole thought."

The country was prosperous and peaceful. The political power of Kashmīr extended to all the adjacent territories on the west and south including Rājapurī (Rajaurī), Parnotsa (Pūnch), Bhimbar, Uraçā (Hazāra), Taxila (Takkasīlā or Takshaçilā) and Siṃhapura, which seems to have included the Salt Range.

Durlabhaka, 663—713 A.C.

Durlabhavardhana's son and successor was Durlabhaka or Pratāpāditya II. En passant Pratāpāditya I (169—137 B.C.) was a relative of King Vikramāditya and is said to have been brought from abroad by discontented ministers of Kashmīr. Durlabhaka ruled for fifty years from 663 to 713 A.C. This was the time of Chinese aggression towards the west, during which Turkistān and Western Tibet were conquered and annexed to the 'Celestial' empire.

[Excavations in September, 1942, were undertaken and are continued by the Archaeological Department of Jammu and Kashmīr State at Tāpar, ancient Pratāpapura, built by Pratāpāditya II. The village Tāpar is situated at a distance of 22 miles from Srinagar, or 4 miles below Paṭan. The ruins have been discovered of the base of a temple, its gateway, its courtyard and the plinth of the enclosure wall. The material used is blocks of stone of such dimensions as are generally found in the case of other temples of the period. The temple is sacred to Viṣṇu. From the perusal of fragments of the Sanskrit inscription found engraved in the Çaradā script on some stones built perhaps in the cornice course of the gateway, it is evident that the construction is somehow connected with a certain Brāhman, son of Gaggha, and the architect is named Lakshmaṇa. The date is ascertainable from the reference given in the inscription to the reign of Māndadeva (Paramāndadeva) or Pārmānuḍeva (son of Jayasīṃha) of later chronicles.

"The temple as well as the outer enclosure is square in plan both externally and internally. It resembles all other temples of Kashmīr in point of massiveness of the stone material, simplicity of style and finish of the dressing." Kalhaṇa does not say anything about the construction of a temple by Pratāpāditya, when describing the foundation of the town Pratāpapura.—Note by Pandit Madhusūdan Kaul, Supdt., Archaeology, Srinagar].

Yuan-Chwang's Travels in India* (629-645 A.C.) by Thomas Watters, edited by Rhys Davids and S. W. Bushel—Royal Asiatic Society, London, 1904, page 264.

Chandrāpīḍa, 713 –721 A.C.

Durlabhaka's son, Chandrāpīḍa, who came to the throne in 713 A.C., sent an embassy to the emperor of China, from whom he received the investiture of kingship, becoming a feudatory of the emperor.

Tārāpīḍa, 721—725 A.C.

He was succeeded in 721 A.C., by his younger brother, Tārāpīḍa, who ended his days in 725 A.C., after a cruel rule of 4 years.

Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, 725—753 A.C.

Then came the glorious rule of Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, the youngest son of Prātāpāditya. He is the hero of vast conquests. Kalhaṇa shows him to be the universal monarch, moving round the earth like the sun. He certainly subjugated parts of the Punjāb and defeated and dethroned Yaçovarman of Kānyakubja (Qannauj)¹ in 740 A.C. He also brought the well-known poet Bhavabhūti, who hailed from Vidarbha (Berār) to his court.² Before this, he had led a successful expedition against the Bhauṭṭas of Baltistān, whom he defeated on the banks of the Indus. In 733 A.C., he sent an embassy to the Chinese emperor, Hūsan-tsuang (713-755 A.C.), to report his victories over the Tibetans, and also to solicit the establishment of a camp of Chinese troops by the banks of the Volur (Wular) Lake. Muktāpīḍa also applied to the Chinese emperor for aid against the Arabs³ who were advancing from their base in Sind and Multān and of whom we hear for the first time in connexion with the history of Kashmīr. [733 of the Christian era is 115 of the Hijra.] But the "Divine Khān" contented himself with merely ordering a sumptuous entertainment for the ambassador and with investing Muktāpīḍa with the title of king. The chiefs of Jullundur, Kāngrā and Pūnch were among Muktāpīḍa's feudatories. He is the most conspicuous figure in Kashmīr history. He raised his country to a pitch of glory it had never reached before. The ruins of the temple of Mārtaṇḍa, about 5 miles from Anantnāg or Islāmābād, and of his city, Parihāsapura, fourteen miles from Srīnagar, bear eloquent testimony to his greatness.

1. Early History of India by V. A. Smith, 3rd Edition, 1914, p. 372.

2. Ancient India by R. C. Dutt, pages 149-150.

3. The Ancient Geography of India by Major-General Alexander Cunningham, Trübner & Co., London, 1871, page 90.

Martanda, the Temple of the Sun, situated 5 miles distant from Anantnāg or Islāmābād, is the grandest and most impressive and earliest of the ruins of Kashmir, originally built during the period of 370 to 500 A.C. in honour of Viṣṇu-Sūrya, added to by more than one ruler, principally Lalitāditya-Muklapīḍa who ruled in the 8th century A.C. Maṭan is the other form of Mārtanda.

The celebrated temple of Mārtaṇḍa possesses far more imposing dimensions than any other existing temple, being 63 feet long. The pillared quadrangle round the temple is 220 feet by 142 feet. The stone carving is very fine indeed. G. T. Vigne, the traveller, says: "As an isolated ruin this deserves on account of its solitary and massive grandeur to be ranked, not only as the first ruin of the kind in Kashmīr but as one of the noblest amongst the architectural relics of antiquity that are to be seen in any country." Another view* is that there is something of the rigidity and strength of the Egyptian temple and something of the grace of Greece. Though Hindu, it differs from the usual Hindu types, and is known distinctively as Kashmīrian and owes much to the influence of Gandhāra. It is, however, decidedly Hindu and not either Buddhist or Jain, while, the sculptures show, according to Marshall, a close connexion with the typical Hindu work of the late Gupta period. This great temple of the sun at Mārtaṇḍa became the model for all subsequent Brāhmanical temples in Kashmīr.

Extensive drainage works were also carried out under Muktāpīḍa's orders, and vast areas were reclaimed and made fit for cultivation. Muktāpīḍa raised the number of court offices from 18—under Jalauka—to 23, the five new offices being those of High Chamberlain, Minister of Foreign Affairs, Master of the Horse, Keeper of the Treasury, and Chief Executive Officer. His end is enveloped in mystery. He died probably during an expedition towards the north.

When engaged in his last expedition, Muktāpīḍa sent out a sort of instrument of instruction on the art of governance. He warned his Kashmīri subjects against internal dissension, and against neglecting the forts in respect of repair and provisions. Dwellers in mountains, he said, should be occasionally punished to prevent their becoming strong and troublesome. "Every care should be taken that there should not be left with the villagers more food supply than required for one year's consumption, nor more oxen than were wanted for the tillage of their fields. Because if they should keep more wealth, they would become in a single year very formidable Dāmaras or feudal lords and strong enough to neglect the commands of the king." The cultivator's style of living must be lower than that of the city people. Offices should not be held by family cliques, and troops should not be raised from a single district.¹ Lalitāditya's rule ended in 753 A.C., and was followed by four short reigns.

* Kashmīr by Sir Francis Younghusband, 1917, page 115.

Vajrāditya.

The history of Kashmīr mentions Muslims a second time when Kalhaṇa² represents the younger son and the second successor of Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, viz., Vajrāditya—also known by the name of Bappiyaka—as selling many men to the Mlechhas or Muslims and introducing into the country practices which befitted Mlechhas or Muslims.

[The term Ḍāmara is one of common occurrence in Kalhaṇa's Chronicle, and the persons whom it designated play a prominent part in the latter portions of the narrative, says Stein.³ The word Ḍāmara, in the sense in which it is used in the Rājatarāṅgiṇī and the later Chronicles has not yet been traced outside Kashmīr. In the Hindu period of the history of Kashmīr, Ḍāmara means the well-to-do landed gentry or feudal barons. Ranjīt S. Pandit⁴ adds: The barons or the rustic aristocracy of Kashmīr were not equal to the Rājputras in the social scale, yet Kalhaṇa mentions instances of inter-marriage between them and between the Ḍāmaras and the ruling family of Kashmīr. Any one could become a Ḍāmara who apparently began as a prosperous cultivator. He could wax strong in course of time as a powerful feudal baron capable of being "a thorn in the side of the king." Kalhaṇa also uses the term Lavanya to designate them. Harsha's efforts to suppress the Ḍāmaras ended in his own rule and life. In present-day Kashmīr, Ḍārs claim their descent from the Ḍāmaras.]

Jayāpīḍa, 751—782 A.C.

Here follows the 31 years' powerful rule of Jayāpīḍa, a grandson of Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, who came to the throne in 751 A.C. He went on a conquering expedition to the valley of the Ganges where he defeated the king of Qannauj. He had, however, to return soon as his throne had been usurped in his absence by his brother-in-law. The king was a liberal patron of learning, and many poets and scholars flocked to his court. He founded the town of Jayapura-Andarkōṭh near modern Sumbal. Towards the

1. Stein's English Translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Book IV, verses 345-52, Volume I, page 154.

2. Ibid., Book IV, verse 397, page 158.

3. Ibid., Volume II, pages 304-8.

4. R. S. Pandit's Rājatarāṅgiṇī, page 127, footnote No. 348.

end of his reign, he became a cruel and rapacious tyrant. The reason for this is not given by Stein, but Pandit Birbal Kāchru's account¹ of the Rānī's love for a Brāhman youth and the meeting and ultimate immolation for fear of sin in the absence of her lord, and of Jayāpīḍa's rage which impelled him to avenge his Rānī's tragedy by killing Brāhman, fits in with the gap unexplained by Sir Aurel. Jayāpīḍa was followed, in 795 A.C., by an indolent and extravagant prince who, in a twelve years' rule, squandered away the riches amassed by his father.

Avantivarman, 855—883 A.C.

The history of the next half century is a record of the installation and dethronement of puppet kings, and of the jealousies and intrigues of rival factions at the court till we come to the reign of Avantivarman (855-883 A.C.) the founder of the Utpala dynasty. During the concluding years of the Kārkoṭa dynasty, the country towards the south of the Panjāl range had thrown off its allegiance to the Kashmīr throne, and small independent principalities had sprung up at Rajauri and other places. The kingdom of Kashmīr was restricted to its natural boundaries, extending only to four marches below Bārāmūla. Avantivarman wisely refrained from undertaking foreign conquest, and bestowed his whole attention on the internal consolidation and development of the country which had greatly suffered—economically and politically—from the disorders of the preceding reigns, from the feuds of powerful barons and the rapacious administration of the Kāyasthas or clerks.

The country had been liable to heavy floods and famines. The Kashmīr Valley was in a water-logged condition. Cultivation was poor. Avantivarman's able engineer, Suyya, undertook to drain the Valley. He saw, as have modern engineers in our own day, that floods in the Valley were due to the fact that the passage of the Jhelum through the Bārāmūla gorge had been blocked by silt and boulders brought down into it from a neighbouring nullah or stream.² This obstruction was removed by Suyya, and the result was a large increase of land available for cultivation and increased protection against floods. He then carried out other extensive drainage and irrigation works under the orders of the king ; and it is no wonder that the native historian exults over the economic prosperity of the land which was the direct result of these engineering schemes. The modern village Sopōr (old Suyyapura)¹ commemorates the name of this great engineer. It was founded by him at the point where the Jhelum leaves the Wular Lake. The memory of the king is also preserved to this day in the village of Avantipura (Vāntipōr)² which lies one march above Srīnagar. The ruins of the ancient temples at Avantipura are, according to Stein, among the most imposing monuments of ancient Kashmīrī architecture and sufficiently testify to the resources of the builder. Of the two temples dedicated to Vishṇu and Śiva respectively—Avanti Swāmin and Avantiçvara—the first was built before his accession and the second subsequently by Avanti-varman.

1. The Mukhtasar-ut-Tawārīkh by Pandit Birbal Kāchru, written in the time of Colonel Mehān Singh, a Sikh Governor of Kashmīr, MS. folios 42-44.

2. The Pulse of Asia by E. Huntington, pages 39-40.

The medieval development of Brahmanical architecture³ in Kashmīr is represented by two golden periods, or, to be more precise, rose to its greatest heights under two prominent building rulers, Lalitāditya who brought the style into being in the middle of the eighth century and Avanti-varman under whom it attained its most refined form in the latter half of the ninth century.

The reign of Avanti-varman also witnessed a remarkable revival of Sanskrit learning in Kashmīr. Çivasvāmin was one of the gems of Avanti-varman's court. Some of the others were : (i) Ratnākara, who wrote the Haraviṇaya in fifty cantos and lived under two kings, viz., Jayāpīḍa and Avanti-varman ; (ii) Ānandavardhana, the author of Dhvanyāloka (iii) Kallāṭa, the great pupil of Vasugupta, the originator of the Spandaçāstra division of Kashmīr. Çiva-

1. Sōpur (Sopōr) had a population of 10,982 in 1931, 11,770 in 1941. Zain-ul-Ābidīn here built a bridge over the Jhelum in 1460 A.C. Çivara refers to the building of a new royal residence at Suyyapura by Sultān Hasan Shāh. The present town which stands on both banks of the river, is one day's journey by boat from Srīnagar. It is a great centre of trade, but not a Municipality, having a Town Area Committee only.

2. Avantipur is now a village situated at a distance of 18 miles from Srīnagar. It has the ruins of several temples two of which are conspicuous and have been described in detail by Rāi Bahādur Rām Chandra Kāk, B.A., in his Ancient Monuments of Kashmīr, 1933. The population in 1941 was 1,487.

3. Percy Brown, Indian Architecture, Tārāporevāla, Bombay, 1942, page 180.

The ruins of the Temple at Vantpōr or Avantiṭpura on the Srinagar-Islāmābād road.

King Caṅkaravarman's (883—902 A.C.) minister, Ratnavardhana, built this miniature temple at Paṭan on the Srinagar-Bāramūla road.

svāmin is credited with the authorship of seven *Mahākāvya*s, several dramas, prose works and other writings. But the Kapphinābhyudaya and a few stray verses make up all that is left to the student to read and admire. Ćivasvāmin's work "assumes an importance in the history of Sanskrit literature in general and the literary history of Kashmīr in particular, inasmuch as it helps to show the development of Kāvya in Kashmīr and the influence of Ratnākara on his contemporaries." Its theme is neither Paurāṇic, nor epic, nor historical, but it deals with the Buddhistic legend of King Kapphina, one of the twelve great disciples of the Buddha. The Kapphinābhyudaya, which remained in obscurity for the last millennium or so, is now made available by the University of the Panjāb; it has been, for the first time, critically edited by Pandit Gaurī Shankar.*

Çamkaravarman, 883—902 A.C.

Avantivarman's son and successor, Çamkaravarman (883-902 A.C.), scandalized his subjects by introducing an ingenious scheme of fiscal oppression. He plundered the treasures of temples and was guilty of unlimited and ruthless extortion. To perpetuate his memory, he built the town of Çamkarapura, the present Paṭan (now having a population of 3,032) and its temples, from the materials he had obtained by the plunder of the town and temples of Parihāsapura. But the town did not flourish. The ruins of two temples still stand today at Paṭan, 17 miles from Srinagar, on the Bārāmūla road. One was erected by the king and the other by his queen, Sugandhā. Çamkaravarman invaded the territories of Rajaurī, Gujrāt, Kāngra, and Hazāra, but without any permanent effect, as his kingdom, after all, remained restricted within its natural boundaries. He died during his expedition to Hazāra.

"From this reign onward, the record is one long succession of struggles between the rulers and usurping uncles, cousins, brothers, ministers, nobles and soldiers." During the century following 902 A.C., the rulership of the kingdom changed hands as many as eighteen times. One claimant dethroned another several times like Pārtha and Chakravarman. Chakravarman was assassinated in the chamber of a Domba girl, and such was the degradation of court morality that the murderers were freely urged on by the king's own wives to crush his knees with a large stone as he lay dying in the embrace of the Domba girl (937 A.C.).¹

*Ćivasvāmin's Kapphinābhyudaya or Exaltation of King Kapphina by Pandit Gaurī Shankar, M.A., B. Litt. (Oxon.), Lecturer, Government College, Lahore, 1937.

Yaçaskara, 939—948 A.C.

The country was harrassed by the oppressions of the nobles and ministers, and save for a short respite that the country enjoyed under Yaçaskara's mild rule of nine years (939-948), utter confusion and anarchy prevailed. Two Kings then come and go in two years.

(i) The First Lohara Dynasty.

Kshemagupta, 950—958 A.C.

Kshemagupta's rule lasted from 950 to 958 A.C. He married Diddā who belonged, on her mother's side, to the Çāhis of Udabhāṇḍa (Ohind).

Abhimanyu II, 958—972 A.C.

Queen Diddā (980—1003 A.C.) was a woman of unscrupulous but forceful character. She misgoverned the unhappy country for half a century. She was Queen Consort from 950 to 958. She was Regent from 959 to 980 for Abhimanyu, the infant son of Kshemagupta. Abhimanyu's reign is shown as from 958 A.C. to 972 A.C., during which time² a terrible conflagration destroyed a great many buildings from the market-place to the shrine of Viṣṇu.

Diddā, 980—1003 A.C.

Diddā ultimately reigned as sovereign for 23 years. She ruthlessly put down all rival parties executing captured rebels and exterminating their families. The result was that the throne passed without opposition to Samgrāmarāja (1003-28), a nephew of Diddā, whom she had nominated in her own lifetime and who became the founder of the Lohara dynasty.³ He was, however, a weak ruler.

1. Outline of Ancient Indian History and Civilization by Dr. R. C. Majumdar, 1927, pages 438-39.

2. Rājataranginī, verses 190-91, Book VI, Stein's Volume I, pages 251-52.

3. Modern Loharin is a valley in Pūnch. Queen Diddā was on her mother's side a granddaughter of King Bhīma Çāhi of Udabhāṇḍa, who is mentioned in al-Bīrūnī's list of the Hindu Çāhiyas of Kābul. The Çāhi kingdom was destroyed by Mahmūd of Ghazna—Stein's Introduction to his English Translation of Rājataranginī, Vol. I, p. 104.

This temple of Meruvardhanasvamin at Pandrethan, dedicated to Vishnu, was built by Meruvardhana, the prime minister of King Partha (906—921 A.C.). The village Pandrethan lies 3½ miles to the south-east of Srinagar on the road to Islamābād or Anantnāg. The name Pandrethan is derived from the appellation Puranadhiṣṭhana which means "The Old Capital," and so it was at one time in the history of Kashmir.

Sultān Mahmūd's invasion.

The Rājā's reign is noticeable only for an invasion of Kashmīr by Hammīra (Kalhaṇa's name for Sultān Mahmūd of Ghazna, apparently, an adaptation of the title of Amīr-ul-Mumīnīn) in 1015. The Kashmīrī troops were defeated by the invader, but Hammīra had to retire owing to inclement weather and the inaccessibility of the mountain barriers. Though Mahmūd never entered Kashmīr, perhaps Abu'l Hasan 'Alī Farrukhī (d. 429 A.H.=1037 A.C.) his contemporary, who accompanied him in his expeditions to Qannauj, Somanātha and probably to Kashmīr, gives expression to Mahmūd's desire disappointed:

ما را ره کشمیر همی آرزو آید ما ز آرزوے خویش نتایم یک موهے
گاه است که یکبارہ بہ کشمیر خرامیم از دستِ بآن پہتہ گنیم از سربتِ مگو

To Amīr Muhammad, Mahmūd's son, and the twin brother of Mas'ūd, Farrukhī says:

باش تا با پدرِ خویش بکشمیر شوی لشکرِ ساختهٔ خویش بکشمیر بری

Harirāja, 1028 A.C.; Ananta, 1028—1063 A.C.; Kalaça, 1063—1089 A.C.

Samgrāmarāja was succeeded by Harirāja who, after a reign of 22 days, was succeeded by Ananta. A rebellion of the Dāmaras, or feudal lords, was bravely put down by the king. He scored a victory over the Rājā of Chamba, but his expedition against the hill state of Hazāra proved an ignominious failure. He was personally weak; and much of his success in government was due to his pious and vigorous queen, Sūryamatī. She wanted the government of the country to be in stronger hands. So, on her advice, Ananta abdicated in favour of his son Kalaça. But Kalaça (1063-1089) was given to the company of depraved and dissolute associates. Although the people suffered much from his cruelty, he was able to make his power felt by the surrounding states from Hazāra to Chamba. His successor enjoyed the regal state only for 22 days, and was succeeded by Harsha (1089—1101).

Abhinavagupta, the Çaiva Philosopher.

The great Abhinavagupta, the Kashmīr Çaiva philosopher and literary critic, was born between 950 and 960 A.C. in a Brāhman family that had migrated from Qannauj to Kashmīr during the reign of King Lalitāditya. Abhinavagupta was a voluminous writer on several subjects—Dramaturgy, Rhetoric, Philosophy and the Philosophy of Poetry. His contribution to Āiava philosophy is indeed very great both in volume and importance. Dr. Kānti Chandra Pāndey¹ says that, according to the tradition current in certain old Pandit families and some old Muslim houses, Abhinavagupta walked with twelve hundred disciples into the Bhairava cave, about five miles from Māgām, midway between Srinagar and Gulmarg, and was never seen again.

[Note.—Dr. V. Raghavan details A.'s works in the Journal of the Oriental Research, Madras, October—December, 1940].

Kshemendra.

Kshemendra,² the ornament of the Sanskrit poets of Kashmīr, was born on the Dal in the locality where the Nishāt Bāgh now stands, in the days of Ananta. Kshemendra's father was Prakāçendra, a rich, charitably disposed and learned Brāhman. The exact date of Kshemendra's birth is not known, but his literary career runs from 1037 to 1066 A.C. He was one of the three sons of his father. Kshemendra studied under several teachers, but the most noted was Gaṅgaka. Kshemendra's studies were wide extending to Hindu law, Sanskrit grammar, Āyurveda, politics, music and painting. He underwent a course of manual training, too, and knew carpentry and smithy as well, by the time he was 25 years of age. Then Kshemendra married and had a son called Somendra. Ananta engaged him to teach his son Kalaça.

Kshemendra was noted for his learning and wealth, his sagacity and generosity in maintaining boarding schools and for his humility. He enjoyed life, too. His book Darpadalana (Pride has a fall) Desha Upadesha (Advice about the country for foreign students) are well known. He is reputed to be the author of many books, of which thirty-four believed to be obtainable have mostly been printed at the Nirṇayasāgara Press, Bombay. Kalhaṇa has criticized his Nṛpāvali for his classical error. He also charges him with "consistent carelessness."³ Keith has discussed Kshemendra's Brhatkathāmañjarī and other works at some length.

1. Author of a Ph.D. dissertation on Abhinavagupta at the University of Lucknow in 1935, page 18.

2. The Hamdard, Srinagar, 19th, 26th October, and 2nd November, 1941—Pandit Kavirāja's contribution.

3. The Dynastic Chronicles of Kashmir, Dr. U. N. Ghoshal, The Indian Historical Quarterly, September 1942, page 198.

Bilhaña.

Bilhaña,¹ a great poet, senior to Kalhaña in point of age, was born in Khunamūsh or Khunamuh, 6 miles from Śrīnagar. His father was Jyeshthā Kalasha, a learned Brāhman noted specially for his studies in Sanskrit grammar. Bilhaña was the third son of Jyeshthā. On completing his education and finding no scope for his talents, on account of the oppressive rule of Kalaça, Bilhaña, at the age of 16, is stated to have left Kashmīr by way of Pūnch and entered the Punjāb, visited Lāhore and Jullundur. Then he moved to Mathurā, Qannauj, and halted at Kāshī, where his fame as a grammarian attracted notice. He also appears to have been to Chhattarakoṭa, Prayāg, Aṇhilvād and Nāsik. At Kal-yāña, in the Deccan, there seems to have been a little romance² with the Rājā's daughter whom Bilhaña had been engaged to teach. A Kashmīrī Pandit and, as such, no doubt, a handsome youth, accomplished, scholarly, he could not fail to win the heart of the princess, and the assent of the Rājā, and thus Bilhaña's marriage took place. Ultimately Bilhaña succeeded to the gaddi. But Keith is silent on this romance.

Bilhaña is the author of (1) Vikramāṅkadevacharita. (2) Karna-Sundari Mālā (3) Chaurapanchāsikā. General Cunningham traced the first and Dr. Bühler the second of these works.

When Bilhaña revived his desire to return to Kashmīr, Harsha deposed Kalaça. Tradition has it that he returned to his village Khunamūsh and died there at the age of 80. But there is no effective evidence to substantiate this claim.

Bilhaña is not much good at history. He is a poet whose language is simple and clear. He gives a beautiful glimpse of the Śrīnagar of his days in the çlokās of the 8th chapter of his Vikramāṅkadevacharita on the adventures of Vikramā.

Harsha, 1089—1101 A.C.

In person, Harsha was of powerful frame, great personal beauty, courageous and fond of display. He was well-versed in various sciences and a lover of music and art. But his mind was rather demented and his character was a jumble of contrasts. "Cruelty and kind-heartedness,

1. The Hamdard, Śrīnagar, 14th and 21st September, 1941. Also Keith's History of Sanskrit Literature, 1928, pages 153—158.

2. The theme has been treated by Sir Edwin Arnold in his Chaurapanchasika and retold by Professor P. Seshadri in his narrative poem, of about 800 lines, entitled Bilhaña.

liberality and greed, violent self-will and reckless supineness, cunning and want of thought—these and other apparently irreconcilable features in turn display themselves in Harsha's chequered life."¹ His early rule, however, was characterized by prudence, and his munificence towards men of learning attracted many scholars from other countries. From Kalhana's account it appears that Harsha supported Turushka (Muslim) captains of hundreds with money, or in the words of Sir Aurel Stein,² Harsha had "Muhammadan troop leaders" in his service. Harsha's elaborate fashions in dress and ornaments and his multifarious extravagances, however, soon involved him heavily in debt, to rescue himself from which he took to the spoliation of temples.³ He robbed them of their treasures. But he did not stop there. His tendencies led him on to the confiscation of cult images in order to possess himself of the valuable metal of which they were made. He was further reduced to the necessity of levying new and oppressive imposts. Even night-soil became the object of taxation. Harsha abandoned himself more and more to excesses and follies of all kinds. The country was visited by many calamities. Plague reduced the population, robber bands infested the roads, and floods occurred which brought famine and universal distress. But the fiscal exactions of the king continued unabated. The result was that his armies were humiliated abroad, and he was surrounded by conspiracies at home. When Harsha's nephews, Uchala and Sussala, raised the standard of revolt, all flocked to it. The palace was given to flames. The queens were burnt to death, the heir-apparent was killed. The king was hunted down and mercilessly slain in 1101. And his body, "naked like that of a pauper," was cremated by a compassionate wood-dealer.

(j) The Second Lohara Dynasty.

Uchala, 1101—1111 A.C.

Uchala, Harsha's eldest nephew, succeeded him. He broke down the power of the Dāmaras or feudal lords by turning one against the other, and finally crushed them one by one. There was again a conspiracy against the king, and he was killed in 1111.

1. Stein's English Translation of the Rājataranginī, Vol. I, Introduction, page 112.

2. Ibid., verse 1149, Book VII, and footnote No. 1149, Volume I, page 357.

3 Ibid., Vol. I, Introduction, page 113.

Two Centuries of Misrule.

The history of the two succeeding centuries is a sordid record of short reigns, murders, suicides, plots, conspiracies, rebellions, oppressions and fiscal exactions. To quote Sir Francis Younghusband, "we may accept, then, as authentic that the normal state of Kashmīr for many centuries, except in the intervals when a strong, firm ruler came to the front, was a state of perpetual intrigue and assassination, of struggles with brothers, cousins, uncles, before a chief even came to the throne; of fights for power with ministers, with the military, with the 'nobles' when he was on it; of constant fear of poisoning and assassination; of wearying, petty internecine 'wars,' of general discomfort, uncertainty and unrest." Ucchala's successor reigned only for a night, and his half-brother for four months.

Sussala, 1112–20 A.C. Restoration, 1121–28 A.C.

The rule of his brother, Sussala (1112-20), was a succession of internal troubles caused by rebellious feudal lords, the Dāmaras. In 1120, he had to flee to Pūnch in the face of a rebellion. He was, however, restored to the throne and power by pretenders and nobles in 1121, and reigned till he was murdered in 1128. The king tried hard to break the power of the Dāmaras by cunning diplomacy but without much effect.

Jayasimha, 1128–1155 A.C.

Jayasimha, his eldest son, succeeded Sussala. Jayasimha reigned from 1128 to 1155. In this reign we read of Sanjapāla, the Senāpati (Commander-in-chief), "going into camp with Yavanas (Muslims)" [Stein, Vol. 2, p. 175] who have already been referred to in Harsha's reign as "captains of hundreds."

Mammaṭa and other Poets of the Period.

Mammaṭa and his two brothers occupy a high position in the literary firmament of Kashmīr during the beginning of the 12th century A.C. Mammaṭa, the second son of the scholar Jaiyāta Bhaṭṭa, hails from Gālandar, near Pāmpar noted for saffron. Jaiyāta is the elder and Uvvaṭa the younger brother of Mammaṭa. Although all the three were noted littérateurs, Mammaṭa was the most distinguished of all. His book Kāvya-Prakāṣa on prosody is often set for the higher examinations of the Sanskrit language. Eighty-seven commentaries are known to have been written on the Kāvya-Prakāṣa of which 25 are available. Mammāṭa is supposed to be the maternal uncle of Harsha, the great poet-king of Kannauj. The Ṣabda-Vyāpāra-Vichāra in which the usage of words has been discussed is another well-known book of Mammāṭa. Māmālladevī was the mother of Harsha. Thus Harsha naturally visited Kashmīr for contact with Sanskrit scholars of Srinagar.

Maṅkha.

Maṅkha* was another poet of this age. He was the fourth son of his father, Veshovrata, the son of Pandit Mammāṭa. Maṅkha was a pupil of Ruyyaka, the celebrated author of Alaṅkārasarvasva. Maṅkha rose to the post of Director of Dharmārtha and Foreign Minister. Rājā Sussala looked upon him as a philosopher. Maṅkha wrote his first book Ṣṛīkaṇṭhacharita when 25 years of age, probably in 1039 A.C. It consists of fourteen chapters, and has 2,500 couplets. In Jayasimha's time Maṅkha was the head of a college. Like Mullā Tāhir Ghānī he hated flattering others and had quite an independent mind.

Kalhaṇa

Kalhaṇa Pandit, the author of the celebrated saga of Kashmīr called the Rājataranginī was the contemporary of Rājā Jayasimha. This was the time when, in England, Matilda was a fugitive, and the barons were at war with one another. Kalhaṇa's metrical history of the rājās of Kashmīr, written in Ṣaka 1070 or 1148-49 A.C. or 543-44 A.H., is a well-known work in the Sanskrit language. Kalhaṇa was the son of Chanpaka, the minister of King Harsha of Kashmīr (1079—1101 A.C.). Kalhaṇa claimed to be a poet and historian and was, no doubt, skilled in both capacities. He attempted to give his readers a complete history of Kashmīr, and, though, like most of the mediæval historians, he combined fact with fiction, he "sincerely endeavoured to consult the varied sources of history." He was well-versed in the literary and historical traditions of ancient India, and was likewise an erudite scholar. Kalhaṇa's earlier chapters are "a medley of confused traditions and fanciful imaginations," but he exercised "independence of judgment combined with strict impartiality and unsparing criticism in regard to contemporary events and persons including kings, officials and priests." In spite of all this, says Sir Aurel Stein, Kalhaṇa must be treated with critical caution, as "his chronology is unreliable, his sources of information discrepant, and his frame of mind didactic." To sum up, though the Rājatarāṅgiṇī avowedly belongs both in form and in substance to the literature of artificial poetry, its merits as an historical composition are many and undoubted, says Dr. Ghoshal.* Kalhaṇa was a Brāhman by caste. He was a worshipper of Īṣa and an admirer of Buddha. The name Kalhaṇa is derived through Prakrit Kallāṇa from Sanskrit Kālyāṇa, meaning 'happiness,' 'blessedness.'

*The Hamdard, 28th September, 1941, Pandit Kavirāja's contribution.

The Rājatarāṅgiṇī.

The Rājatarāṅgiṇī was begun by Pandit Kalhaṇa in 1148-49 A.C., and completed sometime in the following year. As R. S. Pandit says it was written about half a century before the defeat of Prithvī Rāj Chauhān and nearly two centuries before the advent of the Shāh Mirīs. It comprises eight cantos. Each canto is called a Taraṅga or Wave. The number of verses in each canto or Taraṅga is—(i) 373, (ii) 171, (iii) 530, (iv) 720, (v) 483, (vi) 368, (vii) 1,732, (viii) 3,449.

The first translation of a portion of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī was in Persian, made by order of Sultān Zain-ul-Ābidīn who named the version Bahr-ul-Asmār, or "The Sea of Tales." Akbar ordered Mullā 'Abdul Qādir Badā'ōnī to revise this version and to complete the translation. An abridged edition of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, in Persian, was brought out by Haidar Malik Chāḍura during the reign of Jahāngīr. In 1835 A.C., an edition of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī was published by the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal in Calcutta. This edition was based on the transcript obtained by William Moorcroft, a noted traveller of whom we shall hear later and who reached Srinagar in 1823, by permission of Mahārājā Ranjīt Singh, a part of whose dominion Kashmīr then was. The first complete translation from the original Sanskrit appeared in French in 1852, under the auspices of Société Asiatique at Paris. This translation by Captain A. Tröyer, then Principal of the Calcutta Sanskrit College, was made from the 1835 text in Sanskrit. The 1835 text is stated to be defective. The late Sir Aurel Stein, accordingly published, at Bombay, a critical edition of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī in 1892.

*The Dynastic Chronicles of Kashmīr, The Indian Historical Quarterly, September 1942, page 201.

Sir Aurel Stein's English translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī was published in 1904, though he completed it on the 18th May, 1900. Sir Aurel Stein's method of translation, says the Mahārāṣṭr Brāhman scholar, the late Ranjīt Sītārām Pandit, does not give an adequate conception of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī as a literary composition to readers unable to study the original. Sir Aurel Stein also omitted to translate verses which he thought to be in "Kāvya style," and others which are "unconnected with the narrative proper." Ranjīt Pandit, therefore, brought out a complete translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī in October, 1935, following Sir Aurel's critical Bombay edition of 1892. This translation of Ranjīt Pandit is an attempt to represent poetry in prose, is literal, and claims to preserve the original construction, as far as possible. It is, above all, a tremendous labour of love performed, by an irony of fate, in a jail during a sentence of imprisonment, courted under a burning sense of nationalism. No non-Kashmiri son-in-law has ever made to his Kashmiri father-in-law a more affectionate, a more beautiful, a more appropriate, and a more enduring present than the late Ranjīt Pandit to the late Pandit Motilāl Nehru. But it is sad, indeed poignant, that Motilāl should not have lived to read Ranjīt's English rendering of Kalhaṇa's cantos of the River of Kings, the great saga of Motilāl's own motherland!

Jayasīṃha's Successors.

The six reigns following Jayasīṃha cover a period of about a century and a half. It was a period of decay, and the power of Kashmīr steadily declined owing to political confusion, internecine strife, civil war and the depredations of robber bands. The century and a half which passed from the accession of the Lohara dynasty to the date of Kalhaṇa's Chronicle (Books VII, 1003-1150 A.C.), says Stein, represents a period filled for the greatest part by a succession of rebellions and internal disturbances of all kinds.

Jonarājā's record shows that, for nearly two centuries after Kalhaṇa's time, Hindu rule maintained itself in Kashmīr. The princes were weak and helpless. Rājadeva (1213-1236 A.C.), he says, insulted the Brāhmins, plundered them and made them cry: 'I am not a Brāhman,' 'I am not a Brāhman.' The material prosperity of the Valley was fading.

Sahadeva, 1300-1—1319-20 A.C.

In the time of Sirnhadeva (1286-1300 A.C.) and his brother Sahadeva (1300-1 to 1319-20 A.C.), Kashmīr was a country of "drunkards, gamblers and profligate women." In the last reign Dulcha—written in Persian histories of Kashmīr as Zulchu—the commander of the army of the great King Karmasena invaded the country. Instead of facing him manfully, the Rājā fled to Kashṭavār (Kishtwār).

[The Valley of Kāṣṭhavātā, the present Kashṭavār or more commonly Kishtwār, lies on the Upper Chenāb river, between Kashmīr and Chamba on the way to Simla. It is mentioned by Kalhaṇa as a separate hill-state. Possibly it was founded in the beginning of the 10th century A.C. Its rājās were Hindus till Aurangzib's time, and embraced Islam through the influence of Sayyid Farīd-ud-Dīn who came to Kishtwār from Baghdād in the reign of Shāh Jahān. The rājās retained their independence until the conquest of their territory by Mahārājā Gulāb Singh. Ya'qūb Shāh Chak, the last ruler of the Chak dynasty of Kashmīr, came to Kishtwār for shelter when harrassed by Akbar's forces in 1586 A.C., and lies buried at Sirkōt on the Chaugān, the heath of Kishtwār.

The scenery of Kishtwār is almost unique, its inhabitants are peculiar; its remains are undeciphered and its sport is exceptional, says Mr. Otto Rothfeld.*

The flat plateau of Kishtwār is rather oval in shape than circular, resembling Bāramūla. The plain is surrounded by towering mountains covered with oaks and hollies, the summits white with snow and densely wooded with pine trees :

خوشا دلکش دیارِ کشتوار است بهر ماهِ نوش صد بهار است

The surface of the plateau extends to six miles from east to west and from north to south. Its soil is fertile and its tillage is rich. The plain is dotted with villages each hidden in its own grove of chinārs and poplars.

The Wardwan river flows through the Wardwan valley into the Chandrabhāgā which passing by Multān empties itself into the Indus.

In Kishtwar and down Wardwan way,
Each mountain in wintry grandeur towers,
And whitens with eternal sleet,
While summer in a vale of flowers,

With Pen and Rifle in Kishtwar* by Otto Rothfeld, F.R.G.S., Indian Civil Service, D.B. Tārāporevāla Sons and Co., The Times of India Press, Bombay, 1918.

Is sleeping rosy at its feet.

—Mary Petrie : In the Land of Ialla Rookh, page 196.

Was it, perhaps, therefore, that Jahāngīr considered the saffron of Kishtwār superior to that of Kashmīr ? (Beveridge, English Translation of Jahāngīr's Memoirs, Vol. 2, page 138).

The biggest of the villages, just referred to above, is the small town of Kishtwār, 5,100 feet above the sea level and having a population of 3,235. It is about 74 miles south-east of Islāmābād by way of the Mārbaḷ pass.

There are two ziyārāt or shrines : one of the saint Sayyid Farid-ud-Dīn of Baghdād and the other that of his son Sayyid Isrār-ud-Dīn, and hence the poet calls it the second Baghdād—

ٹائی بغداد یا خلد برس یا کشتوار
جانفزا چوگان دلکش جنتِ اُلاوی است این

In the following hill distich, the Kōshur ridicules the poverty of Kishtwār :—

کشتوار، کشت کا بنڈا—دن کو بھوکا رات کو ٹھنڈا
جو کہ آئے پہر کے جائے—وہی گوسائیں کا جھنڈا

[Kishtwār is the causeway of distress, where people are hungry by day and cold by night.

Whoever comes there, when he goes away is as meagre as the flagstaff of a gosā'in or a recluse.]

A sketch of the history of Kishtwār will be found in the Panjāb Historical Journal, Vol. IV, No. 1.]

Dulcha plundered the people, took slaves and set fire to the city of Srinagar. After impoverishing the Valley, during a stay of eight months, the invaders, when they found that provisions were scarce, tried to get out by the southern passes ; but snow overtook them and the whole army perished along with their leader. Then, Gaddis (Hindu Bakarwāns) from Kishtwār entered the Valley on a raiding expedition, but were driven back by Rāmachandra, Sahadeva's commander-in-chief. Henceforth Sahadeva disappears. Bhoṭṭa or Bahuṭṭa Rīñchana or Rīnchan—or, to give his full name, Lhachen rGyalbu Rinchen or Prince Rinchen, the Great God, the son of Lha-chen dNgos-grub's [or, according to Jonarāja—Vakatanya, Tibetan Vaka (?)], king of Western Tibet or Ladākḥ comes to the scene. Rīñchana fell out with Rāmachandra and killed him. He then married Koṭā Rānī, Rāmachandra's daughter, and proclaimed himself king in 1320 A.C., with Shāh Mīr who had been loyal to him, as his vazīr or minister.

Rinchen or Rīñchana or Rīnchan, 1320-23 A.C.

Rīñchana eventually became a convert to Islam and assumed the title of Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn.

Udyānadeva, 1323—1338 A.C.

After a short period of two years and a half, this Musalmān king died on Friday, 25th November, 1323, A.C., when Udyānadeva, brother of Simhadeva, succeeded him, and married his widow. At that time, Kashmīr was invaded by Achala whom to use Jonarāja's words "the lord of Magadhapura had supplied with soldiers." The king, Udyānadeva, like his brother, fled away before this invasion. Shāh Mīr, his vazīr, defended the kingdom successfully in his absence. The Rājā returned and reigned in Kashmīr but as a mere cypher, Shāh Mīr being all powerful.

Lalla, the noted hermitess, was born in 735 A.H. or 1335 A.C., during Udyāna's rule.

Koṭa Rānī, 1338-39. A.C.

On Udyāna's death in 1338 A.C., Koṭa Rānī, the queen, assumed power, but only for over five months.

Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mīr or Mīrzā, 1339—1392 A.C.

The vazīr, Shāh Mīr or Mīrzā deposed the Rānī and himself ascended the throne with the title of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn in 1339 A.C.

Causes of the ruin of Hindu rule in Kashmīr.

It will be appropriate, here, to sum up the causes that made for the ruin of Hindu rule in Kashmīr. The clashes between Buddhism and Brāhmanism, wicked rājās and vicious rānīs, and the lack of character among officials appear to be the most noticeable. The disruptive factors of debauchery and intrigue were paramount. To these have to be added the neglect of the army owing to a sense of security from the natural barriers of the country. Intrigues and rebellions were common and rulers were puppets in the hands of powerful ministers who thought of self rather than the weal and welfare of the land of their birth.

Brāhman's cultural contribution summarized.

Though Hindu rule came to an end through causes discussed above, we must not fail to pay tribute to the learning and culture that Kashmīr enjoyed during the period covered in this chapter. Kashmīrī Brāhman acquired great proficiency in Persian under Muslim rule, as we shall see later, and distinguished themselves as great poets and prose-writers. Such people naturally did great service to Sanskrit literature, and Kashmīr was one of the most notable seats of learning in ancient India. Scholars came from far and near to complete their studies. We have already referred to the great names of Nāgārjuna, Kālidāsa, Kshemendra, Bilhaṇa, Mammāṭa and his brothers, and Maṅkha and Kalhaṇa. The philosophy of poetry has, in fact, originated in Kashmīr. As a matter of fact, Bilhaṇa asserts that saffron is the seed of poetry and, as no other province of India produced saffron, Kashmīr alone is the true home of poetry. Apart from Sanskrit poetry and prose, the branches of learning that received most valuable contributions from the early forefathers of the Kashmīrīs were prosody, grammar, Āiśvarya philosophy, Buddhist philosophy, history, fairy tales, biographies, tantras or scriptures of Āiśvarya, Āyurveda or medical science and commentaries.

Out of the sixteen most famous rhetoricians of India, Kashmīr has produced fourteen and the rest of India only two. Vāmāna (750—800 A.C.) the founder of the Rīti School, Udbhata (774—813) the teacher of the theory of three Vṛttis, Abhinavagupta the great expounder of the theory of Rasadhvani, and Mammāṭa (1100 A.C.) the upholder of the Rasa theory were all Kashmīrians.

In fact, Bhaṭṭa in modern Kashmīrī is Bāṭa, a Brāhman, or a Kashmīrī Pandit. Bhaṭṭa is derived from the Sanskrit word bhartar which in Prakrit form gave Bhaṭṭa which has been retained by Sanskritists and appended to proper names at the beginning or at the end. It was used in the sense of learned, and signifies a learned Brāhman or a great teacher.

Prince Guṇavarman, a painter-missionary from Kashmīr, was probably a pioneer* in the Southern Asiatic route to China, Korea and Japan. The Kashmīr of his age (400 B.C.) was also the seat of the University of the Buddhist

India and the Pacific World* by Dr. Kālidās Nāg—Book Company Limited, College Square, Calcutta, 1941, p. 173.

Kumārajīva, who came all the way from Tukhārīstān of Kucha (near Khutan),—which corresponds roughly to the present Badakhshān,—to Kashmīr to learn Sanskrit and various Indian sciences which he later took over to China.

Tradition has it that the great Ṣaṅkarāchārya (788—820 A.C.), visited Kashmīr early in the 9th century A.C., after his blows to Buddhism in the rest of India, and that he was forced to accept the superiority of Kashmīr Ṣaivism over his Vedāntic thought although there exists no internal evidence in any of his main works to this effect. Possibly it was someone else, his namesake.

[Shaṅkara, who—there are reasons to hold—was influenced by contact with early preachers of Islam in the South, gives definite indication of such influence in his emphasis on monism, his insistence on action rather than mere devotion, on purity of purpose rather than mere rituals. It may be that each element in Shaṅkara's thought was separately derived from Upanishadic sources but the peculiar composition of these elements and the shifts in emphasis of thought and action can be most easily explained by these new contacts with Islamic preachers down South where in Kaladi or Kelatī in Kerala the birth-place of Shaṅkara, the ruler had embraced Islam.]

Kashmir Shaivism.

Kashmīr Shaivism, known as Trika-Shāśana, Trika-Shāstra or simply Trika, is a type of idealistic monism (advaita). It made its first appearance in Kashmīr at the beginning of the ninth or perhaps towards the end of the eighth century of the Christian era, says Mr. Jagadīsh Chandra Chatterji in his Kashmir Shaivism (Part 1, Srīnagar, 1914, page 3).

Kashmīr Shaivism has two branches—(i) the Spandaśāstra and (ii) the Pratyabhijñāśāstra. The authorship of the first, says Sir Rāmākṛishṇa G. Bhandārkar² is attributed to Vasugupta and his pupil Kallaṭa who lived in the reign of Avantivarman (855-883 A.C.). The two principal works of this system are the Shivasūtram or Shiva-sūtrāni and the Spandakārikās, which are fifty-one verses only. The founder of the Pratyabhijñā school of Kashmīr Shaivism was Somānanda, who also wrote the work called Shivadr̥ṣṭi. But the principal treatise of the school was composed by his pupil Udayākara, and contains verses which are called Sūtras. The pupil of the pupil of Somānanda was the well-known Abhinavagupta whom we have

1. Influence of Islam on Indian Culture, by Dr. Tara Chand, Indian Press, Allahabad, 1936, pp. 107-111.

2. Vaishnavism, Shaivism and Minor Religious Systems. Publisher : Karl J. Trübner, Strassburg, 1913, page 129.

Addenda to Chapter I

In Chapter I, on page 2 (1st para.), Piedmont is mentioned. Here is a short note on it. Piedmont is a territorial division of North Italy, enclosed on all sides, except towards the Lombard plain, by the vast semicircle of the Pennine, Graian, Cottian, Maritime and Ligurian Alps. The population of Piedmont in 1921 was 3,527,847. It has an area of 11,340 square miles. Reeling and throwing of silk, manufacture of cotton, woollens and clothing occupy a large part of the population. The Piedmontese dialect has been rather strongly influenced by French.—Extracted from the Encyclopaedia Britannica, Vol. 17, p. 915.

In the top para. on page 6, in Chapter I, there is a reference to Matterhorn. Here is a short note on it. Matterhorn is the famous peak, 14,782 feet high, in the mountaineering centre of Zermatt, in the Swiss Alps on the frontier between Switzerland and Italy. Many intrepid pilots have lost their lives in attempts to circle this peak, although more than one successful attempt has been recorded, the first one on July 14, 1865, the second three days later, both on the Italian side. Nowadays it is frequently ascended in summer, especially from Zermatt.—Extracted from the Encyclopaedia Britannica, Vol. 15, pages 94-5.

CHAPTER III

THE SPREAD OF ISLAM IN KASHMĪR

In the preceding Chapter, we came across references to Arabs at the time of Muktāpīḍa, and to the employment of Muslim captains of troops under Harsha. Later, we met Rifīchana and noted his conversion to Islam to become Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn. We saw the appointment of Shāh Mīr as Vazīr, and also saw him as sovereign of Kashmīr on the discomfiture of Koṭā Rānī. Before we take up Shāh Mīr as Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn, and deal with the Shāh Mīrī dynasty he founded, it is necessary for us to know how Islam entered the Valley of Kashmīr, and spread itself to an extent only second to Egypt, Īrān, Afghānistān or Central Asia.

Islam made its way into Kashmīr, says Stein,¹ not by forcible conquest but by gradual conversion, for which the influx of foreign adventurers both from the south and from Central Asia had prepared the ground. The adoption of Islam by the great mass of the population began towards the close of Hindu rule, and became an accomplished fact during the latter half of the fourteenth century.

Earliest Contact with Sind.

Let us now turn to Sind for a moment, as it is Sind that received the first Muslims from Arabia. According to the Chach-nāma,² which, in Mountstuart Elphinstone's estimate, "contains a minute and consistent account of the transactions" during the invasion of 'Imād-ud-Dīn Muhammad bin Qāsim bin Abī 'Aqīl Saqāfi and "some of the preceding Hindu reigns." Chach Brāhman, the son of Silāij, and the father of Rāja Dāhir, usurped the kingdom of Sāhasī, the son of Siharas who was the son of Dīwāij. The boundaries of the dominions of Sāhasī extended on the east to Kashmīr, on the west to Makrān, on the south to the shores of the ocean and to Daibal, and on the north to the mountains of Kardān or Karwān and to Qaiqān. He had established

1. Stein's Introduction to his English Translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Vol. I, page 130.

2. The Chach-nāma is the Persian translation of the extinct Arabic Futūh-us-Sind by 'Alī bin Hāmid bin Abū Bakr Kūfī. The Persian translation was made in 613 A.H. = 1216 A.C., during the time of the ruler of Sind, Amīr Qubācha, the rival and contemporary of Iltutmish of Delhi.

four maliks, or governors, in his territory. The fourth of these governors was "at the great city of Multān and Sikka, and Brahmapūr, and Karūr, and Ashahār and Kumba, as far as the borders of Kashmīr, were under his government." Sāhasī Rāi, the sovereign of all this dominion, died and was succeeded by Chach Brāhman who had entered service as a chamberlain to this sovereign. Dāhir ultimately succeeded Chach.

Dāhir was slain by Muhammad bin Qāsim on Thursday, the 10th of Ramazān in the year 93 A.H., or June 712 A.C. Dāhir's son, Jaisiya, went to wait on the Rāi of Kashmīr. A person bearing the name Hamīm, the son of Sāma, a Syrian, accompanied Jaisiya to Kashmīr. The Rāi of Kashmīr ordered that, from among the dependencies of Kashmīr, a place called Shākalhā should be assigned to Jaisiya. According to General Cunningham, this place may possibly be Kuller-Kahar in the Salt range which, at that time, belonged to Kashmīr. Jaisiya died in Shākalhā and was succeeded by Hamīm son of Sāma. Hamīm "founded masjids there, and obtained great honour and regard. He was much respected by the king of Kashmīr."

No light is thrown on the origin and mission to India of Hamīm the Syrian. But we read, in another place, of Muhammad 'Allāfi or 'Allānī, called an Arab mercenary. He was an "Arab of the Banu Usāma, who had killed 'Abdur Rahmān son of Ash'ab, for having run away from battle, and came to join Dāhir, with five hundred Arabs." Subsequently 'Allāfi was dismissed by Dāhir, and Muhammad bin Qāsim granted 'Allāfi a safe passage. It is not improbable that Hamīm was one of the attendants of 'Allāfi. This Hamīm, the Syrian, is ostensibly the first Muslim to enter Kashmīr.

We have also to note that Muhammad bin Qāsim, after the conquest of Sind, came to Multān. Here "he erected a Jāmi' Masjid and minarets." He appointed Amīr Dā'ūd Nasr, son of Walid 'Ummānī, its governor. Then ibn Qāsim proceeded to the boundary of Kashmīr called the Panj Māhiyāt, at the upper course of the Jhelum, just after it debouches into the plains. This is about the time of the caliphate of Walid I* (86-96 A.H.=705-715 A.C.).

*The Chach-nāma or Ta'rikh-i-Hind wa Sind. See History of India as told by its own Historians. The Muhammadan Period. Edited by Sir H. M. Elliott, K.C.B., and Professor John Dowson, Vol. I, London, 1867, A.C., pages 131-207.

In the course of our brief outline of the pre-Islamic period of the history of Kashmīr, we meet with Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, who ruled from 725 to 753 A.C., applying to the Chinese Emperor for aid against the Arabs who were advancing from their bases in Sind and Multān, and of whom we hear for the first time in connexion with the history of Kashmīr from the Rājatarāṅgiṇī. Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, as Stein¹ says, is misspelt in the Arabic characters as Muttapir. His reign according to the Islamic era dated from 107 to 136 A.H. We may in passing note that the Arabs won a victory over the Chinese in 751 A.C. or 134 A.H., and acquired Gilgit and other possessions.² Muktāpīḍa's younger son and second successor, Vajrāditya-Bappiyaka, ruled between 754 to 761 A.C. During his reign, viz. 137 to 144 A.H., we note that this ruler "sold many men to the Mlechhas" (or Muslims), and "introduced into Kashmīr practices which befitted Mlechhas" (or Muslims). In Harsha's time, thereafter, we hear of Turushkas, or Muslims, as troop-leaders in Kashmīr or in Kalhana's words "as captains of hundreds." Harsha's rule lasted from 1089 to 1101 A.C., or 482 to 495 A.H. Marco Polo,³ the Venetian traveller, also refers to the presence of Muslims in Kashmīr about 1277 A.C. or 676 A.H. Following Kalhana and Jonarāja in their chronology, we reach Rīnchan or Rīfichana during 1320-1323 A.C., or 720 to 724 A.H., which is the terra firma of the advent of Islam as a state religion in Kashmīr. In the twelfth century of the Christian era, Stein⁴ tells us, the conversion of the Dard tribes on the Indus from Buddhism to Islam had already made great progress. This is about two centuries before Rīnchan who becomes Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn and the first Muslim ruler of Kashmīr.

Islam neither affected the independence of Kashmīr nor, at first, materially changed its political and cultural conditions. The administration, to resume quotation from Stein, remained, as before, in the hands of the traditional official class, the Brāhmins, for whom a change of religion presented no advantage, and the retention of their old creed apparently involved no loss of inherited status. This appears from the frequent references, made in Jonarāja's

1. The Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Vol. I., Introduction, page 91.

2. The Indian Antiquary, July 1908, page 181.

3. The Travels of Marco Polo, the Venetian, edited by Manuel Komroff, New York, U.S.A., 1939, page 64.

4. The Rājatarāṅgiṇī, Vol. II, page 217, footnote 2762-64.

and Ṣrīvara's Chronicles, to Brāhmins holding high official posts under the early Sultāns. Sanskrit continued to be, for a considerable period, the language of official communication and record in Kashmīr even after the end of Hindu rule. The various forms of official documents, reports, etc., which are contained in the Lokaparakāsha, a handbook of Kashmīrian administrative routine, are drawn up "in a curious Sanskrit jargon, full of Persian and Arabic words which must have become current in Kashmīr soon after the introduction of Islām." The use of Sanskrit, even among Musalmāns, is borne out by the Sanskrit inscription on a tomb in the cemetery of Hazrat Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh, at the foot of the Hari-parbat in Srinagar. This inscription was put up in the reign of Sultān Muhammad Shāh, sometime in 1484 A.C. or 889 A.H. Brief Sanskrit inscriptions, without dates, have been found by Stein¹ on a number of old Muslim tombs at Srinagar, near Mārtaṇḍ and elsewhere. Even in certain proper names the reader will notice non-Muslim influences.

Islam and Hinduism.

"Islam is a force of volcanic sort, a burning and integrating force, which, under favourable conditions may even make a nation," wrote the late Sir Herbert Risley.² "It melts and fuses together a whole series of tribes, and reduces their internal structure to one uniform pattern, in which no survivals of pre-existing usages can be detected. The separate strata disappear; their characteristic fossils are crushed out of recognition; and a solid mass of law and tradition occupies their place. Hinduism, transfused as it is by mysticism and ecstatic devotion, and resting ultimately on the esoteric teachings of transcendental philosophy, knows nothing of open proselytism or forcible conversion, and attains its ends in a different and more subtle fashion, for which no precise analogue can be found in the physical world. It leaves existing aggregates very much as they were, and so far from welding them together, after the manner of Islam, into larger cohesive aggregates tends rather to create an indefinite number of fresh groups; but every tribe that passes within the charmed circle of Hinduism inclines sooner or later to abandon its more primitive usages or to clothe them in some Brahmanical disguise.

1. The Rājatarangīnī, Vol. 1, page 131 footnote.

2. The People of India, second edition, 1915, page 217.

Infant marriage with all its attendant horrors is introduced: widows are forbidden to marry again: and divorce, which plays a great, and on the whole, a useful part in tribal society, is summarily abolished."

Sir Herbert discusses the motives assigned in various cases of conversion to Islam and suggests: "(1) Genuine religious conviction of the purity and simplicity of Islam, derived from the study of the Muhammadan scriptures or from the preaching of the Maulavis who go round the villages. The conversion of high-caste Hindus, Brahmans, Rajputs, Kayasths and the like is commonly ascribed to this cause. (2) The growing desire on the part of the lower Hindu castes to improve their social position leads individuals among them to embrace a creed which seems to offer them a fair chance in life. (3) The proverb "Love laughs at caste" accounts for a large number of conversions. (4) Causes connected with taboos on food and drink and with various caste misdemeanours have also to be taken into account. Hindus in sickness or distress are tended by Muhammadans and take food and water from their hands; the caste excommunicates them and they join the ranks of a more merciful faith."¹

In Kashmir there is not much difference in food between the Muslim and the Hindu, for both enjoy mutton, fish and flying birds, though certain restrictions among the latter are, at times, vexatious. The orthodox Pandit, for instance, would not take tomato, onion, egg and fowl, reminding us of the tradition which allows a dog to be starved or beaten but never to be kicked as it accompanied Yudhiṣṭhira to heaven!

Another Contrast.

A piquant contrast between Hinduism and Islam, not by a Hindu, nor by a Muslim, but by a Christian from the West, is not quite irrelevant to the subject under discussion. Writes Mr. Guy Wint² in India and Democracy: "Breathing from infancy the axioms of caste, Hindus accepted human inequality as a permanent and inexpugnable fact; Islam was a levelling religion with a passion for equality by which even its monarchs were periodically humbled. Hinduism,

1. The People of India, pages 247-248.

2. India and Democracy by Sir George Schuster, ex-Finance Member, Government of India, and Guy Wint, Secretary of the League of Nations Economic Mission to China, Macmillan & Co., London, 1941, pages 54-55.

if in its purest form neither idolatrous nor polytheist, permitted among its rank and file the crudest forms of worship ; Islam has always been iconoclast. In spite of the worldly display of India, Hinduism honoured the ascetic and was awed by the other-worldly ; Islam, in spite of its puritan sects, was a voluptuous religion. The emotional impulse of Hinduism was the quest for tranquillity ; of Islam (in spite of Kismet) the lust for action. Hinduism was subtle, elaborate, luxuriant ; Islam plain and unadorned.

“That the two cultures interacted and modified one another goes without saying. For example, where Islam flourished, the caste system weakened ; and under Hindu influence Islam lost something of its asperity. In the centuries when Turks, Afghans and Moghuls dominated North India the upper classes of both communities came closer together, and from their fraternization emerged for a brief period what may be termed the Urdu culture, a civilization of the court circles which was a genuine blend of the best in the life of both peoples and by means of which it appeared that they might be reconciled. Among the masses the contact was even closer, since the great bulk of Moslems of the lower class were converts from the depressed castes of Hindus, and these at least in part retained caste observance, conserved something of the Hindu ritualism which in theory was so abhorrent to their new faith, and refused to be turned from the age-old superstitions of their race.” This last remark is particularly fitly applicable to the Kashmiri Muslim. Five hundred years of Muslim rule were not sufficient to root out the superstitions of about fifteen hundred years of Buddhist and Brāhmanical permeation. Mr. Wint closes with this last sentence : “On both sides there remained solid blocks of the orthodox—ultra-montane uninfluenced, intransigent, and capable of developing within themselves fierce proselytising movements in favour of a return to the strictest exclusiveness.” This is the bigoted Kashmiri Pandit and the antiquated Mullā in the case of Kashmir.

Beginning of Islam by Friars and Darvishes.

The population of the Valley of Kashmir in 1931 was over thirteen lakhs, of which over twelve and a half lakhs were Muslims. In the census of 1941 the Muslims numbered 13,69,620 out of 14,64,034. One must deplore, with the late Sir Thomas Arnold, that definite historical facts which might help us in clearly accounting for the existence of such an extraordinarily overwhelming majority of Musalmāns among the population of Kashmīr are somewhat scanty. The same view was expressed to me by Sir Aurel Stein once. Whatever evidence is available leads us, however, to attribute the spread of Islam in the Valley, on the whole, to a long continued missionary movement inaugurated and carried out mainly by faqīrs or friars or darvishes and the 'ulamā' or theologians, among whom were Ismā'īlian preachers from Alamūt,¹ a hill fort in the province of Dailam in Īrān. In addition to this, (i) the compactness of the area of the Valley and (ii) the unusually imitative habits of its people were also reasons for this mass conversion.

Islam is essentially a missionary religion like Buddhism and Christianity, and the Muslim missionary, be he a pīr, i.e., a spiritual guide, or a preacher, carries with him the message of Islam to the people of the land into which he penetrates. "The spirit of truth in the heart of the missionary cannot rest till it manifests itself in thought, word and deed." It is in this spirit that the Muslim missionary entered the Valley of Kashmīr to influence its people by his example, his personal methods of preaching and persuasion at a time when, in the words of Lawrence,² Kashmīr in the reign of Sūhadeva (1300—1319-20 A.C.)—that is, previous to the advent of Islam—"was a country of drunkards and gamblers," and where "women were no better than they should be."

Bilāl or Bulbul Shāh's Conversion of Rīnchan.

Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn, Rīnchan or Rīnchana, the first Muslim ruler of Kashmīr, a contemporary of Edward III of England, was originally a Ladākhī, also called a Tibetan, from Western Tibet. He was well-disposed towards Islam on account of his contact with Shāh Mir, then in the Kashmīr state service. Rīnchan is believed to have actually owed his conversion to Sayyid Bilāl (popularized to Bulbul) in the beginning of the fourteenth century.

آنکه در راهِ الهی روشن از بدر و هلال
ببلبل باغ ولایت شاهباز لا مثال

1. Sir Thomas Arnold's Preaching of Islam, second edition, page 291.
2. The Valley of Kashmīr, page 189.

شد به کشمیر اول از دستش درخت دین نهال شیخ و مُرشد عارفِ حق، حضرتِ بابا بلال —اسرارالابرار، بابا داود مشکوتی

Bilāl Shāh or Bulbul Shāh is stated to have visited Kashmīr first in the time of Rājā Sūhadeva, the predecessor of Rīnchan. The original name of Bulbul Shāh is said to have been Sayyid ‘Abdur Rahmān, though some believe it to be Sayyid Sharaf-ud-Dīn, while others call him Sharaf-ud-Dīn Sayyid ‘Abdur Rahmān Turkistānī. This much is certain that he was a widely travelled Mūsavī Sayyid from Turkistān having enjoyed a long stay at Baghdād. Bulbul Shāh was the spiritual disciple of Shāh Ni‘matullāh Walī Fārsī, a Khalifa of the Suhrawardī tarīq or school of Sūfis founded by Shaikh-ush-Shuyūkh Shaikh Shihāb-ud-Dīn Suhrawardī.¹ Khwāja Muhammad A‘zam in his History has copied the following about Kashmīr from the great Shaikh, but the couplet is from Shihāb-ud-Dīn Sindī of Kashmīr, according to Hasan:—

كان الكشمير سُكَّانِهَا جَنَّتْ عَدْنٌ هِيَ لِلْمُؤْمِنِينَ
 قَدْ كَتَبَ اللَّهُ عَلَى بَابِهَا مَنْ دَخَلَهَا كَانَ مِنَ الْأَمِينِينَ

Hāji Miskīn² is of the opinion that Bulbul Shāh was a disciple of Mullā Ahmad ‘Allāma, who is stated to have accompanied Bulbul Shāh when he visited Kashmīr on the first occasion, in the time of Rājā Sūhadeva. The same writer mentions Mullā Ahmad ‘Allāma as the Shaikh-ul-Islam in the reign of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn (740-743 A.H.). I am afraid, however, that this cannot be accepted, as it is very hard to believe that Bulbul Shāh should have taken the lead in the conversion of Rīnchan, in the presence of his own pīr or spiritual guide, who would thus be relegated to a secondary position on an occasion of such transcendent importance. Available evidence appears to establish that Bulbul Shāh was a spiritual disciple of Shāh Ni‘matullāh

1. Suhraward with its Kurdish population was a large, walled, well-fortified town lying to the south of Zanjān, on the road to Hamadān, Irān, in the 4th century A.C. (10th A.H.). It was of some importance during the 8th century A.C. (14th A.H.). The site of the town cannot now be located with absolute certainty.

2. Hāji Muhyī‘d Dīn Miskīn, the Ta‘rīkh-i-Kabīr, page 289.

Wali Fārsī. Mullā Ahmad was a lieutenant of Bulbul Shāh,¹ died in the reign of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, and is buried next to Bulbul Shāh. The Mullā was made the first Shaikh-ul-Islam and was the author of two books, Fatāwa-i-Shihābī and Shihāb-i-Sāqib.

The circumstances that led to the conversion of Rīnchan appear to have been the impression created on him by the simplicity of Bulbul Shāh's faith coupled with his own dissatisfaction with what was then professed by the people around him. Different people have attributed different motives² to Rīnchan for adopting Islam, into the details of which motives we need not enter. Suffice it to say that Rīnchan embraced Islam at the hands of Bulbul Shāh and assumed the name of Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn, and claims our attention as the first Muslim ruler of Kashmīr. Muslim historians write his name as Rīnchan.

After the conversion of Rīnchan, his brother-in-law and commander-in-chief, and several others—according to one tradition ten thousand³—embraced the creed of Bulbul Shāh. A place of gathering for the new converts was set up on the bank of the Vitastā and is known as Bulbul Lānkar—(Lānkar is apparently a corruption of 'Langar' meaning a hospice) and also the first mosque in Kashmīr now unfortunately reduced to ruins. The Bulbul Lānkar is a three-storied decayed wooden building on the right bank of the Jhelum, about 200 yards below 'Āli Kadal, the fifth bridge, in Mahalla Bulbul Lānkar, Srīnagar. Bulbul Shāh died in 727 A.H., corresponding to 1327 A.C.⁴

سالِ تاریخِ وصلِ بَلْبُلِ شَاهِ بَلْبُلِ قُدُسِ مَغْتِ، خَاصِ اِه [۷۲۷ھ]

This chronogram, it appears, was composed, for the first time, by Khwāja Muhammad A'zam.

1. Bulbul Shāh Sāhib by Mufti Muhammad Shāh Sa'ādat, pp. 36-37.

2. For instance, it is alleged by some, like Kirpā Rām and Nārāin Kaul, that Brāhmans rejected his offer of conversion to Hinduism, but this is not accepted by others like Malik Haidar and Khwāja A'zam.

3. Bulbul Shāh Sāhib by Mufti Muhammad Shāh Sa'ādat, Srīnagar, (1360 A.H.=1941 A.C.) p. 23, on the authority of the Panj Ganj (Rishī-nāma) by Mullā Bahā-ud-Dīn Muttu who died in 1248 A.H.=1832 A.C.

4. Sir Wolseley Haig, in Chapter XII of the Cambridge History of India, Vol. III, p. 277, makes no reference to Bulbul Shāh and assigns 1346 A.C. as the date of the accession of Shams-ud-Dīn whom he calls Shāh Mirzā instead of the better known form Shāh Mīr. Shams-ud-Dīn's accession took place in 1339 A.C. (740 A.H.)

Conversions to Islam by Sayyids.

The conversion of the people of Kashmir to Islam was further encouraged by the arrival of a host of Sayyids. Prominent among these were : (1) Sayyid Jalāl-ud-Dīn of Bukhārā, who was known as Makhdūm Jahānīyān Jahāngasht, the disciple of Shaikh Rukn-ud-Dīn 'Ālam and arrived in 748 A.H., and left Kashmir after a short stay. (2) Sayyid Tāj-ud-Dīn (the cousin of Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī or Shāh Hamadān), who arrived in 760 A.H., in the reign of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn and was accompanied by Sayyid Mas'ūd and Sayyid Yūsuf, his disciples, who lie buried near his tomb in Mahalla Shihāmpūr, a quarter of Srinagar. (3) Sayyid Husain Simnānī,* who was the younger brother of Sayyid Tāj-ud-Dīn, a disciple of Shaikh Rukn-ud-Dīn 'Ālam, and came in 773 A.H.

It appears that the two brothers Sayyid Tāj-ud-Dīn and Sayyid Husain Simnānī were sent to Kashmir by Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, revered for sanctity and eminent virtues, probably to survey the field for the propagation of Islam, and also to find means of escape from Tīmūr, who was suspected of contemplating, from political motives, the massacre of this powerful Sayyid family. Sayyid Husain lies buried in a beautiful shrine in Kulgām, a tahsīl of Islāmābād. The other brother is buried just close to the road to Islāmābād near Avantipūr.

Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī.

In view of the extraordinary influence that his personality wielded in the spread of Islam in Kashmir, I think a somewhat fuller notice of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, "the Apostle of Kashmir" is needed. We shall call him "Shāh Hamadān" as he is best known in Kashmir by that appellation. Sir Muhammad Iqbāl has an invocation to him beginning with—

زیر گردون آدم آدم را خُورد ملّے بر ملّت دیگر چرد

جان ز اهل خطّہ سُوزد چوں سپند خیزد از دل، نالہائے دردمند

— جاوید نامہ —

* In the centre of a wide plain, like an island, stands the village of Simnān, 145 miles east of Teherān, Irān. It appears to be a conglomeration of deserted gardens: an uninhabited village within mud walls, with, here and there, a stream or a pool banked up with earth, and in the centre like a jewel, a tiny turquoise dome. The modern town had a weaving factory (Kārkhāna-i-Bāfindagī) and a hospital (Bīmāristān), when I passed it towards the end of 1936.

Mir Sayyid 'Ali Hamadāni, commonly known as Shāh Hamadān, was born in Hamadān, Irān, in 714 A.H.=1314 A.C., and died at the age of seventy-two in 786 A.H.=1384 A.C. and is buried at Khatlān in Turkistān. Shāh Hamadān by his three visits to the Valley of Kashmir helped in the spread of Islam by preaching and persuasion, gave impetus to arts and crafts and promoted learning in the latter part of the fourteenth century A.C. His son Mir Muhammad built the Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, Srinagar, now known as the Mosque and Shrine of Shāh Hamadān. Mir Sayyid 'Ali earned his living by sewing caps, was a poet, and wrote on religion, ethics and politics.

The Gunbad-i-'Alaviyān (exterior), Hamadān, Irān, where Shāh Hamadān, his forbears and descendants meditated.

The Gunbad-i-'Alaviyān (interior), Hamadān, Irān.

The great Sayyid, 'Alī Hamadānī, or Shāh-i-Hamadān, also known as Amīr-i-Kabīr or the great Amīr, or 'Alī-i-Sānī, the second 'Alī, was born on Monday, 12th Rajab 714 A.H. (1314 A.C.) at Hamadān¹ in Īrān. The chronogram Rahmatullāh رحمة الله, gives the date of his birth, viz. 714 A.H., and should be taken as his chronogrammatic name. His mother's name was Fātima and his father's was Sayyid Shihāb-ud-Dīn bin Mīr Sayyid Muhammad Husainī. His genealogy, according to the treatise Khulāsāt ul Manāqib, can be traced to Hazrat 'Alī through Imām Husain,² he being sixteenth in direct descent from 'Alī b. Abī Tālib. Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī became Hāfiz-i-Qur'ān (one who knows the Qur'ān by heart) in his very early boyhood. He studied Islamic theology, acquired knowledge, and learnt tasawwuf or the mysticism of the Sūfīs under the tuition of Sayyid 'Alā-ud-Dīn Simnānī, who was his maternal uncle. He became, in the first instance, a disciple of Shaikh Abu'l Barakāt Taqī-ud-Dīn 'Alī Dūstī and, after his death, of Shaikh Sharaf-ud-Dīn Mahmūd Muzdaqānī in Ray. The spiritual pedigree

1. In view of the importance of Shāh Hamadān in Kashmīr, a brief description of Hamadān, his native place, is perhaps necessary.

Hamadān is the name of a town and of a province in Īrān. The town is 260 miles north-west of Isfahān. It is situated 188 miles south-west of Teherān, at an elevation of 5,930 feet, about 700 feet higher than Srinagar, near the foot of Mount Alvand, whose peak rises west of it to an altitude of 11,900 feet. It has been a seat of Muslim learning and culture.

Hamadān is a busy trade centre with about 70,000 inhabitants, comprising 4,000 Jews and 300 Armenians, has extensive and well-stocked bāzārs, and a number of large and small caravanserais. Tanneries turn out leather which is much esteemed throughout the country and exported to other provinces in great quantities. Saddles, harnesses, trunks, and other leather goods are manufactured. Industries like carpets, woollens, cotton stuffs, felts and copper utensils flourish. This perhaps explains how Shāh Hamadān gave an impetus to arts and crafts in Kashmīr. The climate of Hamadān is pleasant but the winters are long and severe with heavy falls of snow.

Hamadān is supposed to stand on the site of the ancient Ecbatana. Among its tombs, the Jews still show the reputed burial places of Esther and Mordecai, a former Jewish Queen and Prince, in an insignificant looking domed building in the centre of the town. Hamadān has also the grave of Abū 'Alī bin Sīna (Avicenna), who died in 1036 A.C. Shāh Hamadān has written on questions relating to the name of Hamadān. In 1936, at Hamadān, I was shown the dilapidated Gunbad-i-'Alaviyān, associated with the meditations of Shāh Hamadān, his forbears and his descendants.

2. Dr. Hermann Ethé's Catalogue of Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford University Press, 1889, Part I, page 783.

of Shaikh Muzdaqānī has been recorded by Shāh Hamadān. Muzdaqānī desired him to complete his education by extensive travel in the world, which Shāh Hamadān undertook and consequently visited several countries. He journeyed for about twenty-one years, and thus came in contact with several Sūfis (mystics) and 'ulamā' (divines) of the age, and profited by association with them. According to Amīn Ahmad Rāzī's *Haft Iqlīm*¹ [written in 1002 A.H.=1593-94 A.C., or according to another account 1028 A.H.=1619 A.C.], Shāh Hamadān travelled three times over the whole world and met 1,400 saints. After the completion of his travels, Shāh Hamadān returned to his native place. It was after his return that the rise of Tīmūr forced him to leave for Kashmīr. Seven hundred Sayyids are said to have accompanied him to the Valley in the reign of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn in 774 A.H.² (1372 A.C.). Shihāb-ud-Dīn, the reigning monarch of Kashmīr, had gone out on an expedition against the ruler of Ohind³ (or Und, 16 miles above Attock). Qutb-ud-Dīn, the Sultān's brother, who subsequently succeeded him, was then acting for him. After four months' stay, Shāh Hamadān left for the scene of battle, and persuaded the belligerents to come to peace. Shāh Hamadān then proceeded to Mecca, and came back to the Valley in 781 A.H.⁴ (1379 A.C.) in the time of Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn. After a stay of about two and a half years, he went to Ladākḥ in 783 A.H. en route for Turkistān. The third visit of Shāh Hamadān took place in 785 A.H. (1383 A.C.). But he had to leave Kashmīr on account of

1. Professor 'Abdul Qādir's Catalogue of MSS. in the Library of the University of Bombay, page 71. Amīn Ahmad was the first cousin of Nawwāb I'timād-ud-Daula, the father of Nūr Jahān.

2. And not 782 A.H., as stated by Beale in his Oriental Biographical Dictionary, 1881 edition, page 238, because the following chronogram gives 774 A.H.—

سالِ تاریخِ مقدمِ او را . گفت از مقدمِ شریف، بجز

3. Some historians have mistaken Ohind for Hind, even Col. Haig (p. 278, Vol. III).

4. According to the chronogram—

هاتفِ غیبِ سالِ مقدمِ او آمد اینجا علی ثانی گفت

This and the previous chronograms are by Sayyid Muhammad Khāwārī who was the contemporary of Sayyid Muhammad Hamadānī son of Shāh Hamadān, vide Ta'rikh-i-Kabīr, page 12 and page 28.

ill-health, and stayed at Pakhlī¹ for ten days at the request of the ruler of that place whose name was Sultān Muhammad.

From Pakhlī, Shāh Hamadān repaired to the vicinity of Kūnār (or Kūnār-with-Nūr-gal in Kāfiristān) where, after a short stay, he had a relapse on the 1st of Zilhijja 786 A.H. (1384 A.C.) and ate nothing for five days. On Tuesday, the 5th of Zilhijja, he drank water several times, and on the night of the same day he breathed his last at the age of 72. On his death-bed Bismillāh-ir-Rahmān-ir-Rahīm was on his lips, and this, strangely enough, gives the date of his demise.

تاریخ وفات شاه همدان

چو شد از گاه احمد خاتم دین ز هجرت هفتصد و ست و شمانین

برفت از عالم فانی به باقی امیر هر دو عالم آل یسین

[In the year 786 from the time of Ahmad, the last of the Prophets (that is), from the Hijra,

There went from the transitory to the eternal world the prince of both the worlds, the descendant of Yāsīn.]

Shāh Hamadān was buried in Khuttalān.²

1. Pakhlī was an ancient district of the Punjāb, now included in the Hazāra District of the North-West Frontier Province. In Bābur's time, the tract was held by the Khakha and Bamba tribes, whose chiefs had been rulers of the country to the east of the Indus, but had been driven out by the Gibari Sultāns of Bājaur and Swāt. Its inhabitants still speak Pushtū—King's Edition of Bābur's Memoirs, Vol. II, note on page 201.

The Sarkār of Swāt or Swād, according to Abu'l Fazl (Jarrett's Ā'in-i-Akbarī, Vol. II, p. 391), comprised of three districts of Bhimbar, Swāt, and Bājaur. Swāt is 40 kōs in length, and 5 to 15 in breadth. Kāshghar is to its north. Swāt was the residence of the Governor.

After crossing the Sind river (eastwards), there are countries, in the northern mountains . . . appertaining to Kashmīr and once included in it, although most of them, as for example, Paklī . . . do not now obey it.—Beveridge's Bābur-nāma, 1921, Vol. II, p. 484.

Paklī, according to Abu'l Fazl, was a Sarkār in Akbar's time, its length being 35 and breadth 25 kōs. Timūr left a few troops to hold this tract and their descendants remain there to this day. The rulers of this district pay tribute to Kashmīr.—Colonel Jarrett's Translation of the Ā'in-i-Akbarī, 1891, Vol. II, pages 390-1.

2. The state or province of Khatlān, Khutlān or Khotl was located in 1872 by Sir H. Yule, somewhat north of the present Kolāb and west of Darwāz (in Turkistān immediately beyond the north-eastern border of Afghānistān), but Mr. Mayef who travelled in this region three years later, believes Kurgān-Tube (i.e., Kurghān Tipa) on the lower Surkhāb (or Wakhsb) and a short distance west of Kolāb, to have been the centre of the ancient Khatlān . . . Khatlān existed at least down to the end of the fifteenth century, for, in 1498, we find Khusrū Shāh of Qunduz, bestowing the governorship of it on his brother Walī.

The Khazīnatu'l Asfiyā (ii, 293) explains how it came about that Shāh Hamadān was buried in Khutlān: "He died in Hazāra (Paklī) and there the Paklī Sultān wished to have him buried, but his disciples, for some unspecified reason, wished to bury him in Khutlān. In order to decide the matter they invited the Sultān to remove the bier with the corpse upon it. It could not be stirred from its place. When, however, a single one of the disciples tried to move it, he alone was able to lift it, and to bear it away on his head. Hence the burial in Khutlān. The death occurred in 786 A.H." (1384 A.C.). A monument to the Sayyid stands at Pakhlī, which is now a part of Tahsīl Mansihra, District Hazāra, N. W. F. Province.

Abu'l Fazl says (The A'in-i-Akbarī, Jarrett, Vol. II. p. 392) that "Amir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī died here (Bājaur near Swāt) and his dead body was conveyed to Khatlān by his last testament." But Bābur writes: "Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (God's mercy on him!) coming here (Kūnār-with-Nūr-gal in Kāfiristān) as he journeyed, died two miles (one shar'ī) above Kūnār. His disciples carried his body to Khutlān. A shrine was erected at the honoured place of his death of which I made the circuit (tawāf) when I came and took Chaghān-Sarāi in 920 A.H." (1514 A.C.)—The Bāburnāma, A.S. Beveridge's English Translation, Vol. I, p. 211.

Both the state and name have since disappeared.—English Translation of the Ta'rikh-i-Rashidī by Elias and Ross, 1895, page 21, footnote.

The name Khutl or Khutlān was applied in the time of Bābur, and as far back as the age of Ibn Hauqal, to the country lying between the upper branch of the Amu, called Harat or Panj, which divided it from Badakhshān on the south—Bābur's Memoirs, King's Edition, 1921, Vol. I, pages lxviii and lxix.

The great mountainous tract lying in the angle between the Wakhsh-āb (the largest affluent of the Oxus) and the Oxus was known as Khuttal, a name that was also vaguely applied to all the infidel lands east and north of Khurāsān. Khuttal was included in the country along the Wakhsh, lying in its north, where the Wakhsh-āb took its rise. It was, Istakhrī writes, very fertile, and famous for its fine horses and sumpter beasts: having many great towns on the banks of its numerous streams, where corn lands and fruit orchards gave abundant crops. In the 10th century A.C. or the 4th A.H., the capital of Khuttal was Hulbuk.

There is much confusion in the naming of this country: we have indifferently Khuttal and Khutlān or Khuttalān. According, however, to Qazvīnī (ii, 352), Khuttalān was the name of a town of the Turks, lying in a gorge between the mountains, the position of which he does not indicate. 'Alī of Yazd (i. 464 and elsewhere) in describing the campaigns of Tīmūr, generally writes Khutlān.—G. Le Strange, The Lands of the Eastern Caliphate, Cambridge University Press, 1905, reprinted 1930, page 438.

The Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā or 'the most exalted' shrine of Shah Hamadān (Mosque and Khānqāh) between Fath Kadal and Zaina Kadal or the third and fourth bridges, Srinagar, founded in 798 A.H. or 1395 A.C. by Shah Hamadān.

Interior of the Shāh Hamadān Mosque, Srinagar.

A short general view of the Shāh Hamadān Shrine and Mosque, Srinagar.

A distant view of the Shāh Hamadān Shrine and Mosque, Srinagar.

Shāh Hamadān belonged to the Kubrawī order of Sūfis founded by Shaikh Najm-ud-Dīn Kubrā of Khwārizm who died in 618 A.H.=1221 A.C. The Kubrawīs are a branch of the Suhrawardī Sūfis.

That the conversion of the Valley to Islam was furthered by the presence of Shāh Hamadān is undoubted. His prominent co-workers were:—1. Mīr Sayyid Haidar, 2. Sayyid Jamāl-ud-Dīn, 3. Sayyid Kamāl-i-Sānī, 4. Sayyid Jamāl-ud-Dīn 'Alāī, 5. Sayyid Rukn-ud-Dīn, 6. Sayyid Muhammad, 7. Sayyid 'Azīzullāh. They established hospices all over the country which served as centres for the propagation of their religion in every nook and corner of Kashmīr, and by their influence definitely furthered the acceptance of the faith of the Prophet of Arabia. The newly converted people, of their own accord, converted temples into mosques in consequence of their change of faith. Two well-known incidents, in which two of the leading Sanyāsīs or Hindu ascetics of the time, together with their followers, accepted Islam at the hands of Shāh Hamadān after a trial of their 'supernatural' powers, apparently convinced the priest-ridden Kashmīrī of the greatness of the Sayyid's creed. The present ziyārat or shrine of Shāh Hamadān on the Vitastā is said to have been erected in 798 A.H.=1395 A.C. on the spot where one of these trials took place. This ziyārat first built by Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, therefore, really represents the great Sayyid's chillah-khāna or the place of retreat and devotion, and not his tomb, which is in Khatlān. It is constructed chiefly of the wood of the deodār pine, and is equipped with a pyramidal steeple of timber capped with brass, and altogether is quite fine to look at. The mosque of Shāh Hamadān evokes the following couplet:

شہر کے قلب میں ہے مسجد شاہِ ہمدان

جس سے ہر دیدہ مسلم میں ہے نورِ عرفان

کہ درخشاں ہے ہر اک میت کلامِ یزدان

خانۂ دل کو ضیا بخش چراغِ ایمان

— جال کشمیر از پنڈت بابو رام شریف

That Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn himself acknowledged the greatness of the Sayyid is apparent from the fact that the Sultān, who had married two sisters contrary to the shari'at or the law of Islam, had to divorce one of his wives at the instance of Shāh Hamadān. The Sultān also adopted the dress then prevalent in Islamic countries, and had such a great regard for the cap given to him by the Sayyid that he always wore it under his crown. This cap was passed on to succeeding Sultāns, and was buried with the dead body of Sultān Fath Shāh at his special request before his death. It is said that some one prophesied that the burial of the cap would be an indication of the burial of the dynasty, and it is a curious coincidence that the dynasty actually came to an end, with the rise of the Chaks.

Shāh Hamadān was not only a saint but an author too. He wrote the Zakhīrat-ul-Mulūk, a treatise on political ethics and the rules of good government, in the Persian language. The British Museum Manuscript of the book [Add. 7618, Vol II, p. 447] has 250 folios, $10\frac{3}{4}'' \times 9''$, 15 lines, 3 inches long, written in neat Nasta'liq.¹ The Zakhīrat-ul-Mulūk consists of ten chapters as follows:—

(1) Faith. (2) Duties of Man. (3) Virtue. (4) Rights and duties of parents, wives, husbands, children, etc. (5) Rules of government, rights and duties of subjects. (6) Spiritual kingdom. (7) Execution of the lawful and abstinence from the unlawful. (8) Gratitude and contentment. (9) Patience under visitations. (10) Condemnation of conceit and anger and the excellence of humility and forgiveness. The Zakhīrat-ul-Mulūk was translated into Latin by Ernest Friedrick Carl Rosenmueller in 1825 A.C., and into French by C. Solvent in 1829 A.C. It was a favourite book with scholars during the early Pre-Mughul régime of India.²

Among other works of Shāh Hamadān in Persian and Arabic, رساله مکتوبات is a tract on contemplation. در معرفت صورت و سیرت انسان contains Amīr-i-Kabīr's letters. در حقائق توبه discusses the bodily and moral features of man. حل النصوص على الفصوص deals with the real nature of penitence. شرح قصیده نحریه فارصیه is a commentary on Ibn-ul-'Arabī's فصوص الحکم.

1. This book was lithographed by Niyāz 'Alī Khān, Amritsar. Urdu translation published at Lahore in 1334 A.H. under the title of منهج السلوك.

2. The Administration of Justice in Medieval India by Muhammad Bashīr Ahmad, M.A., M.Litt., I.C.S., Aligarh University Studies in History, 1941, page 39.

is a commentary on the wine-qasīdah of 'Umar ibn ul-Fāriz who died in 786 A.H.=1385 A.C. رسالة الاصطلاحات is a treatise on Sūfic terms and expressions. علم القيافه is on physiognomy. ده قاعده gives ten rules of contemplative life. كتاب المودة في القربى puts together Traditions on affection among relatives.

كتاب السبعين في فضائل امير المؤمنين gives the seventy virtues of Hazrat 'Alī. اربعين اميره is forty Traditions on man's future life. روضة الفردوس is an extract of a larger work entitled فردوس الاخبار by Shujā'ud-Dīn Shirūyah. منازل السالكين is on Sūfī-ism.

اوراد الفتحة gives a conception of the unity of God and His attributes.

خلاصة المناقب is a mystical treatise on various Sūfic questions, illustrated by verses of the Qur'ān and Traditions and an exposition of the virtues of the life of Shāh Hamadān. It is by Maulānā Nūr-ud-Dīn Ja'far al-Badakhshī, Shāh Hamadān's pupil.

Shāh Hamadān was also a poet. His ghazals or odes are naturally Sūfistic. The چهل اُسرار is a small collection of religious and mystical poems. It begins with—

ای گرفتارانِ عنقت فارغ از مال و مثال
والهانِ حضرت را از خود و جنت ملال
مُفسلانِ گوی شوقت را غلامی کرده چرخ
سالکانِ راهِ وصلت را دُو عالم پائمال

One cannot sum up Shāh Hamadān's life and work better than Sir Muhammad Iqbāl in the following lines:—

سیدالسادات سالارِ عجم دستِ او معیارِ تقدیرِ اُمم
تا غزالی درسِ الله گرفت ذکر و فکر از دودمانِ او گرفت

مُرشِدِ آن خطّہٴ مینو نظیر میر و درویش و سلاطین را مشیر
 خطّہٴ را آن شاہ دریا آستین داد علم و صنعت و تہذیب و دین
 آفرید آن مرد، ایرانِ صغیر با ہرمانےٴ غریب و دلپذیر

[NOTE.—For further notices on the life and works of Sayyid 'Alī, Shāh Hamadān, the reader may refer to the Habīb-us-Siyar, Vol. 3, Juz 3, p. 87; the Nafahāt-ul-Uns, page 515; the Tazkira-i-Daulat Shāh, p. 325; the Haft Iqlīm, fol. 277 a; Taqī Auhadī, fol. 478a; the Majma'un Nafā'is, Vol. 2, fol. 306 a; the Riyāz-ush-Shua'rā, fol. 263b; the Makhzan-ul-Gharā'ib, fol. 548; the Miftāh-ut-Tawārīkh, page 143; the Majma'-ul-Fusahā, Vol. 1, page 340; Hājī Khālifa, Vol. 4, page 426; Riéu's Persian Catalogue, Vol. 2, page 447; Ethé's Bodleian Library Catalogue, Nos. 1451—1453, and No. 1241 (28); G. Flügel's Vienna Catalogue 3, page 420; Bloché's Catalogue, Paris, Nos. 156-157. W. Pertsch, Berlin Catalogue, page 7, No. 5, page 275 No. 4; No. 9, 7; Berlin Catalogue, pp. 235, 5 and 379, 2; Fleischer, Catalogue, Dresden, No. 198, 20. The Bānkīpūr Catalogue of Persian Manuscripts, Vol. I, No. 150, pp. 229-31, also Vol. 9, No. 943, pp. 194-5; W. Ivanow's Catalogue of Persian MSS. in the Bengal Asiatic Society, 1924, p. 659; Prof. Browne's Catalogue of Oriental MSS., Cambridge, p. 156.]

Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī.

In stimulating the enforcement of Islamic Shari'at or law in Kashmīr, Shāh Hamadān was succeeded by his son Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī. Mīr Muhammad was born in 774 A.H.=1372 A.C. and was twelve years old when his father died. It is said that, before his death in 1384, Shāh Hamadān had handed over to Maulānā Sarāi* for transmission to two of his prominent Khalīfas—Khwāja Is-hāq of Khatlān and Maulānā Nūr-ud-Dīn Ja'far of Badakhshān—certain documents which contained his Wasīyat-nāma (parting advice or bequest) and Khilāfat-nāma (or document conveying succession). Khwāja Is-hāq and Maulānā Nūr-ud-Dīn, in turn, delivered the documents to Mīr Muhammad with the exception of the Khilāfat-nāma, the document conveying succession, which the former retained himself, saying that it could only be made over to one who proved worthy of it. This was apparently a hint for Mīr Muhammad that he should exert himself to follow in the footsteps of his great father. Mīr Muhammad accordingly studied under these prominent admirers of his father, and in course of time acquired succession to his father's

*Of Sarāi, a town in Khurāsān, Irān.

The Khānqāh-i-'Alā or the 'exalted shrine' at Trāl which is about 7 miles south-east of Avantipura (Vāntipōr). This Khānqāh was built in memory of Shāh Hamadān by his son, Mir Muhammad Hamadānī, on the site purchased by him from Sultān Sikandar, it is said for three rubies and hence the name Trāl derived from 'tre-la'l' in Kashmiri. The colony was laid out for the residence of the Sayyids who came with, or followed, Shāh Hamadān from Irān to Kashmīr in the latter part of the 14th century A.C.

position of spiritual pre-eminence. He was the author of a treatise on Sūfī-ism and wrote a commentary on the Shamsiyah, a well-known book in Arabic on logic.

Conversion of Malik Sūhabhaṭṭa.

When 22 years of age, Mīr Muhammad arrived in the Valley in 796 A.H.=1393 A.C. On his arrival in Kashmīr, Mīr Muhammad was received with great honour by Sikandar. At this time, Sikandar's prime minister and commander of the military forces was Malik Sūhabhaṭṭa (Sinhabhaṭṭa), a Brāhman, who appears to have been impressed with the personality of Mīr Muhammad, the simplicity of his faith, life and teachings, and to have embraced Islam with the whole of his family. Mīr Muhammad, whose first wife, Bibī Tāj Khātūn, had died, was offered by Sūhabhaṭṭa, after his conversion, the hand of his own daughter, re-named Bibī Bārī'a. Sūhabhaṭṭa adopted the Islamic name of Saif-ud-Dīn and was consequently known as Malik Saif-ud-Dīn. The Sūhyār Masjid, the Sūhyār-bal, and the Sūhyār Mahalla, near 'Alī Kadal, keep his memory green.

The tomb of Bibī Bārī'a known as Didah Mōji, wife of Mīr Muhammad Hamadāni, at Kotār, Krālapōr, 5 miles from Srinagar, on the road to Charār Sharif.

At the instance of Mīr Muhammad, distillation and the sale and use of wine were prohibited. Satī (self-immolation by a widow on the funeral pyre of her husband) was forbidden. Gambling and nāch (dancing by girls) were prohibited. Mīr Muhammad had a Badakhshān ruby which he gave over to Sikandar. The Sultān, in return, presented three big villages, namely: (i) Wachī from pargana Shāvara, (ii) Nūnawānī from pargana Mārtaṇḍa and (iii) Trāl from pargana Ullar—as jāgīr or permanent holding, which the Sayyid declared as *waqf*¹ for his langar-khāna or hospice. This Waqf-nāma or endowment deed, with the endorsement of the Sultān, has been copied by Pīr Hasan Shāh in his Ta'rikh-i-Hasan.

Mīr Muhammad stayed for about twenty-two years in Kashmīr, and then left for Hajj in 817 A.H. On his return from Mecca, he went back to Khatlān, where he died on 17th Rabī'ul-Awwal, 854 A.H. (1450 A.C.), and was buried near his father. Mīr Muhammad, on entering the Valley, was accompanied by three hundred Sayyids; Shāh Hamadān, his father, having, as already noted, brought seven hundred of them. Kashmīr had, therefore, a total influx of one thousand Sayyids from Turkistān. Shāh Hamadān, it is said, converted thirty-seven thousand² to Islam, Bulbul Shāh having already made ten thousand converts. Mostly these were mass conversions.

Revival of Interest in Religion under Calamities.

Before proceeding further, it would appear necessary to realize the magnitude of the change brought about by the advent of such a large number of Sayyids into the Valley. Deeply imbued with the Sūfī-ism of the age and country from which they emigrated, these Sayyids and their followers seem to have stimulated the tendency to mysticism for which Vedāntism and Buddhism had already paved the way. It may here be remarked in passing that Islam does not countenance the enervating type of Tasawwuf which Iqbāl too condemned in the first edition of his Asrār-i-Khudī when he said :—

الْحَذَرُ از مَجْهُوسَنَدَانِ الْحَذَرُ !

Perhaps also, shocked at the tyranny and self-assertion of Tīmūr, these Sayyids and others 'may have sought refuge in the regions of abstract thought as a solace for the worldly repression under which their country then laboured.' " One cannot forget," says Col. Newall,¹ "that the human mind has ever tended towards mysticism and solitude at times when tyrants flourished." A striking parallel is provided by the present age we are passing through. The well-known psychologist, C. E. M. Joad,² writes discussing the changing mind of Britain : "There is a renewed interest in questions of religion and philosophy touching the nature of the universe and the status and destiny of man within it. Inevitably when a man's spirit is troubled, his thoughts turn to fundamental questions. How, he wants to know, is the mass suffering and wickedness of the world compatible with its Government by an Almighty and Benevolent Being? Did God will the War? Did He create Hitler? That a realization of the fact and prevalence of evil and suffering in the world should bring a revival of man's interest in religion is understandable.

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Kabir, page 25.

2. Bulbul Shāh Shāhib by Muftī Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat, Srīnagar, page 8.

"What is surprising is that it should renew belief. Yet there is in many Englishmen today, and especially in young people newly come to maturity, a renewed interest in the religious view of the world and a disposition to examine afresh in the light of it the traditional answers to fundamental questions, which Christianity has provided, but which most of us have for a generation ignored or derided. Supposing, for example, that the war is the result neither of inept politicians, nor of an out-of-date capitalist system, but of the wickedness in the heart of man? Suppose that it is a punishment for that wickedness?

"The renewed interest in these questions has not yet succeeded in filling the churches. It may be doubted whether it ever will. The new wine which is now fermenting may refuse to pour itself into the old bottles, but that the seeds of a spiritual revival are germinating in the minds of the people of this country, I for one do not doubt."

"Today," on June 18, 1942, cries General Smuts: "We witness on a worldwide scale the failure of political nationalism and materialism to satisfy the deeper needs of man's spirit. This failure, with the nameless sufferings of our generation, will lead to the revival of religious faith. The crisis of religion is coming. The Man of Galilee is, and remains, our one and only leader."

1. Journal of the Bengal Asiatic Society, 1870, page 266.

2. The World Review (reproduced in the Bombay Chronicle, Sunday Edition, 19th April, 1943).

It is also significant to note that Fitzgerald's Rubā'iyāt of 'Umar Khayyām has again become a best-seller under the stress of the present war.¹

Perhaps, the wrath of Timūr had been aroused against these Sayyids and Sūfīs who may have attempted to adopt an independence of act and speech or preached peace displeasing to the great conqueror, as Mīrzā Akmal-ud-Dīn Kāmil Beg Khān Badakhshī refers to it :

گر نہ تیمور شور و شر کردے کئے امیر این طرف گذر کردے

The Rishiyān-i-Kashmīr.

The presence of this type of Sayyid naturally influenced the more pronounced Muslim mystics of Kashmīr. These Muslim mystics, well-known as Rīshīs² or Bābās, or hermits, considerably furthered the spread of Islam by their extreme piety and utter self-abnegation which influenced the people to a change of creed. Abu'l Fazl records his meeting with Wāhid Sūfī. Faizī had informed Abu'l Fazl of the presence of the saint in the following words : " Here an enlightened anchorite has come to my view. For thirty years he has, in an unnoticed corner, been gathering happiness on an old mat. Affectation and self-advertisement have not touched the hem of his garment . . . " Abu'l Fazl mentioned this to Akbar, who asked him to go and inquire. " By great good fortune," wrote Abu'l Fazl, " I met with the saint and the old sore of the divine longing opened afresh. For a long time, he had lived like Uwais³ and Karkhī⁴ in a ruined habitation. He lived apart from joy and sorrow, and took nothing from anybody except broken bread. Though I did not know the Kashmīrī language, yet I gathered much edification through an interpreter, and a new vision dawned on me. As his heart was

1. British Contributions to Persian Studies by Dr. A. J. Arberry, 1942, p. 18.

2. Rīshīs referred to here were Muslim saints. Rom Rīshī, Rīsh Bābā, Mīr Husain Rīshī, Sabūr Rīshī, Sulaimān Rīshī are well-known. Kashmīrīs pronounce the word as Rīshī, the plural is Rīshiyān.

3. See page 100n.

4. Abū Mahfūz Ma'rūf Karkhī was a Magus at first. With his father Firūz or Firūzān he accepted Islam at the hands of 'Alī bin Mūsā ar-Rizā and became a celebrated ascetic and mystic. He died on the 2nd or 8th of Muharram in 200 A.H. or 815 A.C., in the time of Māpūn. Ma'rūf was venerated as a saint and is buried in Baghdād.

much alienated from the people, he could not come out from his cell. His Majesty was delighted with this news and resolved that he would go in person.”¹

Jahāngīr in his *Memoirs*² says that “though they (the Muslim Rīshīs) have not religious knowledge or learning of any sort, yet they possess simplicity and are without pretence. They abuse no one. They restrain the tongue of desire and the foot of seeking. They eat no flesh, they have no wives, and always plant fruit-bearing trees in the fields so that men may benefit by them, themselves desiring no advantage. There are about 2,000 of these people.” Firishṭa and Abū’l Fazl have also described them in words of high praise as abstaining from luxury, living on berries and the wild fruits of the mountains. In remote corners of the Valley, many of them had taken up their abodes for purposes of meditation and seclusion. G. T. Vigne, the traveller, during Sikh rule, met Bābā Sa’id who refused to call even on the Governor of the time. Mahārājā Pratāp Singh called on Shāh ‘Abdur Rahīm Safāpurī. When the Mahārājā asked if he could do anything for the saint, the saint replied that he need not be re-visited by the Mahārājā, a reply reminding one of Diogenes (Diyūjānus al-Kalbī) who, when Alexander asked him if he could do any service, told the Conqueror to let him enjoy the sun.

In some instances, these Muslim Rīshīs constructed ziyārāt or shrines, many of which remain to this day. The shrines attest to their founders’ austerities and virtues and in their traditions form centres for local orders of holy men or priests whose influence must necessarily be beneficial to the people as promulgating the principles of humanity and the moral virtues. “Associated, as they are, with acts of piety and self-denial, the ziyārāt are pleasant places of meeting at fair time, and the natural beauty of their position and surroundings affords additional attraction. Noble brotherhoods of venerable trees of chenār, elms, and the Kābulī poplar with its white bark and shimmer of silver leaves,” says Lawrence, “gives a pleasant shade, and there is always some spring of water for the thirsty” (pp. 287-8).

1. The Akbar-nāma, Persian text, Calcutta, 1886, Volume III. page 549.

2. Translated by Rogers and Beveridge, Vol. II, pages 149-150.

Saints and Rīshīs like Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, Bābā Nasr-ud-Dīn, Bābā Bām-ud-Dīn, Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm, Sayyid Ahmad Kirmānī, Sayyid Muhammad Hisārī, Bābā Zain-ud-Dīn, Bābā Latīf-ud-Dīn, Shukūr-ud-Dīn (popularly known as Shukr-ud-Dīn), Hanīf-ud-Dīn (erroneously called Hanaf-ud-Dīn), Shāh Valī Bukhārī, Saʿīd Bābā, Khwāja Hasan Karī, by their example and precept, smoothed the path of Islam in its slow, steady and systematic conversion of practically the whole Valley. Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn—The Light of the Faith—is the great national saint of Kashmīr. Some account of his life, therefore, would not be out of place here.

Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn.

Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn was born in a village called Kaimūh (old name Kaṭīmusha), two miles to the west of Bijbihāra which is 28 miles south-east of Srinagar, in 779 A.H.=1377 A.C., on the day of the ʿĪd-ul-Azhā. His father's name was Shaikh Sālār-ud-Dīn. His mother, Sadra, was called Sadra Mōjī or Sadra Deddī. In Kashmīrī, Mōjī means 'mother', and Deddī denotes 'elderly.' Both the parents were well-known for their piety. Shaikh Sālār-ud-Dīn, whose pre-Islamic name was Sālār-Sanz and who belonged to the family of the rājās of Kishtwār, embraced Islam at the hands of Yāsman Rīshī, the younger brother of Palāsman and Khalāsman Rīshīs. Of Yāsman Rīshī, it is said that he travelled far and wide. Later, he lived mostly in forests. At times, he used to ride a tiger; which reminds us of the story in Saʿdī's Būstān:

یکے دیدم از عرصہ رودبار کہ بیش آدم بر پلنگے سوار

His daily food was a cup of wild goat's milk. Sadra came of a high Rājput family, but her parents having died very early, she was brought up by her wet-nurse: and, in course of time, was married to a person of humble origin by whom she had two sons—Shush (Shishu) and Gundar (Gandharva). Her husband died after some years and she was left alone. By nature of a religious bent of mind, she came under the influence of Yāsman Rīshī and embraced Islam and was re-married, at the instance of her foster-father, and under the direction of Yāsman Rīshī, to Sālār-ud-Dīn. Sadra Deddī, on her death, was buried at Kaimūh where there is now a famous shrine. Sālār-ud-Dīn whose turban is preserved at this shrine, and Haidar-ud-Dīn, the son, Zai Ded, Shaikh Nur-ud-Din Vali, the Patron Saint of the Valley of Kashmir. He was born at Kaimüh in the Islāmābād district in 779 A.H. = 1377 A.C. on the 'Id-ul-Baqar day and died at Chrār, 20 miles south-west of Srinagar, at the age of 63 in 842 A.H. = 1438 A.C., in the reign of Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin, who accompanied his bier. Chrār Sharif attracts thousands of visitors on the Saint's anniversary.

A general view of Chrār-i-Sharif perched on a dry bare hill, 20 miles south-west of Srinagar.

To face page 99 of Dr. Sufi's 'Kashir'.

the wife, and Zūn Ded the daughter of Nūr-ud-Dīn, are also buried at Kaimūh.

Once when Yāsman Rīshī was ill, Sālār-ud-Dīn and Sadra went to visit him. Lalla 'Ārifā was already there with a present of a bouquet of flowers for the Rīshī. The Rīshī, on Sadra's arrival, gave Lalla's bouquet to her. It is said that, when Nūr-ud-Dīn was born and subsequently would not take his own mother's milk, Lalla was called in, and strangely enough Nūr-ud-Dīn went to her and had milk from her breast. To Lalla the child was thus attached. This was the time when Sayyid Husain Simnānī was in Kashmīr. Through Lalla, the child was brought to the notice of the Sayyid. Shāh Hamadān also came in later. Thus Nūr-ud-Dīn was brought up amidst happy surroundings which led to his future greatness as the Patron Saint of the Valley. When Nūr-ud-Dīn grew up, his step-brothers began to trouble him. They were rogues while he was saintly. Once or twice he accompanied them to find work but felt that he could not be happy with them. He was then apprenticed to a couple of traders, one after the other. There, too, he felt disgusted with the ways of the world, and, deciding upon renunciation, retired to caves for meditation at the age of thirty. It is said that he lived for twelve years in the wilderness. Hence, perhaps, Kaimūh is given the derivation of Kai-wan (or ban, a forest) in rustic belief. The actual cave of contemplation is shown in Kaimūh and is about 10 feet deep. In his last days, the saint sustained life on one cup of milk daily. Finally, he reduced himself to water alone, and died at the age of 63, in the reign of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, in 842 A.H.=1438 A.C. Shams-ul-'Ārifīn or 'The Sun of the Pious' is the chronogram which gives the date of his death. The Sultān accompanied his bier to the grave. The burial prayers were led by a great divine or 'Ālim of the age, Makhdūm Bābā 'Usmān Uchchap Ganāī. The tomb of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn at Charār Sharīf,* a small town perched on a dry bare hill, 20 miles south-west of Srīnagar, is visited by thousands of people to the present day.

*Charār Sharīf (or Tsrār) town had a population of 3,784 in 1931. In 1941 it had 4,037. It is built somewhat in the form of the letter X, and stands on a bare sandy ridge, 13 miles north-east of Shupīān by path. Charār is now connected with Srīnagar by road.

شیخ نورالدین ریشی، پیر جمع ریشیان
 ز اهدے خوش بود، با حق داشت بسیار اشتغال
 بود با تجرید و قسرید، اهل صوم دهر نیز
 تارکِ لحم و بصل، شیر و عسل بسیار سال
 صاحب کشف و کرامت بود و نطق خوب داشت
 ہم او بی بود، گفت این راوی صاحب مقال

—قصیدہ لامیہ یا ریشی نامہ از بابا داؤد خای

[Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, the preceptor of all Rīshīs, was a great devotee and had deep communion with God.

In addition to leading a retired and solitary life, he was also one of those who continually fast. He had given up eating flesh, onions, milk, and honey for many years.

He was a man with intuition, had spiritual powers and had a fine mode of speech. He was like Uwais* (in that he had no known spiritual guide), as an eloquent narrator has stated.

—The Qasīda-i-Lāmiyyah or the Rīshī-nāma (984 A.H. = 1576 A.C.) of Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī.]

Hindus call the saint Nunda Rīshī or Sahajananda. His sayings are preserved in the Nūr-nāma, commonly available in Kashmīr. The Nūr-nāma also gives the life of the saint. It was written by Bābā Nasīb-ud-Dīn Ghāzī in Persian about two centuries after the death of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn. It will be noticed under Persian Poetry in Chapter VIII.

Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn appears to have married Zai Ded and had two sons and one daughter. On the death of the children, Zai Ded also renounced the world, and became a hermitess. She was buried at Kaimūh on her death.

* Uwais al-Qaranī was a saint who had given up the world. He was a contemporary of the Prophet of Islam. Uwais was an inhabitant of Yemen and belonged to the Qaran tribe. He used to say to those that sought him: "Do you seek God? If you do, why do you come to me? and if you do not seek God, what business can I have with you?" Hazrat 'Umar and Hazrat 'Alī visited Uwais at his request, and gave him the cloak of the Prophet. Uwais died between 32 and 39 A.H. = 653 and 659 A.C.,

The Mosque at CARR SHARIF.

The simplicity and purity of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn's life have deeply impressed the Kashmirī who entertains the highest veneration for the saint. In fact, the Afghān Governor, 'Atā Muhammad Khān, gave, as it were, expression to public sentiment when coins were struck by him in the name of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn in 1223-25 A.H. =1808-10 A.C. No other saint perhaps in human history has ever had coins struck in his honour.

Anecdotes of the life of this 'Chief of the Rishīs' are on the lips of the people throughout the Valley. Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn was in the habit of visiting gardens frequently. Once, on his way to a garden, accompanied by a disciple, he stopped and would not move. On his disciple requesting him to proceed, he made the following reply: "Every minute that I spend there, will be deducted from my stay in Heaven."

On another occasion, when invited to a feast, Nūr-ud-Dīn went in ragged dress, earlier than the appointed time. The servants, not recognizing him, would not permit him to enter, and he had to go back to take his food at home. When all had sat for the sumptuous dinner, the Shaikh was specially sent for. He came, this time, in a flowing chugha (cloak) and was given the seat of honour. But the Shaikh, instead of partaking of the food, stretched forth his sleeves and put them on to the plates. The people were astonished at the sight and asked him the reason. He replied: "The feast was not really for Nūr-ud-Dīn but for the long sleeves!"

The saint's attack on hypocrisy is interesting.
Says he—

“By bowing down, thou shalt not become a Rīshī;
The pounder in the rice-mill did not ever raise up its head.”

“By entering a cave, God cannot be attained:
The mongoose and the rat seldom come out of their holes.”

“By bathing, the mind will not be cleansed:
The fish and the otter never ascend the bank.”

“If God were pleased by fasting, the indigent rarely cook food in pots.”

Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn had four disciples: Nasr-ud-Dīn, Bām-ud-Dīn, Zain-ud-Dīn, and Latīf-ud-Dīn. Bābā Nasr-ud-Dīn is to be seen behind Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn in the portrait opposite page 98. Kashmiris remember him as Bābā Nasr. Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn used to address him by his pet name Nasro. Bābā Nasr came of a rich family. In his early life he was robust, but on account of a stomach disease suffered a great deal. When his life was almost despaired of, he came in contact with Nūr-ud-Dīn and gave up a life of ease and became his faithful disciple. Bābā Nasr died in 855 A.H.=1451 A.C., and is buried near his spiritual guide in Charār Sharīf. Local legend has it that Bābā Bām-ud-Dīn was originally a Hindu by the name of Bhīma Sādhī in which Dr. Stein sees a corruption of Bhīma Çāhi. Bābā Latīf-ud-Dīn, it is said, was a Hindu and an official of Marvā-Wārdwan¹ and accepted Islam after a long discussion with Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn. Bābā Zain-ud-Dīn was known as Ziyā Singh and hailed from Kishtwār. His father was killed by his enemies, so that Ziyā Singh became an orphan. Subsequently he came under the influence of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn and became a Muslim. The *Fatahāt-i-Kubrawīyah*² gives the order of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn's disciples or Khalīfas as follows:—(1) Bābā Bām-ud-Dīn (2) Bābā Zain-ud-Dīn (3) Bābā Latīf-ud-Dīn and (4) Bābā Nasr-ud-Dīn (Folios 326-350).

1. Maru-Wārdwan or Maḍivāḍvan is the name of the valley lying to the east of the eastern frontier of Kashmīr running from the Zōji-Lā almost due south towards Kishtwār.

2. The Fatahāt-i-Kubrawīyah by Shaikh 'Abdul Wahhāb Nūrī ibn Rashīd-ud-Dīn al-Kashmīrī (died in 1182 A.H.=1768 A.C. at Srinagar), MS., folio 345. This manuscript is in the possession of Shaikh Ghulām Muḥammad, M.A., M.O.L. (Panjāb), Retired Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Jammu and Kashmīr.

The Ziyarat at 'Aish-maqām, near Maṭan, on the Islāmābad-Pahalgām Road. Bābā Zain-ud-Dīn, one of the four leading disciples of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, is buried here.

Sultān Sikandar's Share.

The propagation of Islam in Kashmīr received a strong impetus in the time of Sultān Sikandar when Wyclif in the West was inaugurating the Lollard movement in England. Sikandar has, however, been blamed for his "bigotry in the persecution of the Hindus of the Valley," and is called by them But-shikan or the iconoclast.

The allegation, that the wholesale destruction of temples in Kashmīr was carried out by Sikandar, is based, apparently, on considerable misrepresentation, more fiction than fact, and a number of non-Muslim writers, one after the other, have contributed their share of abuse to condemning this Sultān. The calumny has been perpetuated to such an extent that we now find Sikandar as an abominable personification of ruthless destruction of all noble edifices erected to Hindu deities. This misrepresentation has grown so enormous that we have completely lost sight of his real character. We are, consequently, not infrequently reminded of Akbar and Aurangzīb in the praise of Zain-ul-ʿĀbidīn and the condemnation of Sikandar. And it has become the wont of every casual visitor to Kashmīr, who is anxious to give his impressions of the Happy Valley to the world, to single out the Akbar and the Aurangzīb of Kashmīr for praise and blame. I hold no brief for Sikandar. He is undoubtedly responsible for what he actually did, but not for more than that.

Any one who visits old or ruined temples anywhere in India down the Jhelum, is very often told by the unlettered guide or the illiterate priest that the idols therein were broken by Aurangzīb. Similarly, any one, who visits such places up the Jhelum, is summarily informed that the havoc to the images was wrought by Sikandar, and every conceivable wrong is attributed to him. The continuance of such baseless stories must be steadily and strongly discouraged as forming one distinct factor in the cleavage that is being wrought in the relation of the great communities that inhabit India. This is no digression into politics, but a warning against the continual masquerade of myth as true and trustworthy history.

"Much harm has been done by this misreading of history," writes Pandit Prēm Nāth Bazāz. "Many young men have been misled in the past by absurd views about the political and economic conditions during the period when Kashmīr was under Muslim kings. Unfortunately these views continue to be held even now and, what is still worse is that, on the assumption that Muslims maltreated Hindus in the past, it is believed that the two communities cannot unite now or in the future. This has brought about a reaction in the Muslim mind, and so mistrust and mutual enmity continue and even wax more and more. It is in the interest of our motherland that the past history should be analysed correctly and read scientifically, without prejudice or malice, sentimental make-believe or so-called patriotic whitewashing. Most of the histories were written by men who worked under the influence of the upper classes. Although their intentions were good, it is difficult to believe that they could judge the events dispassionately. We must therefore sift the facts according to the principles of scientific interpretation available to us now. We must look at facts from a comprehensive and a synthetic point of view and try to find how the masses and not only the classes fared during those days." (Inside Kashmir, pp. 19-20). Let us examine the story of Sikandar in some detail.

Even if Sikandar in his zeal for his own religion has transgressed the limits of moderation, it is unquestionably a false charge against him that he broke down all¹ Hindu temples in Kashmīr and cruelly persecuted every Pandit. What happened long before Sikandar was born? Did not the struggle between Buddhism and Brāhmanism spell ruin to many a fane? Ou-k'ong or Wu-k'ung,² a well-known Chinese pilgrim, who followed in the footsteps of Hsüan Tsang, reached Kashmīr in 759 A.C., and spent no less than four years engaged in the study of Sanskrit, and in pilgrimages to sacred sites in the Valley. He found more than three hundred³ "monasteries or Vihāras in the kingdom of Kashmīr." Ou-k'ong, in Stein's words, is "trustworthy and accurate."⁴ Where are these Vihāras? Is there any trace whatsoever left of them? And who demolished them? Were they mere mud structures?

1. Even the Rev. C. E. Tyndale-Biscoe, who ought to have shown greater regard for truth, writing in 1922, says in his Kashmir in Sunlight and Shade, page 71: "Sikandar destroyed all their (the Hindus') sacred places." The Reverend gentleman is merely gramophonizing hearsay and making no investigation of his own.

2. Notes on Ou-k'ong's account of Kaçmīr by M. A. Stein, Ph.D., Principal, Oriental College, Lahore,—Wien, 1896.

3. Ibid., page 3.

4. Ibid., page 25.

Jayāpīḍa (764-795 A.C.) made "a hundred Brāhmans less one seek death in water."¹ Çaṅkaravaraman (883-902 A.C.), as already stated (vide page 57) plundered the treasures of temples. To perpetuate his memory, he built the town of Paṭan and its temple from the material he had obtained by the plunder of the town and temples of Parihāsapura. But, strange to say, the destruction of its temples is popularly attributed to Sikandar. A copper tablet with Sanskrit inscription has been discovered which predicts the destruction of the temple "after the lapse of eleven hundred years by one Sikandar." This prophecy post factum, points out Sir Aurel Stein,² shows that its author, whoever he might have been "was rather weak in historical chronology. Parihāsapura had been founded only about six and a half centuries before Sikandar But-shikan's time. At the beginning of the eighteenth century, the ruins seem still to have been in a somewhat better condition than now." Did not Abhimanyu II (958-972 A.C.) set fire to his capital and destroy all the noble buildings from the temple of Vardhana Swāmī as far as Bhikshukipāraka" (or the asylum of mendicants)? The escape of this limestone temple is attributed by Cunningham³ to its fortunate situation in the midst of tank water. Harsha (1089-1101 A.C.) took to the spoilation of temples and confiscated the cult images in order to possess himself of the valuable metals of which they were made. The exact words of Pandit Kalhaṇa⁴ are: "There was not one temple in a village, town, or in the City which was not despoiled of its images by that Turushka, King Harsha." Not only this. One shudders when one reads verses 1091-4, Book VII. "He appointed Udayarāja 'prefect for the overthrow of divine images' (devotpātana-māyaka). In order to defile the statues of gods he had excrements and urine poured over their faces by naked mendicants whose noses, feet and hands had rotted away. Divine images... were covered with night-soil as if they were logs of wood... Images of the gods were dragged along by ropes round their ankles, with spittings instead of flowers."⁵ Jonarāja also refers to Rājadeva (1213-1236 A.C.)

1. The Rājatarāṅgiṇī, English Translation, verse 638, Vol. I, page 178.

2. The Ancient Geography of Kashmīr—Calcutta, 1899—page 195.

3. Cunningham, The Ancient Geography of India, 1871, page 96.

4. Stein's English Translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, verse 1095, Book VII, Volume I, page 353.

5. Ibid., verses 1091-1094, Book VII, Volume I, pages 352-53.

who insulted the Bhaṭṭas and plundered them. "And then was heard from among them the cry, 'I am not a Bhaṭṭa,' (meaning Brāhman), 'I am not a Bhaṭṭa.'¹ Again, Dulcha's invasion in the beginning of the fourteenth century wrought havoc to "innumerable gods." Dulcha slaughtered the people and set fire² to the city of Srinagar. This is not my language. This is not my translation. It is not my interpretation either. It is the language of Kalhana and of Jonarāja. It is the translation of Stein and of J. C. Dutt. Now, does any one utter a word about these monstrous rājās like Jayāpīḍā, Çaṁkravarman or Abhimanyu or Harsha, or Rājādeva? But almost every Hindu child learns to heap curses on Sikandar!

Malik Sūhabhaṭṭa, Sikandar's³ minister, appears to be responsible for the destruction of a few temples that took place in Sikandar's reign as Sikandar himself was an infant at his accession. In the words of Sir T. W. Arnold,⁴ Sūhabhaṭṭa set on foot a fierce persecution of the adherents of his old faith: this, he did, probably, in order to show his zeal for his new religion. Ranjīt Sitārām Pandit has also said the same thing. "Sikandar," writes Ranjīt, "had married a Hindu lady named Çriçobhā and was at first tolerant in religion like his predecessors but his powerful Hindu minister, Sūhabhaṭṭa who became an apostate hated his former co-religionists with the hatred of a new convert."⁵ Perhaps, these temples may have also been used as places of conspiracies against the State as pointed out by a local historian.⁶ But it must be distinctly remembered that this sort of religious zeal is deplored by Islam. In fact, it positively prohibits it. It is on record that Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī warned Sūhabhaṭṭa against such action, and pointed out to him the well-known verse of the Qur'ān (II, 256) which runs: 'Let there be no compulsion in religion.' It is true that Sikandar cannot be exonerated from his share of the blame that rightly falls to Sūhabhaṭṭa, but it is absolutely untrue that it was Sikandar who was

1. Kings of Kashmīra, page 10.

2. The Valley of Kashmīr, page 189.

3. Sūhabhaṭṭa is the correct Kashmīrī pronunciation of Sinhabhaṭ or Simhabhaṭ or Baṭ.

4. The Preaching of Islam, second edition, page 292.

5. The Rājatarangīnī, translated by Ranjīt Sitārām Pandit, Indian Press, Allahabad, 1935, page 628 (Appendix K).

6. Bulbul Shāh Shāhib by Muftī Muhammad Shāh Sa'adat, page 8.

responsible for the relentless persecution of every Hindu and the ruthless destruction of every temple.

It would, perhaps, be pertinent to the discussion if we took into account the weighty evidence of personages like Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt and Jahāngīr who have written about temples in Kashmīr and whose testimony is unimpeachable. Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt who invaded Kashmīr in 1531 A.C., long after the death of Sikandar in 1414 A.C., gives a considerable amount of detail about temples in Kashmīr in his Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī. Perhaps, a long quotation from him may be excused.¹ "First and foremost among the wonders of Kashmīr stand her idol temples. In and around Kashmīr,² there are more than one hundred and fifty temples which are built of blocks of hewn stone, fitted so accurately one upon the other, that there is absolutely no cement used. These stones have been so carefully placed in position, without plaster or mortar, that a sheet of paper could not be passed between the joints. The blocks are from three to twenty *gaz*³ (literally, a yard) in length : one gaz in depth, and one to five gaz in breadth. The marvel is how these stones were transported and erected. The temples are nearly all built on the same plan. There is a square enclosure which in some places reaches the height of thirty gaz, while each side is about three hundred gaz long. Inside this enclosure, there are pillars, and on the top of the pillars there are square capitals ; on the top of these, separate parts are made out of one block of stone. On the pillars are fixed supports of the arches, and each arch is three or four gaz in width. Under the arch are a hall and a doorway. On the outside and inside of the arch are pillars of forty or fifty gaz in height having bases and capitals of stone. On the top of this are placed four pillars of one or two pieces of stone.

"The inside and the outside of the halls have the appearance of two porticos, and these are covered with one or two stones. The capitals, the ornamentation in relief, the cornices, the 'dog tooth' work, the inside covering and the outside, are all crowded with pictures and paintings which I am incapable of describing. Some represent laughing and weeping figures, which astound the beholder. In the middle is a lofty throne of hewn stone, over that a

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī, English Translation, Elias and Ross, 1895, page 426.

2. That is, Srinagar.

3. A gaz of Bābur's time was 26 to 28 inches.

dome made entirely of stone, which I cannot describe. In the rest of the world, there is not to be seen, or heard of, one building like this. How wonderful that there should here be a hundred and fifty of them." Mīrzā Haidar may have made mistakes in the course of the narrative of his version of the history of Kashmīr, but what he saw with his own eyes cannot be imaginary.

Jahāngīr (1605-1627 A.C.) speaks in no unmistakable terms when he says¹: "The lofty idol temples which were built before the manifestation of Islam are still in existence, and are all built of stones which from foundation to roof are large and weigh 30 or 40 maunds placed one on the other." As Jonarāja says, Sikandar urged by Sūhabhaṭṭa "broke the images of Mārtaṇḍa, Vishaya, Iṣāna, Chakrabhṛit, Tripureṣvara, Ṣeṣha, Sureṣvari, Varāha and others."² Note the word 'images' only.

For the destruction of temples we have, therefore, to attach the blame not to Sikandar but to the real destroyers—time and the elements, and defects of construction, which are so often the cause of ruin of dry masonry. "Earthquakes³ and the imperfect fitting of the stones, observable in all Kashmīrian temples," remarks Stein,⁴ "are sufficient to explain the complete ruin notwithstanding the massive character of the materials!" "Sikandar was brave and cultured," says Lawrence, "and attracted learned Musalmans to his court." In the face of all this evidence, it is surprising that a number of writers should revel in holding up Sikandar to ignominy. Facts belie the charge.

The conversion to Islam of the Khakha and Hatmāl tribes of Rājputs inhabiting the area to the left bank of the Jhelum between Bārāmūla and Kohālā is said to have taken place in the reign of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn. Khakhu and Hātū, their leaders, were named Khakhu Khān and Hātīm Khān. They took service at the court of the Sultān who granted them jāgīrs.⁵ "The country between Muzaffarābād and Bārāmūla was "in the possession of the Rājās of

1. Memoirs of Jahāngīr, English Translation by Rogers and Beveridge, Vol. II, page 150.

2. Kings of Kashmīra, page 60.

3. Pandit Anand Koul, in his Jammu and Kashmīr State, 1925, enumerates 12 severe earthquakes (vide pages 98, 99 and 100) from 1500 A.C. to 1884 A.C.

4. The Valley of Kashmīr, footnote, page 190.

5. The Ta'rikh-i-Hasan MS.

Kuhkuh and Bubnah" before the visit of Mir 'Izzatullāh¹ in 1812-13 A.C. The area was then known as "Kūhistān or the Highlands of Kashmīr," he adds.

Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī.

Fresh impetus to conversion was given towards the close of the fifteenth century by the arrival in 1487 A.C. and not 1450 A.C., as Lawrence wrongly puts it, of Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn Muhammad al-Isfahānī commonly known as Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī who was a preacher from Tālīsh,² on the shores of the Caspian. Shams's father was Ibrāhīm. His mother came from a Mūsavī Sayyid family of Qazvīn. With the aid of his disciples, Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn won over a large³ number of converts. According to Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt,⁴ Shams-ud-Dīn arrived from 'Irāq in the first reign of Sultān Fath Shāh and converted many thousands of people. After this, he was crowned in the name of the Twelve Imāms. The Shī'as of Kashmīr contend that he was a true Shī'a, and that the Ahwat, or 'Most Comprehensive,' a book in Arabic, containing the tenets of the Nūr Bakhshī⁵ sect,—prevalent

1. Travels in Central Asia by 'Izzatullāh in the years 1812-13. Written in Persian. Translated into English by Captain Henderson, Calcutta, 1872, page 3.

2. Tālīsh, a district and people in the north of the Irānian province of Gilān, has belonged to Russia since 1813 A.C. The narrow strip of shore and mountain slope running north from the south-west corner of the Caspian and facing east over that sea is the Tālīsh country. The village Tālīsh is six farsakhs from Ardabil. Under Irānian rule and even now, Lenkoran is the capital. The people call themselves Tālīsh and speak a local dialect. The number of Tālīsh living on Russian territory is 75,824 according to the census of 1922. Like the people of Gilān, the Tālīsh are Shī'as. Their dialect differs very little from that of Gilān.

3. Arnold's Preaching of Islam, page 124.

4. The Ta'rikh-i-Rāshidī, English Translation by Ney Elias and Denison Ross, 1895, page 435.

5. The Nūr Bakhshī sect is an attempt to find a via media between Shī'a and Sunnī doctrines. In winter, the Nūr Bakhshīs pray with folded arms like the Sunnis: in summer with the hands hanging down like the Shī'as. Like the Sunnis, they pray together and observe Friday prayers, but they do not wash their feet before praying and only perform mas-h like the Shī'a's. The chief cause of quarrel arises in Muharram, as the Nūr Bakhshīs maintain that mourning should take place in the mosque, but the Shī'as do not allow this to be proper. For a fuller account of the Nūr Bakhshī sect, the article of Khān Bahādur Maulavī Muhammad Shafī, M.A. (Cantab), in the Oriental College Magazine for February and May, 1925, may be consulted. Nūr Bakhsh literally means 'enlightening.'

at present in Baltistān—is not his composition. Firishta says that Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn was a disciple of Sayyid Mu‘in-ud-Dīn ‘Alī known as Shāh Qāsim Zār-bakhsh, the son of Sayyid Muhammad Nūr Bakhsh of Khurāsān,* Sayyid Muhammad being a disciple of Khwāja Is-hāq Khatlānī (Supra 92).

از غزلیاتِ امام العالم و غوثِ الاعظم امیر سید محمد الملّقب بہ نور بخش

خَلَدَ اللَّهُ ظِلَالِ اِمَامَتِهِ وَخَلَقْنَا عَلَى كَافَّةِ السَّلَامِ اِجْمَعِينَ
 ناپدا در ہواتے محو و قصور ماندہ از وصالِ جانانِ دُور
 شو گرفتِ اِشّاقِ چوں مجنوں یا خیریدارِ وارِ چوں منصور
 تابانی ز جبرِ بے پایاں ذوقِ یک قطرِ شرابِ طہور
 ایں چنیں آفتابِ عالمِ سوز پس دیوارِ گشتِ مستور
 نور بخش است چشمِ نورِ شید ذتہ گردِ باش و غرقہ نور

[Continued from the footnote of p. 109]

Sir Wolseley Haig says that Shams-ud-Dīn professed to be an orthodox Sunnī, but the doctrines set forth by him in the Ahwat are described as a mass of infidelity and heresy conforming neither to the Sunnī nor to the Shī‘a creed. Shams-ud-Dīn insisted on cursing the first three Caliphs and ‘Ā‘isha. Consequently, Mirzā Haidar, on a religious pronouncement by Sunnī doctors of law in India, went about extirpating the heresay.—Cambridge History of India, Vol. III, page 286. Haig misspells as Ahwatah.

*Khurāsān, literally, ‘the place of the sunrise,’ is one of the five great provinces of Irān.

In that delightful Province of the Sun,
 The first of Persian lands he shines upon,
 Where all the loveliest children of his beam,
 Flow’rets, and fruits, blush over every stream.—Thomas Moore’s
Lalla Rookh.

من از مجملہ خلافتی برکنام
از آں موزے کہ دیدم مژدئیام
ز کیش و نہیب و ملت مجتلی
میزگشته ام دینے نہ دارم
نہ گبرم نہ یہود و نہ نصاریٰ
نہ صابی نہ مسلمان نہ تمام
نہ دیوانہ نہ عاقل مست و ہشیار
مگر مسح و چشم آں رنگارم

اے دل بیا بگوئے وفا خلوتے گزین
در سبک سالکانِ رہِ بے نشان نشین
از ہر چہ غیر اوست تبرائے ابدل
واگنہ ہتی مُنا تو لاچو اہلِ دیں
تجربہ شوز ہر چہ وریں رہ نہ در خواست
بر آستانِ دوست بر آؤدیک اربعین
تا ہر کدورتے کہ بود با صفا شود
از دستِ دیو نفس دہ جانِ نازین
بس نورِ حقِ مشاہدہ افتد ز ابر
مرآتِ رُوئے دوست شود از سرِ یقین
مُلطانِ تخت و مملکتِ سرمدی عشق
شاہی بود کہ کسب کند دوئے چنیں
از نورِ بخشِ ہر کہ طلب می کند رگو
تا پیشِ قاسم آید و مردے شود متین

Sultān Fath Shāh made over to Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn all the confiscated lands which had fallen to the crown, and in a short time, Chaks were converted by him. The Shī'a doctrine, however, did not gain much support from the people of the Valley. Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī was buried at Jaḍī-bal, a quarter in Srinagar, near which Kājī Chak built a large Imāmbāra in the reign of Sultān Muhammad Shāh. The grave of Shaikh 'Irāqī is held in great veneration by the pro-'Irāqī party of Shī'as of Kashmīr as the pro-'Irāqī party of Shī'as do not believe in his being a Sayyid. Malik Haidar Chāḍur, himself a noted Shī'a, also calls him Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, in his Ta'rīkh. There is a report that the dead body of Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī was removed to Chāḍur to avoid desecration by non-Shī'as.

The tomb of Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī at Tsēdur or Chādūr, also named Nūrpur after Nūr-ud-Dīn Jahāngīr and Nūr Jahān.

Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm.

The spread of Shī'ism by Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī alarmed the Sunnīs. Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm by his influence and teaching exercised a considerable check on Shī'ism. Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm was the son of Bābā 'Usmān and was born in 900 A.H. (1394 A.C.) The family was originally Chandravançi Rājput. The name of Shaikh Hamza's Khalīfa is Bābā 'Alī Rīna.

After elementary study of the Qur'ān in Tijr, his village, Shaikh Hamza was sent to Bābā Ismā'īl Kubrawī, a well-known scholar of his time, who enrolled him in the college known as the Dār-ush-Shifā' at the foot of the Kūh-i-Mārān. Besides the Qur'ān, its exegesis, Traditions and the Fiqh, Shaikh Hamza studied Sūfi-ism and allied sciences. One of his noted teachers was Akhund Mullā Lutfullāh. Another was Mullā Fathullāh Haqqānī, the son of Bābā Ismā'īl Kubrawī.

When Shaikh Hamza was a force in the land, he was deported by Ghāzī Shāh Chak, the Shī'a ruler of the time, Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm, Scholar and Saint, born in 900 A.H.=1494 A.C. and died in 984 A.H.=1576 A.C. at the age of 84, during Chak rule in Kashmir. People crowd his tomb at the blossoming of the almond trees below the Hari-parbat, Srinagar.

The Ziyarat of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm at the foot of the Kūh-i-Mārān (Hariparbat), Srinagar.

from the city of Srinagar to a village called Biru (about 20 miles from Srinagar, via Māgām in Tahsīl Badgām). The Shaikh returned to the city only after Ghāzī Shāh's death.

A co-worker of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm was Khwāja Tāhīr Rafīq Asha'ī Suhrawardī of Srinagar. Khwāja Tāhīr in his earlier days was a trader in cloth. He gave up trade after a period of 12 years and betook himself to the service of his religion. Pīr Hasan Shāh says that Ya'qūb Shāh Chak wanted to get rid of him but felt afraid to carry out his intention. Like Shaikh Hamza, Khwāja Tāhīr Rafīq left Srinagar and passed nine years of his life in the hills of Mar-rāj. Subsequently he stayed with Ādar Sūh, a leading Brāhman of the Pargana Ver-nāg. Ādar Sūh embraced Islam. It was here in consultation with Khwāja Tāhīr Rafīq that Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī, Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī and others left for India to invite Akbar to invade Kashmīr to relieve its people from the oppressive Shī'ism of the Chaks.

Shaikh Hamza was instrumental in setting up a large number of masjids in the Valley. He had also acquired control over his breath which he could hold pretty long. This particularly enabled him to enjoy cold baths during snows, which relieved his headaches due to long hours of devotional meditation.

Shaikh Hamza died at the age of 84, in 984 A.H. (1576 A.C.), during the reign of 'Alī Shāh Chak. Khwāja Tāhīr Rafīq led the jināza prayer.

چو جستہ سالِ تاریخ وفاتش مناسب یاقمِ محمومِ مرحوم

— بابا داؤد خاں

The Shaikh was buried in his favourite resort for meditation on a slope of the Kūh-i-Mārān. Nawwāb 'Ināyatullāh Khān, Sūbadār during Mughul rule, built the mausoleum in 1125 A.H. (1713 A.C.). It became dilapidated. Shaikh Ghulām Muhyi'd Dīn, Governor during Sikh rule, re-built it, and is himself buried in the eastern side of the enclosure. At the blossoming of almond trees, below the Kūh-i-Mārān, every year people crowd the tomb of the saint, witness the flowers in bloom, and offer Fātiha to Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm in memory of his great work in spreading Islam by his tours over, and trips into, the remotest corners of the Valley.* Mīrzā Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidā expresses the Kashmīrī's veneration for Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm in his poem :—

ہدیہ پنجاب شیخ حمزہ مخدومؒ

آسمان کو آستماں ہوس پتیری ناز ہے ذرہ ذرہ اس چمن کا مائل پرواز ہے
 صبح آکر تیرے دروازے پہ تھرتا ہے مہر تیرے سنگ آستان کو چوم کر جاتا ہے مہر
 آپ کا محرابِ درہم کو ہلالِ عید ہے ذرہ ذرہ کو یہاں پر دعویٰ خورشید ہے
 کوہِ فاراں میں یہ تیرا جذبہ دیدار ہے کوہِ سینا کی طرح یہ بھی تجلی زار ہے
 بارک اللہ! معنوی بیٹا رسولِ پاک کا عشقِ رگ رگ میں ہویدا سیدِ لولاک کا
 آپ کی سیرت سراپا جذبہ اسلام ہے آپ کی آواز میں توحید کا پیغام ہے
 خاکِ پاسے آپ کے خاکی بھی افلاکی ہوا بارک اللہ! کیمیا وہ پیکرِ خاکی ہوا
 رورہا ہے سامنے شیدا مگر خاموش ہے آج پہلو میں عقیدہ تمندیوں کا جوش ہے
 انقلابِ گردشِ گردوں سے گھبراتا ہوں اپنی بے سامانیوں سے آپ شرماتا ہوں
 ملتِ بیضی ہے قائمِ تہجد سے اے سلطانِ نبی ہے تری زنجیرِ درمیرے لئے جہلِ امتیں

مرزا کمال الدین شیدا

شکر اللہ حال من ہر لحظہ نیکوتر شد است شیخ شیخاں شیخ حمزہ تاملار امیر شد است

(بابا داؤد خاکی)

CORRIGENDA—Read “چمن” for “صحن” in the first line, and “ماران” for “فاران” in the fourth, of the Urdu poem.

*The Tuhfa-i-Mahbūbī, or the Life of Hazrat Shaikh Hamza Makhdūmī in Urdu, by Khwāja Ghulām Muhyi'd-Dīn, editor, Kashmīr, Barqi Press, Amritsar, 1931, is the principal basis of the above note.

Sayyid Muhammad Farid-ud-Din Qadiri of Baghdād, born in 1000 A.H.=1551 A.C., arrived in Kishṭwār at the age of 75 to preach Islam and converted the Rājput ruler of the Valley of Kishṭwar to Islam.

Under the Mughuls, Islamic influence was still further strengthened by many men of learning who came into the Valley. In the reign of Aurangzīb, Rājā Jaya Singh, the Rājput rājā of Kishtwār, is said to have been converted by the miracles* of Sayyid Shāh Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī of Baghdād, and was given the name of Bakhtyār Khān. His conversion seems to have been followed by that of the majority of his subjects, though Islam had already crossed over in Jahāngīr's and Shāh Jahān's times. The journeys of Mughul Emperors to Kashmīr also appear to have effected peaceful conversions along the route, as we still find rājās, the descendants of Rājputs, who adopted Islam.

Shāh Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī.

Sayyid Muhammad Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī, the son of Sayyid Mustafā, a descendant of Shaikh 'Abdul Qādir Jilānī of Baghdād, was born in 1000 A.H. (1551 A.C.). After his education, his extensive travels, his Hajj, his contact with Shaikh Jalāl-ud-Dīn Al-Maghribī in Mecca, and with Shaikh Muhyī'd-Dīn Qādirī in Egypt, he left Baghdād to reach Sind. From Sind he went to Āgra and then to Delhi towards the end of Shāh Jahān's reign. When Rājā Jaya Singh, who ascended the gaddī of Kishtwār in 1674 A.C., was the ruler, Farīd-ud-Dīn with his four companions Darwish Muhammad, Shāh Abdāl, Sayyid Bahā-ud-Dīn Sāmānī, and Yār Muhammad arrived in 1075 A.H. at the age of 75 to preach and propagate Islam in the Valley of Kishtwār. Jaya Singh's successor in 1681, Kirat Singh, also became Muslim and was given the name of Sa'ādat Yār Khān by Aurangzīb in 1687. Hāfiz Abu'l Qāsim Qureshī Akbarābādī, son of Ghiyās-ud-Dīn, was appointed Shaikh-ul-Islam and Chief Justice of Kishtwār. Kirat Singh's example was a further stimulus to his subjects. In 1717, Bhūp Dei, Kirat's sister, was married to Farrukh Siyar, Emperor of Delhi. Kirat's younger brother was Miyyān Muhammad Khān.

The chief temple of Kishtwār in the centre of the town was converted into a mosque, and now has the tomb of Shāh Farīd-ud-Dīn along with his youngest child Anwār-ud-Dīn, who died in infancy. In the second chamber, lies Akhyār-ud-Dīn. The tomb of Asrār-ud-Dīn, the eldest son of Farīd-ud-Dīn, stands at the other end of the town towards the Chaugān, the extensive open heath of Kishtwār. Asrār-ud-Dīn died at the early age of 18 in 1097 A.H.

* Arnold's Preaching of Islam, second edition, 1923, page 292.

(1685 A.C.). Akhyār-ud-Dīn, the second son, survived his father. Akhyār had his early education at Batāla, in Gurdāspur, Punjāb, under Sayyid Badr-ud-Dīn, Dīwān of Masāniyān, the well-known saintly scholar of that place, and later benefited by contact with several teachers at Lāhore, Siālkōt, Delhi, etc. On his return to Kishtwār, he helped in the spread of Islam. Akhyār died on the 7th Zulhajj, 1138 A.H. (1725 A.C.).¹

Afghān rule also tended to increase the number of converts to Islam. A Brāhman originally of Rājwēr and latterly of Sōvarah near Srinagar, accepted Islam at the hands of Mir 'Abdur Rashīd Baihaqī (d. 1180 A.H.=1766 A.C.), and was named Shaikh 'Abdullāh who is the great great-grandfather of Shaikh Muhammad 'Abdullāh, a well-known leader of the day. Even during Dogrā rule, there is a notable instance of conversion. Sardar Waryām Singh, a tahsildār of Kashmīr, became a Muslim under the influence of Shāh 'Abdur Rahīm Safāpūrī.²

After all the Fuqarā' Spread Islam in Kashmīr.

Such has been, in brief, the history of the propagation of Islam in the Valley of Kashmīr. From first to last, the spread of Islam has been, on the whole, generally peaceful. At any rate, Islam was never introduced into the Valley by a conqueror like Mahmūd, nor by a warrior like Shihāb-ud-Dīn, nor by a general like Muhammad bin Qāsim. In fact, the process was reversed. Islam was introduced by a simple faqīr or friar, named Bulbul Shāh, whose simplicity and piety impressed the reigning sovereign of the time, Rīnchan or Rīnchana. The work was taken up and continued by faqīrs; and, though occasionally stimulated by the zeal of a convert like Malik Saif-ud-Dīn under a Sultān like Sikandar, its widespread, peaceful penetration was due to the piety, purity and simplicity of the Muslim rīshīs and saints who denied pleasures to themselves and worked for others. Thus the great Prophet who took pride in faqr or poverty, found fuqarā' (faqīrs or friars) to propagate his faith in the Valley of Kashmīr.

1. The above note is based on (1) Rauzatul-'Arifin, Persian MS., completed in 1259 A.H.=1843 A.C., by Hāfiz Ziā'-ud-Dīn ibn Hāfiz Nasr-ud-Dīn of Kishtwār, (2) History of Kishtwar State by J. Hutchison and J. P. Vogel, Journal of the Panjab Historical Society, vol. IV, No. 1, 1916, pages 29—50. (3) Ta'rikh-i-Kishtwār by Sayyid Najm-ud-Dīn Shāhābādī, Takiya Poliya, near Ver-nāg, Pratap Steam Press, Srinagar, 1334 A.H.=1915 A.C. Price As. 8.

2. The Hayāt-i-Rahīm by Abu'l Amīn Pir Ghulām Ahmad Mahjūr, Rāvi Printing Works, Lāhore, 1340 A.H.=1921 A.C., page 120.

Appendix to Chapter III

Mir Sayyid 'Ali Hamadani's Mausoleum at Khatlan, now called Kolab, in the Tajik Soviet Republic, U.S.S.R.

The foot-note No. 2, on page 87 of Kashūr, describes the location of Khatlān where Mir Sayyid 'Ali Hamadānī or Shāh Hamadān was buried. But, at first, my attempts at obtaining photographs of his tomb were unsuccessful. It was at the Tāj Hotel, Bombay, early in the year, 1947, that I met Mr. Sultān 'Umarov, Rector, Central Asian University of Tashkent (Tāshqand), who introduced me to Professor E. N. Pavlovsky, Membre de l'Académie des Sciences d'U. R. S. S., both of whom came to India to attend the Science Congress at New Delhi in December, 1946. Professor Pavlovsky divides his year officially between Moscow, Leningrad and Stālīnābād. It is through his goodness that I got the photographs for which I am grateful to him. The information he has supplied will, I hope, be delightfully shared by the reader. Extracts from two of his letters are followed by Mr. Kolpakoff's descriptive note on the Mausoleum at Kolāb, the present name of Khatlān or Khotl.

In 920 A.H.=1514 A.C. the Emperor Bābur circumambulated the tomb of Shāh Hamadān, near which were groves of orange and citron.

Letter dated Leningrad, 10th September, 1947.

Dear Dr. Sufi,

I received a portion of the photographs which you required. These were taken by an employé of the Branch of the Academy of Sciences in Tajikistan in Stalinabad, A. Semenov. He, in company with another Orientalist, visited Kolab where he took the photographs. So far, I have received only the photographs of the Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid Ali Hamadani, seven of which I herewith enclose. I am sorry their quality is not particularly high, but I hope you will find some of them suitable for the preparation of blocks. If I receive more of these I shall certainly dispatch them to you at once. When printing subscription to the illustrations, kindly mention that these photographs were taken by Mr. A. Semenov.

Khatlan is now generally known under the name of Kolab (in Russian it is pronounced as Kolyāb). Its capital is a town of the Tajik Soviet Socialist Republic, the crest of which you may see on one of the postal stamps on the envelope.

I am going to Tajikistan and, while at Stalinabad, I shall find more about the Mausolea which interest you, and shall write to you.

Yours Sincerely,
E. PAVLOVSKY

(This preceding letter from Leningrad, dated 10th September, 1947, written in Russian, was kindly translated for me by Mr. W. Ivanow, Colāba, Bombay.)

Letter dated Stalinabad, 5th October, 1947.

Dear Dr. Sufi,

As written to you, I am, at present, in Stalinabad (Tajikistan) where is situated the ancient town of Kolab in which you are interested. I sent you by air some photos of the Mausoleum which interests you. In Kolab there exists only this Mausoleum. It comprises 11 rooms and a row of tombs. I succeeded in obtaining here some photo negatives which I sent to Moscow for enlargement. I shall dispatch them on receipt from Moscow to you.

As regards the description of the actual condition of the Mausoleum wanted by you, I am forwarding to you, under cover of this letter, a cutting out of a local newspaper, The Kolab Truth, containing an article of my collaborator, Mr. Kolpakoff, who visited Kolab with the object of inspecting the Mausoleum, and of taking its photographs. This article, of course, is not very exhaustive, but, any how, it will give you at least some idea of the Mausoleum. Mr. Kolpakoff is busy at present in compiling a more detailed scholarly work, which will be sent to you when printed.

There is in the Tajik Branch of the Academy of Sciences of the U. S. S. R. a special Institute of History, Languages and Literature. Its collaborators are extremely interested in the literature of the East and, particularly, of India. I shall be very grateful to you if you could kindly send me all the books written by you as well as by other scholars who would be prepared to let us have their works not only in English but also in Oriental languages. If there is any possibility of sending us anything concerning history or literature, and there is no inconvenience to you to lend us your assistance in this matter, please address us your messages as follows:—

Leningrad, Avenue of K. Marx, House No. 5, Apartment No. 5, E. N. Pavlovsky, Member of the Academy of Sciences.

Please accept our best regards and our wishes for success in your scholarly endeavours.

With respect.

Sd. E. PAVLOVSKY,
Academy Member.

The contribution of Mr. Kolpakoff to the newspaper "The Kolab Truth" dated the 11th August, 1947, on the Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī at Kolāb, Tājikistān, U.S.S.R.

The Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadāni in Khatlān, now called Kolāb, in Tajikistān, U.S.S.R.

View from the South-East.

View from the East

The Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid 'Ali Hamadani in Khatlan, now called Koliab, in Tadzhikistan, U.S.S.R.

View from the North-West.

Mutawallis of the Mausoleum of Mir Sayyid 'Ali Hamadani at Koliab.

The Mausoleum situated on the eastern side of the town of Kolāb, known under the name of the Mazār Amīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, was erected 596 years ago, and represents one of the most remarkable monuments of the Tājik architecture of the 14th century of our era.

It has been built, from its very foundation, in bricks cemented with liquid alabaster, and the surface of its walls, outside and inside, has been finished also with alabaster. The building, during the centuries of its existence, has been very seldom repaired and its alabaster finish has considerably crumbled to pieces.

The Mausoleum has four entrances: two from the north and, one each, on the eastern and southern sides. All the entrances have arrow-like arches over them. Inside the Mausoleum there are eleven rooms, out of which two are big and nine small. Every one of these rooms is surmounted by a spherical cupola.

The architecture of the monument is very interesting. The idea of its builder has been carried out in a most original way: a building, square at its base, has been converted at the top into a 12-cornered structure crowned with a spherical cupola built in bricks cemented together only with alabaster without any other wooden or metal reinforcements. Many earthquakes have taken place during six centuries, but the building still stands nearly intact, if we ignore occasional cracks in some of the minor cupolas.

In the central room of the Mausoleum, the Muhammadan scholar Amīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī is buried. He originally came from Hamadān and lived, during the epoch of Timūr, in Bukhārā. The year 1314 has been indicated as the time of birth of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī.

As a result of some disagreement with Timūr, Amīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī betook himself from Bukhārā. He travelled extensively in all the countries of the East. In search of knowledge he visited Arab lands. He prayed at Mecca and Medina, then departed for India, where he saw many cities. He stayed for a certain time in Kashmir. Here he met idol-worshippers and converted them to the Muslim faith. There does exist in Kashmir, until now, a mosque erected by him.

Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī also called at Badakhshān. At the end of his migrations, Amīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī settled in Kolāb, where he acquired a big plot of land for the erection of a mosque and mausoleum.

Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī's influence on the population of Northern India was considerable. As a result of his activities and propaganda, the population of Kashmir was converted to Islam. There remains after his death a religious book, written by him under the title of the Avrād-i-Sharīf.

In 1384 Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī was buried in the Kolāb Mausoleum, which became thereafter the resting-place of his descendants. His sister Māh-i-Khurāsānī (Hirosoni, Māh-i-Khurāsānī?) and one woman, with the name of Āftāb-i-Pinhānī, as well as more than ten other descendants of Sayyid 'Alī have been interred in the same Mausoleum. There is also buried there Shoi Tolikoni, a Shaikh, hailing from the city of Tolikon [Tālikhān is a town with longitude 69·27 and latitude 36·45, and lies to the south-west of Mazār-i-Sharif in northern Afghānistān] who resided in Kolāb in his capacity of guardian of the Mosque and of the Mausoleum.

To the south-west of the latter, at a distance of 20 meters from the corner of the building, there is an elevation in the ground whereon lies a marble stone of a very rare workmanship, with an Arabic inscription, relating to Sayyid 'Alī's biography. This stone of polished marble, weighing one ton, has been brought, according to an old legend, to Kolāb from India on elephants. This tombstone has been placed not inside the Mausoleum where Sayyid 'Alī was buried, but on a rising of the ground, where the graves of one of the grandsons of the famous conqueror, Timūr, known to Europeans by the name of Tamerlane, is situated.

This tombstone of a rare workmanship is considerably damaged in certain places, and a marble slab lying formerly over it, which had been intact till 1939, has been broken into several pieces. It is lying at present in this condition, in the Mausoleum, and bears also some inscription in Arabic which it is very difficult, at present, to decipher.

This remnant of Tājik architecture in Kolāb—the Hamadānī Mausoleum as well as the marble tombstone near the latter—do possess a considerable historical value. The local authorities should pay serious attention to the repair of the Mausoleum and to the conservation of the tombstone.

Sd. A. KOLPAKOFF,

Historical Sciences Candidate to the Degree of Doctor.

The Kolāb Truth, of the 11th August, 1947, No. 93/276.

(The letter from Stālīnābād and the article from the "Kolāb Truth" written in Russian were kindly translated for me by Mr. A. Elsingre of Messrs. Volkart Brothers, Karāchī, Pākistān.)

CHAPTER IV

THE SULTĀNS OF KASHMĪR

[1320 to 1555 A.C.]

The last phase of Hindu rule in Kashmīr before the Sultāns.

As already referred to, at the end of Chapter II, Hindu rule in Kashmīr terminated with the close of the reign of Rājā Sahadeva, whom Jonarāja calls “this Rākshasa” or demon “of a king,” and adds that he “devoured” the country “for nineteen years, three months and twenty-five days” (1300-1 to 1319-20 A.C.). Consequently administration was paralysed. The contagion of immorality spread from him to his subjects. Debauchery and licentiousness were rampant. The foundations of authority were sapped. Instead of any financial or economic improvement, Sahadeva’s rule was characterized by general decay.

Dulcha’s invasion.

Such a state of affairs could not fail to attract the notice of the neighbouring chiefs. In the beginning of the fourteenth century, Dulcha—called by Kashmīrī historians Zulchū—and already described as “the commander of the army of the great king Karmasena” came down with a sixty thousand mounted force, and entered Kashmīr by way of the Zōjī-Lā towards the close of Sahadeva’s nominal sway. Sahadeva had not the strength to meet Dulcha and give him battle. He sought safety in flight, and left Dulcha victorious and master of the situation. Intoxicated by success, Dulcha’s followers oppressed and plundered the people to their hearts’ content. Cities, towns and villages suffered unspeakable horrors of vandalism. Numerous inhabitants irrespective of age or sex were ruthlessly done to death. “Innumerable gods were destroyed.” In addition to bloodshed and massacre, Dulcha also “took away the strong men from the country.” In short, Dulcha’s advent in Kashmīr resembled the bloody orgies of Chingīz and Hulāgū.

Thus Dulcha spent his time in Kashmīr in 1319 A.C. Fortunately for the people, the excessive cold of Kashmīr frightened the murderous invader. Finding no other means of escape from the relentless clutches of a severe winter and possibly starvation too, Dulcha left the land. Pandit Birbal Kāchur has appropriately described the invasion of Dulcha in the following brief words: "He came, plundered, killed, seized and departed." No more graphic description of the terrible visit of Dulcha, whom he calls Zulchū, could be given!

Some historians have assigned a Turkish, Mongol or Tātār origin to Dulcha or Zulchū. At the same time, they have given him the name of Zulqadr Khān. It is not at all proved that he was a Muslim. It can be surmised that he was a follower of the Buddhist faith—his king was Karmasena. On account of his ferociousness, Dulcha or Zulchū may justly be called a Hun.

Dulcha's departure from Kashmīr left the country without a ruler or a central government. Factions appeared on every side with independent chiefs who acknowledged no authority. Here Riñchana comes to prominence. Of him we shall speak presently.

Sahadeva, notwithstanding his cruelty and selfishness possessed, to a marked degree, the virtue of hospitality. He was generous without regard to caste or creed. During his reign, which, as already noted, extended over a period of nineteen years, three months and twenty-five days, two personages of potential power entered his dominions. And he made adequate provision for both of them by assigning lands and jāgīrs in order to enable them to maintain themselves.

The first person who received hospitality at the hands of the Rājā was Lankar Chak, the ancestor of the Chaks, who succeeded the Shāh Mīrī Sultāns in the sovereignty of Kashmīr. Being defeated by his brother, Lankar fled from Dārdao or Dardistān and found a ready and welcome asylum in Kashmīr. The second case recorded by historians is that of Shāh Mīr, the son of Tāhir. Shāh Mīr came from Panchagahvra identified by Sir Aurel Stein in his map of Ancient Kashmīr, as the Valley between Būdil and Rajaurī and watered by the Panchagahvra stream. But some histories mention Swāt or Swādgīr. Sahadeva received him with kindness and allotted to him a village.

Riñchana, a son of the ruling house of western Tibet or Ladākh, on the murder of his father by the rebellious nobles of the court, fled from the country, and came to Kashmīr with his companions and soldiers during the invasion of Ḍulcha. In fact, Jonarāja makes him a joint invader with Ḍulcha. Other historians give different versions of Rīñchana's visit. He also entered by way of the Zōjī-Lā as did Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt in 1532 A.C. This route connected Kashmīr with Ladākh and thence with Tibet and China. The photo below was taken when I passed the Zōjī-Lā in 1943.

Into the Zōjī-Lā Pass.

Rinchen, Rīñchana or Rintan.

With regard to the name of Rīñchana there appears to be some difference of opinion among historians. Some have adopted Ratanjū or Ranjū Shāh, while others Rechan, Renchan or Rainchan Shāh, though some also call him Ranjpoi or Ratanchan. One is inclined to accept Rinchen as correct because there is no controversy about his Tibetan or Ladākhī origin. In the Tibetan form, Rinchen means 'Great God.' Rinchan Shāh is a name even today used in Ladākh. Kashmīrīs, however, pronounce it Rintan and call him Rintan Shāh. We have also evidence to this effect in Khwāja Muhammad A'zam's work, the Wāqī'āt-i-Kashmīr or the Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr A'zamī (Muhammadi Press, Lahore, p. 60), in which a mosque is stated still to bear the name "King Rintan's Mosque." People even now call it Rintan Shāh's Mosque. The Sanskrit form is Rīñcana as adopted by Sir Aurel Stein. We shall spell it as Rīñchana.

Rīñchana becomes king of Kashmīr.

We should not dismiss from our minds the chaotic condition prevalent in Kashmīr at the time due to Dulcha's invasion. The country had no ruler. Its old king Sahadeva, a pusillanimous creature, had disappeared. His commander-in-chief, Rāmachandra, had retired behind the walls of the Gagangīr¹ fort. Kashmīr obviously needed a strong, capable ruler. Rīñchana who, according to Jonarāja,² was 'a lion among men' and was respected for his great intellect, happened to be on the spot. He had already won the hearts of those with whom he came into contact. The number of his adherents and partisans increased gradually till he became strong enough to seize the throne and enforce authority. His accession to the throne was not the result of an act of usurpation: rather it was almost a popular acclamation. Soon after his accession, he busied himself strenuously with the task of freeing the country from the evil influences which, owing to lack of proper administration and an almost complete absence of strong central authority, had become rampant at this time.

In considering himself without a rival, Rīñchana however reckoned without his host. His exaltation to the throne naturally aroused in Rāmachandra a keen sense of jealousy and ambition. He, therefore, refused to acknowledge Rīñchana's authority. Rīñchana, acting wisely, offered him no open resistance fully realizing that the country had already suffered so much from the ravages of war. Furthermore, he was keenly alive to the dissension which had torn the country into factions, and understood the value of peace. He, therefore, resorted to a stratagem. For a considerable time, he sent to Gagangīr his Tibetan or Ladākhī subjects, disguised as merchants, who sold their commodities at very low rates. After he had disarmed suspicion in this way, he directed his men, duly equipped with instructions, to rise in rebellion the moment he arrived there. As a consequence of this coup, Rāmchandra was slain and his son, Rāwanchandra, captured along with his relatives. Thus, in 1320 A.C., Rīñchana found himself the undisputed monarch of Kashmīr.

1. Gagangīr, the old name of which is Gangangiri, is now a small village in the Lār pargana in the Sind valley of Kashmīr, prettily situated on the right bank of the river, about 10 miles west of Sonamarg. Pop. 398.

2. Jogesh Chunder Dutt's English Translation of Jonarāja's Sanskrit Chronicle entitled Kings of Kashmira, Calcutta, 1898, Vol. III, page 1^a.

To further strengthen his position, Rīñchana “planted on his breast queen Koṭa,” that is, he married Koṭā Rānī, daughter of Rām chandra, and appointed his son Rāwanchandra the commander of the army with Western Tibet and Lār as his jāgīr or assignment. The step was also calculated to drive out of Rāwanchandra’s mind all desire of vengeance. This purpose was completely achieved inasmuch as they began to live on perfect terms of intimacy and sincere friendship. Malik Haidar Chāḍura tells us that Rīñchana gave Rāwanchandra the surname of “Jī Dūst,”¹ to express his esteem according to the old Kashmīr practice. A son was born of Koṭā and was named Haidar by Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn as Rīñchana had become a Muslim and been given that name.

Rīñchana’s sense of justice.

Rīñchana was gifted with the qualities of wisdom and justice, and always decided matters in an absolutely impartial spirit, neither caring for power nor wealth. Jonarāja² has recorded the following two cases which, strange as they are, serve to show how solicitous of justice he was, and how resourcefully he acted in deciding cases which would sometimes baffle even the wisest heads.

One day Timi, the brother of Takka or Tukka³ an old companion of Rīñchana, forcibly took milk from a milkmaid. She cried to Rīñchana for justice. He ordered that Timi should be brought into the court. The accused being brought in, Rīñchana inquired from him if the milkmaid’s complaint was true. The accused totally denied the charge. When asked to furnish further proof, the milkmaid said :

1. The Ta’rikh-i-Kashmīr by Ra’īs-ul-Mulk Malik Haidar Chāḍura—MS., page 121. According to this author, jī—master or lord—was used in Kashmīr to express one’s esteem and respect for a person. Dūst means a friend. Jī Dūst would thus mean an ‘esteemed friend.’

2. Jogesh Chunder Dutt’s English Translation of Jonarāja’s Sanskrit Chronicle entitled Kings of Kashmīra, Calcutta, 1898, Vol. III, page 20.

3. Tukka is probably Tibetan ‘a Brugpa, pronounced Dugpa or Tugpa.—The Indian Antiquary, Bombay, Volume XXXVI, July 1908, page 187.

“Rip open the stomach of this man instantly, and if no milk is found in it, then I and my son should be killed.” The stomach was ripped open and found to contain milk.

According to the dictates of civilized society, this method of meting out justice is utterly cruel and primitive; though, at that time, it did not appear so strange to a society which was far behind in its standard of civilization and had no definite code of laws for its guidance. Else Rīñchana, himself a lover of justice, would not have followed it. Besides, this incident clearly indicates his complete impartiality, as also his utter disregard of the relative position of the parties before him. Further, it shows how accessible he was to his people that even such small matters could be brought before him. No impediment was placed in the path of the party seeking justice at his hands.

The other case was as follows. Two men living at Vānabal, a village in Baḍgām Tahsīl, had entrusted their mares and their foals to a shepherd. The strange thing about the foals was that they were of the same age and had exactly the same colour. When the mares and the foals were conveyed from their winter quarters to a summer pasturage, one of the foals died or, according to another version, “was killed in the forest by a lion.” The two mares were unable to realize which of them had suffered the loss of its young one, and the result was that the surviving young one continued to suck milk from both as it desired. The shepherd, too, was unable to say which master had lost his mare’s foal. The ownership of the surviving foal, therefore, became a matter of contention between the owners of the two mares. The suit was taken to the king who ordered the owners to bring their mares and the foal to a bridge of boats near the city. This being done, the king ordered the foal to be thrown into the river. On this, the mother of the foal also jumped into the river. The other only neighed. By this ingenious method, the king restored the foal to its real owner. When Rīñchana “decided dubious cases in this manner, the people thought that the golden age had, as it were, returned.” The feudal landowners or barons, called Dāmaras who were, at times, the cause of considerable trouble to former rulers, were brought under perfect control.

Rīñchana, in brief, spared no pains in dealing out justice to the administration of which he devoted the remaining days of his life. And he likewise issued strict instructions to all his officials. In the words of Jonarāja, "the illustrious Rīñchana Suratrāṇa (Sultān) gave the country, which was weary of trouble and disorder, rest under the shelter of his arm." The people of Kashmīr witnessed again all the festivities with which they had been familiar under their former kings (Kings of Kashmīra, p. 19, also The Indian Antiquary, July 1908, p. 183).

Rīñchana's conversion to Islam.

After he had restored order in the country, Rīñchana turned his attention to religious matters. Though Buddhism¹ was nominally the prevailing religion at this time, the country was distracted by the dissensions of sectaries, whose hostile and contending claims to religious truth perplexed the inquirer dissatisfied with the national religion. At first the king sought guidance from the wise and scholarly priests of the Hindu faith. According to Pandit Hargopāl Kaul Khasta,² obviously on the authority of Jonarāja who mentions Ārī Deva Swāmī as the person referred to, they declined to guide him or initiate him into Āivism. According to Pandit Bīrbal Kāchur and Ra'is-ul-Mulk Malik Haidar Chādura,³ they did all they could to enlighten him on the subject, but failed to satisfy him. Their diverse views on religion and their doctrine, which militated against each other, only baffled him. Undaunted by this failure, he did not abate his efforts. After much perturbation of spirit and constant prayer, it is said that, one night, he dreamt that some one was telling him: "Early in the morning the next day, the first person thou dost behold is thy guide." He acted on this advice, and the next morning observed from the roof of his palace a person with his face towards the west, apparently engaged in offering prayers in a manner hitherto unknown to him.

1. Jarrett, J. A. S. B., No. 1, 1880, page 17.

2. The Guldasta-i-Kashmīr by Pandit Hargopāl Kaul, Fārsī Ārya Press, Lāhore, 1883, Part II, page 101. Pandit Hargopāl Kaul Khasta, Pleader, was deported from Kashmīr by the late Maharājā Ranbhīr Singh in 1294 A.H.=1877 A.C., "for fabricating lies against His Highness."

3. The Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, Persian, MS., by Pandit Bīrbal Kāchur, page 64, owned by the late K. B. Pīrzāda Muhammad Husain 'Ārif, C. I. E., ex-Chief Justice, Kashmīr.

The Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, Persian, MS., by Ra'is-ul-Mulk Malik Haidar Chādura, owned by K. B. Maulavī Zafar Hasan, Retired Deputy Director-General, Archaeology, Nasheman, Delhi Gate, Delhi, page 125.

دید شخصی چو سرو بر لبِ جو مُطلعش صُبح و آفتابش دُر خسره پوشیده همچو خوش حالان خوانده قرآن چو بلبلِ نالان

—سعداٹھ، شاہ آبادی

Riñchana at once went to this man and asked him his name and his religion, and also the particular prophet whose follower he was. To these inquiries the stranger replied as follows :—

“ My name is ‘Abdur Rahmān ; my religion is Islam ; I worship the one God who has no co-partner, and I am a follower of that Prophet whose message has superseded all previous messages and commandments.” The saint, as stated in Chapter III, is popularly known as Bulbul Shāh.

The saint next proceeded to relate several of the anecdotes of the Holy Prophet together with a brief account of his mission. The king was deeply impressed by the clear and simple exposition of Islam, and accepted this faith assuming Sadr-ud-Dīn as his Islamic name. This conversion, in 720 A.H. (1320 A.C.), marks the beginning of Muslim rule in Kashmīr.

بلبلِ اسلام جب آیا تو مے گلزار میں
اے گلِ کشمیر کیا وہ دن، وہ ساعت، یاد ہے؟
دیکھنا شاہی محل سے راجہ ذی جاہ کا
گھر بلا کر پھر اُسے دینا وہ دعوت یاد ہے؟
کلمہ توحید پڑھ لینا وہ دل کے شوق سے
اور اُس کے ہاتھ ٹر کرنا وہ بیعت یاد ہے؟
جنتِ ارضی میں اوّل تو وہی نو مسلم ہوا
رفتہ رفتہ پھر ہونی تیری رعیت یاد ہے؟

—کلام فوق، مطبوعہ ۱۹۳۳ - صفحہ ۱۶۵

Jonarāja does not mention the conversion of Riñchana to Islam. And yet he calls him Suratrāṇa (p. 19) which is the Sanskrit form of Sultān. He also calls Riñchana's son Haidara (p. 23). Shāh Mīr founds the Kashmīrī era from this very year, as we shall see later. Had this year not been important in the history of Kashmīr on account of Rīñchana's conversion to Islam, Shāh Mīr could have begun the Kashmīrī era right from his own accession in 740 A.H. (or 1339 A.C.), that is about twenty years later.

Taking a general survey, we see that, at this time, Sultān Ghiyās-ud-Dīn Tughluq Shāh ruled at Delhi, and his namesake at Herāt. Abū Sa'īd, the Mongol Īl Khān, ruled over Khurāsān during 1317-1334 A.C. Sultān Nāsir was the ruler of Egypt. In Spain, Mulūk-ut-Tawāif or petty kings continued. Edward II reigned over England and, in France, we find Charles IV; in Germany, Ludwig of Bavaria. and in Scotland Robert I. Benedict XII became Pope after the death of John XXII.

After Rīñchana, his brother-in-law and commander-in-chief, Rāwanchandra, also embraced Islam. This example was followed by many nobles, and Islam became so popular that, within the course of two years or so, it could number many adherents.

During his brief reign, Sadr-ud-Dīn set up many buildings in Kashmīr. Immediately after his conversion to Islam, he built, according to the desire of Bulbul Shāh, a grand Khānqāh.* To this he assigned a number of villages so that the expenses of the Khānqāh and the needs of those who either resorted to it, or stayed therein for a brief period, might be met from their revenue. It is interesting to note that, in course of time, the name of the Khānqāh, viz. Bulbul Lānkar, came to be applied to the locality itself. Malik Haidar Chādura who wrote his history in 1027-30 A.H., during the reign of Jahāngīr, writes of this place: "The locality is still flourishing and also the Khānqāh, which has been recently repaired, retains its original condition." Jonarāja's allusion to Rīñchanpōr, the town built by Rīñchana apparently refers to the town round about this same locality which is now the Bulbul Lānkar mahalla of Srīnagar.

A Jāmi' or cathedral mosque was also built by Sadr-ud-Dīn. In this, Friday and the usual daily prayers were performed. This indicates the rapidity of the spread of the Muslim faith.

* A Khānqāh, in Kashmīr, connotes a mosque, a devotional retreat or residence. A Ziyārat is a devotional retreat, or a grave, or a tomb of a saint.

For his private use, Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn had built a palace and a mosque in which the famous Kashmīr stone known as Dewar Kaiyn was used. Kaiyn in Kashmīrī means a stone. Khwāja Muhammad A'zam, who lived in the twelfth century A.H., or the 18th century A.C., writes in his history of Kashmīr that "these stones are still found buried under débris." Both he and Malik Haidar Chāḍura, who preceded him and lived in the eleventh century A.H., write that the original mosque built by Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn was destroyed by fire, and a smaller one, known by the name of King Rintan's Mosque, was built on the same site. In this the stones of the previous mosque were utilized. We are further told by Khwāja Muhammad A'zam that it was very much in use also in his time, and that the usual daily prayers were offered in it. It now stands deserted and dilapidated in Bulbul Lānkar near the Ziyārat or tomb of Hazrat Sayyid Muhammad Amīn Uwaisī.

Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn's death.

The Sultān reigned for three years and one month and nineteen days. During this time, he skilfully organized Kashmīr into a corporate kingdom. He passed away on Friday, 25th November, 1323 A.C. (723 A.H.). The death is recorded to have been due to a disorder of the wind-humour brought about by the bitter cold of winter.* He was buried in a place to the south of the Khānqāh, Bulbul Lānkar, situated between 'Alī Kadal and Nau Kadal, on the right bank of the Jhelum, a little below the Ziyārat of Muhammad Amīn Uwaisī, Srīnagar. The grave has been declared as a protected monument by His Highness's Government Notification, dated 2nd September, 1941 A.C., and lies in the Bulbul Lānkar mahalla.

The death of Bulbul Shāh, the Sultān's spiritual guide, took place on the 7th Rajab, 727 A.H. (1326 A.C.), in the reign of Udayanadeva.

Among the sole survivors of the Sultān's family were his infant son, Haidar Khān, whom Jonarāja calls Haidara, and his queen Koṭā Rānī who, we have reason to believe, remained a Hindu at heart. Sadr-ud-Dīn left his son, by a previous arrangement, under the personal supervision

*Reference to the Bhoṭṭas or Bhauṭṭas in the Rājatarangīnī of Kashmīr, Translation and Notes on Sanskrit Text by Pandit Dayā Rām Sahnī, and Notes from Tibetan Records by A. H. Francke.—The Indian Antiquary, Bombay, Volume XXXVII, July 1908, p. 186.

The tomb of Rinchanu, afterwards Sultan Sadr-ud-Din, the first Muslim ruler of Kashmir, buried in Bulbul Lankar, between 'Ali Kadal and Nau Kadal, Srinagar.

and tutelage of his trusted councillor, Shāh Mīr, whom he had chosen to look after the upbringing and education of his son. It was Shāh Mīr's wife who performed the duties of a foster-mother to the infant king. Hence, the appellation of foster-father given to Shāh Mīr by some historians. A further account of Shāh Mīr will be given in its proper place.

Chaos in Kashmīr: Islam suffers a reverse.

After a brief reign as mentioned above, Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn, formerly Rīñchana or Rintan, passed away having introduced Islam into Kashmīr. His infant son, Haidar Khān, being unable to take into his hands the reins of government, Koṭā Rānī was the Queen-Regent.

Koṭā Rānī's religion.

It is indeed very strange that, herself being the wife of a staunch Muslim, Koṭā Rānī, later on, adopted a course which throws grave doubts on her adhesion to the Muslim faith. But it is equally impossible to assert with any amount of certainty that she was not a Muslim. After King Rīñchana's public conversion to Islam, she could not, in pursuance of the tenets of that creed, remain a Hindu, being the wife of a Muslim, because Islam does not countenance marriage or lawful conjugal relations between a Muslim and a non-Muslim, unless the latter is a Kitābiya.¹ It is not conceivable how Sadr-ud-Din, devout Muslim as he was, could have a non-Kitābiya for his wife. If it is said that he tolerated this relationship as a result of his own ignorance, it will also have to be admitted, at the same time, that the charge of conversion of Koṭā under compulsion has no foundation against Sadr-ud-Dīn. We may, therefore, assert that considering her safety and station in life to lie in professing Islam, Koṭā Rānī might have done so, but remained a Hindu at heart. Anyhow, her subsequent policy leaves no doubt that her profession of Islam had been out of diplomacy. She invited, from Gandhāra,² Udyānadeva, brother

1. In Arabic, one of 'The People of the Book,' used in the feminine gender.

2. Gandhāra, the corridor of India, and now the North-West Frontier Province, was the province of the Kābul valley which included the districts of Nagarahāra or Jalālābād, Lamghān (about 100 miles east of the Kāfiristān district), Kābul and the northern region towards Kūhistān, and the district of Gandhāra proper, formerly called Purushapura, but at this time Parashāwar, and today Peshāwar, the last so named by Akbar.

of Rājā Sahadeva, whom she married. And she invested him with regal authority with the support of Shāh Mīr. This widow re-marriage, and particularly with her husband's brother, would not be approved of in the ordinary Hindu society of that age though Draupadi marrying her husband's brother is a classical instance. It is, therefore, not improbable that Koṭā was not an out and out Hindu, at any rate.

Udyānadeva's return : his reign from 1323 to 1338 A.C.

As a result of Dulcha's invasion and his sojourn in Kashmīr in 1319, Udyānadeva had fled to Swāt or Gandhāra and stayed there till he was recalled and raised to the throne by Shāh Mīr. Jonarāja's words are: "Shahamera bestowed on Udyānadeva the country of Kashmīra together with queen Čri Koṭā" (p. 24). It was by no means a wise choice, because the Rānī's consort was not gifted with the noble qualities generally expected of kings. He was cowardly, and lacked wisdom and ability. The Rānī, however, had the foresight to keep authority in her own hands while she allowed her consort to be titular sovereign. Shāh Mīr and Bhikshāṇa Bhaṭṭa or Pacha Baṭ Kākāpurī, the one as commander of the armies and the other as minister carried on the government of the country. Koṭā had a son by Udyānadeva, named Bola Ratan, whom she placed under the supervision of Bhikshāṇa who was both a tutor and foster-father of the prince, his wife having served as foster-mother. According to Jonarāja, Shāh Mīr looked after Haidar and Bhikshāṇa the other child. And Koṭā was naturally "disposed towards both her sons" (p. 26). But as to the future of the two children we know nothing except that Shāh Mīr "imprisoned the two sons of the queen" (p. 32).

Invasion by Achala or Urwan or Urdil. Udyānadeva's flight.

Soon after Udyānadeva's return and his elevation to kingship, Kashmīr had to face another horde of invaders led by Urwan, also called Urdil by some historians, and Achala by Jonarāja. Udyānadeva, as before, sought safety in flight towards Western Tibet or Ladākh. It will not be out of place here to point out that Pandit Hargopāl Kaul Khasta, the author of the Guldasta-i-Kashmīr, describes this flight as the result of confusion and dread, on the part of Udyānadeva. He mistook Urwan or Urdil, who had marched across Hūrapōr, the station for entrance and exit from and to the Rajaurī direction, for Ḍulcha. It is, however, remarkable that the Rānī was not beset by any such hallucination.

Koṭā Rānī's appeal to her subjects: united resistance and the invader's retreat.

Realizing that she had been deserted by her consort, Koṭā Rānī rallied all her forces. In consultation with Shāh Mīr, she made an appeal to all officials and the people inviting them to offer a united front to the invaders, and so save themselves and the country. In this appeal, she recalled to their minds the deplorable conditions* which prevailed in Kashmīr after Ḍulcha's invasion. This appeal elicited a ready response and aroused feelings of patriotism among the subjects who willingly offered their services for the defence of their motherland. Accordingly, they met the enemy who had to retreat and sue for terms of peace, and was permitted to leave the country unmolested. It was a great achievement to the credit of Koṭā who won fame as the courageous queen of Kashmīr.

Udyānadeva re-appears in Kashmīr.

Notwithstanding his base desertion of her, Koṭā Rānī re-called and re-instated her consort on the throne after the enemy had retired from the country. However, the people remained incensed against Udyānadeva and refused him the respect due to a monarch.

Udyānadeva's reign lasted over a period of fifteen years, two months and two days. For this period, historians have recorded nothing but confusion and chaos. It must not be ignored that, in this régime, the councillors were the same as in the previous one. The example of the king, however, was such that their counsel availed the country little. In times of crises, when their counsel did prevail, as on the invasion of Achala, the country benefited. With regard to the retreat of Urwan or Achala, all historians agree in attributing it to Shāh Mīr's courage and ingenuity. As a result, Shāh Mīr was allowed a far greater share in the affairs of the country than was ever done before. He had now become the right hand of the Rānī and the mainstay of the kingdom during the nominal reign of Udyānadeva.

Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr* by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, MS., page 128.

Koṭā Rānī rules from 1338 to 1339 A.C.

Udyānandeva died in 1338 A.C. Koṭā established herself on the throne and removed the court to the fort of Andarkōṭ.¹ Moreover, in order successfully to execute the duties which now devolved upon her as the sole monarch of Kashmīr, she appointed Bhikshaṇa her chief minister, superseding Shāh Mīr who naturally raised the standard of revolt. Koṭā ruled the country for about five months.

The revolt of Shāh Mīr needs a little explanation. It is evident from the foregoing account that Udyānandeva was not capable of maintaining himself on his tottering throne without the strong and active support of Shāh Mīr who had won the hearts of the people by his tact, bravery and resourcefulness. It seems that Koṭā Rānī wanted to checkmate his growing influence by retiring to Andarkōṭ and through Bhikshaṇa, her chief minister. Perhaps, she foresaw Shāh Mīr's future ascendancy, and took this step which the latter construed to be tantamount to an open challenge. Shāh Mīr, therefore, naturally felt insulted at this show of ingratitude, especially considering the services he had rendered and the loyalty he had maintained at a time when he might easily have usurped the throne. Now Koṭā Rānī's ingratitude impelled him to a course of very strong action. The kingdom was falling into chaos and anarchy, and this was another incentive to Shāh Mīr to appropriate all authority to himself.

Shāh Mīr's ancestry.

Shāh Mīr was the son of Tāhir and the grandson of Qaur Shāh² of whom Jonarāja says he was "born of noble family." Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad calls him Shāh Mīr, son of "Tāhir Āl, son of Āl Shāshab bin Karshāshab ibn Nikrūz" and refers his ancestry to "Arjun, one of the Pāndūs." Firishta calls him Shāh Mīrzā. Once, when Shāh Mīr was wandering in a wood, he fell asleep and saw a dream in which a person predicted to him that his des-

1. Andarkōṭ, old Andarkōṭh, and the ancient Jayapūrā, the capital of King Jayāpīda (764-795 A.C.), the grandson of Lalitāditya, is a village about a mile from Sumbal on the left bank from the bridge over the Jhelum, and five miles below Shādīpōr. Andarkōṭ now consists of 143 houses, and has a population of 1,171. All are Muslims, half Shī'as and half Sunnis. Andarkōṭ has the grave of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mīr in a small poky room about 20 feet square, having walls of half-baked bricks.

2. Qaur means iron, or an instrument, or a weapon in Turkish.

cendants would rise to the dignity of the kingship of Kashmīr. It is not difficult to imagine that a prediction like this could not but spur the ambition of Shāh Mīr who, judging from his position and power, could successfully defy and set aside the authority of the ruling monarch. He had come to Kashmīr in the year 1313 A.C., in the reign of Sahadeva, and had known it for these twenty-five years. As we learn from Jonarāja, Shāh Mīr had grandsons—Shirshātaka (Shir-āshāmak) and Hinda (Hindāl) at this time, we can conclude that he was well advanced in years.

The end of Koṭā Rānī.

Still Shāh Mīr did not adopt a course of open rebellion. He, at first, sent the twice-widowed queen, proposals of marriage which she rejected with scorn. This refusal of Koṭā Rānī can be explained in several ways. She might have felt an aversion to marry the foster-father of her own son, Haidar Khān, though Islam has not placed any ban on such a union. It is also probable that she might have thought it beneath her dignity to marry a servant of the state. But, then, she had already been the wife of Rīñchana, at one time an invader of her country and the murderer of her father, Rāmachandra.

There could be but one consequence of Koṭā Rānī's rejection of Shāh Mīr's proposals, and this immediately manifested itself. Shāh Mīr invested Andarkōth now known as Andarkōṭ (the site of King Jayāpīda's capital, Jayapūr or Jayāpīdapūr) with a large army. The Rānī's chief minister, Bhikshaṇa, was killed by Shāh Mīr by a stratagem. Her nephew Achaladeva, Rāwanchand's son, was only a minor. The majority of her subjects favoured Shāh Mīr. It was, therefore, small wonder that some of Koṭā Rānī's adherents deserted her. She had to bow before the supreme will of Shāh Mīr. She, therefore, yielded a reluctant consent to the espousal. Malik Haidar Chāḍura is not clear on what exactly happened immediately after Koṭā's marriage. He asserts that the inhabitants of Andarkōṭ corroborate the committal of suicide by Koṭā which agrees with Jonarāja* who states that Koṭā Rānī spent one night as Shāh Mīr's wife and that the next day—tenth bright lunar day in the month of Shrāvaṇa in the year 3915 Laukika—she was seized and "put in prison." She may have killed herself in her imprisonment. Her two sons were also imprisoned as we have stated already.

* Kings of Kashmīra, 1898, Volume III, page 32.

SULTĀN SHAMS-UD-DĪN I

[740 to 743 A.H. or 1339 to 1342 A.C.]

Shāh Mīr, Jonarāja's Çrī Shamsadīna, ascended the throne, according to Malik Haidar, in the year 753 A.H. (1352 A.C.). Bīrbal Kāchur* places Shāh Mīr's accession in the year 743 A.H. (1342 A.C.) and his death in 747 A.H. (1346 A.C.). Khwāja Muhammad A'zam, in his Wāqī'āt-i-Kashmīr and Pīr Hasan Shāh in his Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr also give the same dates. Malik Haidar Chāḍura, omits to mention the date of Shāh Mīr's death. He contents himself with the remark that Shāh Mīr ruled for three years and five months. This period mostly agrees with that of Jonarāja who says three years and five days, while Abu'l Fazl has two years, eleven months and twenty-five days. Obviously this is an error, and we can safely put the date of Shāh Mīr's accession at 740 A.H. or 1339 A.C., on the testimony of Jonarāja who gives the date of the deposition of Koṭā Rānī as 10 Shrāvaṇa Shudi Laukika or old Kashmīr Samat 3915 which corresponds with 1339 A.C. Shāh Mīr's accession is particularly notable for the fact that it marks the firm establishment of Muslim authority in both its religious and secular aspects in Kashmīr. It is true that, with the conversion of Rīñchana, Kashmīr had come directly under Islamic influence, but its continuity was broken by the death of that king and consequent chaos under Koṭā and Udyānadeva. Shāh Mīr, though a foreigner to Kashmīr, it must be set down to his credit, saved Kashmīr from foreign aggression. He also saved it from becoming a province of the Tughluqs of Tughluqābād or Delhi. Kashmīr may have lost its independence. It is Shāh Mīr who saved its freedom and his descendants sustained that freedom for over two centuries. Shāh Mīr assumed the title of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn.

Shams-ud-Dīn's descendants known in Kashmīr as Shāh Mīrīs, continued to exercise sovereign authority over Kashmīr for over two centuries. Shāh Mīr's reign was beneficial for Kashmīr, as it brought peace and settled

* Pandit Bīrbal Kāchur wrote his History in 1251 A.H. or 1835 A.C., when Kashmīr was under Ranjīt Singh. Bīrbal was a great scholar of Persian, and a poet too. Kāchur, or Kāchru, was added to his name, it appears, on account of his employment under a Pandit family of that name as affirmed by Pandit Anand Kaul Bāmzaī.

government, or as Jonarāja says he “assuaged the troubles of Kashmīr and changed its condition.” He abolished the exactions of his predecessors. He repaired the ruin caused by the invasion and extortion of Dulcha whose ravages had left for generations the traces of his incursion. The Sultān by written orders fixed one-sixth of the produce as land-tax. Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn introduced what is called the Kashmīrī era from the accession and conversion of Rīñchana in 720 A.H. (1320 A.C.), which continued till the advent of Mughul rule in 1586 A.C. in the Valley. This new Kashmīrī era officially superseded the old Kashmīrī era known as Laukika or Sapt Rishī Era under Hindu rule. This new era was used in State documents and on tomb-stones, some of which preserve their inscriptions to this day. I was interested to know that Kashmīrī zamīndārs use this Kashmīrī calendar even now. It is a luni-solar system, stands at 625 in 1944 A.C. or 1363 A.H. The Sultān raised two families—the Chaks or Chakrecas or Chakras and Māgres or Mārgeshas of the Chronicles and not Mākres of Colonel Haig and others—to importance and drew from them his generals and soldiers. In the words of Wolseley Haig,² Shāh Mir used “wisely and beneficially the power he had acquired. The Hindu kings had been atrocious tyrants, whose avowed policy had been to leave their subjects nothing beyond a bare subsistence. He ruled on more liberal principles.” The author of the Ta’rkh-i-Hādī, as it were, translates Col. Haig in the following couplet:—

در عدالت موشگافی کرد شاه شمس دین

بود اندر شغل حق او بے نظیر و بے قرین — تاریخ هادی

Shams-ud-Dīn died on the full moon day of Ashādha in the year 18 Laukika or 1342 A.C. or 743 A.H. The chronogram is—

آمده شمس باز زیر سحاب

[The sun, then, came under the cloud.]

The tomb of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn at Andarkōṭ near Sumbal was declared a protected monument in 1941. The actual grave is about 5 feet long, covered over by latticed wood.

1. Kings of Kashmīra by Jogesh Chunder Dutta, Calcutta, 1898, Vol. III, page 32.

2. The Cambridge History of India, 1928, Vol. III, page 277.

The people of Andarkōṭ call it the grave of Sultān Bādshāh, some holy man, little knowing that he was the founder of Muslim rule in Kashmīr about whom Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad had said:—

رایتِ پادشاہِ دینِ پرور سایہ افکند بر جہاں یکسر
 مُسرعانِ فلک رسانیدند خبرِ عدلِ او بہ ہر کشور
 قابِ فتنہ گشت زار و نزار خانۂ ظلم گشت زیر و زبر
 —طبقاتِ اکبری

از خواجہ نظام الدین احمد - جلد سوم - صفحہ ۳۶

[The standard of the Bādshāh, the Cherisher of the Faith,
 Cast its mighty shadow over all the world ;
 The messengers of the sky conveyed
 The news of his justice to countries all.
 The body of disturbance became weak and thin,
 The house of oppression into ruin fell.]*

SULTĀN JAMSHĪD [743 A.H. or 1342 A.C.]

Shams-ud-Dīn died in his eightieth year. His eldest son, Jamshīd, succeeded him in 743 A.H. or 1342 A.C. But soon after quarrels arose between him and his younger brother 'Alī Sher. These lingered on for some time when Jamshīd was defeated at Vantipōr (Avantipur). 'Alī Sher assumed the title of Sultān 'Alā-ud-Dīn in the same year, viz. 743 A.H. (or 1342 A.C.). Jamshīd, however, lived for a period of one year and ten months after his dethronement. The Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī says that Shāh Mīr had two other sons also, one called Shīr Āshāmak and the other named Hindāl and they also aspired to greatness.

There is little of importance recorded by historians about the short reign of Jamshīd except that he built a bridge at Sopōr. The author of the Ta'rīkh-i-Kashmīr A'zamī gives the names of three saintly anchorites, namely Khalāsman, Palāsman and Yāsman, all brothers, who passed their lives in devotion and retirement.

SULTĀN 'ALĀ-UD-DĪN

[743 to 755 A.H. or 1342 to 1354 A.C.]

Sultān 'Alā-ud-Dīn reigned for twelve years, eight months and thirteen days. His reign was essentially a period of peace

*B. De's English Translation of the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, Vol. III, p. 636.

The lowly looking, dilapidated tomb of Sultān Shams-ud-Din Shāh Mir or Mirzā, great founder of the first Muslim the dynasty of Kashmir, buried in Andarkōh, about a mile from Sarnal or Sunbal, 5 miles below Shadipor, on the Jhelum.

and internal reform, and aimed at the alleviation of suffering and the amelioration of the hard conditions which were the direct result of Dulcha's and Achala's incursions. Towns and cities which had become depopulated were re-populated. A townlet bearing the name 'Alā-ud-dīnpūr was built at Srinagar. 'Alā-ud-dīnpūr subsequently became the name of a mahalla of Srinagar on which the "Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā" and Malik Āṅgan wards now stand. The Sultān showed himself in advance of his time in the matter of social legislation when he promulgated a law that no unchaste childless widow should have any share of her husband's property from her father-in-law. A severe famine occurred during the second year of his reign. The king extended a helping hand to the people of the famine-stricken area with a view to reducing their hardship. Lalla, the hermitess, attracted general notice during this reign. "The great and wise king," writes Jonarāja,¹ "made Jayapīḍāpura his capital, and built at Ṣrī Rīnchanpura, an edifice named Budhagira." Budhagira is now a mahalla or quarter near 'Ālī Kadal in Srinagar. This edifice built by 'Alā-ud-Dīn was used as a resting-place for travellers in his time and thereafter, and appears to have been used by traders from Ladākh and Baltistān.

The Sultān passed away in the year 755 A.H. (or 1354 A.C.), and was buried in 'Alā-ud-dīnpūr. He left two sons, namely, Siyāmuk—afterwards known as Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn—and Hindāl, afterwards Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn. Some historians have called Shihāb-ud-Dīn and Qutb-ud-Dīn the brothers of Sultān 'Alā-ud-Dīn. This is wrong. Shihāb-ud-Dīn succeeded 'Alā-ud-Dīn.

The Sultanate

The adoption of the title of Sultān by Muslim rulers is somewhat difficult to explain. Sir Thomas Arnold² contends that the explanation has never been fully given. The word itself occurs in the Qur'ān merely in the abstract sense of 'power,' or 'authority.' But, as early as the end of the first century of the Hijra, it was used in Egyptian Papyri as the common expression for the governor of a province. So, continues Sir Thomas, it came to be applied to an official

1. Kings, of Kashmīra, Vol. III, page 37.

2. The Caliphate by Sir Thomas Arnold, Clarendon Press, Oxford, 924, page 202, to whom power had been delegated. As independent rulers set themselves up in the provinces of the empire, it became common among them to adopt the title of 'Sultān.' In this respect the Saljūqs appear to have set the example, though it is commonly asserted that Mahmūd of Ghazna (998-1030 A.C.) was the first Muslim potentate of importance to adopt the title. Like many other titles Sultān gained in dignity by being assumed by great and powerful monarchs, while the rulers of petty provinces contented themselves with the words Malik, Khān, etc. The influence of Turkistān, therefore, is apparently responsible for the introduction of the term in Kashmīr. The Chaks, however, adopted the title of 'Bādshāh' in rivalry of the Mughul Emperors of India.

SULTĀN SHIHĀB-UD-DĪN

[755 to 775 A.H. or 1354 to 1373 A.C.]

Shihāb-ud-Dīn, Jonarāja's Shahāvadīna, succeeded his father, 'Alā-ud-Dīn, in 755 A.H. (1354 A.C.). Previous to his assumption of the reins of government, he was nicknamed Siyāmuk corrupted from Shīr-āshāmak, the little milk-drinker. Jonarāja's early names of Shihāb-ud-Dīn are Shīrhshāṭaka and Shivasvāmika, or Mīr Ashātāk of the Siyar-ul-Mut'akhhirīn (Vol. I, p. 194) which should presumably be looked upon as variants of this nickname.

Shihāb-ud-Dīn's reign represents the most glorious period of the sovereignty of the Sultāns of Kashmīr. It was the period of military prowess shown by the Kashmīrīs. Shihāb-ud-Dīn was the first of the Kashmīrī Muslim monarchs who marched out with the purpose of making foreign conquests. He counted as lost those brief periods of time in which he obtained no victory. "Deer-eyed women attracted not his mind, nor the pleasures of drinking, nor the light of the moon," writes Jonarāja.* Only the march with his army, he continues, occupied the king's attention. "Neither heat nor cold, nor evening nor night, neither hunger nor thirst obstructed his march. When this proud king was on his march, he found no difficulty in crossing unfordable rivers, inaccessible mountains and barren deserts." Shihāb-ud-Dīn in Kashmīr history figures next to Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa. "Adorned with pearls and necklace, this king was the most prominent among all the great kings past and future as the central jewel is prominent in the necklace," adds Jonarāja. Sir Muhammad Iqbāl echoes this view when he says—

* Kings of Kashmīra, Vol. III, page 38.

عمرها گل رخت بر بست و گشاد خاک ما دیگر شهاب الدین نژاد
—جاوید نامہ

Commanders under the Sultān, according to Jonarāja, were Chandra Dāmara or Dār and Laula Dāmara and Shūra. Muslim historians add Sayyid Hasan Bahādur son of Sayyid Tāj-ud-Dīn Hamadānī, as war minister. Sayyid Hasan, according to the Fatahāt, was the Sultān's son-in-law. Achala or Abdāl Raina or Rīna, formerly Achaladeva, son of Rāwanchandra whom we noticed on page 125 is another addition.

The tomb of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's Commander-in-Chief Achala or Abdāl Rīna, known as Malik Sahib, near Chāḍura.

Shortly after his accession, Shihāb-ud-Dīn thoroughly re-organized his military forces. The composition of Kashmīrī armies must have been furnished by people from the hill-country of Pūnch, Rajaurī, Būdil (on the route from Srinagar to Akhnūr), and the areas between Muzaffarābād and Bārāmūla—called Kūhistān or the Highlands of Kashmīr.

Shihāb-ud-Dīn conquered Tibet, consisting of Great Tibet or Ladākh, and Little Tibet or Baltistān from the ruler of Kāshghar. Kishtwār and Jammu were added. He then proceeded with an army consisting of 50,000 horse and 5,00,000 foot through the Punjāb, and encamped on the banks of the Indus where he was opposed by the Jām of Sind (Brigg's Firishta, Volume IV, page 458) whom he completely defeated. Probably this Jām was Jām Banhatiya who ruled from 1344 to 1359 A.C. The history of Sind during this period is not extant and, therefore, verification of this victory over Sind by Shihāb-ud-Dīn is not forthcoming from Sind sources. Elliot and Dowson also deplore the gap of this part of Sind history. (See volume I, page 484). Jonarāja, however, mentions it. Sir Walseley Haig in the Cambridge History of India (Volume III, page 278) says: "At the beginning of his reign, he led an army to the borders of Sind and defeated the Jām on the banks of the Indus." The defeat of the Jām was so crushing that, when the report reached the kingdoms of Qandahār and Ghaznī,¹ the rulers of those places became apprehensive lest he should next make a descent upon them. Shihāb-ud-Dīn, however, took Und, Ohind or Waihind or Hend—pronounced by the Pathān as Hind. Und was formerly known as Udabhāṇḍa, the capital of Gandhāra, and is situated 16 miles above Attock. At Peshāwar he defeated the Afghāns and put to death many of the inhabitants who opposed him. Thence he marched through the passes of the Hindu-Kush subduing Kāshghar, Badakhshān and Kābul.

[Here the reader need not be reminded that "the country, now termed Afghānistān, had merely consisted of a congeries of petty states, ruled by tyrannical chiefs who were frequently at war with one another. Later, it became provinces of great empires which were ruled by foreign conquerors and their descendants. Later again, it was a dismembered country, with its provinces held by three neighbouring states"²—Irān, Turkistān and India. For the first time in its chequered history, Afghānistān became an independent state under Ahmad Shāh Durrānī (1724-73)—who by conquering Kashmīr, as it were, counterbalanced Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's conquest of Kābul.]

Shihāb-ud-Dīn raised many columns of victory in the course of his conquest. On his return he established a cantonment in the plains on the banks of the Satluj. Here in 1361 A.C. (763 A.H.), he was met by Udakpati, the Rājā of Nagarkōṭ (Kāngra), who had returned from a plundering excursion into the territory of Fīrūz Tughluq round Delhi. Udakpati, having come back laden with spoils, placed them at the feet of Shihāb-ud-Dīn and acknowledged

1. Ma'āthir-i-Rahīmī of Mullā 'Abdul Bāqī Nahāvandī, Vol. I, page 203.

2. A History of Afghanistan by Brig.-General Sir Percy Sykes, London, 1940, Vol. I, page 367.

fealty to him. It is to this phase of the Kashmīrī that Sir Muhammad Iqbāl refers—

در زمانے صف شکن ہم بوده است چیرہ و جان باز و پُردم بوده است

It is noteworthy that, after his conquests, Shihāb-ud-Dīn always behaved like a brave soldier, and generously restored the kingdom to his fallen foe.

It is to the credit of Shihāb-ud-Dīn that he was not only a great conqueror but a builder too. He founded the towns of (i) Lachhmī-nagar, named after Lakshmi, his queen, at the base of the Harī-parbat, near about where the Shārikā-devī temple now stands. (ii) Shihāb-ud-dīnpūr, the modern Shādīpūr. Shihābpūr, now called, according to Hasan, Shihāmpūr, a mahalla of Srinagar is also attributed to him. On the 28th Khurdād, Akbar went to visit Shihāb-ud-dīnpūr. "This is a delightful spot on the bank of the Bihat," writes Abu'l Fazl in the Akbar-nāma.¹ "The planes there raise their heads to the sky and the verdure enchants the eye." "This village (Shihāb-ud-dīnpūr) is one of the celebrated places of Kashmīr and is on the Bihat," wrote Jahāngīr too. "About a hundred plane trees (Chinār) of graceful form clustered together on one plot of ground, pleasant and green, join each other so as to shade the whole plot, and the whole surface of the ground is grass and trefoil, so much so that to lay a carpet on it would be superfluous and in bad taste."²

For his soldiers Shihāb-ud-Dīn constructed barracks. He sedulously resumed the repairs of his father of the devastations caused by the invasions of Dulcha and Achala which had impoverished the country. Land revenue was properly assessed. The Sultān became the murīd of Sayyid Tāj-ud-Dīn deputed by Shāh Hamadān, encouraged learning, and practised just administration of laws for all.

Shihāb-ud-Dīn's indignation at the suggestion of Udayaṅgri, his prime minister, to melt the brass image of the Brihadbuddha (Great Buddha) and coin the metal into money is eloquent of the tolerant character of his rule. The Sultān's

1. English Translation by H. Beveridge, I.C.S. (Rtd.), Calcutta, 1939, Vol. III, page 829.

2. The Tūzūk-i-Jahāngīrī or Memoirs of Jahāngīr, English Translation by Rogers and Beveridge, Royal Asiatic Society, London, 1909, Vol. I, page 94.

ministers mentioned by Jonarāja are Koṭṭabhaṭṭa (a descendant of Muktāpīḍa's minister) and Udayaḥri. Koṭṭabhaṭṭa received many favours from the Sultān, but subsequently renounced the world and entered a forest. Udayaḥri is mentioned often. Possibly he was the chief minister, at any rate, after the renunciation of Koṭṭabhaṭṭa. Udayaḥri is mentioned by Jonarāja as "inimical to gods" and may, therefore, be supposed to have been a Muslim.

Hindāl, the Sultān's younger brother, was made heir-apparent. Shihāb-ud-Dīn's two sons, Hasan Khān and 'Alī Khān, fled to Delhi, having been declared outlaws, and expelled from the kingdom at the instigation of the Sultān's second wife, Lāsā. Lāsā was the daughter of queen Lakṣmī's sister. She must have been beautiful indeed to supplant her mother's sister as the sweetheart of the Sultān. Jealousy then naturally marred the relationship between the aunt and the niece with the consequence that the old queen saw the sending away of her beloved sons into exile. Although, at last, Shihāb-ud-Dīn wrote letters with his own hand to his sons to come back to him, they did not come in time. The crown, therefore, passed on to Hindāl.

Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn reigned for about nineteen years. He 'cheered celestial beauties by his embraces,' i.e., died in 775 A.H. (1373 A.C.), and is believed to be buried under the sub-post office at Mahārāj Ganj in Srinagar. For this the authority is no less than Khwāja A'zam Didamari who says that the site was in the neighbourhood of Bad Shāh's grave, and that there was a dome over the grave of Shihāb-ud-Dīn which had partly fallen down in his time. It is indeed sad that such a great Sultān—the pride and ornament of the entire royalty of Kashmīr—should have his grave covered over by the chair of a petty postmaster! If so, no greater insult to the national pride of the Kashmīrī can possibly be conceived!

Shihāb-ud-Dīn was loved at home for his just and humane administration, and feared abroad for the valour of his arm and the strength of his armies. His rule raised Kashmīr and the Kashmīrīs to great power. Jammu, Tibet, the Punjāb, Sind, Nagarkōṭ (Kāngra), Ghaznī, Qandahār, Kāshghar and Badakhshān were subdued by him and gave him allegiance. Kashmīrīs were never so powerful as a conquering nation after the death of Shihāb-ud-Dīn. Sir Mu'ammad Iqbāl's line and Pandit Jonarāja's statement are thus an eminently deserved tribute to the greatness of a great sovereign.

But looking at the present-day condition of the Kashmīrī, his military might under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn reads like a myth! It is a humiliating transition from conquest to cowardice during the course of six centuries. The position of the Kashmīrī people could never be more degrading than that the present descendant of the former Rājā of Jammu (whom we found above a tributary of Kashmīr), now His Highness the Mahārājā Bahādur of Jammu and Kashmīr, should ridicule the idea of raising a Kashmīrī regiment as requiring 'police protection for its march' when His Highness' Army Member* pleaded for the enlistment of Kashmīrīs in His Highness' army!

فاعتبروا يا أولي الابصار

[So learn a lesson, O ye, who have eyes!]

More of this the reader will find in the relevant section of Military Administration under Muslim Rule in Chapter X of Kashīr.

SULTĀN QUTB-UD-DĪN

[775 to 791 A.H. or 1373 to 1389 A.C.]

On the death of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, his brother, Hindāl, ascended the throne in 775 A.H. (1389 A.C.) under the title of Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn. Hasan Khān, Shihāb-ud-Dīn's eldest son, along with his younger brother 'Alī Khān, had already been exiled by his father as we know. But the new ruler showed his generous-mindedness by inviting prince Hasan Khān to become heir-apparent. Firishta says that Qutb-ud-Dīn was remarkable for his zealous attention to public business which he transacted in person with justice and moderation.

The Sultān's reign was disturbed when Lohara revolted. Lohara is the mountain district formed by the southern slopes of the Pīr-Pāntsāl near Tōsha-maidān. Sultān Mahmūd of Ghazni's invasion of Kashmīr was brought to a standstill at the siege of the fort of Lōhkōt, the castle of Lohara. Qutb-ud-Dīn deputed his commander

Recollections: 50 Years in the Service of India* by Mr. G. E. G. Wakefield, Lahore, 1943, page 194.

Dāmara Lolaka with a force to reduce it. The royal force was routed. The commander was killed, and was buried, to use Jonarāja's* words, according to "the last rite of the Yāvanas," which shows that the commander was a Muslim though the name looks like that of a non-Muslim.

An event of great importance in this reign was the birth of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, the Patron-Saint of Kashmīr, in 779 A.H. (1377 A.C.). A note on his life has appeared in Chapter III.

Udayaṣrī, the latter-day premier of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, either on account of loyalty to his old Sultān, or to gain and retain power in his own hands, conceived the conspiracy of dethroning Qutb-ud-Dīn and of setting up Prince Hasan Khān instead. But the conspiracy fizzled out. Udayaṣrī was imprisoned and then beheaded. The prince fled the country.

Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, about whom details appear in Chapter III, arrived for the second time in Srīnagar in 781 A.H. (1379 A.C.), and was received with great fervour. Under the influence of the great Sayyid, the Sultān gave more of his time to meditation and prayer, and became a great Sūfi poet with the nom de plume "Qutb." The Sayyid bestowed on the Sultān his own cap which Qutb-ud-Dīn wore in his royal crown. Famine occurred more than once during the time of the Sultān, but he successfully coped with the situation by his generosity and relieved the people from starvation. He founded Qutb-ud-dīnpūr on which two mahallas of Srīnagar, viz. Langar-haṭṭa and Pīr Hājī Muhammad, now stand.

Qutb-ud-Dīn was now old. He had no son. The queen, at last, gave birth to a son "who was the ornament of the family and the delight of his father and was like a feast after a fast." Jonarāja calls the child Shrinagāra, an ornament or decoration (p. 53). The Tabaqāt calls him Sīkār, perhaps, a corruption of Sikandar. Jonarāja, further on, calls him Shakandhara (p. 54). This is the child who becomes known as Sikandar. In the festivities which were held on the occasion, the Sultān, out of the gladness of his heart, ordered the release of prisoners. The queen later gave birth to another son named Haibat.

Kings of Kashmīra*, Volume III, page 48.

Qutb-ud-Dīn died after having reigned for a period of fifteen years in 791 A.H. (1389 A.C.). The two sons left were both infants.¹ Sultān Sikandar succeeded him. This is the year in which Malik Sarwar founded the Sharqī dynasty of Jaunpur, and Tīmūr occupied Baghdād.

The tomb of Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn in Qutb-ud-dīnpūr or Langarhaṭṭa, near the ziyarat of Pīr Hājī Muhammad Sāhib, Śrīnagar, is a protected monument.

SULTĀN SIKANDAR

[791 to 816 A.H. or 1389 to 1413 A.C.]

Sikandar ascended the throne in 791 A.H. (1389 A.C.), when Richard II, the son of the Black Prince, was king of England. Sikandar's rule was also contemporaneous with that of Henry IV and Henry V.

Sikandar's mother Haurā² was a source of considerable strength to him in the earlier part of his reign on account of his infancy. As Jonarāja uses the word infant, Sikandar may possibly have been, at the most, about under eight years of age at his accession. A lady of remarkable personality and strength of character, Haurā dealt with all opposition and struck terror into the hearts of malefactors. She even went to the extreme of putting an end to the lives of her daughter and son-in-law, Shāh Muhammad, thereby nipping in the bud a rebellion which the latter was secretly instigating and which might have proved formidable.

We are told that Sikandar, on achieving majority, was particularly inclined towards militarism which led to a complete transformation of his army. It is also stated that his military undertakings were seldom unsuccessful. His invasion of North-West India in 1395 A.C., was creditable to his military organization. He accordingly subdued Ohind and married Mīra, the daughter of its chief, Fīrūz. Subhaṭā or Çobhā or Çrī Çobhā Mahādevī, the sister of Khuñjyarāja, was the Sultān's wife but she was, it appears, at this time childless. Later on, she was the mother of prince Fīrūz whom Sikandar "exiled in order to prevent a commotion." At another place Jonarāja¹ calls 'Obhā Mahādevī's two sons "adopted children." Mīra was the mother of three sons, the second of whom Shāhī Khān was destined to become Baḍ Shāh or the 'Great Sovereign' known in history as Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidin.

1. Kings of Kashmīra, Volume III, page 54.

2. Firishta gives her name as Sūra Begam.

Sikandar, sharing the tendency of the age, seems to have possessed a passion for enforcing religious law in all state affairs. His justice and passionate desire for religious uniformity are shown in the following lines of a poet of which the last also gives the year of his accession²—

شاهِ عادل، سکندرِ ثانی کہ زوی یافت سرفرازی تاج
 ملک روشن بنورِ شرع ازوست گرچه بوده ز کفر چوں شبِ داج
 بہارِ تاریخِ سالِ سلطنتش عقل گفنا، بشرع دادہ رواج
 ۹۱ھ

Along with his vigorous spirit Sikandar's sagacity and tact were of no mean order. His brother Haibat's death by poison was believed to have been caused by Rāy Māgre, the minister. The king, observing the influence of this minister, delayed revenge. Rāy Māgre, feeling that he had been suspected, induced his royal master to give him permission to punish the insurgents in Little Tibet. The minister's aim was to secure for himself a principality which would place him beyond the reach of the king's vengeance. The king, on the other hand, hoped to get rid of his minister by sending him on a military expedition. Success attended the arms of Rāy Māgre which raised his reputation and strength. Feeling himself safe, he proclaimed his independence. The king seized this opportunity, marched with an army and inflicted a crushing defeat upon him. The minister was seized and soon died in prison. The king's attention was then occupied in restoring order in the regained principality of Little Tibet.

Tīmūr's invasion of India. Exchange of courtesy with Sikandar.

When Tīmūr descended upon India, Sikandar acted wisely in sending his representative to him, because he was aware of the terrible fate of those princes who had tried to stem the tide of Tīmūr's march by offering resistance.

1. Kings of Kashmīra, page 59, also page 64.

2. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 138.

According to the Zafar-nāma, Tīmūr, through his grandson Rustam, and Mu'tamad Zain-ud-Dīn, his envoy, sent from Delhi a robe of honour of gold embroidery to Sikandar as a mark of favour. Thus there opened up between the two monarchs means of mutual relations. Maulānā Nūr-ud-Dīn Badakhshī, a distinguished follower of Shāh Hamadān, was deputed by Sikandar, to take costly presents to Tīmūr. In acknowledgement, Tīmūr sent a message expressing his desire to see Sikandar. Certain nobles of Tīmūr's entourage, however, sent word that Sikandar should also keep in readiness thirty thousand horses and one lakh of gold coins as a present to the great conqueror. Sikandar engaged himself in arranging for the present which Tīmūr's nobles had desired to be kept in readiness. Naturally the disclosure of this exorbitant demand brought Tīmūr's anger on their head. Sikandar, however, proceeded to meet Tīmūr on the bank of the Indus on the 13th of Rajab 801 A.H. (1398 A.C.). In the meantime, Tīmūr had crossed the Indus and was proceeding towards Samarqand. Sikandar, therefore, returned to Kashmīr having gone only as far as Bārāmūla. It is said that he then deputed his son prince Shāhī Khān, afterwards Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, to strengthen the relations of friendship existing between Tīmūr and himself. But there is no mention of this deputation in any contemporary history as the prince obviously must have been unborn then, Baḍ Shāh having been born in 1401 A.C. or 804 A.H. But what is a fact, according to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, is that Sikandar sent his ambassadors with much tribute to Tīmūr.

The Sultān's subjects greatly benefited from the remission by him of two imposts and taxes, namely, the Bāj and the Tamgha.*

Sikandar's patronage of learning.

Although Sikandar himself had not received the benefit of a liberal education, his patronage of letters attracted scholars from all parts of Asia chiefly from Khurāsān,

*A tax which was levied upon all irrespective of nationality and religion. The exact nature of the tax has not been explained anywhere. Blochman and Briggs translate the tamgha as "inland tolls." A local living historian is of the opinion that the bāj should be considered to have been the nazzāna which every one had to present to the Sultān on seeing him, and is customary in Indian States to this day. His Exalted Highness the Nizām of Hydarābād abolished it some years ago. I, however, agree with Blochman and Briggs, and the taxes should be understood to be road dues, duties, or an impost.

Māvarā-an-Nahr (Trans-oxiana) and 'Irāq. The most notable person among these scholars was Maulānā Afzal² who hailed from Bukhārā and was, on his arrival, placed at the head of the grand college opposite to the Jāmi' Masjid which Sikandar built. Maulānā Afzal¹ passed all his life in lecturing to students. The king had assigned to him the village of Nāgām for his maintenance. The Maulānā was buried in the enclosure of the tomb of Sayyid Tāj-ud-Dīn, in Shihāb-ud-dīnpūr. Sayyid Muhammad Madanī was a foreign envoy and a great scholar who chose to live in Kashmīr on account of the Sultān's patronage of learning, and died during Bad Shāh's reign. His tomb was built by Bad Shāh.

Sikandar's zeal for religion.

Being himself a staunch Muslim who carefully conformed to all that his religion required of him, Sikandar put an end to those practices which were contrary to the Shari'at or the law of Islam. The sale and distillation of wine, suttee, gambling, prostitution and nautches were accordingly tabooed. The "tamgha" tax, to which reference has already been made above, was abolished. Islamic courts of justice were established and upright and learned judges were appointed.

Architecture of Sikandar's time.

Besides his zeal for religion and sound administration, Sikandar also had a passion for buildings as did Fīrūz Shāh among the Tughluq Sultāns of India. Many mosques, madrasas and hospices were built in his time. The first building he erected was the Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā on the Chillah-Khāna or the place of retreat and devotion of Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī in Srinagar in 798 A.H. (1395 A.C.). The Khānqāh-i-'Alā at Trāl, near Vantipūr, the Khānqāh-i-Wālā in Wachi, pargana Shāvara, and the Khānqāh-i-Kubrawī in Maṭan are other instances.

Sikandar also built the Jāmi' Masjid or grand mosque in which mosaic work was executed without any remuneration by two well-known mosaic workers, Sayyid Muhammad of Lūristān² and Sayyid Sadr-ud-Dīn of Khurāsān, both old companions of the great Shāh Hamadān. The mosque contained 372 columns, each 40 cubits in height, and 6 in circumference. Besides these structures, Sikandar set up many others of which the site and ruins cannot be traced today.

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Kābir, page 290.

2. Lūristān is a province in Western Irān. The chief town of Lūristān is Khurramābād. For Khurāsān see footnote to page 110.

Sikandar's regard for Sayyid Muhammad Hamadānī.

Sayyid Muhammad Hamadānī, the son of Shāh Hamadān, accompanied by about three hundred, or according to some historians, seven hundred followers, came to Kashmīr, and the Sultān too became one of his disciples.

ولدِ امجدِ اميرِ كبير داد دين را رواج در كشير
شد ز نو مسلمين چنان كثرت كرمشاش بُرد حشرِ حمرت

The Sultān was now fired with a zeal to change the character of his rule into an Islamic administration, and a considerable advance was made in this direction. As his orders to this end were carried out either by recent converts to Islam or other officials, it may be presumed that these converts and officials were not actuated only by zeal for the faith, many offences must have been committed which may have wounded the susceptibilities of the Hindus. The saint, Sayyid Muhammad, on being apprised, told the king that all that was done either at his bidding, or through his connivance, was not sanctioned by Islam, which relied more on personal example and love than violence for its propagation. These words so impressed the Sultān that he at once put an end to these activities.

Sikandar's death.

Sikandar's reign lasted for nearly twenty-four years though much of this—about twelve years at least—was spent under the regency of the dowager-queen Haurā and of Malik Saif-ud-Dīn. When Sikandar contracted a violent fever he summoned his three sons (i) Mīr Khān, (ii) Shāh Rukh, as noted in the Fatahāt-i-Kubrawiyya, or, according to Jonarāja, Shāhī Khān and (iii) Muhammad Khān, and exhorted them to avoid strife and remain united after him. He announced as his successor Mīr Khān whom he invested with the title of 'Alī Shāh and passed away on the 22nd of Muharram, 816 A.H. (1413 A.C.).

دوشنبه ثانیِ عشرينِ محرم میانِ شام و خفتنِ نئے کم و بیش
ز هجرتِ همدوده رفت و همش شد از دارِ فنا سلطانِ درویش

—سید محمد بیہقی المتخلص بہ درویش

Sikandar was buried in the northern side of the premises once occupied by the Luī Shōr temple. The graveyard is known as the Mazār-us-Salātīn, in Mahārāj Ganj, Zaina Kadal, Srīnagar.

In the West, this was four years before the battle of Agincourt. In India Khizr Khān, the founder of the Sayyid dynasty, ascended the throne of Delhi one year after. The poet Mullā ‘Abdur Rahmān Jāmī was born also a year later.

Sikandar's share in the persecution of Hindus.

Lieutenant Newall¹ says that partly by the influence of Timūr and partly, no doubt, urged by the fanatic Muslims who had lately entered his country, Sikandar was, about this period, instigated to religious persecution. He began to force his subjects to abjure idolatry and thereby acquired the surname of ‘Butshikan’ (not Butshikast, as Stein puts it, in his English Translation of the Rājatarangīnī, Vol. I, page 131) or the iconoclast. Sir Wolseley Haig calls him ‘a ferocious bigot.’²

These remarks will, no doubt, give one the impression that the Sultān himself was responsible for all this persecution and destruction of temples. It cannot be gainsaid that the advent, into his country, of Muslim doctors and preachers and other immigrants had infused a new spirit in him to propagate his faith. He was, however, out-distanced in this matter by Sūhabhaṭṭa, his chief minister, who subsequently embraced Islam and was re-named Malik Saif-ud-Dīn. The versifier refers to his conversion at the hands of Sayyid Muhammad Hamadānī—

سید بٹ میر لشکر سلطان	شد ز سید مشرف ایان
چون کجاعت فرود اسلامش	شد ملک سیف دین دگر نامش
با همه خویش واقرب و بیوند	شد بدین یایه و لاش بلند

The persecution of the people and the demolition of temples took place at the hands of this zealot and other converts.

1. A Sketch of the Muhammadan History of Kashmir by Lieutenant D. J. F. Newall, of the Bengal Artillery, The Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, No. 5, 1854, page 413.

2. The Cambridge History of India, Volume III, page 280.

The tomb of Sultan sikandar's Queen, the mother of Sultan Zain-ul-'Abidin (Bad Shah).
[Before 1944-45 repairs by the State.]

They were relentless against the adherents of their old faith. In the words of Chas. J. Rodgers,* the minister's zeal in the persecution of his former co-religionists has seldom been equalled in the history of religious proselytes. At his instance, orders must have been issued in the name of the Sultān for the destruction of some important temples, forbidding the use of the Tika (vermilion mark) on the head, and also for enforcing the abolition of Suttee. For, Sikandar himself was, on his contemporary Jonarāja's testimony, an infant at his accession, and Sūhabhaṭṭa the Regent, wielding all power. And Suhabhaṭṭa continued in the office of the Kashmīr Vizārat, according to Hasan, for forty years. Sikandar's reign lasted for 24 years. Even if we suppose Sikandar's age to be eight on succeeding his father, Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, it is only from about eighteen to twenty that he may have become personally responsible for administration for about twelve years in a life lasting 32 years in all. On moral as well as humanitarian grounds, we cannot blame Sikandar for abolishing the practice of Suttee. As a matter of fact, he only forestalled Akbar and Bentinck in this respect. Sikandar cannot also be blamed for attempting a dry Kashmīr either. But one cannot entirely exonerate him from the heavy responsibility of countenancing the religious persecution practised by his ministers and officials, who were, at least, men of his choice or under his complete control in the latter part of his brief reign. We must not, however, omit to mention that Sikandar's age was the age of religious persecution. It is a strange coincidence that his rule should have been contemporaneous with the persecution of the Lollards in England. In the words of H. G. Wells, the Council of Constance in 1414-1418 adopted "methods which jar with (sic) our modern consciences." Wycliffe's bones were condemned to be burnt. Huss was decoyed and burnt alive in 1415. Jerome of Prague was burnt in the following year. Pope Martin V issued a bull proclaiming a crusade for the destruction of the Wycliffites, Hussites and other heretics. Mary, the first queen regnant in the history of England from 1553 to 1558 A. C., earned the soubriquet of "Bloody" Mary for her unfortunate habit of causing people to be burnt at the stake.

The Square Silver Coins of the Sultāns of Kashmīr* by Chas. J. Rodgers, Principal, Normal College, Amritsar, J.A.S.B., Volume LIV, Part I, No. 2, 1885, page 101.

In our own day, in 1933-39, the cultured Germans—the nation of scientists and philosophers—persecuted the Jews who have lived on German soil for over 1,500 years and banned their children from educational institutions. Dr. J. H. Hertz, Chief Rabbi, wrote to the London Times in April 1933: “The ruthless elimination of the German Jew from the public, the professional, and the social life of his native land continues unabated. Neither achievement nor position nor lifetime of service is of any avail against summary dismissal. Hosts of professional men—physicians, judges, lawyers, civil servants, teachers, journalists, musicians, actors—are thus being robbed of their livelihood, and are doomed in heart-breaking numbers to sink into indigence. Alongside of this deprivation of civic rights, there is an unbelievable trampling underfoot of the human dignity of every Jew and Jewess in that land. Thus, in the Nazi Press, and by means of every form of Government propaganda, Jews are constantly branded as ‘traitors’ to their Fatherland—though no fewer than 12,000 German Jews laid down their lives for their country in the Great War. Jewish emigrants are permitted to take only one-tenth of their property out of Germany. Jewish booksellers may only sell Jewish books to Jewish customers. Jews are to sit on separate benches in public parks.

“The Nuremberg decrees deprive the German Jew of all political rights. No “non-Aryan” can become a Reich citizen, vote or hold a Government post. Marriage between Jews and “Aryans” is forbidden, and extra-marital relations are a criminal offence. Jews may not fly the German flag. The names of Jewish fallen, it has since been ordered, must not be inscribed on German war memorials. Although twelve thousand Jews died for Germany in the War, they may not serve in the army. The social degradation of the Jews, and the economic discrimination against them that began with the Nazi régime has, therefore, been given a legal and permanent basis. In some smaller towns and villages, German shopkeepers have been ordered not to sell them food. The “Aryan” who does business with a Jew incurs the wrath of the local Nazi caucus. Jews must not own land but if they try to sell their land, “Aryans” must not buy from them.”

In 1938, “pitiable stories were arriving of the state of the Austrian Jews, who number 200,000, and for no crime except their Semitic origin, were being reduced to beggary. Ninety per cent. of their shops were taken over. Bereft of a livelihood yet unable to leave the country, they were treated like cattle by the ruling classes. During a period of four days, burials in Jewish cemeteries in Vienna were said to have averaged 140 daily, against a normal average of 4. A decade ago, cruelty and ruthless oppression, such as is now being practised in Austria, would have sent a wave of horrified indignation round the world: but during the last five years so much that is atrocious has happened in Abyssinia, in China, in Spain and elsewhere that humanity's capacity for long-range sympathy with the misfortunes of others has become dulled. Emotions tend to be reserved for events and persons nearer home."

[It must not be misunderstood that the object of reproducing the above letter of Dr. Hertz is to shield Saif-ud-Dīn or Sikandar in any way. Despite bloody wars between England and France or England and Germany or other Western countries, these great nations forget each other's wrongs in about a quarter of a century. But in Kashmīr even five centuries are not sufficient to efface unpleasant memories of old events.

The great Encyclopædia Britannica, that mentions only one Muslim ruler in the whole history of Kashmīr, singles out poor Sikandar for the destruction of temples, vide its 14th Edition, 1929, Volume 13, page 290, paragraph 4.]

We must not forget that Sikandar's first minister was a Hindu—Rāy Māgre,—[called in De's English Translation of the Tabaqāt, p. 644, footnote, Rāy Madārī]—who poisoned his brother Haibat Khān. Not only this. According to Jonarāja, Sikandar married a Hindu lady Subhātā or Çrī Çobhā Mahādevī, and his commander-in-chief was a Hindu Brāhman who was converted to Islam by Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī. The Sultān was, in no way, bound to keep a Hindu wife, a Hindu minister, or a Hindu commander-in-chief. He could invite prominent Muslims for his two most important offices, if he so desired. Herein we get conclusive proof to the effect that he was not a stark bigot, as some Hindu and other historians or writers have tried to paint him, clean forgetting the outrageously sacrilegious treatment of idols, temples and Bhaṭṭas and Brāhmanas by rulers like Jayapīḍa, Çamkravarman, Abhimanyu or Harsha or Rājadeva, referred to before in Chapter III.

According to Lawrence, Sikandar was "brave and cultured." "Sikandar," in the words of Rodgers,¹ was an exceedingly generous man. Hearing of this, learned men from 'Irāq and Khurāsān and Māvarā-un-Nahr (Transoxiana) flocked to his court in such numbers that it became an example to the courts of those provinces."

The prosperity of Kashmīr in Sikandar's time can be proved from the fact that there were 100,000 villages. This testimony, to use the words of Stein, is "accurate and matter of fact," based on the record in 1400 A.C.,² of Sharaf-ud-Dīn 'Alī Yazdī, the historian of Tīmūr, whose contemporary Sikandar was.

چنان مستش زد صلائے کرم کہ مایوس را گشت حرمان حرام
شد از بس کہ اسلام رونق گرفت حریم درش قبلہ خاص و عام
—طبقات اکبری—جلد سوم—صفحه ۳۳

[His noble spirit such generosity proclaimed,
That even to the hopeless despair forbidden became.
When Islam such resplendence gained
His door the sacred shrine of high and low became.—B.De.]

Such a man ill-deserves the wild condemnation that is heaped on his head! He was a thousand times very much more humane than Harsha and others whom nobody ever maligns publicly, so loudly, so repeatedly, and so pungently. Sikandar's name and a few of his misdeeds should not constitute a cause for any serious ill-feeling that they are made so often.

And so the late Mr. Brajendranāth De³ (1852-1932), M.A., Bar-at-Law, I.C.S., Boden Sanskrit Scholar at Oxford University in 1875, ex-Commissioner, Burdwān Division, Bengal, the painstaking translator of the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, wrote:—"There is a great deal in Jonarāja about the

1. The Square Silver Coins of the Sultāns of Kashmīr, J. A. S. B., Vol. LIV, part I, No. 2, 1885, page 101.

2. Stein's English Translation of the Rājatarāngīnī, Vol. II, pages 438-39.

3. B. De's English Translation, Volume III, page 648, footnote (1).

breaking of images, but I have not been able to find any mention of the demolition of the temples."

Here one may pause to say a word on why there should be so much bitterness on the breaking of idols or images. The Muslim is not alone in breaking idols. The argument of the Christians was "the absurdity of a man making an idol and then adoring it or being afraid of the work of his own hands." Even amongst the Hindus "the universality of image-worship . . . is comparatively modern." The ancient Vedic religion did not admit images. Like the worship of the cow, it is a subsequent development in Hindu religious practice and not an inherent or integral part of this great and ancient religion. For, after all, Kabīr-panthīs, Sikhs, Brahmo Samājīs, Ārya-Samājīs, Radhāswāmī Satsangīs discard idolatry. And yet they remain Hindus! In my boyhood, Sardār Aṛūr Singh, the Manager of the great Golden Temple of Amritsar, threw away all the idols from this seat of Sikh worship. And he was never dubbed an idol-breaker or even an idol-remover! The fact is that the study of the Vedānta is leading to the rejection of the Purāṇic scheme of Hinduism. As Kashmīrīs became converts to Islam during the period under discussion, they themselves did not feel the necessity of preserving them intact. It was but a simple economic proposition that, by their conversion they should convert their sacred places to the new mode of worship. God to them was there. The place was there. It was a change of manner of worshipping that God in that place. This was effected by removing the idols and making a niche towards the Ka'ba. It is true it did hurt the feelings of the no-changers at the time: it wounded their susceptibilities. But why should happenings of five centuries be still the cause of bitterness? Why should ill-feelings be harboured to this day between brother and brother as all Kashmīrīs are sons of the same soil? What Islam did, in the language of Si Muḥammad Iqbāl, is

آدمی آزاد زنجیر توہم سے ہوا

[Man was freed from the fetters of superstition.]

Malik Haidar Chāḍura has preserved in the pages of his history* the following elegy on Sultān Sikandar's death:

*Malik Haidar's History of Kashmīr, page 152.

بگوئے فلک بے بہرہ کہ شاہ کجاست فروغ مہر کجاست، و نورِ ماہ کجاست
 جہان و ہرچہ دُروہست ہچمالِ قسیت بیا بگوئے کہ شاہِ جہان و شاہ کجاست
 سپاہ و چتر بجاہند و چتر دالالِ ہم نظامِ چتر کجاست و نقِ سپاہ کجاست
 سوادِ عرصۂ میدان و گوئے و چوگانِ بہت کسے کہ گوئے زندہ چو بادشاہ، کجاست
 سروِ باغ و گلستان و حوضِ آبِ دل خوشند و خوب و بے طعنے بادشاہ کجاست
 ہزارِ خیمہ و خرگاہ سائباں پیشند لوائے خیمہ و خرگاہ و ہاگاہ کجاست
 شکاریاں ہمہ مشتاقِ زخمِ تیرِ تواند دوان و لانغ و حیراں کہ تختِ شاہ کجاست
 کجاست شاہِ سکندر کجاست میدانِ

در انتظارِ ہلاکتِ دگوئے و چوگانِ

عجب کہ دیدہ شود گلِ شگفتہ در گلزار عجب کہ کبک خرامد دُوبارہ در گُزار
 عجب کہ غنچہ بختِ دچوم و دمِ غافل عجب کہ باغِ بگرید لبانِ ابرِ بہار
 بگیر اے دلِ حیرت ز فوتِ شاہِ جہاں عزیز و صاحبِ دنیا و دین، بے آزار
 شنشے کہ نظیرِ شش نہ دیدہ و نہ شنید بد زو زگارِ دراز این سپہرِ مردمِ خوار
 بہ آبِ دیدہ بشوئید اے مسلماناں زمینِ روضۂ شہ را بر لعلِ استطہار
 بریش و جبّہ برو بند زود بردارند ز بہرِ کحلِ بصرِ خاکِ این درو و دیوار
 وزیں مزارِ بخوابید ہر چہ می خواهند با اعتقادِ درست و ذنونِ بے انکار
 خدا شناس، ہمہ صفت، سکندرِ شاہ کہ آفرینِ خدا بر روانش باد ہزار

Note.—In the 6th line from the bottom, the reading دلِ عبرت instead of دلِ حیرت is a suggestion from a scholar.

SULTĀN 'ALĪ SHĀH

[816 to 823 A.H. or 1413 to 1420 A.C.]

Mir Khān, surnamed 'Alī Shāh, whom Chas. J. Rogers wrongly calls 'Alī Sher, succeeded to his father's dominions in 816 A.H. (1413 A.C.). Very little is known about his reign. Firishta records that this king also had Sūhabhaṭṭa for his minister, who continued, according to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, for four years in office, and kept up his campaign of conversion till he died of internal hæmorrhage, or, according to the Tabaqāt, of consumption and is believed to be buried in what is now known as mahalla Saif-ud-dīn-pōr on the Nāla-i-Mār in Srinagar. In all, Sūhabhaṭṭa—Saif-ud-Dīn—was minister for forty years as noted by Hasan. The king thereupon appointed his own brother Shāhī Khān in his place. Shortly after this, the king resolved to proceed to Mecca on a pilgrimage. The A'in-i-Akbarī says 'Alī Shāh went on a pilgrimage. Firishta says he went on world travel and so does the Tabaqāt. But the giving away of charity confirms the view of the A'in-i-Akbarī, and as Jonarāja puts it "gave out valuable jewels from the treasury and beautiful horses."¹ 'Alī Shāh entrusted his kingdom to the care of his brother² Shāhī Khān, and proceeded to bid goodbye to the ruler of Jammu. The ruler of Jammu who was converted to Islam by Timūr, was 'Alī Shāh's³ father-in-law.⁴ On 'Alī Shāh's arrival there, he remonstrated with him for relinquishing the throne. The Sultān changed his mind. Assisted by his father-in-law and the rājā of Rajaurī, he now tried to recover his throne. All three advanced by way of Pakhlī, whereupon his brother Shāhī Khān, being defeated at Urī, left Kashmīr and went over to Siālkōt to Jasārat Khān, the Chief of Gakkhars (or Khakar). Jasārat,

1. Kings of Kashmīra, page 71. Also the words "visiting ho y places" makes the object ce ta'n.

2. Malik Haidar Chāḍura mentions only one brother, namely, Shāhī Khān to be the person to whom 'Alī Shāh left his kingdom. Firishta mentions the other brother also.—See Briggs, Vol. IV, page 467.

3. Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 142. His statement is based on the authority of Maulānā Nādirī, a contemporary of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn.

4. The father-in-law of 'Alī Shāh is said to have been converted to Islam by Timūr.—Hutchison and Vögel, Journal of the Panjāb Historical Society, Vol. VII, page 117.

after the death of Tīmūr, had returned in 1405 from his captivity in Samarqand brought about by his own failure to keep his promise to aid Tīmūr in his invasion of India and for plundering his baggage. Jasārat Khān was at this time, extending his influence in the Punjāb.

Historians are at variance about this fratricidal contest. Firishta asserts that Sultān 'Alī Shāh was, at first, successful even at Siālkōt.¹ Then Shāhī Khān and Jasārat Khān Gakkhar succeeded in defeating and taking 'Alī Shāh prisoner. 'Alī Shāh subsequently died at Chāḍura.²

The grave of Sultān 'Alī Shāh in Tsōdur or Chāḍur on the Srinagar-Charār Road.

The final result was the passing of the kingdom in the year 823 A.H. or 1420 A.C. into the hands of Shāhī Khan—and not Shady Khan as Briggs has wrongly put it. 'Alī Shāh reigned for six years and nine months. The only event of importance is the loss of Little Tibet which was, no doubt, due to the incompetence of 'Alī Shāh. The death of Kabīr in India is recorded in this same year of the dethronement of Sultān 'Alī Shāh.

1. Briggs' Firishta, Vol. IV, page 468.

2. Tārīkh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 142.

SULTĀN ZAIN-UL-'ĀBIDĪN

[823 to 874 A.H. or 1420 to 1470 A.C.]

With the assumption, in June 1420 A.C., at the age of 19, of sovereignty by Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, literally, the Ornament of the Adorers, or the Glory of the Devout, there opened up an era of peace, prosperity and expansion for Kashmīr. This reign extending over 50 solar or over 51 lunar years constituted a climax never attained by any other independent king in Kashmīr.

As Shāh Rukh or Shāhī Khān, Baḍ Shāh had his education under Maulānā Kabīr. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn was noted early in life for his abilities, had already been minister to his brother, the late king, and had shown his noble qualities to the people of Kashmīr. His accession was, therefore, hailed with joy both by Hindus and Muslims.

Shortly after assuming regal authority, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn nominated his brother Muhammad Khān to the office of prime minister, and associated with him Halmat Raina and Ahmad Raina, commanders of his forces. Malik Mas'ūd was appointed minister of the interior. Mirzā Hasan was appointed treasurer-general. On the death of Muhammad Khān, his son Haīdar Khān succeeded his father as prime minister.

The king retained in his possession the office of Chief Justice till he was able to find a suitable incumbent in the person of Qāzī Jamāl-ud-Dīn who hailed from Hindustān.

Khwāja Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad and Muhammad Qāsim Firishṭa respectively relate the following case decided by Baḍ Shāh. The only difference in the two versions is that the two women concerned were a mistress and a maid according to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, and two co-wives, according to the Gulzār-i-Ibrāhīmī or the Ta'rīkh-i-Firishṭa. Briefly, a woman killed one of the children and accused the other of the crime. The case went to court which confessed inability to find out the truth of the matter. On reference to the Sultān, the person alleged to be accused was called in and severely threatened in various ways. As she was innocent, she made no confession whatsoever. At last, the Sultān said: "If you become naked, and in the presence of men go to your own house, that might be a proof of your innocence." The woman cast her head down in shame, and said: "For me it is better to die than to act in this way. I consent to my punishment but I cannot consent to behave like this." The Sultān, then, sent for the complainant in another chamber and said: "If you are honest in making this complaint, make yourself naked in the presence of men." The woman agreed and got ready to remove her garment. The Sultān stopped her, and said: "The guilt of this act is yours." And "after they had struck her a few strokes, she confessed her guilt."

Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's passion for architecture.

In the matter of architecture, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn might be called the Shāh Jahān of Kashmīr. Many important buildings and townships the remains of many of which may still be traced, e.g., Zaina-lānk, Zaina-kōṭ, Zaina-paṭṭan, Zaina-kundāl, Zaina-maṭh, Zaina-pōr, Zaina-tilak, Zaina-gīr¹ and Zaina-gām, testify to his great passion for architecture and town-planning. He caused resting places to be constructed in every pargana,² and in most of the important villages. When he proceeded on his tours—and he travelled much over his dominions—the people were not subjected to any hardship on that account. He also built caravanserais and halting-places by the roadside for the convenience of travellers and thereby forestalled the Safavī kings of Īrān and the Sūr Sultāns of Hindustān.

About the origin and history of the Sultān's island in the Wulur,³ all historians have recorded the following story :

1. Zainagīr is now the name of the pargana in Kām-rajā, to the north-west of Sopōr about four hours' drive from it.

Zaina Kundāl and Zaina-Paṭṭan were on the Wulur lake.

Zaina-kōṭ is a village about four miles west of Srinagar.

Zaina-gām is a village in the Birwa pargana.

Zaina-maṭh was a monastery on the Dal.

Zaina-tilak was a city built near Jayapīḍapōr (Andarkōṭ) on the bank of the Jhelum.

Zaina-pōr is the name of the pargana comprising the table-lands lying to the north-east of Shupian.

2. A pargana is a tract of country comprising the lands of many villages.

The Wulur Lake.

3. The Wulur Lake is the largest in Kashmīr, and the largest fresh

This island was an inhabited place* in the days of a dissolute and tyrannical rājā, Sundarsenā by name, whose subjects did not lag behind in copying him. Kalāl, a saint, who lived in those days, exhorted both the king and his subjects to give up dissolute conduct, but no one heeded the saint's exhortations. One day, at last, he left the place in disgust after warning the inhabitants of a retribution water lake in India. It is situated towards the north end of the Valley at a distance of about 21 miles north-west of Srinagar. The Wulur lies, at an elevation of 5,180 feet above sea-level, and has an area of 12½ square miles, which, in years of flood, may extend over 103 square miles. In windy weather, the surface of the lake changes into a sea of rolling waves. The average depth is 12 feet, the circumference is nearly 30 miles. The outline of the lake is very regular, and its general appearance is picturesque.

The name is supposed to be a corruption of ullola Sanskrit for 'turbulent' or '(the lake) with high-going waves or water.' The ancient name is Mahāpadama-saras derived from the Nāga, Mahāpadama, its tutelary deity.

According to Andrew Wilson, there is something in the character of the Wulur which reminds one of Lake Lemman and arises probably from the stretch of water which it presents, and the combined softness and grandeur of the scenery around. Lofty mountains rise almost immediately from its northern and eastern sides: but there is room all round the lake for the innumerable villages which enliven its shore. Calm, as it usually is, furious storms often play upon its surface, and in one of these Ranjit Singh lost 300 of the boats carrying his retinue and effects. (The Abode of Snow, p. 428).

In the beginning of spring some of the wild-fowls of the Wulur and other lakes of Kashmīr take flight to the distant valleys of Yārqand and Kāshghar.

The Jhelum enters the Wulur through the east side and leaves it from the south-west corner. Captain Bates says that it "is a lake simply because its bottom is lower than the bed of the Jhelum; it will disappear by degrees as the bed of the pass at Bārāmūla becomes more worn away by the river; its extent is perceptibly becoming more circumscribed by the deposition of soil and detritus on its margin." In the north-west corner is the Zaina-lānk used by boatmen who dread the waves of the lake in storm though in the dry season it is no more an island. On the western shore is the scrap of Watlab on which stands the shrine of Bābā Shukūr-ud-Dīn whom people wrongly call Shukr-ud-Dīn. Fish, wild fowl and singhāra (water nut) are the chief products of the Wulur.

*Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq's Mukammal Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, Vol. II, page 41.

which would change their habitation into a lake. His prognostication turned out to be true, and a physical disturbance is said to have turned the land into a lake!

[A striking parallel far off, here, arrests our attention. The island called Mauri-ga-Sima near Formosa, south of Japan, is also supposed to have been sunk in the sea for the crimes of its inhabitants. The vessels which the fishermen and divers brought up were sold at an immense price in China and Japan. Thomas Moore refers to it in his Lalla Rookh when he says:

And urns of porcelain from that isle
Sunk underneath the Indian flood,
Whence oft the lucky diver brings
Vases to grace the halls of kings.

NOTE.—Is it the Indian Ocean flood driven up to the Pacific?]

The area in question on the Wulur remained under water down to the reign of Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn, who conceived the idea of raising a palace in the lake. With the help of divers, he was able to lay its foundations on the remains of a temple which had once stood on this submerged land, and was now filled up with stones for the base of the structure. In addition to the palace, now in complete ruin, a mosque was also raised. This mosque has a quarter of its old dome and a rotten door left. About forty years back the dome is said to have been seen in good condition. Had care been taken in time it could have been preserved. Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī made this structure famous in the following verse*:

این بقعه چو بنیانِ فلک محکم باد
مشهور ترینِ زیب در عالم باد
شه زین عباد تا درو جشن کنند
پیوسته چو تاریخِ خودش محرم باد

[May this edifice be as firm as the foundations of the Heavens!
May it be the most renowned ornament of the Universe.
As long as the monarch Zain-i-‘Ibād holds festival therein
May it be like the date of his own reign—happy.]

*Malik Haidar Chāḍura's Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, page 145.

The Zalma-Jahk in the Wular Lake is an artificial island constructed by Sultan Zain-ul-'Abidin. The photo shows the ruins of his palace and the mosque built in 847 A.H. (1443 A.C.)

The numerical value of the letters in khurram (happy) is 847 A.H. (1443 A.C.), the date of the foundation of the edifice. "The stone bearing the inscription is apparently a slab of black slate well polished and furnished, and measures $21\frac{1}{2}$ by 12 inches and $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches thick."¹ This stone is missing.

The king named the island Zaina-lānk. Lānk in Kashmīrī means an island. The expense of the work was met by the fortunate find of two idols of solid gold from the lake by divers in royal employ.

The Sultān erected at Nau Shahr, near Srinagar, which was in modern terminology his New Delhi, a grand palace, twelve storeys high, each consisting of fifty rooms and improved and added to the beauty of Srinagar.² At Kramarājya, "he built Suratrānpōr graced with houses that humbled the pride of the peaks of the Himālaya."³

Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s patronage of arts and crafts, etc.

Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn invited mechanics, artisans and craftsmen from Īrān, Tūrān, Turkistān and Hindustān, and offered them good prospects and concessions to settle down in Kashmīr. Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s patronage of various arts and crafts contributed very largely to the material and economic progress of the country, and considerably increased its reputation. The products of Kashmīr industries were highly appreciated abroad and fetched high prices. An expert at fireworks taught his art to many others. Habīb—wrongly written as Jab by Rodgers—made gunpowder. "Weapons made of different metals new and hard" were devised. A cannon was in operation. It was "strong, well-regulated, of deep sound, and of great value."⁴ Along with the serious subject of arms for the army, amusements for the people were not ignored. Acrobats were invited and they came in a large number. Music flourished to an extent never known before. It is, there-

1. Major H. S. Jarret, B. S. C., Note on an inscription found in Kashmīr, J. A. S. B., No. 1, 1880, page 16.

2. Lieut. Newall, J. A. S. B., No. 5, 1854, page 416.

3. Kings of Kashmīra, J.C. Dutt’s English Translation of Jounarāja, page 94.

4. Ibid., page 105.

fore, chiefly through his exertions that even today Kashmīr enjoys a high position in several arts and crafts, e.g., wood-carving, paper-making, shawl-weaving and carpentry. He also sent individuals from among his own subjects to other countries to learn certain industries. Some of the arts of the time were imported from India. He forbade merchants to hide merchandise in their own houses, and compelled them to expose it for sale at a reasonable profit. He devoted his attention to medical science as well, and provided facilities for his subjects by establishing state hospitals for the treatment of disease. It is interesting to note that the great families of physicians, famous in Delhi and Lucknow, originally came from Kashmīr. Khwāja A'zam credits Baḍ Shāh with having imported midwives and nurses from Samarqand. This may have led to the introduction of maternity wards or conveniences to women needing them in Kashmīr, a step far ahead of several contemporaries of Baḍ Shāh.

Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's patronage of letters.

Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's love for letters was in no way inferior to that for arts and crafts. His interest in the intellectual growth and economic progress of his subjects was keen and unflagging. He extended his patronage to scholars in as generous a measure as to artisans and craftsmen; hence the great influx into Kashmīr of scholars and men of letters from other lands. For reasons of space, it is impossible to give an account of all the men of letters who were attached to his court or flourished in his time; therefore, a very brief account of but a few, more notable among them, is given below*:

1. Maulānā Kabīr.—He was a Kashmīrī by birth who had, in his youth, migrated to Herāt, at which place he studied theology and all its allied sciences. The king, after several attempts, induced him to return to Kashmīr to hold the office of Shaikh-ul-Islam or Head of the Ecclesiastical Department. He was also placed at the head of the university, for the upkeep and maintenance of which the revenues of several villages in the Nāgām pargana were assigned.

* Ta'rikh-i-Kabīr, page 290. Also the Ta'rikh-i-Baḍ Shāhi by Fauq, Lahore, 1944.

2. Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī.—He was the pupil of Sadr-ul-Mudarrisīn Maulānā Muhammad Afzal of Bukhārā who had come to Kashmīr during the reign of Sultān Sikan-dar. Mullā Ahmad was a profound scholar, a distinguished poet, and an excellent historian. The Ta'rikh-i-Waqā'i-i-Kashmīr and a translation of the Mahābhārata into Persian are among his works. Bad Shāh has thus the credit of the first translation of the Mahābhārata into Persian. Mullā Ahmad also translated into Persian Kalhaṇa's Rājatarangīnī by command of the Sultān, who named this version Bahr-ul-Asmār or 'The Sea of Tales,' perhaps, in contrast to Kalhaṇa's 'River of Kings.' This translation or perhaps adaptation of Kalhaṇa's work must have been incomplete, as in 1594 A.C., Akbar asked Mullā 'Abdul Qādir Badāyūnī to complete it. But as Mullā Ahmad's translation must have become rather archaic Persian in Akbar's time, the Emperor, therefore, asked for a fresh, complete translation of the whole.

[Badāyūnī (p. 384) says:—"The Emperor had ordered me to re-write the Persian translation of the History of Kashmīr by Mullā Shāh Muhammad of Shāhābād, a learned man well versed in argumentative sciences and history. I was to write it in an easy style. This I did, and in the space of two months I presented my book, which was put in His Majesty's Library to await its turn for reading." This order was given, it appears, during Akbar's stay in Kashmīr, from the 2nd Jumādā II to 2nd Ziqā'dah, 997 A.H. (1588 A.C.), when he returned by way of Kābul in the beginning of 998 A.H. (1589 A.C.). "No copies have till now turned up of either Shāh Muhammad's History of Kashmīr or Badāonī's revision."*

Again Badāyūnī, on page 402, says: "I was told to complete the Bahr-ul-Asmār, a book containing stories which, at the command of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, had been partly translated into Persian. I translated the new portions within the next five months, all in all about sixty juz. Soon after, the Emperor called me once to his sleeping apartment, and asked me the whole night till dawn about these stories. He also ordered me to re-write the first volume of the Bahr-ul-Asmār, because it was written in ancient Persian, no longer spoken, and told me to keep the MS. of the portion which I had made. I performed the zamīnbūsi and commenced with heart and soul the new work. His Majesty also gave me ten thousand Murādi tankas (struck when Murād was born) and a horse as a present.”¹ Towards the end of the same year (1003 A.H. = 1594 A.C.), ‘Abdul Qādir Badāyūnī had to mourn the death of Shaikh Ya‘qūb Sarfī of Kashmīr.

Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal*, Volume XXXVIII, Part I, No. III, 1869, page 135, under—"Badāonī and his Works" by H. Blochmann, M.A., Assistant Professor, Calcutta Madrasah, April, 1869, pages 105-144.

Dr. Charles Riéu’s Catalogue of the Persian Manuscripts in the British Museum (Volume I, 1879, page 296), however, tells us that راجنرتی (Add. 24,032) is probably the work re-written by ‘Abdul Qādir Bāda’ūnī, in 999 A.H. = 1590-91 A.C. Abu’l Fazl’s exact words in the ‘Ā’in-i-Akbarī are :—“The History of Kashmīr, which extends over the last four thousand years, has been translated from Kashmīrian into Persian by Maulānā Shāh Muhammad of Shāhābād (English Translation by H. Blochmann, M.A., Volume I, 1873, p. 106). Riéu notes that this translation was from Sanskrit into Persian for Akbar by Mullā Shāh Muhammad in the year 998 A.H. (1589 A.C.). The History of India by Elliot and Dowson says the translation of the Rājatarangīnī is usually attributed to Maulānā ‘Imād-ud-Dīn (Volume V, 1873, page 478). ‘Imād-ud-Dīn is presumably the author of the Rauzat-ut-Tāhīrīn which is a general history from the earliest times to 1014 A.H. = 1605 A.C., containing in its fifth part a section on ‘Kings of Kashmīr’ (Riéu’s Catalogue, Volume I, pp. 117-119).

Bernier states² that an abridged translation of the Rājatarangīnī into Persian was made by command of Jahāngīr and adds that he was engaged upon rendering this into French. But, says Horace Hayman Wilson,³ we have “never heard anything more of Mr. Bernier’s translation.”]

3, 4. Hāfiz Baghdādī and Mullā Pārsā were two other scholars who, as lecturers, spent their lives in the royal university. They were both immigrants. The first one was from Baghdād as his name denotes and the other was from Bukhārā. The Hāfiz is buried in the tomb of Maulānā Kabīr. The Mullā found his last resting-place in Nau Shahr.

5. Qāzī Jamāl-ud-Dīn.—As has been stated previously, Jamāl originally came from Hindustān. He was leading an austere and secluded life at the Khānqāh of Shāh Hamadān, imparting knowledge to those who sought it. His introduction to the king’s court took place in a strange manner.⁴

1. Badāonī and His Works, by H. Blochmann, J.A.S.B., Volume XXXVIII, 1869, No. 3, pp. 141-142.

2. Travels in the Mogul Empire, revised edition by Vincent A. Smith, 1914, p. 186.

3. Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, 1825, p. 2.

4. Ta’rīkh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, MS., page 147.

The Khānqāh at Saidahpör further up Sopör.

He used to write petitions for persons who had either a law-suit, or sought redress for some grievance. The king was deeply impressed by his scholarship as he perused the petitions presented to him. This excited the king's imagination and made him all the more eager to see Jamāl-ud-Dīn.

Once a petition, in verse, from Jamāl's pen came up before the king, in which the former had deplored the demise of Sultān Sikandar, the last line of the petition was:

نہے کہ بُود مُرادش بجائے مسکینان

بجان و دل طلبیدے دُعام مسکینان

On reading this petition, the king could no longer restrain his desire to see Jamāl, and dispatched a noble to bring him to the court. He was received with marked respect and honour by the king to whom he presented a volume of one of his works. The king later appointed him Chief Justice for the whole of his kingdom.

6. Another scholar of distinction in this reign who also held the office of Qāzī, was Qāzī Mīr 'Alī Bukhārī who came from Bukhārā, and was held in high esteem by the king and received a jāgīr or assignment for his maintenance.

7. Sayyid Husain Qummī Rizavī, a learned theologian who had renounced his home to preach Islam, came to Kashmīr and was invited by the Sultān to stay in Bāgh-i-Zaina-gīr, Tahsīl Handwāra, which is now known as Sayyidpōr or Saidahpōr after the learned Sayyid.

8. Hakīm Mansūr wrote the Kifāyah-i-Mansūrī on medicine in Persian. It is translated into Urdu and published by the Newal Kishore Press.

9. Mullā Nādirī, according to Malik Haider Chādura,* succeeded Mullā Ahmad as the poet-laureate of Baḍ Shāh. Nādirī was a historian too. But neither his Divān nor his History of Kashmīr are available.

Ta'rikh*, page 32, Pratāp Library MS. copy.

10. Shaikh Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh, a well-known saint of the time, was a disciple of Khwāja Is-hāq of Khatlān, a prominent Khalīfa of Shāh Hamadān. The Shaikh travelled very extensively. In Kashmīr, he associated himself with Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn and Sayyid Muhammad Madanī. Stories of his profound meditation and his extreme humility, his self-abnegation and self-effacement are related. His funeral was attended by a large number of notables of the time. Baḍ Shāh's queen, Baihaqī Begam, sold an ornament of hers to erect the Shaikh's tomb when he died in 849 A.H. (1445 A.C.).¹

11. Qāzī Hamīd came of a family that held the office of Qazā or administration of justice. He is reputed to be the author of a good history of Kashmīr, which unfortunately cannot be traced today. His son, Qāzī Ibrāhīm, took up the continuation of the history left by his father, but this history too is not extant.

12. Sayyid Nasīr-ud-Dīn Khanyārī is a notable of Baḍ Shāh's time. The Sayyid came originally from Baihaq, a district to the north-west of Nīshāpūr in Irān. Baḍ Shāh entrusted him with ambassadorial duties. Nasīr-ud-Dīn is buried in mahalla Khanyār, Srīnagar, under a dome which contains also the grave of Yūz Āsaf. The area is known as Rauza-bal.

13-21. Yūz Āsaf believed to have been an envoy from Egypt, Bābā 'Usmān Uchchap Ganāī, a learned divine, Hājī Adham a saintly figure, Shams-ud-Dīn Andrābī a noted scholar, Sultān Muhammad a poet, Sayyid Muhammad 'Alī Balkhī who gave up sovereignty for a saintly life, Sayyid Jānbāz Valī, Mīr Sayyid Hasan Mantiqī, Bābā Zain-ud-Dīn Rīshī are others who adorned the age of the Sultān.

Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, whose name is sanskritized as Jaina, and whom Jonarāja calls Ārī Jainollābhadīna, was a student of Sanskrit, and also "a patron of Sanskrit learning and occasionally a pilgrim to the ancient tīrthas of the Valley."² During his peaceful reign, Hindu traditions re-asserted themselves while the country enjoyed a return of its old prosperity. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn is also credited with having studied Hindu philosophy (Yōga-vaçishtha). Ārīvara says

1. Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq's Ta'rikh-i-Baḍ Shāhī, Ittīhād Press, Lāhore, 1944, page 243.

2. Stein's Introduction to his English Translation of the Rājatarangīnī, Vol. I, page 131.

the king "caused the Purāṇas, books on logic, the Mīmāṃsā and other books to be brought from distant lands, and distributed them to the learned. The king heard me recite the Vāṣiṣṭha Brahma-darshana composed by Vālmīki. . . . The mlechhas read the Vṛihat Kathā-sāra, the Hātakeśhwara Samhitā, the Purāṇas and other books in their own language."¹

The most distinguished among the Hindu scholars were the following :

1. Uttha-Soma was a Kashmīrī scholar thoroughly conversant with Persian, Sanskrit and his own language, in which he composed verses. He held a high post in the Translation Bureau and wrote, in Kashmīrī, Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s life the Jaina-charita.

2. Yōdhabhaṭṭa was an exceedingly intelligent person endowed with a marvellous memory. He went to Mahārāshtra to study the Atharva Veda, and was induced by Çriyabhaṭṭa to return to Kashmīr in order to spread the knowledge of that Veda. Five hundred years later, when the late Shankar Pāṇḍurang Pandit brought out his famous edition of the Atharva Veda, owing to the lack of the manuscript in the Dakhan, he relied on this Kashmīrī MS.²

3. Jonarāja was a scholar of Sanskrit and of "considerable attainments though apparently without much originality." He was a historian who, in his own words, made an outline of the history of kings and brought Kalhaṇa’s work up to date. The king rewarded him with his customary liberality. Jonarāja received orders from the noble-hearted Çriyabhaṭṭa, the Superintendent of the Courts of Justice, "to complete the story of the kingly line." Jonarāja died in 1459 A.C.

4. Çrīvara was another of the noted historians, though "he was an imitator of Kalhaṇa." He undertook to finish the remainder of the book of kings left by Jonarāja on his death. Çrīvara, after Baḍ Shāh’s death, sanskritized Jāmi’s Yūsuf-Zulaikhā in 1505. It is entitled the Kathā-kautuka.³

1. Kings of Kashmīra, pp. 145-46.

2. The Rājatrāṅgiṇī by Ranjīt Sitārām Pandit, 1935, page 25, footnote 176.

3. Published in 1901, and printed at the Nirṇaya-Sāgara Press, Bombay. Edited by M. M. Pandit Çivadatta, Head Pandit, Oriental College, Lahore, and Kāshināth Pāṇḍurang Parab. Sir A. Berriedale Keith is wrong in stating that it was written under Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn, vide A History of Sanskrit Literature, 1928, page 361.

Other notable scholars were : (5) Tilak Āchārya, the Buddhist, (6) Karpūrabhaṭṭa, the physician (7) Rupyabhaṭṭa, the astronomer, (8) Simha, the astrologer, (9) Rāmananda, the chemist, who wrote an exposition of Mahābhāṣya. Bhaṭṭa Avatāra wrote the Jaina-vilāsa. (10) Īvabhaṭṭa was the physician in personal attendance on the king and supervised his meals.

All these literary activities, with all their incidental expenses, acquired the volume they did, as the king himself was a scholar "well-versed in the literature of his age," and conversant with a number of languages. Zain-ul-Ābidīn dictated instructions to Ḥabīb, the Mīr Ātish, in the form of Questions and Answers on the composition and preparation of explosives. He composed the Shikāyat (plaint) "treating of the vanity of all objects," in his old age. Both these were in Persian. Baḍ Shāh sent to Mahmūd I, the Khaljī ruler of Māṇḍu, "a beautiful poem composed by himself in his own language,"¹ presumably Persian as Mahmūd could hardly enjoy a poem in Kashmīrī. Kashmīrī literature also received a great impetus. The Sultān's activities in the domain of literature and scholarship were not confined to translations of books, among which the translation of the Mahābhārata holds a prominent place, he spent huge sums, sent his men to various places, and thus collected a library which compared favourably with the one collected by the Sāmānids. This library remained intact down to the days of Fath Shāh, approximately for a period of one hundred years, after which it perished.²

Zain-ul-Ābidīn's love of poetry.

Zain-ul-Ābidīn loved poetry, and derived much delight from the company of poets whose number at his court was not negligible. The most brilliant among them was Malik-ush-Shu'rā, (the poet laureate), Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī whose nom de guerre was "Qutb." Malik Haider Chāḍura has quoted the following two lines of this poet :

اے بگرو مع رؤیت عالی پروانہ

وزلب شیریں تو شوریت درہر خانہ

من بہ چندین آشنائی می خورم خونِ جگر

آشنا را حال این است، وای بر یگانہ

1. Kings of Kashmīra, page 150.

2. The Tarākh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haider Chāḍura, page 135.

[Vide the Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 145.]

Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq in his Mukammal Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, Vol. II (page 20), has ascribed these lines to Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, and has also given the last couplet of the ghazal which is as follows :—

قُطْبِ مَسْکِينِ کَرِ گُناهِ مِی‌کُنَد، عِيشِ مَکُنْ
عِيبِ نَبُودِ کَرِ گُناهِ مِی‌کُنَد دِیوانَه

Malik Haidar Chāḍura, on the other hand, takes these lines to have been composed by Mullā Ahmad. Considering that Malik Haidar's history is an epitome of the works of Maulānā Nādirī and Mullā Ahmad, Fauq's ascription falls to the ground. But Fauq has withdrawn this ascription in his Ta'rikh-i-Baḍshāhī (1944). Khwāja Qutb-ud-Dīn Bakhtiyār Kākī of Dehli is certainly not the author of these lines as suggested by some. Since the Divān of Khwāja Bakhtiyār Kākī published by the Newal Kishore Press does not contain these lines, and Khāwājā Kākī does not use Qutb for his nome de plume, but generally Qutb-i-Dīn.

Mullā Ahmad and Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn had, at times, contests in improvisation. Once the Mullā appeared in the Sultān's presence with the tassel of his turban hanging on his forehead, whereupon the Sultān improvised the following couplet :

شاخِ پیشانی مُلا احمدِ کشمیرِ بَرِیں گَرِندِ یَسْتی تُو در آفاقِ گاوِ شاخسار

To this the Mullā replied with the couplet :

شاخِ پیشانی خدیوِ مکرِ گَ* واری داشتم تا نیامِ در بیانِ مادهِ گاوانِ در مُسَمَّار

The Sultān was so delighted with the ready wit of the Mullā that he rewarded him munificently.

As a result of intrigue by his enemies, the nature of which is not revealed, the Mullā fell into disgrace, and was consequently banished. After reaching Pakhlī, he sent the following couplets to the Sultān :

نَه بِه نَحوم ز مَبْدَا خِبرِے نَه بِه مَنطِق ز جُز و کُلِ اثرِے

بَرِمن این کُسر و جرِ چرا رانند احمد اَر غَیرِ مُنصَرَفِ خوانند

The Sultān was greatly moved by perusing these lines, and forthwith sent orders to the Mullā to return.

* Another reading is کرک meaning the rhinoceros, or the Tibetan yāk, but the wolf has the tuft of his tail drawn on his head when angry.

Baḍ Shāh's army and his conquests.

When the Sultān ascended the throne, the army numbered 100,000 foot and 30,000 cavalry. He so organized it as to leave no possibility of a rebellion or rising. Moreover, his personal treatment of the officers so charmed them that, at his bidding they were ready to march with their men bravely facing any danger. He conquered the whole of the Punjāb¹ though his army led by Jasārat Khān Gakhar failed to conquer Delhi.² The Punjab had then slipped from the feeble grasp of the Sayyid King of Delhi. Baḍ Shāh added Bhottaland or Western Tibet, very probably between 1460 and 1470 A.C., to his dominion. Here he rescued a golden image of Buddha from destruction in Sayā-desha or Shel (pronounced Shē), above Leh, on the Indus. This village has always been famous for its large Buddhist images. The Sultān took the town of Kulūtā or Kulū which, apparently at that time, was occupied by the Tibetans.³ The king of Kulūtā or Kulū was a vassal of the king of Leh. After taking Kulū, Baḍ Shāh returned by way of Lāhul in Kāngra. There is an uncorroborated tradition that in the course of his conquest of the Punjāb, he halted at Amritsar where old Kashmīrīs repeated, until lately, this tradition about his halt, and said that he had a well dug out in the locality known after him as "Baḍ Khū" which was subsequently called "Baḍ Khū" on account of the influx of Kashmīrī Pandits in that quarter of the city. According to the Tabaqāt, Baḍ Shāh allowed the treasuries of all countries, which were conquered, to be plundered; and assessed the revenue on them on the same scale as that of the country round the capital.

His statesmanship and foreign relations.

Besides putting down conspiracies and removing such elements as tended to disturb the tranquillity of his realm, the Sultān further proceeded to enter into friendly relations with his immediate neighbours, as well as the potentates and rulers of distant lands. He sent ambassadors with adequate presents and letters to the kings of Khurāsān,

1. Indian or provincial historians make no mention of this conquest of the Punjāb by Zain-ul-'Ābidīn. I suppose it was a mere swoop and led to no established occupation.

2. The Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, De's edition, Calcutta, 1935, Vol. 3, page 455.

3. The Indian Antiquary, Bombay, Volume XXXVII, July, 1906, p. 183.

IN DIA

AT THE TIME OF
SULTAN ZAIN-UL-ABIDIN
1420-70 A.C.

Turkistān, Āzarbāijān,¹ Gīlān,² Sistān and the Sultān of Turkey, the Burjī Mamlūk of Egypt, and the Sharīf of Mecca. Sultān Buhlūl Lodī, Sultān Mahmūd Begarha of Gujrāt, and Jām Nizām-ud-Dīn (Nanda) of Sind received his embassies. The ruler of Tibet sent him a pair of extremely beautiful geese to which a strange performance was attributed, namely, that they could separate milk and water, and drink the milk and leave the water in the vessel. Between the Sultān and the Tonwār rājā of Gwālīor love of music formed a bond.

The noted contemporary rulers of Baḍ Shāh in India were :

Delhi	.. From Mu'izz-ud-Dīn Mubārak son of Khizr Khān, to Buhlūl Lodī
Sind	.. Jām Nizām-ud-Dīn (or Nanda)	.. 1437—1494 A.C.
Multān	.. Qutb-ud-Dīn Shāh	.. 1440—1456 „
Jaunpur	.. Mahmūd Shāh	.. 1436—1458 „
Deccan	.. Ahmad Shāh Walī	.. 1422—1436 „
Gujrāt	.. Mahmūd Begarha	.. 1458—1511 „
Mālwa	.. Mahmūd I (Khalji)	.. 1436—1469 „
Khāndesh	.. Mubārak Khān	.. 1441—1457 „
Bengāl	.. Nasīr-ud-Dīn Mahmūd Shāh	1442—1460 „
Orissa	.. Kapilēṣvara (or Kapil- endra) Deva	.. 1434—1470 „
Vijayanagar	.. Devarāya II	.. 1419—1446 „
Gondwāna	.. Suraja Ballāl Singh (Sher Sāh Ballāl Sāh)	.. 1437—1462 „
Burma	.. Queen Shinsawbu	.. 1453—1472 „
Ceylon	.. Parakkama-Bāhu VI	.. 1409—1466 „

1. Āzarbāijān is now a province of north-western Irān with an area of 40,000 square miles. The population is estimated at 2,000,000. The capital is Tabriz which has a population of 200,000. Āzarbāijān was also a province in the empire of the Caliphs. It consists generally of lofty mountain ranges. The principal river is the Araxes which enters the Caspian.

The former Russian provinces of Bākū and Elizavetpol on the coast of the Caspian Sea are also now called Āzarbāijān and declared a Socialist Soviet Republic since 30th September, 1920 A.C., with Bākū as its capital. This second Āzarbāijān was a part of the old one.

2. Gīlān, a province of Irān south of the Caspian Sea and north of the Alburz chain, is now a vilāyat with Rasht as capital. The population numbers 250,000. Gīlān, independent for long, was conquered by Hulāgū, and finally incorporated in Irān by the Safavids. Arabs call it Jīl or Jīlān.

Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s European contemporary rulers were:

England	.. Henry VI	.. 1422—1461 A.C.
Scotland	.. James II	.. 1437—1460 „
France	.. Charles VII	.. 1422—1461 „
Spain	.. Henry IV	.. 1454—1474 „
Empire	.. Emperor Frederic IV	.. 1439—1498 „
Pope	.. Eugenius IV	.. 1431—1447 „

Some of the Muslim contemporaries were :—

Among the Nasrids of Granada (Spain)—

- (i) Muhammad VIII Al-Mutamassik ibn Yūsuf III
1417-1427 A.C.
- (ii) Muhammad IX—As-Saghīr ibn Nasr
- (iii) Muhammad VIII (again)
- (iv) Abu’l Hajjāj Yūsuf IV ibn Muhammad VI.
- (v) Muhammad X—Al-Ahnāf ibn ‘Usmān
- (vi) Sa’d Al-Musta’in ibn ‘Alī
- (vii) Muhammad X (again). (viii) Sa’d (again)
- (ix) Abu’l Hasan ‘Alī ibn Sa’d 1461-1482 A.C.

In Morocco and Algeria—Abū Muhammad ‘Abdul Haqq ibn Abī Sa’id ‘Usmān II and Abū-Zakariyā Yahyā ibn Zayān Al-Wattāsi.

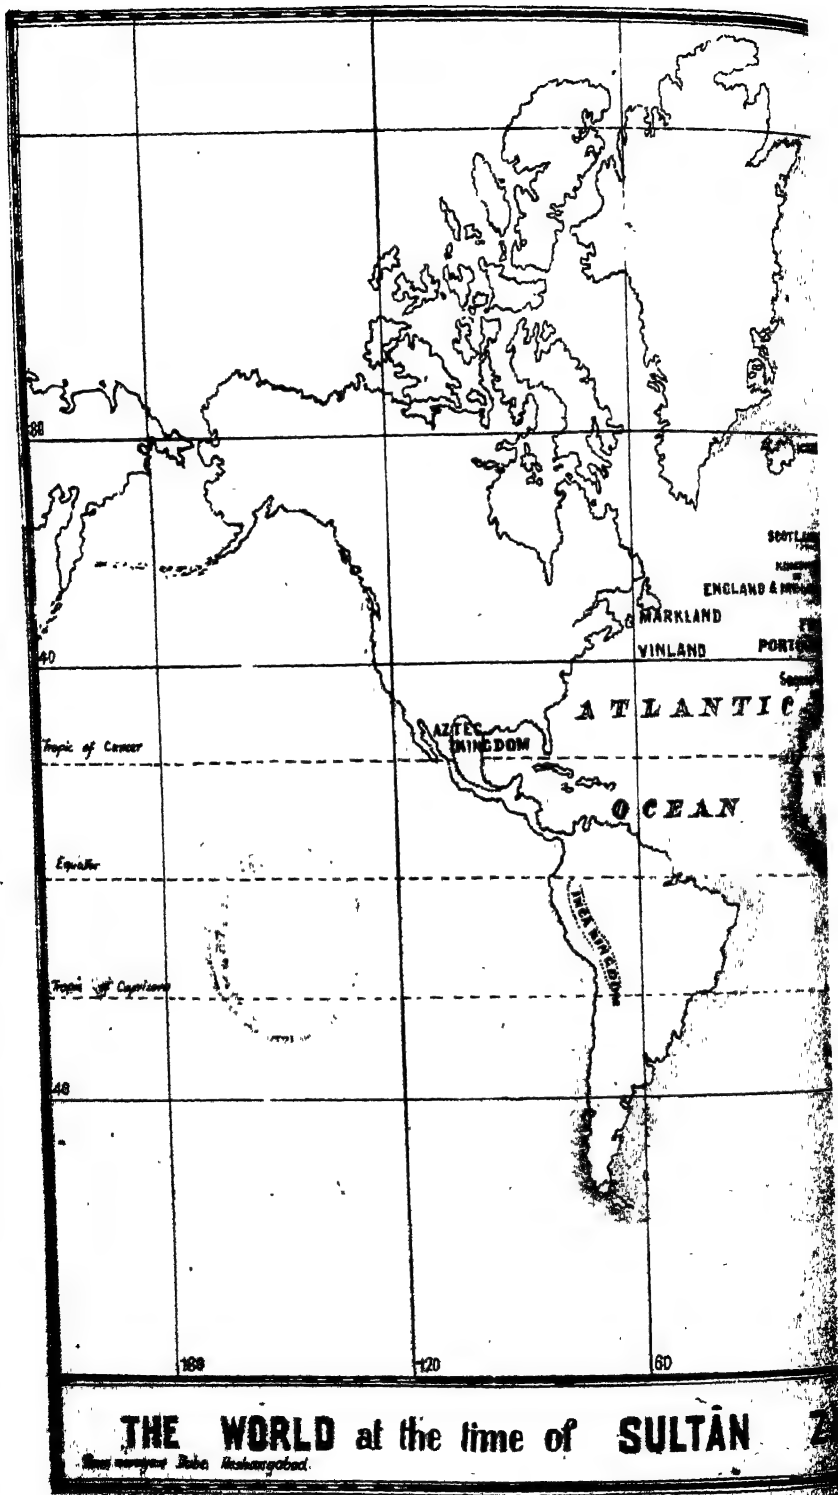

In Egypt and Syria, among the Burjī Mamlūks—(1) Ashraf Saif-ud-Dīn Barsbaī (2) Al-‘Azīz Jamāl-ud-Dīn Yūsuf ibn Barsbaī (3) Az-Zāhir Saif-ud-Dīn Jaqmaq (4) Al-Mansūr Fakhr-ud-Dīn ‘Usmān ibn Jaqmaq (5) Al-Ashraf Saif-ud-Dīn Ināl (6) Al-Muayyad Shihāb-ud-Dīn Ahmad (7) Az-Zāhir Saif-ud-Dīn Khushqadam (8) Az-Zāhir Saif-ud-Dīn Bilbaī (9) Az-Zāhir Timurbughā (10) Al-Ashraf Saif-ud-Dīn Qaītabāī.

In Āzarbāijān among the Qara-Quyunlīs, the Turkomān clan known as the Black Sheep from the device on their standards—(i) Sikandar ibn Yūsuf (2) Muzaffar-ud-Dīn Jahān Shāh ibn Yūsuf (3) Hasan ‘Alī. Among the Aq-Quyunlīs, the Turkomān clan of the White Sheep—(1) Nur-ud-Dīn Hamza ibn Qara Yūluq (2) Mu‘izz-ud-Dīn Jahāngīr (3) Uzun Hasan ibn ‘Alī.

The Sharīfs of Mecca at the time were—(1) ‘Alī ibn ‘Inān (1423 A.C.) (2) ‘Alī ibn ‘Ajlān, (3) ‘Alī ibn Al-Hasan (4) Abu’l Qāsim ibn Al-Hasan, and (5) Muhammad ibn Barakāt.

Bad Shāh’s attitude towards Hindus.

Among measures adopted by the Sultān, there were certain laws relating to the Hindus which vouchsafed to them a just administration and a trial of their cases according to their own laws. The *Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī*¹ says the Sultān took an agreement from Brahmans that they would not act in contravention of what was written in their books. After this the odious measures of persecution instituted by Malik Saif-ud-Dīn, Sikandar's prime minister, were revoked, and a general toleration of all religions was proclaimed. The Brahmans and other Hindus who had migrated during the last régime were recalled. Complete religious independence was granted. Some of the temples which had been demolished in the last reign were re-built, and permission was accorded to erect new ones. Within the palace known as Siddhapurī, Bad Shāh repaired dilapidated temples by props, or re-built them. says Çrivara.² Pāthashālas were opened for Hindu boys to study their own scriptures. Scholarships were awarded to students for the study of Sanskrit and they were deputed to the Deccan and to Kāshī (Benares).³ The Sultān remitted the poll-tax and granted jāgīrs or assignments to Hindus and discountenanced the killing of cows. He further encouraged his Hindu subjects by taking into his service such of them as deserved his patronage and recognition. It is also remarkable that the Kārkun (state service) and Bāchh Baṭ (priestly) classes⁴ of Brahmans came into being, and obtained recognition in this reign. These two sections continue to be two distinct groups and do not intermarry even to this day. A third section is the Jotish or astrologer class which intermarry with the Kārkun. According to Munshī Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq (The Ta'rīkh-i-Aqwām-i-Kashmīr, Vol. I, p. 43) the Brahmans who first took to the study of Persian and Muslim learning in Kashmīr were the Saprūs, the forefathers of the caste that in our day produced (i) the late Sir Muhammad Iqbāl whose family embraced Islam in the days of Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr, and migrated to Siālkōt, (ii) the Right Honourable Sir Tej Bahādur Sapru whose family migrated from Kashmīr, according to Sir Tej himself, "about 130 years or more and settled down in Delhi," and then moved to Allāhābād.

Hindu and Muslim subjects of Bad Shāh lived at peace with each other undisturbed by religious dissensions. In case there occurred any occasional friction it was

1. De's Calcutta edition of 1945, Vol. 3, page 436.

2. Kings of Kashmīra, page 142.

3. The Hamdard, Srinagar, 25th January, 1942.

4. The Valley of Kashmīr by W. Lawrence, 1895, p. 192.

amicably settled by panchāyats at which the monarch* himself presided.

Baḍ Shāh's suavity in effecting reforms.

The Sultān provided his subjects with a code of laws, and had them all engraved on copper-plates and placed in public markets and halls of justice. He was in this respect, perhaps, the first systematic lawgiver of Kashmīr. He abhorred every kind of bloodshed and never put to death any one for a petty crime. It is recorded of him that he gave away some camel loads of money and cloth for the repose of the soul of a man whom he had executed because he had been guilty of the wanton death of his wife. Perhaps Jonarāja refers to this case. "Though the king was kind-hearted," writes Jonarāja, "yet for the sake of his people, he would not forgive even his sons, or a minister, or a friend if he were guilty. Mereshaya the Yāvana (i.e., Muslim) was once drunk, and killed his wife without any fault, and though he was the king's favourite, yet the king caused him to be executed." Similarly, according to Firishta, Baḍ Shāh executed his own foster-brother Sher on Sher's killing his own brother Mas'ūd. Arbitrary fines imposed by provincial governors were abolished, says Firishta. The Sultān released all the prisoners of former kings. When the Chaks set fire to his grand Zaina Dab, a magnificent palace twelve storeys high, he drove them back and had their leader Pāndū Chak flogged to death, but took his younger son, Husain Chak, the younger brother of Himmat Chak, into favour. We shall meet this Husain Chak later in our history when he becomes Shī'a under the influence of Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī. This mildness of temper and leniency shown to people did not, however, encourage any crime in the country though perhaps, in later days, strife among the Sultān's sons could be said to have been due to this undue mildness of disposition.

A system of prison industries like pottery and others was instituted. The brandishing of prisoners was stopped, and they were required to work on road construction. He devoted particular attention to the agriculturist class, and adopted many measures which enormously improved their condition. He did not even spare himself. He personally supervised the construction of several bridges, canals and aqueducts, rendering thereby a large portion of Kashmīr arable and irrigated. His Zaina-gīr canal has been recently reconstructed. He added to the length of the jarīb or the chain, and the yard but the detail is not available. What the Tabaqāt records is: "In kindness to the ra'iyat he increased the length of the yard measure and of the chain beyond what had been customary." In simple language we may understand that he standardized the jarīb and the yard. Land assessment was revised, being reduced to a seventh in some places. Village-folk and farmers were further protected from the exactions of revenue officers by a law which prohibited the latter from accepting any gifts. The price of commodities were regulated by monthly notifications. Sale deeds were stamped with the king's seal. Rest-houses were built on principal roads, and shelters were set up within forests. The Sultān took a further stride in raising the status of those placed low in life.

*Major H. S. Jarrett, B. S. C., Note on an inscription found in Kashmīr, J. A. S. B., No. I,—1880, page 22.

Bad Shāh's sources of income.

For a great court, for a galaxy of eminent scholars, for a number of structures, some of which were indeed magnificent and for his army, the Sultān needed money. This he found by the working of copper mines, the collection of gold dust in the Ladākh rivers, and the construction of an extensive system of canals which irrigated large tracts of arid land.

ز هر کس ناید این کن امر مت نهالِ عهد را سر سبز داد
—طبقات اکبری

[To every one does not come such strength of resolution].
That he can keep the plant of his time verdant.]

Zain-ul-'Ābidīn and Akbar compared.

Historians have sometimes drawn a comparison between Zain-ul-'Ābidīn and Akbar. It is essential, in the first place, not to forget that they were not contemporaries. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn was, moreover, the Sultān of Kashmīr, and parts of Tibet and of the Punjab, while Akbar held under his sway a kingdom which far exceeded many times that of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn. There is, therefore, no comparison between the two in the matter of the extent of their kingdoms. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn did not lack Akbar's enterprise and physical vigour, but the field for their display was comparatively limited for Baḍ Shāh. A very great point of similitude between the two was the popularity, particularly with Hindus, enjoyed by both. A more careful observation, however, will clearly show that, even in gaining popularity, their approach was quite dissimilar to each other. Akbar had favoured the development of an eclectic faith of his own to which he gave the name of "Divine Faith" and matrimonial alliances with Rājput princes. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's greatness lies in this, that without compromising his religion, or having recourse to any of such measures of policy, he was able to command as much love and respect from his Hindu subjects, perhaps more than Akbar did. In his aims and objects, the monarch stood for what Akbar always pursued and kept in view. As Sir Wolseley Haig has well put it, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn "possessed a stock of learning and accomplishments from which Akbar's youthful indolence had, to a great extent, excluded him, his views were more enlightened than the emperor's and he practised a tolerance which Akbar only preached."

شہنشاہِ معظم شاہِ زین العابدین بڈ شاہ
 کیا اکبر نے جس سے کسبِ آئینِ جہاننامی

—مہاجور

H. Beveridge¹ who spent over twenty years in translating the historical part of the Akbar-nāma feels driven to say that Akbar has been over-praised. Akbar had the defects of his age and race, and of his own idiosyncrasy. He was both ruthless and self-indulgent. He ordered a lamp-lighter to be flung over the battlements for the crime of having fallen asleep in the imperial bed. He flung into the river a man who failed to trace out a ford on the Indus on one occasion. On another occasion, Akbar in anger at a person, coming into his presence drunk, had him drenched with cold water with the result that the poor man eventually died of shock. V. A. Smith's special study of Akbar made him assert that, on many occasions, Akbar would get rid of people he considered dangerous by assassination or secret execution.²

It is true that Akbar, after he became half a Hindu or half a Pārsī, expressed horror at Jahāngīr's cruelties but it was Akbar, points out Beveridge,¹ who hanged the innocent and able Mansūr Shīrāzī, and it was he who killed or connived at the killing of his old and once venerated teacher! Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s life was free from such cruelty. He was no Tartar. His veins were not tainted with blood from the bloody Chingīz.

1. English Translation of the Akbar-nāma of Abu'l Fazl, Vol. III, Introduction, page XIII-IV.

2. Akbar the Great Mogul by V. A. Smith, second edition, 1937, page 343.

Akbar’s own son, Jahāngīr, writing about the piety of Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn says that he passed many periods of ‘forty days’ in his Zaina Lānk, and adds that the Sultān is said to have performed many miracles (Elliot and Dowson, Vol. VI, page 306). Akbar experienced trouble from Jahāngīr. Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn had likewise trouble from his sons.

The family lives of Bād Shāh and Akbar.

Akbar had more than 300 wives.² Bād Shāh had but two. Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn possessed the virtue so rare among mediæval monarchs whether of the East or of the West, of contenting himself, as just noted, with only two wives because the first one had no male child. Akbar’s own historian, Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad writes that Bād Shāh “never looked at the face of a strange woman.”

The following incident throws further light on this aspect of Bād Shāh’s character. “Tributary Hindu chiefs observed the practice of sending a daughter to the harem of the lord paramount, and it is related that Sundarasena, the chief of Rājapuri (the ancient name of Rajaurī) whose accession is fixed at about 1450 A.C., sent his eldest daughter, Rajya Devī, to Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn. On her arrival in Kashmīr, the king was engaged in sport on the Wulur Lake. Seeing the ladies’ party coming, he asked one of his attendants the question: “What mother’s dolr is that?” On hearing that it was the Rājapuri princess sent to him, he said, “As I have already called her mother how can I receive her as a wife?” She was sent over to live with the ladies of the harem, where she afterwards became a Muslim. The Rājwīr, or Rajaurī Kadal, a bridge over the Mār canal in Srinagar, was built by her.”⁴

1. The Akbar-nāma, Introduction, page XV.

2. Ibid., page XVIII.

3. A kind of palanquin or covered litter for a person, usually carried by four or five men.

4. J. Hutchinson and J. Ph. Vogel, Journal of the Panjāb Historical Society, Vol. IX, part II, page 145.

"The king's beloved queen named Vodha Khātonā died," writes Pandit Çrīvara. "She was to the family of Saidas (Sayyids) what the moonlight is to the sea. It was by union with her that the king had thought his life happy, and now by her separation his body became burnt with sorrow and all things appeared to him as nothing."*

The grave of Makhdūma Khātūn, the Queen of Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin or Baḍ Shāh, is situated in the Mazār-i-Kalān or Hazrat Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh Mausoleum, among the graves of the Baihaqī Sayyids. She died in 870 A.H. (1465 A.C.).

This Vodha (or Boḍ, meaning big) Khātōnā was Tāj Khātūn Baihaqī Begam, the daughter of Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī Kāndhāmī. She lies buried in the ziyārat of Qutb-ul-'Ālam Shaikh Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh, outside Nāgar-nagar, Harī-parbat, Srinagar. Her tomb is now a protected monument.

Baihaqī Begam had two daughters, one was married to Sayyid Hasan Baihaqī, her own nephew, and the second was married to the Sultān of Pakhlī. Baihaqī Begam had no son. Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, then, married a second wife. She was the daughter of the ruler of Jammu, and by her Baḍ Shāh had four sons: (1) Ādam Khān (2) Hājī Khān (3) Jasārat Khān (4) Bahrām Khān. Jasārat probably died early as we hear nothing further about him. The tomb of the Dogrā queen of Jammu, the second wife of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, is beside the grave of her eldest son Ādam Khān according to Çrīvara. She died in 856 A.H. (1452 A.C.) if the inscription on this grave, near Ādam's, correctly refers to her.

* Kings of Kashmīra, page 157.

Baḍ Shāh and Akbar in their general habits.

Unlike Akbar who spent freely of public funds, Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn expended only the proceeds of his own copper mines for his private use. Akbar was fond of hunting. Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn forbade hunting. In fact, during the month of Ramazān, he never ate flesh, and never executed persons for theft: in this respect, in Rodger’s words, ‘he was three hundred years ahead of England.’ In Jonarāja’s language “beauty dwelt in his person, and the goddess of learning on his lips, fortune rested in his breast, and patience in his mind.”* Such, in brief, was this king—princely in appearance, the patron of arts and crafts, a friend to the cultivators, promoter of learning and scholarship, and benefactor of the Hindus. And truly he was the ‘Glory of the Devout’ or the ‘Ornament of the Adorers’ as his name implied.

To borrow the words of Col. Malleeson used for Akbar, when we reflect, what Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn did, and the age in which he did it, we are bound to recognize in the Sultān one of those illustrious men whom Providence occasionally sends in the hour of a country’s need to re-conduct it into those paths of peace and toleration which alone can assure the happiness of its inhabitants.

لوٹ اے بار بہر اے دُوح زینُ العابدین جنتِ کشمیر کو بہر دیکھ اے جنتِ نشیر

—مُجدالدین فوق

Baḍ Shāh’s closing days and death.

Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s life was somewhat embittered towards its close owing to jealousy among his sons. Unfortunately they did not prove the worthy sons of the worthy father. The wise king realized, with dismay, that it would be better to separate them. He, therefore, probably in 1451 A.C., placed the eldest son Ādam Khān, whose manners always repelled the king, at the head of a large army, and charged him to invade Ladākh or Western Tibet. In those days, Tibet was to Kashmīr what Algiers or Tunis was to France during the latter part of the nineteenth century. Hājī Khān, the second son, was ordered to proceed against Lohkōt in Pūnch; the youngest, Bahrām Khān, remained with the king. Both sons were victorious and returned covered with glory. Hājī Khān who was also the king's favourite son, turned his arms against his father.¹ The two armies met on the plain of Pallaçilā in Badgām Tahsil in 1452 A.C. (856 A.H.). Ādam Khān, the elder, stood by his father who, at first, tried to bring round the rebellious son through persuasion. Hājī's army attacked the Sultān's and the fight continued from sunrise till sunset. Hājī being unable to withstand the royal forces, fled to Hūrapōr² about seven miles south-west of Shupiyān. Thence he fell back upon the town of Nārwan which stands on the road leading into Kashmīr by the Būdil³ pass. Ādam Khān followed him, but orders from the Sultān restrained his pursuit.

Kings of Kashmīra*, Vol. III, page 76.

The Sultān, however, ordered Ādam Khān to march against Sopōr, the fort of Kamrāj—which place was reduced to subjection. Such of its inhabitants as had instigated Hājī Khān to rebellion were remorselessly executed. This last step caused a good number of Kamrāj soldiers from Sopōr in Hājī's army to desert him. Ādam Khān was declared the king's successor for his gallant behaviour at this critical juncture. But he proved a failure. His maladministration of Kamrāj was repeatedly reported to the Sultān to whose admonitions he sent an unfilial rejoinder by raising the standard of revolt at Qutbuddīnpōr. He invited Hājī's co-operation, who tried to turn the situation to his own advantage by attacking the elder brother, but suffered a severe reverse at Sopōr. The Sultān, then, sent his army against Ādam Khān. It was now Ādam's turn to sustain a defeat with considerable loss, after which he fled to Sopōr hotly pursued by the Sultān. Hājī followed the fortunes of war with shrewdness and at this time arrived at Bārāmūla. The Sultān sent his youngest son Bahrām

1. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 471. It might be assumed that the object of this move was Ādam Khān, as the two brothers were never on good terms with each other.

2. Jahānārā, daughter of Shāh Jahān, built a hospice at Hūrapōr.—The Bādhāh-nāma of 'Abdul Hamīd, Vol. II, page 469. Population 1535.

3. The Būdil (Budhil) or Sedan pass crosses the Pantsāl range towards the south-west corner of the Valley of Kashmīr. Būdil is the name of a village (Population 827) situated to the south of the Pīr Pantsāl on one of the upper tributaries of the Āns River. It has given its name to the pass.

The grave of Bad Shāh or Sultān Zain-ul-Abidin in the Mazār-us-Salātin, Zaina Kadal, Mahārāj Ganj, Srinagar.

Khān to welcome him on his arrival. Ādam Khān sought safety in flight to the banks of the Nil-āb, the Kashmīrī name of the Indus. Hājī, now penitent and submissive, was declared heir-apparent in place of his elder brother, and also tried to make amends for his past misbehaviour.

The Sultān, however, was sorely troubled to observe that his favourite son paid no heed to his admonitions, and persisted in his licentious habits and drinking. He further showed a total disregard of statesmanship in taking to a course of bloodshed. His opponents, now thinking the time opportune, secretly invited Ādam Khān, but the Sultān refused to pardon him when he came to the capital. However, the eldest son was not dismayed by this, and continued his intrigues and his propaganda. The nobles, now in view of the desperate situation and the declining health of the Sultān, urged him to nominate his successor. Hājī Khān, being supreme at the capital, and still retaining the Sultān's favour, was proclaimed successor to the throne.

Shortly after this, the Sultān passed away in his sixty-ninth solar year in 1470 A.C., or 874 A.H., after a "reign of fifty-two years," at noon on Friday, the 12th day of the moon, in the month of Jaishṭha (corresponding to June-July) with prayers on his quivering lips as noted by Pandit Ṣrīvara.¹ The Pandit saw the dead body of the king, and noticed 'the beauty of the flowing black beard on his face.' "At the time of his death," writes Pandit Ṣrīvara, "Fortune seemed to abandon all his limbs and appeared on his face, and I saw him in that state. His face methought was the dwelling place of the Goddess of Fortune, and perspiration issued from it, even like a stream of good luck. His breath left him, taking his life with it, and as if afraid of having stolen that jewel. After life had departed, tears still issued from his eyes, as if his eyes, which were like the sun and the moon, melted away and his affection for his subjects trickled down."

The Sultān was buried beside his father, Sultān Sikandar. "A long crystal stone was placed on the grave, it was the highest," says Ṣrīvara,² "among those that were there, and was like the figure of the king in a recumbent position, and it was illumined with verses." The tomb is below the fourth bridge called the Zaina Kadal.

1. Kings of Kashmīra, page 175.

2. Ibid., p. 179.

The locality is called Baḍ Shāh, after this great sovereign. But the condition of the tomb evoked from the late Pīrzāda Muhammad Husain 'Arīf, ex-Chief Justice, Kashmīr :

شکستہ حال زین العابدین کا مقبرہ دیکھا

And Fauq has the following :

تیرے روضے کے آئینہ نما پتھر کا وہ کتبہ
کہ روشن تھی مہ تابان سے ہر جا جس کی زیبائی
مگر اب ہے نہ وہ کتبہ نہ وہ اشعار کتبے کے
کہ پڑھ لینے اگر اُن کو تو مٹ جاتی بہ خود رانی
تیری عظمت کی شہرت کو مٹا دینا ہے ناممکن
کہ سمجھکو موت بھی شکلِ حیاتِ جاوداں آئی

—نغمہ نگار۔ صفحہ ۹۱—

Zain-ul-'Ābidīn was deeply mourned by all his subjects. Poets and historians wrote to commemorate his unprecedented reign of peacefulness and glory. The following chronogram,* while aptly eulogising the king, also gives the year of his death, 874 A.H. (1470 A.C.)—

سُلطان زین العابدین، زد خیمہ در خلد برین

بے نور شد تاج و نگین، بے نور شد ارض و سم

از بہر تاریخش، عیاں بے سر شد، اندر جہاں

عدل و کرم، علم و حکم، ضبط و حشم، صلح و صفا

Malik Haidar Chāḍura and Jahāngīr have recorded an interesting miracle about Zain-ul-'Ābidīn. The Sultān had gone out for a pleasure trip to the Wulur Island. His elder

*In the second line of the second couplet, the first letters of all words as well as the four و should not count; the numerical value of the remaining letters should be taken and added to obtain the date of the Sultān's death, viz. 874 A.H. The words given in Hasan's History are not quite correct as they total up 879. جاء and عمل should have been replaced by ضبط and حکم son accompanied him on this occasion. He advised the Sultān to enjoy a trip in a boat, calculating the chances of throwing him overboard and thus doing away with him. The Sultān evinced no suspicion. After covering a mile, he asked Ādam Khān to fetch his rosary which he had left behind in his prayer-room. On his return to the prayer-room, the prince observed with consternation that the Sultān himself sat in the room, and was deeply absorbed in meditation. He returned to the Sultān and confessed his guilty intention, whereupon the former pardoned him, but at the same time recited this couplet* and how true it proved in that Ādam, though the eldest, was not destined to succeed his father:—

پدرکش بادشاهی را نشاید و گر شاید، بجز شش مه نپاید

[A patricide does not deserve to wear a crown. Even if he does, he cannot hold his sceptre for more than six months.]

This recalls to mind Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr's letter to one of his sons who likewise prayed for his royal father's death and did not succeed to the crown. Sir Muhammad Iqbāl has put it in verse :

ندانی که یزدان دیرینه بود بے دید و سنجید و بست و کشود
ز ما سینه چاکان این تیره خاک شنید است صد ناله دردناک
بے همچو شبیر در خون نشست نه یک ناله از سینه او گشت
نه از گریه پسرکنان تپید نه از درد ایوب آه کشید
مَیَندار آن گه نه نخبیرگیر بدام دُعاے تو گردد اسیر

—پیام مشرق-صفحه ۱۵۳

Ādam Khān once again exerted himself to secure the throne. But Hājī Khān's resourcefulness and the timely appearance of his son, Hasan Khān, on the scene, again shattered Ādam Khān's schemes and he was forced to fly to Hindustān.

Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr* by Malīk Haidar Chādhura, page 152. Jahāngīr has also repeated this incident with a slight variation.—Elliot and Dowson, Vol. VI, page 306.

SULTĀN HAIDAR SHĀH

[874 to 877 A.H. or 1470 to 1472 A.C.]

Hājī ascended the throne with the title of Haidar Shāh. According to Firishta, the Sultān, following the family tradition, appointed his younger brother, Bahrām Khān, his minister with Nāgām as his jāgīr. His own son, Hasan Khān, was nominated as his successor, as well as Amīr-ul-Umarā' or Chief of the Noblemen, with the district of Kamraj as his personal estate, bestowed upon him in perpetuity.¹ From the very outset the new king abandoned himself to a life of debauchery and licentiousness. He proved himself to be, in every way, the reverse of his father, and left the administration of the country entirely in the hands of Bahrām Khān. Haidar Shāh's fame was tarnished by the undue favour he showed to a barber, Lūlī² by name, who secured the beheading of Hasan Kuchche, treasury officer, who had worked on behalf of the Sultān in securing his accession to the throne. Ādam Khān, the Sultān's eldest brother, tried to take advantage of this incident, but was killed by a party of Mughuls. His body, however, received a decent interment at the hands of Haidar Shāh. The tomb of Prince Ādam Khān is situated at Sehyār, Nau Kadal, Srinagar, opposite to that of Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn. The nobles, at this time, offered to help Bahrām Khān if he wished to seize the throne. He had arrived at no decision. In the meantime Hasan Khān, the Sultān's son, who had conquered, according to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, many fortresses in India, but according to the Cambridge History of India had been raiding the Punjab, and had acquired much booty, appeared at the court with the so-called intention of laying at the feet of his father the spoils he had collected from his expeditions. But his real aim was to try his fortune. His sudden appearance filled the minds of the nobles with suspicion, and they advised the king, say Firishta and Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn, not to give audience to him.³ The Sultān's behaviour cannot be clearly understood except that he was afraid of Bahrām.

1. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 475. Also the Tabaqāt, De's Translation, Vol. 3, page 673.

2. Pandit Gṛivara calls him Riktetara in one place and Pūrpa in another, and says this "cunning man kept concealed, by the sweetness of his tongue, the hardness of his heart, which led him to oppress the people."—Kings of Kashmīra, page 186.

3. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 476. Also the Tabaqāt, De's Translation, Vol. 3, page 675.

During this time confusion and turmoil prevailed in Kashmīr. Intrigues and plots were rampant. The beginning of the decay of the rule of the Sultāns of Kashmīr was marked by the death, in 1472 A.C., of this Sultān who, after a brief reign of fourteen months, fell from a terrace whilst intoxicated. But Pandit Çrīvara, the Sultān's contemporary, however, says people suspected that a certain Yōgī gave Haidar Shāh medicine which contained poison. Çrīvara praises the king for his love of music and poetry.

SULTĀN HASAN SHĀH

[877 to 889 A.H. or 1472 to 1484 A.C.]

With the active support of Ahmad Abū or Aswad,¹ the commander of forces, Hasan Khān, Sultān Haidar Shāh's son, ascended the throne with the title of Sultān Hasan Shāh.

Çrīvara describes (page 208) Hasan Shāh's coronation in glowing terms, and says "all the wealth of his father, his grandfather (Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn) and his uncle (Bahrām Khān), flowed to this fortunate king even as rivers flow to the sea." Hasan Shāh on this occasion, liberated the captives taken by his father and grandfather from the Bhoṭṭa country. Hayāt Khātūn, according to Çrīvara, was the Sultān's beloved queen. She came of the noted Sayyid family, and was the daughter of Sayyid Hasan Baihaqī son of Sayyid Nasir-ud-Dīn Baihaqī of Baḍ Shāh's days. When she gave birth to prince Muhammad Shāh, "silk clothes were distributed to the poor." Hasan Baihaqī was made a minister.

In return for his services to the Sultān, Ahmad Aswad received the title of Malik and the office of prime minister while his son, Naurūz, was appointed Amīr-i-Dar² or the Lord Chamberlain. Bahrām Khān, the uncle of the king, consulted his safety in a self-imposed exile to Hindustān.

Hasan Shāh revived the edicts and practices of his grandfather, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, which had suffered temporary abeyance during the brief reign of Haidar Shāh. Çrīvara says that Hasan Shāh learnt the six schools of

1. Firishta and Bakhshī write Ahmad Aswad. Aswad, besides 'black,' means 'powerful' and 'illustrious.'

2. The Amīr-i-Dar was analogous to the Vakīl-i-Dar in the Sultanate of Delhi who controlled the entire household and supervised the payment of allowances and salaries to the sovereign's personal staff. The queens, the princes, the kitchen and even the stables were under his care. It was he who reported all affairs requiring royal sanction. In fact, the Vakīl-i-Dar exercised great influence, and in many respects was considered to be the king's deputy.

philosophy, and "the different works of these six schools became one in him" (page 208). This looks as if Hasan Shāh was anticipating the uncrowned Dārā Shukūh after Akbar. Rājānaka Çiti Kanṭh wrote several books and sanskritized¹ several others from Arabic and has spoken well of Hasan Shāh for his wise and liberal rule. The Stuti Kusmāñjali (Offering of Prayer-Flowers) was written during this time. Bābā Ismā'īl Kubravī, a scholar and saint, was the Shaikh-ul-Islam.

The Jāmī' Masjid and Shāh Hamadān's Khānqāh that had been destroyed by fire were re-built. The year of the erection, 885 A.H.=1480 A.C., of the mosque attached to the Khānqāh is embodied in these words:—

مسجد أسس على التقوى

[The Mosque raised on the Foundation of Piety]

The words were, later on, versified as follows:—

مسجد أسس على التقوى خانقاه امير همدان است

Evidently some malcontents wanted to turn the new order of things to their own advantage, and did not favour the revival of the beneficent old practices. They summoned Bahrām Khān, the king's uncle, to occupy the throne. He accordingly penetrated Kashmīr as far as the province of Kamrāj. Malik Tāzī Baṭ who held the office of Guardian of the Crown Prince Muhammad Khān, however, stemmed the tide of Bahrām's advance, and inflicted a crushing defeat on him. Bahrām Khān expected active support and co-operation from the notables of Kashmīr, but these failed him at the last moment.² He fled to Zaina-pōr, but he and his sons were soon taken prisoners and brought to the capital where Bahrām's eyes were put out. He did not survive this violence more than three days. Historians refer to increasing jealousy between the minister Sayyid Hasan Baihaqī and the commander, Malik Ahmad. Ahmad's end is, however, sad. He died in prison.

زین جهان رفیق و دل برداشتم

با جهانداران جهان بگذاشتم

ایمنی جستیم از دست اجل

اے دریا ما غلط پنداشتیم

1. The Hamdard, Srinagar, dated 25th January, 1942.

2. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 478.

This inscription on the grave of Malik Ahmad testifies to his tragic end. The Sayyid's party was powerful. And yet Sayyid Amīn Uwaisī, a great poet and saint of this period, also lost his life in a skirmish in 1484 A.C. Before his death he said—

صورتِ قبرم ز بعدِ مرگ ویرانی
نامراد می‌همچو من با خاک یکسان خوشتر است

About 1483 A.C. or 888 A.H., the Sayyid dispatched an expedition to conquer Baltistān and Ladākhi under Jahāngīr and Nāsir, two Sayyid commanders. Both did not act promptly together. The result was the failure of the invasion and the defeat of the Kashmīr forces at the hands of Bhōtṭas. The consequence of this miserable defeat was that the soldiers of Kashmīr were never more sent on raiding expeditions into Ladākhi during the rule of the Shāh Mirīs.¹

Malik Haidar Chāḍura tells us that Hasan Shāh's court had twelve hundred Hindustānī musicians, and an equally large number of concubines.² The king ignored his duty to his subjects. He neglected the administration of justice, and left the inspection of his army to certain of his nobles.

افسوس آن سلطان حسن خاقان لقب قیصر حتم
بگذشت از بزمِ زمن سوئے شبستانِ مدم
از بهرِ سالش یک قلم بے دل شد از اندوه و غم
رقص و طرب ناز و ادا نوش و رجا ماه و صنم

—از تاریخِ حسن به ترمیم

The last line gives the date, viz. 889 A.H., if the second letters of words and wāvs are omitted.

The struggle between Muhammad Shah and his father's cousin, Fath Shah, for the throne of Kashmir

SULTĀN MUHAMMAD SHĀH (i)

[889 to 892 A. H. or 1484 to 1486 A. C.]

Sultān Hasan Shāh, on his death-bed, instructed Sayyid Hasan Baihaqī, his father-in-law, and Baḍ Shāh's son-in-

1. The Indian Antiquary, July 1908, pages 190-191.

2. The Ta'rikh-i-Kashmir by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 132.

law, and prime minister of the state, to set on the throne either Fath Khān, son of Ādam Khān or Yūsuf Khān, son of Bahrām Khān. But, obviously spurred by ambition, the minister set up on the throne in 889 A.H. or 1484 A.C. Prince Muhammad Shāh, the son of Sultān Hasan Shāh and Hayāt Khātūn, the minister's own daughter. The prince was then a child of seven, having been born in 1477 A.C. or 882 A.H. Sayyid Hasan's regency on account of the king's minority excited considerable jealousy, and resulted in hostile activity among the malcontents. Encouraged by these factions and with the collusion of Tāzī Baṭ, Fath Khān collected a force and attacked Kashmīr. Jahāngīr Māgre with the strong support of the Sayyids was able to inflict a defeat on Fath Khān. A second attempt proved equally futile. After these failures, Fath Khān occupied Jammu, whence he launched a far more formidable attack. This attempt, too, proved fruitless. Fath Khān, however, did not despair. He again advanced with an army. In this battle which occurred in 895 A.H. (1489 A.C.), Jahāngīr Māgre was wounded. He had to retire from the field, and Fath Khān gained a complete victory in consequence of which Muhammad Shāh, after his nominal sovereignty of two years and seven months, vacated the throne.¹ He and his entourage sought refuge in flight, but were captured and handed over by certain zamindārs or farmers to Fath Khān who kept Muhammad Shāh in close confinement.

"Just about this time in England," writes Rodgers,² "Edward V and his young brother were murdered in the Tower. Fath Shāh was not so bad as Richard III. He ordered the food and drink of the prince to be prepared according to his order, and gave him a place in the palace." It is perhaps, in gratitude for this early fostering care that Sultān Muhammad Shāh honoured the interment of Fath Shāh's last remains by a befitting burial on bringing his dead body from Naushahra near Bhimbar on the Pīr Panjāl route. These kings, despite their differences and depositions, did not cease to be human to each other. Rather their

1. Lt. Newall, too, in his article, A Sketch of the Muhammadan History of Kashmīr, has placed Muhammad Shāh's first dethronement two years and seven months after his accession.—J. A. S. B., No. 5, 1854, page 417. Firsihta, on the other hand, assumes it to have taken place in 902 A.H. (1496 A.C.) in the eleventh year after accession.—Briggs, Vol. IV, page 486.

2. The Square Silver Coins of the Sultāns of Kashmīr.—J. A. S. B., No. 2, 1885, page 110.

depositions, though, no doubt attended with bloodshed, look more like the fall of ministries in France or the changes of cabinet in England.

SULTĀN FATH SHĀH (i)

[892 to 898 A.H. or 1486 to 1493 A.C.]

Fath Khān ascended the throne with the title of Sultān Fath Shāh in 1486 A.C. It could have been expected that, with a new king on the throne, who possessed grit and strength enough to contest the crown, all dissensions would cease, and all disintegrating elements in the kingdom would be controlled. But, as a matter of fact, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's successors lacked the necessary qualities of administration and leadership. Fath Shāh was unequal to the task of restoring peace and tranquillity. His weakness brought the Chaks to the forefront. This led to the undoing of his own authority, and finally the extinction of his family as the dominant and ruling factor in Kashmīr.

Malik Saif-ud-Dīn Dār or Saif Dār was the king's chief minister. He conducted the affairs of the state wisely and in a statesmanlike manner. In his pay was the redoubtable Chak, Shams-ud-Dīn, who, at first, had entered the service of Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, the son of Sayyid Hasan Baihaqī, and then took Malik Naurūz son of Malik Ahmad for his master, and finally joined the service of Saif Dār. Shams-ud-Dīn Chak married the daughter of his uncle Husain Chak, gaining strength from the alliance. After this, he began to traffic in intrigue. He won over Shankar or Shringār or Sarhang Raina and Mūsā Raina, both brothers, descended from Rāmachandra the father of Kotā Rānī. Shams-ud-Dīn Chak openly set them up as rivals of Saif Dār. Fath Shāh, too, withdrew his favour. Soon the factious struggle ended in the death of Saif Dār and one of his rivals, Sarhang Raina. Shams-ud-Dīn Chak succeeded to his master Saif Dār's share of authority and administration. He was not satisfied with the removal of one master. He dreaded Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī whom he brought into clash with Kājī Chak and others. The Sayyid soon realized the parvenu's intentions. Consequently, he entered into an intrigue with the deposed king, and also won over to his side Ibrāhīm Māgre, Hājī Paḍar, and Malik 'Īdī Raina son of Mūsā Raina. An engagement fought in the vicinity of the tomb of Bulbul Shāh resulted in the flight of Kājī Chak and Shams-ud-Dīn Chak to Kamrāj. Sayyid Muhammad gave them a hot pursuit for some distance, and, on his return, burnt down their homes. Fath Shāh, too, left for the Punjāb. Shams-ud-Dīn Chak now better known as Shams Chak returned to avenge himself. On finding Muhammad Shāh and other opponents, he, however, abstained from an open fight. He carried out a night attack and, suffering defeat, rejoined his former master, ex-Sultān Fath Shāh, in the Punjāb, who, after a sway lasting for two years and eleven months, was again a fugitive.

The struggles of Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh during the period of 32 years from 1484 to 1516 A.C. show that history was repeating itself in Kashmīr. Both of them remind us of the disgraceful struggles of Pārtha and Chakravarman for 31 years from 906 to 937 A.C. It was, as it were, a re-incarnation in Kashmīr of the ferocious Wars of the Roses lasting for 32 years from 1455 to 1487 A.C., when English kings Henry VI, Edward IV and Richard III were enthroned and dethroned by factions.

SULTĀN MUHAMMAD SHĀH (ii)

[898 to 911 A.H. or 1493 to 1505 A.C.]

Muhammad Shāh, now 16 years old, re-gained his throne through the exertions of his maternal uncle Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī. Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī's keen eye did not fail to detect the rising power of the Chaks. He discovered the further possibility of danger from the same tribe in their Shī'ite tendencies, which had been successfully promulgated among them by Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī. This religious leader had found asylum in Kashmīr from the exile inflicted upon him by the governor of Khurāsān. So successful was his propaganda that all the big chiefs among the Chaks particularly, and several of the public too had willingly embraced his doctrines. Therefore, Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī perceived a danger in his preachings which, he thought, would add religious fervour to the fire of Chak opposition, the embers of which were still smouldering. He, therefore, banished Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī. But as this step was taken too late, the Chaks keenly felt the compulsory exodus imposed upon their religious leader. In their turn, they retaliated by starting an intrigue with Fath Shāh and Shams Chak.

Fath Shāh and Muhammad Shāh again met on the battle-field of Khāmpōr, in Tahsīl Pulwāma. Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī's bravery, a first, seemed to decide victory in Muhammad Shāh's favour, but owing to Baihaqī's accidental fall into a ravine, the tables turned. The adversaries, taking courage in both hands, charged and routed the royal forces. The natural consequence was that Fath Shāh again seized the throne, and wreaked vengeance on the family of Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī.

Malik Haidar Chāḍura ascribes the Chak defection* to Muhammad Shāh who, on account of his meanness and parsimony, failed to give due reward to Mūsā Raina for his brave services which had, to a great extent, contributed to the defeat of Fath Shāh.

It was in 1505 A.C. that Pandit Ḥrīvara sanskritized Mullā 'Abdur Rahmān Jāmī's Yūsuf-u-Zulaikḥā for the edification of Sultān Muhammad Shāh as the Sultān's court-poet. Sir A. Berriedale Keith's misstatement that it was written under Zain-ul-Ābidīn has already been pointed out in the footnote on page 167.

SULTĀN FATH SHĀH (ii)

[911 to 920 A.H. or 1505 to 1514 A.C.]

On re-ascending the throne, Fath Shāh rewarded Shams Chak by appointing him his minister, and also invested Mūsā Raina with considerable authority. Shams Chak could not brook the presence of a rival at court. He, therefore, tried to encompass the downfall of Mūsā Raina, but only succeeded in finding himself entangled in the meshes of the net he had spread for his rival. He was disgraced, arrested in the open court, and thrown into prison. Mūsā lost no time in disposing of so formidable and scheming a rival. Armed men were sent to the prison to kill Shams Chak who, however, first killed quite a number of them, before he fell under the relentless blows of his assailants. This feat of Shams Chak has been made famous in the following couplet:—

پُروب و بسنگ و بخت و بخت
 ملك شمس چك شصت كسى را بگشت

[By stick and by stone, by brick and by blow
 Did Malik Shams Chak lay sixty men low.]

Tārīkh-i-Kashmīr* by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 158.

Mūsā Raina, however, was too astute a person to take the blame of this murder upon himself. He managed to lay the blame at the door of the Māgre notables who were therefore exiled.

Mūsā Raina filled the position which Shams Chak had occupied. His accession to power was a signal to Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī to return from Skardū. The latter soon inaugurated a religious campaign for the spread of Islam among the Hindus. In this respect, he tried to emulate Malik Saif-ud-Dīn, the minister of Sultān Sikandar. These religious persecutions carried out by the Shī'as continued unchecked by Mūsā Raina, and justly aroused the anger of Ibrāhīm Māgre who now stood as the leader of the Sunnis. The king, himself being unable to do anything, secretly warned Ibrāhīm to settle matters with Mūsā Raina who was forced to flee towards the Punjāb. In his precipitation and hurried flight on horseback, Mūsā Raina got his neck so inextricably entangled in a vine-creeper and the horse took such fright, that he died on the spot in 1513 A.C.

Now it was Ibrāhīm Māgre's turn to enjoy authority. He recalled Malik 'Usmān, Dānī Malik and others of his tribe who had previously been accused of bringing about the death of Shams Chak, and had been banished. But, after a space of forty days, he vacated his post for Malik 'Usmān. Malik 'Usmān, too, was forced to withdraw after three months.

These constant changes of ministers were as baneful as those of kings. Fath Shāh seemed to be no more than a figurehead, and was powerless to keep one minister long enough. He felt so overpowered that, accompanied by several councillors, he left for Hindustān. Ibrāhīm Māgre took advantage of this situation and instituted himself as minister. He, then, recalled Fath Shāh. Kājī Chak and Jahāngīr Paḍar, the king's adherents, retired to the Punjāb. In the meantime, Muhammad Shāh's army came into conflict with that of Fath Shāh at Ghāzikōt, in Pakhlī, with the result that Fath Shāh's army had to retreat. For a year, the situation remained unchanged. Ibrāhīm Māgre, however, continued to wield authority as minister. Malik 'Usmān, who had been set free by Ibrāhīm Māgre, then replaced him. On relinquishing his post, Ibrāhīm Māgre accompanied by Kājī Chak and Jahāngīr Paḍar, joined Muhammad Shāh. A coup cleverly carried out by 'Alī Raina, however, decided the day in Muhammad Shāh's favour. Fath Shāh had to flee again, after a reign of twelve years and eight months, during which period revolutions and constant changes of ministers had sapped the very foundations of authority and administration.

SULTĀN MUHAMMAD SHĀH (iii)

[920 to 921 A.H. or 1514 to 1515 A.C.]

Although installed by Ibrāhīm Māgre, Muhammad Shāh was not able to hold the throne for more than five months. When Fath Shāh made his appearance with a large army, Muhammad Shāh retired in safety to Naushahra with Sayyid Ibrāhīm Baihaqī, son of the late minister, Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī.

SULTĀN FATH SHĀH (iii)

[921 to 922 A.H. or 1515 to 1516 A.C.]

The third phase of Sultān Fath Shāh's rule lasted for a period of one year and one month. Remembering his old trouble, he resolved to divest himself of all regal authority, and divided the country into four parts. Three of these he handed over to Jahāngīr Paḍar, Kāji Chak and Sunkur Raina, and retained only one portion for himself, hoping thereby to pass his days in peace. His co-partners, however, soon revolted against him, and invited Muhammad Shāh together with Ibrāhīm Māgre to fight for the throne. The result of the battle which took place was, in no way, favourable to Muhammad Shāh, because Ibrāhīm Māgre, who was the mainstay of his power, was slain with his sons. Muhammad Shāh did not lose heart at his discomfiture. He sought help from Sikandar Lodī of Delhi. In the meantime, Jahāngīr Paḍar and Sunkur Raina also welcomed Muhammad Shāh. They enabled Muhammad Shāh to drive out Fath Shāh who died in exile at Naushahra a town on the Pir Panjāl route—after three years in 925 A.H. or 1519 A.C. Fath Shāh fanā is the satirical chronogram. Muhammad Shāh caused his remains to be interred by the side of his father Ādam Khān, Bad Shāh's son. The cap which was a gift from Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (Shāh Hamadān) was according to Fath Shāh's wishes, also buried with him.¹ The grave of Sultān Fath Shāh lies in the burial-ground² of Baḍ Shāh. Fath Shāh, in all, ruled over 17 years.

Pandit Çukā³ closes his account of Fath Shāh with these lines: "The great king Phatāh Shāh (Fath Shāh), the moon among sovereigns, died in a country outside Kashmīra. Mahmadashāha (Muhammad Shāh) did not take his meal on the day in which he heard of this event, nor did he sleep or bathe, but spent his time in thinking of that king. Where could be found a king like him experienced, truthful, patient, a great politician, a lover of men of worth, and one who loved his servants? The king was born in a country outside Kashmīra, and he died there. The work of fate is extraordinary! The corpse was then placed in a litter, and was brought here within a few days by his servants and chiefs in order to give it its last funeral rites."

Muhammad Shāh, now about 39 years of age, or 40 according to lunar months, gained the throne for the fourth time through the ability and exertions of Kāji Chak. In reward for his services the king appointed him Madār ul-Muhāmm or the chief minister.

SULTĀN MUHAMMAD SHĀH (iv)

[922 to 934 A.H. or 1516 to 1528 A.C.]

Kashmīr, it seems, had now become fertile soil for jealousy, dissensions, rivalry and blood-thirstiness. Factions grew up, temporarily strengthened themselves and caused constant feuds among the nobles. Kāji Chak became the target of a faction of nobles which included Nusrat Raina, Lohur Māgre and Jahāngīr Paḍar. Kāji Chak was, however, able to inflict a defeat on his opponents and kill Nusrat Raina. This confederacy being broken, Abdāl Māgre, then, began to devastate the country, and was put to flight by Mas'ūd Chak, Kāji's son. Soon after this, another body of nobles consisting of Sikandar Shāh, Fath Shāh's eldest son,

1. Cunningham in the Numismatic Chronicle, Vol. VI, page 37, says: "On the same night, Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī appeared to a faqīr, and told him that the cap had been given by him to Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn for good luck, and that, along with it, the kingdom had been transmitted from father to son down to the present generation; but that, as Fath Shāh had now taken the cap with him to the tomb, so likewise had the kingdom gone to the tomb and departed from his family."—The Ancient Coinage of Kashmīr is the title of the article.

2. Kings of Kashmīra, page 354.

3. Ibid., page 354.

Jahāngīr Paḍar, Lohur Māgre and 'Idī Raina made its appearance with the avowed object of securing the throne for Sikandar Shāh.

Mas'ūd Chak was again dispatched to suppress the rising. The insurgents secured no tangible results beyond the death of Mas'ūd Chak, and the king was left again in peace for some time.

It was during Sultān Muhammad Shāh's reign that Bābur, the founder of the Mughul dynasty in India, took advantage of internal confusion, and sent his army to attack Kashmīr. Kājī Chak, who had already retired from state affairs, was fired with patriotism, and taking an army went out to meet the invaders who had to retire before the onslaughts of Kājī Chak. This success re-installed Kājī Chak in the king's favour. But Kājī Chak now deposed the king and put Ibrāhīm Shāh, Sultān Muhammad Shāh's son and his own nephew, on the throne.

The great scholar Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī was born in 1521 A.C., during this reign of Sultān Muhammad Shāh. We shall hear of the greatness of Sarfī later.

SULTĀN IBRĀHĪM SHĀH I

[934 to 935 A.H. or 1528 to 1529 A.C.]

According to Firishta, during Ibrāhīm's reign, Abdāl Māgre¹ who, after his flight, resided at Bābur's court, appeared on the scene. He came with a large army officered by 'Alī Beg and Muhammad Khān, two Mughul nobles. Nādir Khān, the younger brother of Sikandar Khān and the son of Sultān Fath Shāh, was used as a pawn in order that the Kashmīris might not imagine that a foreigner was being imposed upon them as their king. Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh's army marched out to meet the Mughul army, but suffered a heavy defeat at Tāpar, below Paṭan, in Tahsīl Bārāmūla, and Ibrāhīm fled from the country.

SULTĀN NĀZUK SHĀH (i)

[935 to 936 A.H. or 1529 to 1530 A.C.]

Nādir Khān then ascended the throne as Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, and appointed Abdāl Māgre as his chief minister. The officers of the Mughul army were also generously rewarded, and they afterwards returned to Hindustān.²

1. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 491.

2. Ibid., Vol. IV, page 492.

Abdāl Māgre maintained the pursuit against Kājī Chak until he fled from Kashmīr.

Abdāl Māgre, curiously enough, then re-instated Muhammad Shāh,¹ having sent for him from Lohkōt, where he was a prisoner. Evidently as a pawn in the game, Nāzuk had served his purpose and was no longer required.

SULTĀN MUHAMMAD SHĀH (v)

[936 to 943 A.H. or 1530 to 1537 A.C.]

The fifth or the last phase of Muhammad Shāh's reign might appropriately be called the Māgre domination, inasmuch as Malik Abdāl, the Māgre chief, after his elevation to the post of prime minister, divided Kashmīr among his adherents and influential partisans. Abdāl thus reduced Muhammad Shāh to the subordinate position of a stipendiary.

If one compares the glorious past enjoyed by Kashmīr with the sordid plight to which she had now been reduced, one cannot help being amazed. A succession of incompetent rulers, and ambitious nobles—constantly engaged in internecine warfare, and all its concomitants—left the country a prey to foreign invaders. Bābur twice directed his cohorts against her with a fair measure of success. Then, with Humāyūn's consent, Kāmran led an expedition of thirty thousand horse from Naushahra² in 1531. Mahram Beg—wrongly called Mujrim Beg—and 'Alī Beg, his generals, penetrated within sight of Srinagar, whence Mahram Beg sent a congratulatory poem to Kāmran, of which the following lines have been quoted by Malik Haidar Chāḍura³:—

بھم آسان شود تفہیم فردوس	بھکم یادشاہ کن حرمیش
کہ از خوبی دہد تعلیم فردوس	سفر کردم بسوئے شہر کشمیر
خرد گفتا کہ فتح نیم فردوس	چو کردم فتح نیم او تاربخ

1. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 492.

2. Naushahra is a town on the Pīr Panjāl route into Kashmīr, and is 27 miles north of Bhimbar and 122 miles south-east of Srinagar. There is a fine old Mughul sarāi in the middle of the town, a part of which is now an official residence. Naushahra has a cantonment of 511 sepoy.

3. The Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, page 175. Malik Haidar Chāḍura quotes only two, while Hasan (in his History, folio 134) has quoted the third line which is not without interest. I am giving the قطعه as it appears in the Ta'rikh-i-Azamī,

It is noteworthy that, while Kashmīr nobles at this time displayed a tendency to cut each other's throat, they did not exhibit any want of patriotism for their country. And in spite of personal feuds and grievances, they were able to rally round an outcast leader to defend their country. Kājī Chak came to the rescue on this occasion. He rallied all the disaffected or hostile nobles, and led his forces so capably that Mahram Beg had to retreat after concluding peace. Soon after this, disintegration set in again. The result was that, Abū Sa'id Mīrzā, king of Kāshghar, sent his second son Sultānzāda Sikandar Khān accompanied by Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt from Tibet by way of Lār with a cavalry twelve thousand strong to conquer Kashmīr. Mīrzā Haidar calls the Sultānzāda Iskandar Sultān.

In this project, Iskandar Sultān was fortunate. He won his spurs by effecting a triumphant entry into the capital. The victorious army satiated their lust for rapine and plunder. According to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbari, the Kāshghar army "razed the grand edifices which had been built by the old Sultāns to dust, and set fire to the city and the villages." The treasury was plundered. Buried treasures were searched and seized. All the soldiers loaded themselves with goods and gold. Kashmīris were pursued, and slain or imprisoned. These hordes remained in occupation for three months according to the Tabaqāt. In the following spring, a new spirit was infused into the benumbed Kashmīr nobles who united themselves to drive the foreigners from their land. But in this attempt, they sustained a signal defeat involving considerable loss of life. Not disheartened by this defeat, they again combined under the leadership of Kājī Chak and Abdāl Māgre, and pressed the invaders so hard that they were compelled to sue for terms of peace. Firishṭa does not assign victory to either side. Mīrzā Haidar giving details of this campaign (pp. 437—442, English Translation) says: "In a word the Khutba was read and coins were struck in the exalted name of the Khān (Abū Sa'id Khān Mīrzā). The revenue of Kashmīr, which was due to the Mughuls, we took. One of Muhammad Shāh's daughters was wedded to Iskandar Sultān. And everyone, according to his rank, made acquaintance with the Sultān or Maliks of Kashmīr. I, for example, established contact with Muhammad Shāh. In accordance with the Mughul practice we called each other 'friend.' Similar contact was established between Mīr Dā'im 'Alī (Mīrzā Haidar's lieutenant) and Abdāl Māgre.....Bābā Sārik Mīrzā and Kājī Chak.....Numerous presents and offerings were interchanged." (p. 441).

Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt* sent his congratulations to Sultān Abū Sa'īd of Kāshghar, and a court-poet of Kāshghar rendered them into verse :

الحمد لله كان شاه عادل سلطان سكندر خاتان دوران
بر کبر اعداء در روزِ هيجا قادر شد آن دم از لطفِ یزدان
تاریخ قنقش، الحق، همین است روزِ چهارم از ماه شعبان

After concluding a peace so advantageous to themselves, the invaders departed from Kashmir. On return from Kashmir, Mīrzā Haidar was naturally, in his own words, most affectionately welcomed by Abū Sa'īd Mīrzā, king of Kāshghar. But the Mughuls left behind them such traces of desolation and hunger, as revived the memories of Zulchū or Dulcha's sojourn in this fair land. Two comets rose on the horizon. A famine, too, ensued.

Thousands perished of hunger and hundreds of thousands were rendered homeless. The next crop, however, provided some sustenance, and saved the remainder of the population from starvation. Sultān Muhammad Shāh also befriended his perishing subjects in their struggle against starvation. Unfortunately he did not live long to sustain these ameliorative efforts. Struck with typhoid fever, he died on Thursday the first of the month of Jayaishṭha, in the bright fortnight, in 943 A.H. or 1537 A.C., at the age of 60, "having given away all the gold that he had to the poor and the needy." In his chequered reign of over thirty-four years—or to be precise—thirty-four years, eight months and ten days, he had faced many changes of fortune, as have rarely been the lot of any other king perhaps in the whole history of royalty in the world.

SULTĀN SHAMS-UD-DĪN II

[943 to 944 A.H. or 1537 to 1538 A.C.]

Shams-ud-Dīn II was Muhammad Shāh's second son. Like his father, he retained the character of a stipendiary king, being guided by his all-too powerful minister, Kāji Chak. Shams-ud-Dīn is the Second, because Shāh Mīr the founder of this dynasty is Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn the First. During the reign of Shams-ud-Dīn II there was the usual strife between the Chaks and the Māgres, but this was successfully controlled by Kāji Chak.

The Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr* by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 179.

It was due to the sagacity and foresight of Kāji Chak that he established matrimonial relations with the ruling family. This diplomatic move ultimately led to accession of power to his own family.

SULTĀN ISMĀ'IL SHĀH I

[944 to 945 A.H. or 1538 to 1539 A.C.]

Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn II was succeeded by his brother, Ismā'il, who was Kāji Chak's son-in-law. The veteran Chak continued to retain his position and influence as the prime minister, but his overbearing attitude towards the other nobles eventually destroyed his influence. For safety he fled towards the Gakkhar hills, whence, aided by Sayyid Ibrāhīm Baihaqī, he returned and regained his power. On his return, he divided Kashmīr into three equal parts, two of which he assigned to the Sultān and Sayyid Ibrāhīm Baihaqī retaining the third for himself. The Sultān's position, therefore, remained entirely unchanged; and he was no more than a stipendiary like his immediate predecessors.

When Kāji Chak considered himself to be free enough, he imposed on the whole of Kashmīr Shī'ite doctrines, promulgated by Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī. In this respect, he took upon himself the rôle of Mūsā Raina, and offered a treatise of Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn as a code of law for all the subjects. After a brief reign of eighteen months, Ismā'il Shāh I passed away.

SULTĀN IBRĀHĪM SHĀH II

[945 to 946 A.H. or 1539 to 1540 A.C.]

Ismā'il I was succeeded by his son, Ibrāhīm II, Muhammad Shāh's son being Ibrāhīm I. The brief reign of four months of Ibrāhīm Shāh II was characterized by two noteworthy events. The first of these was Kāji Chak's flight due to his own high-handed behaviour to others. The second event was of far greater importance. It was the third attempt on the part of Bābur's descendants to conquer Kashmīr. The Māgres sought help from Humāyūn to get rid of Kājī Chak. That monarch was himself sorely harassed by Sher Shāh Sūr at this time. But, however, Humāyūn allowed Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt to lead an expedition to Kashmīr on behalf of the Māgres. Mīrzā Haidar was a cousin of both Bābur and Sultān Abū Saʿīd Khān of Kāshghar. Besides being a soldier, the Mīrzā was also a scholar and well-known as the author of the Taʾrīkh-i-Rashīdī. The Kashmīrīs were engaged in fighting against each other at the time. Therefore, Mīrzā Haidar had what might be called an easy victory over all the desperate resistance offered by Kājī Chak, who, after his defeat, was astute enough to appear at the court of Sher Shāh Sūr for help against his adversaries. Meanwhile, the brief reign of Ibrāhīm II was terminated by his untimely death.

Mīrzā Haidar effected no change in the division of the country already brought into force by Kājī Chak. The Mīrzā retained but one-third for himself. The remaining two-thirds were shared by Abdāl Māgre and Malik Raina, probably as a reward for their services.

Mirza Haidar Dughlat

As several references have been made to Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt in the course of this book, a brief note on his life will not be inappropriate here, when we are discussing the period during which he played an important part in the history of Kashmīr.

Mīrzā Muhammad Haidar Dūghlāt (or Oghlāt) Gurgān¹ Chaghataī Mughūl, to give him his full name, was born in the year 905 A.H. = 1499² A.C.—at Tāshqand, Tāshkend or Tāshkīnt, the capital of the province then known as Shāsh (or Chāch). His father, Muhammad Husain Gurgān Dūghlāt, had been made governor of Shāsh some six years before by Mahmūd, the titular Khān of Mūghulistān and Kāshghar. On his mother Khūb Nīgār Khānam's side, Mīrzā Haidar was related to the Emperor Bābur. Khūb Nīgār was a daughter of Yūnus Khān Mughul and a younger sister of Qutlugh Nīgār Khānam, the mother of Bābur.

1. Information given here about Mīrzā Haidar and his History is extracted from the Introduction by Mr. Ney Elias to Sir Denison Ross's English Translation of the Taʾrīkh-i-Rashīdī and from Bābur's Memoirs. Ross's is a good translation, on the whole, except that certain passages have been mistranslated.

2. Actually 1500 A.C., as the year 905 began on 8th August, 1499 A.C.

Mīrzā Haidar began his life "in the midst of strife and adventure." His father—a treacherous and intriguing man—had been convicted of a mischievous plot against Bābur at Kābul, but had been pardoned on account of his blood relationship. After some time, Muhammad Husain Gurgān Dūghlāt was murdered at the instigation of Shāhī Beg Khān, otherwise known as Shaibānī Khān, the Uzbek leader. In 1508, when about nine years of age, Mīrzā Haidar was taken charge of by one of his father's faithful friends, who took him to Khān Mīrzā, a cousin and dependant of Bābur. Here Haidar remained for a year, when Bābur summoned him to Kābul. On his arrival at Kābul, Mīrzā Haidar was made a member of the royal household, and seems to have been treated with much consideration.

It was about the beginning of 920 A.H. or 1514 A.C., that Mīrzā Haidar, led away by youthful ambition, left Bābur to go to Andījān, then the capital of Farghāna.* Here he entered the service of his kinsman, Sultān Sa'īd Khān. It is in regard to this period that Bābur writes: "Haidar Mīrzā excels in penmanship, in painting, in fletchery, in making arrow-heads and thumblets for drawing the bow-string. He is remarkably neat at all kinds of handiwork. He has also a turn for poetry, and I have received an epistle from him the style of which is by no means bad." Abu'l Fazl adds music to the Mīrzā's accomplishments. Though at this time only 15 years of age, Mīrzā Haidar was raised to a high position, and thus began the most active part of his life. For the ensuing 19 years of Sultān Sa'īd Khān's reign, the Mīrzā served him in various capacities, but chiefly as a soldier. While in the service of Sultān Sa'īd, Mīrzā Haidar undertook an invasion first of Ladākh, then of Kashmīr, and then of Baltistān, and afterwards of Tibet proper. After subduing Ladākh, a rapid march was made into Kashmīr in about 1531 A.C., but the Mīrzā was obliged to leave Kashmīr. Later, Mīrzā Haidar marched towards Lhāssa and fought with the Nepālese. It was one of his most remarkable exploits. But he had to retrace his steps because of mortality among his horses, want of supplies, and of the general distress caused by cold and high elevation. It was in the early months of 1534 A.C. that he reached a position of safety in Ladākh. From Ladākh, it appears, that he repaired to Kābul by way of Badakhshān on account of Sultān Sa'id Khān's death, which occurred in 1533. Mīrzā Haidar thereafter abandoned Kāshghar and transferred his services to the Mughuls in India and proceeded to Lāhore.

* Farghāna is a province of Turkistān and consists mainly of a valley surrounded by high ranges of mountains and traversed by the Sir Daryā and its tributaries. The area of Farghāna is 55,483 square miles and the population is about 2,169,600. The present capital of Farghāna is Khūqand.

Here Mīrzā Haidar was received by Bābur's son, Mīrzā Kāmran, who raised him to a position of honour and dignity, namely, the governorship of the Punjāb. Mīrzā Haidar resided at Lāhore for a year, when differences arose between Mīrzā Kāmran and Humāyūn. Mīrzā Haidar became an adherent of the latter. When Sher Shāh Sūr pursued Humāyūn to the Beās and Mīrzā Haidar was governor at Lāhore, he suggested to Humāyūn to conquer Kashmīr. At this time, Mīrzā Haidar according to his own statement was approached by Kājī Chak, Abdāl Māgre and Rīgī (Ross's Translation has Zangī) Chak of Kashmīr, who were at variance with the reigning Sultān and had found refuge in the Punjāb. They endeavoured to procure, through Mīrzā Haidar's influence, the assistance of a body of Mughul troops to invade their own country, and expel the obnoxious ruler. The scheme seems to have commended itself to the Mīrzā's judgment. After some delay, he was able to descend into the Valley in about November 1540 A.C. or 947 A.H. The chronogram of this date Mīrzā Haidar says he "discovered in Julūs-i-Dār-ul-Mulk-i-Kashmīr." He obtained possession of Kashmīr without striking a blow, thus at once becoming, to all intents and purposes, king of the Valley. As, however, the fate of Humāyūn was uncertain, Mīrzā Haidar, on account of his faithfulness to Humāyūn, did not declare himself king of Kashmīr, nor did he think it discreet to declare Humāyūn as the overlord of Kashmīr.

During the ten years, counting from the battle of 2nd August 1541 A.C., over which Mīrzā Haidar's regency extended, he is stated, in the Akbar-nāma,* to have devoted himself, when not actively engaged with his enemies, to the restoration of the Valley and the improvement of its resources. It is said that he found it in a state of ruin and desolation, and raised it into a land abounding in cultivation and flourishing towns. He extended the frontiers also, and ruled with moderation and justice. "He (Mirzā Haidar) sent for," writes Abu'l Fazl, "artists and craftsmen from all quarters, and laboured for the renown and prosperity of Kashmīr. Especially was music in brisk demand, and varieties of instruments were introduced. In short, the outward condition of the country, that is, its worldly state, acquired solidity."* The government of Kashmīr was, however, carried on in the name of Sultān Nāzuk Shāh. This was the time when Humāyūn was a refugee in Īrān.

*Persian text, Calcutta, 1877, Vol. I, p. 198.

The Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī.

It was during these years of his stay in Kashmīr that Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt wrote his Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī which is a history of the Mughuls of Central Asia, the eastern branch of the Chaghatāis or the Mughuls proper. The first part of the Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī is called by its accomplished author Ta'rikh-i-Asl, or the Real History. It was written in Kashmīr in 1544 and 1545 A.C., and was completed about February 1546, or five years after his installation as Regent of Kashmīr. The second part which the Mirzā styles Mukhtasar or the 'Epitome,' was written in 1541-42 A.C., and is twice the extent of the first. The first part was written after the second part had been completed, and the History was named after 'Abdur Rashīd Khān, the ruler of Kāshghar and the eldest son and successor of Sultān Sa'īd Khān. It was Sultān Sa'īd Khān who dispatched Mirzā Haidar to Kashmīr with his second son Iskandar Sultān. The Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī ends with the year 948 A.H. (1541 A.C.).

The Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī was not written "for effect or for the indulgence of a taste for literature." The work is an earnest one. The author, no doubt, intended that it should be, before everything else, a clear and complete exposition of the times he had set himself to chronicle.

Bābur has been represented as at once a soldier, a historian and an autobiographer. His kinsman Mirzā Haidar may justly be described in the same way. Bābur, however, was a better autobiographer than Mirzā Haidar, and was incomparably a greater soldier. Mirzā Haidar, on the other hand, may clearly be acknowledged a better historian. While Bābur made history incidental to his

*The Akbar-nāma, Persian text, 1877, Vol. I, page 198.

Memoirs, says Mr. Ney Elias, in his Introduction to Sir Denison Ross's translation of the Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī, the reverse was the case with Mīrzā Haidar. The Mīrzā, continues Mr. Elias, wrote the history of his race and family with a definite purpose; and when he came to his own days, he wove in his personal adventures as those of an actor and participator in the events he was recording—making the one illustrate the other; so that it may, with truth, be said that his life belongs to history. The Mīrzā wrote in Persian. Bābur wrote in the Chaghtāi Turkī.

Mīrzā Haidar was 16 years younger than Bābur and was killed at the age of 52 near Khānpōr, 12 miles from Srinagar, on the old Mughul road. He was buried in 1541 A.C., in Srinagar. Bābur died at the age of 48 at Āgra in 1530 A.C., 11 years before Mīrzā Haidar, and lies buried at Kābul.

SULTĀN NĀZUK SHĀH (ii)

[946 to 958 A.H. or 1540 to 1551 A.C.]

Mīrzā Haidar did not feel himself secure enough to assume kingship. He thought it safer to have a titular king on the throne, and himself to enjoy all real power. He, therefore, elevated Nāzuk, the son of Fath Shāh, to the throne, and ruled the country to the entire satisfaction of almost all sections of the people for a period of time.

Barely a year had passed after the marriage of his niece with Sher Shāh Sūr that Kāji Chak obtained from him two elephants and five thousand horsemen commanded by Husain Khān Shirwānī and 'Ādil (or according to the Akbar-nāma 'Alāwal) Khān, and invaded Kashmīr. Kāji Chak now found Kashmīr stronger and better able to defend herself against a foreign invasion. He therefore lost the day. In the words of Mīrzā Haidar, "at noon-day prayers on Monday, the 8th Rabī'-us-Sānī 948 (2nd August, 1541 A.C., and not 20th Rabī' II=16th August as noted in Beveridge's Akbar-nāma, Vol. I, p. 403), we routed an army of 5000 cavalry and several thousand foot with a body of only 300 men. *Fath-i-Mukarrar*¹ or 'Victory Repeated' (948 A.H.=1541 A.C.) composed by the Khatīb of Kashmīr, Maulānā Jamāl-ud-Dīn Muhammad Yūsuf,² yields the date of Mīrzā Haidar's

1. & 2. Abu'l Fazl's Akbar-nāma, Persian text, Calcutta, 1877, Vol. I, page 198. Also Ross's Eng. Trans. of the Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī, p. 486.
 * "Repeated Victory" has reference to Mīrzā Haidar's previous successful invasion of Kashmīr, as the agent of Sa'id Khān, the ruler of Kāshghar.

victory. Two years later, Rīgī Chak rebelled and, suffering a defeat, fled from the country and joined Kāji Chak. The two then united their forces and marched again upon Kashmīr. Mīrzā Haidar was again able to inflict such a crushing defeat upon them as hastened the death of Kāji Chak, whose date is embodied in the expression Faut-i-Sardār, 951 A.H.=1544 A.C.

Free from all anxiety of rivals, Mīrzā Haidar tried to revive the industrial glories of Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn’s reign. By his territorial conquest, he again added Little Tibet, Pakhlī, Rajaurī and Kishtwār to the kingdom of Kashmīr. He further resorted to various measures to revive and re-establish the industries for which Kashmīr had created a name for herself. In statesmanship, too, he tried to follow in the footprints of that illustrious monarch, and very largely succeeded in his object by meting out equal treatment to all sections of the people. He successfully reconciled public opinion and pacified the qualms of those who regarded him as a foreigner. But unfortunately peace did not continue for long.

Rightly or wrongly, Mīrzā Haidar conceived the idea that the prevailing religious schism was solely responsible for all the intrigues and dissensions which marred the progress of Kashmīr. The trouble caused by the inroads of Kāji Chak and his comrades was there. The Mīrzā also observed that the adherents of the new Shī‘ite faith had made themselves conspicuous in all reactionary measures. In the words of Abu’l Fazl,* “the Mīrzā transgressed the laws of justice ‘the watchman of dominion’ and let fall from his hands prudence and forbearance, the two arms of felicity.” He, therefore, resolved to crush out of existence this new faith; hence his changed attitude and changed line of action. He quarrelled with Malik Rīgī Chak, whose fall was precipitated by the factions of Malik ‘Idī Raina and Husain Māgre. They at first, helped Mīrzā Haidar but, later on, filled the whole of Kashmīr with stories of Mīrzā Haidar’s oppression and high-handedness. No wonder this incident chafed the Mīrzā, and further strengthened him in his attitude of hostility towards all adherents of the Shī‘a faith. Mīr Dāniyāl, the son of Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn ‘Irāqī, was executed after a year’s imprisonment, according to Hasan, on the fatwā (ruling) of Qāzī

*The Akbar-nāma, Persian Text, Calcutta, 1877, Vol. I, page 199.

Ibrāhīm, Qāzī ‘Abdul Ghaffūr. The promising career of usefulness of the young man was thus rudely cut short. Dāniyāl’s date of death is touchingly Dasht-i-Karbalā (957 A.H.=1549 A.C.). The grave of Mir Shams-ud-Dīn ‘Irāqī at Jadī-bal was desecrated and hence the transfer of the dead body of Mir Shams to Chāḍura. Malik ‘Idī Rīna or Raina, Husain Māgre, Malik Muhammad Nājī and Khwāja Hājī Bānde formed a faction—possibly aided by Islām Shāh Sūr, which the Mirzā thought it was his duty to crush.

Qarā Bahādur Khān, the Mirzā’s cousin,¹ accompanied by a combined army of Mughuls and Kashmīrīs, was dispatched to reduce to subjection Muhammaddkōt, their stronghold, which might be located in the hilly tract, higher up Khānpōr or Āwanpōr, near about Rajaurī. On his arrival there, Qarā Bahādur Khān found the Kashmīrīs wavering and the nobles disaffected. He, therefore, warned Mirzā Haidar against the folly of the measures he had embarked upon. But Mirzā Haidar felt that he could not now retract the step he had already taken, and therefore ordered an assault which ended disastrously. Qarā Bahādur Khān and his followers fell captives to the Kashmīrīs. Aggravated by this failure, the Mirzā resolved upon a night attack to release Qarā Bahādur Khān, when an arrow from his own armour-bearer Shāh Nazīr, struck him fatally.² Malik Haidar Chāḍura,³ however, asserts that, while the Mirzā was in the act of entering the gate of the fort a butcher or, according to another version, Kamāl Dūlī (wrongly transcribed in Abu’l Fazl’s and Nizām-ud-Dīn’s versions as Kamāl Dūbī), who happened to be at the gate, challenged him. The Mirzā’s ignorance of the Kashmīrī language proved fatal. Dūlī discovered that the Mirzā was a Mughul because of his foreign accent and brought down his heavy axe upon him. Since, however, only an arrow wound is stated to have been visible on the dead body of Mirzā Haidar, the strong presumption is that it was Shāh Nazīr who by mistake killed his own master by an arrow in a dark cloudy night. Ney Elias says the locality where the Mirzā fell "must have been somewhere near Bārāmūla on the Jhelum."¹ This is wrong. Mirzā Haidar fell near Khānpōr on the old Mughul road. Khānpōr is pronounced by Kashmīrīs as Khāmpōr and is in the Pulwāma Tahsīl. Khānpōr is now a small village of 100 souls and is about 12 miles from Srinagar.

1. Some writers call Qarā Bahādur Khān, Mirzā Haidar’s brother, others call him his nephew. Pand’t Čuka calls him Humāyūn’s son in one place, and Mirzā Haidar’s servant in another. Even Abu’l Fazl calls him Haidar’s برادر in the Akbar-nāma, Persian Text, Vol. II, page 128 (See for this correction, Beveridge’s English Translation, Vol. II, page 197n).

2. Briggs, Vol. IV, page 503.

3. The Ta’rīkh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 188. See also Lieut. Newall’s article entitled: A Sketch of the Muhammadan History of Kashmīr, J. A. S. B., Volume 23, No. 5—1854, page 424.

The fire of strife thus ignited could not be quelled without claiming its full due. Mullā Qāsim, Mullā Bāqī, Mullā ‘Abdullāh Samarqandī, Muhammad Nazar and Yūsuf Mirzā, Mirzā Haidar's foster-brother, who were among the foremost and most gallant of the Mirzā's nobles, and had respectively recovered Little Tibet, Pakhlī, Mānglī² (between Mansehra and Abbotābād), and Kishtwār, also suffered at the altar of a policy which aimed at the total extirpation of the Shī'ites in Kashmīr. The conceiver of this policy himself fell. The date of Haidar's death, viz. 958 A.H. (October 1551 A.C.), is expressed in the following chronogram:—

شہ گورگان میرزا حیدر آخر
عک شہادت زدہ گوس شاہی
قضاے الہی چنیں بود، تاریخ شد
شد بہر و ملک قضاے الہی

It is said that the rebels had decided to treat Mirzā Haidar's remains with disrespect. The dead body of Mirzā Haidar could not be buried at Khānpōr where he fell, or Āwanpōr (with 221 souls, now in Tahsīl Badgām), where an engagement also seems to have taken place. Kānpōr and Āwanpōr are only two miles from Chādura (population 1,064, Badgām Tahsīl), the residence of noted Shī'as. But when the rebels found their confederates of the Sunnī faith resolved to resist them, they had to give way. They, however, wreaked their vengeance on Mirzā's descendants. Firishta is silent on this point. But Malik Haidar Chādura (page 188) asserts that, accompanied by Mirzā Qarā Bahādur Khān, Mirzā Haidar's family, his sons and others were allowed to repair with honour to their home, Kāshghar, with all their property untouched. Chādura's statement is not accepted in its entirety for the reason that he also espoused the Shī'ite faith. It is not improbable that in the flush of victory

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī—English Translation by Ross and Elias—Introduction, page 22.

2. Unless Dānagal, a Ghakkar hill fort on the lower Jhelum, is meant. But the locality of Mānglī was in the outskirts of Pakhlī as Abu'l Fazl's notes, Akbar-nāmā, Vol. III, page 627.

and goaded by bigotry, the Chaks did not act as chivalrously as could be desired. We learn from Hasan, that Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī had to guard the Mīrzā's grave for a month against its possible desecration by the Chaks. According to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī the remnant of the Mughul following of Mīrzā Haidar fled back to Andarkōṭ where the Mīrzā's wife Khānam and his sister Khānjī were staying. The Mughuls fortified themselves but Mīrzā's wife and sister said to the Mughuls : "As Mīrzā Haidar has gone away from us, it is better to have peace with the Kashmīrīs." All furniture and goods from Andarkōṭ were removed by the victors. The remains of Mīrzā Haidar are buried outside the enclosure of the graves of Baḍ Shāh and others in Srinagar. The grave was repaired at the instance of William Moorcroft,*

*William Moorcroft, English traveller, was born in Lancashire about 1770 A.C. He was educated at Liverpool in medicine and then turned to the study of veterinary science, which he later practised in London. In pursuit of veterinary work he went over to France for a time and then returned to London. Forced by his private circumstances he became Inspector of the Bengāl stud of the East India Company in 1808. In this capacity he undertook a journey into Central Asia to obtain a stock of Turkomān horses as he regarded the Turkomān horses from Balkh and Bukhārā superior to the Arab variety. With Captain William Hearsey (afterwards General Sir John), he left Josimath, well within the mountains, on May 26, 1812. Crossing the frontier pass of Niti, they struck the main upper branch of the Indus near its source, and on August 5 arrived at the sacred lake of Mānasarowar. Returning by Bhutān, he was detained some time by the Gurkhas, and reached Calcutta in November. Moorcroft set out on a second journey in October 1819. On August 14 the source of the Beās (Hyphasis) was discovered, and subsequently that of the Chenāb. Leh, the capital of Ladākh, was reached on September 24, and a commercial treaty was concluded with the Government of Ladākh, by which the whole of Central Asia was virtually opened to British trade. Kashmīr was reached on November 3, 1822, Jalālābād on June 24, 1824 Kābul on June 30, and Bukhārā on February 25, 1825. At Andkuī, in Afghān Turkistān, Moorcroft was seized with fever, of which he died on August 27, 1825 and was buried outside the walls of Balkh. His companion George Trebeck,—the son of a London solicitor settled in Calcutta—interested in the preparation of geographical notes, survived him only a few days. But according to the Abbé Huc, Moorcroft reached Lhāsa in 1826 and lived there 12 years, being assassinated on his way back to India in 1838. In 1841, Moorcroft's papers were obtained by the Asiatic Society and published under the editorship of H. H. Wilson, under the title of Travels in the Himalayan Provinces of Hindustan and the Punjab, in Ladakh and Kashmir, in Peshawar, Kabul, Kunduz and Bokhara from 1819 to 1825.—[Based on the Encyclopædia Britannica, 14th edition, London, 1929, Volume 15, page 782.] Mr. H. L. O. Garrett in the Asiatic Review for October 1941 (page 785) says : "Most probably he was an intelligence officer sent to Bukhārā to spy out the land" (Central Asia) in 1825.

The Grave of Mirza Haidar Dughlat, Zaina Kadal, Srinagar.

This long inscription is on the actual grave.

The Grave of Mirza Haidar I with the long inscription in Persian up at the instance of William Moorcroft an English Veterinary Surgeon of the East India Company, who was in Kashmir in 1824 A.C. by Sayyid Izzat Khan, attache to Dr. Moorcroft. The grave is in the Mazar-us-Salat in Zaina Kadal, Srinagar. Mirza Haidar I desired Emperor Humayun to come to Kashmir, but as he did not come, Mirza himself governed it from 1551 A.C. in the name of Sultan or Nadir Shah of Kashmir, as Haidar did not feel himself strong enough to assume kingship.

The above on the right is a memorial placed at the north of the grave.

the traveller, in 1823, and a stone slab with an inscription set up on it by 'Izzatullāh Khān, an attaché of Moorcroft.

Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt entered Kashmīr with the sword and the spear, but ended his sovereignty with the fire of religious strife and burnt himself by it.

From the Akbar-nāma,¹ it appears that Humāyūn had resolved to invade Kashmīr, an intention he had cherished for years. His officers, however, thought it inadvisable. Humāyūn sought an omen from the Qur'ān. It chanced that the story of Hazrat Yūsuf came up. Khwāja Husain Marvī, a courtier, submitted that Kashmīr was likened to a well or a prison as was the fate of Hazrat Yūsuf (Prophet Joseph). Humāyūn was thus compelled to abandon his intention of invading the Valley. Had the courtiers desired to invade Kashmīr, they could certainly have interpreted the omen as referring to Yūsuf's subsequent sovereignty of Egypt!

After the death of Mirzā Haidar, power devolved on to the shoulders of 'Idī Rīna or Raina who had long been desirous of it. Under him, Kashmīr was attacked by Haibat Khān Niyāzī, who was deputed by Salīm Shāh Sūr² the son and successor of Sher Shāh Sūr after Niyāzī had patched up his quarrel with Salīm Shāh Sūr. Daulat Chak, the chief commander, beat the enemy back and won distinction for his exploits. Then followed a hard tussle for power between 'Idī Raina and other Chaks led by Daulat Chak.³ Most of 'Idī Raina's partisans deserted him. Sayyid Muhammad Ibrahīm Baihaqī and Husain Māgre who remained faithful were captured by Daulat Chak. The inevitable consequence of the resultant disintegration of 'Idī Raina's party was a defeat which ultimately ended in 'Idī Raina's death at Srinagar in 1551 A.C., and the ascendancy of the Chaks.

This ascendancy definitely marks the beginning of their accession to power. Daulat Chak having taken all authority

1. The Akbar-nāma, Persian text, Volume I, pages 329-30.

2. Lieut. Newall asserts that the party had Ghāzī Khān, Husain Khān and 'Alī Khān, Kāji Chak's sons, as their leaders.—J.A.S.B., No. 5—1854, page 424.

3. Salīm Shāh Sūr had a Kashmīrī wife and had a daughter by her. The wife and the daughter proceeded to Hajj with Bairam's caravan. Bairam was killed by an Afghān en route.—Akbar-nāma (English translation by Beveridge, Vol. II, page 201).

in his own hands now released Sayyid Muhammad Ibrāhīm Baihaqī and Husain Māgre, and made them his councillors. His assumption of power was so certain that he actually dethroned Sultān Nāzuk Shāh in 1551 A.C.

SULTĀN ISMĀ'IL SHĀH II

[958 to 961 A.H. or 1551 to 1554 A.C.]

Firishta¹ differs from Malik Haidar Chāḍura about the next succession. Firishta asserts that, after Nāzuk Shāh, his son Ibrāhīm, was placed on the throne, but was deposed after a reign of only five months, and Ismā'il Shāh II, son of Ibrāhīm Shāh I, who was the son of Sultān Muhammad Shāh, was raised to kingship. Firishta designates Ibrāhīm, Nāzuk's son, as Ibrāhīm II.

Daulat Chak imposed his will and the Shī'ite tenets on the country in a high-handed manner, compelling the imāms (priests) of mosques, on pain of death, to recite the names of the Twelve Imāms of the Shī'as in Friday sermons. But his ascendancy did not last long. In those days of decentralized kingship, intrigue had become an integral part of the temperament of the Kashmīrī nobility, and it was carried on irrespective of considerations of caste and creed. Ghāzī Chak and Daulat Chak, although both Shī'as, were greatly at variance with each other, because the latter had the hardihood to marry² Kājī Chak's widow, i.e., Ghāzī Chak's mother. Daulat Chak had to flee, but was caught and handed over by a shepherd to Ghāzī Chak's soldiery and put to death.

Many stories are related of Daulat's deeds of prowess and strength. It is said that once he caught with one hand a falling beam twenty-four yards long and two yards thick. When at Delhi, he caught an elephant by the tail in the presence of Sher Shāh Sūr, and the animal could not move at all. Daulat is also credited with having shot an arrow two kōs.

As soon as Daulat Chak's star waned, Ismā'il's reign also came to a close.

1. Briggs, Vol. IV, pages 505-06.

2. Lieut. Newall,—J.A.S.B., No. 5,—1854, page 424.

SULTĀN HABĪB SHĀH,

THE LAST OF THE

SHĀH MĪRĪS.

[961 to 962 A.H. or 1554 to 1555 A.C.]

Ghāzī Chak deposed Ismā'īl Shāh and placed on the throne his own nephew, Habīb Shāh the son of Ismā'īl Shāh II. the grandson of Sultān Muhammad Shāh. Habīb Shāh had also, in 945 A.H., owed his temporary accession to Kājī Chak who, in turn, had his own selfish designs for it. Habīb Shāh goes down to history as the last of his line, though, strangely enough, he expected more of his dynasty to follow him as this inscription shows :

در زیارتِ روضهٔ اجدادِ خود سلطان حبیب
دید و گفت این جائے شاهان تنگ گردد عنقریب
مُقه و دروازه دیگر به پہلویں فرود
تا ازین روضہ نہ گردد هیچ شایہ بے نصیب
گاہ تعمیر بنائے نو شنیدم از سروش
سال تاریخش مزارِ ثانی سلطان حبیب

Ever since the days of Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh, the descendants of the great Shāh Mīr were mere figure-heads, who were enthroned or dethroned according to the whim of the noble in power. The Chaks, however, at first entertained no ambitious designs to usurp kingship until the accession of Habīb Shāh. This, it seems, was now their objective and for this they staked their lives and their purse.

Ghāzī Chak now began to work out his policy. He started by accusing the Sultān of various misdemeanours and possibly of acts of faithlessness. The Sultān was powerless to say or to do anything. At last, one day in open court, Ghāzī Chak's brother, Alī Chak, took off the crown from the king's head, and placed it on his brother's. The courtiers hailed Ghāzī Chak as their monarch. Habīb Shāh was removed from the throne and kept as a prisoner. All this happened in 963 A.H. (1555 A.C.).

This event in Kashmīr history is not unlike that in English history, when seventy years earlier, Richard III's crown, struck from his head on Bosworth Field (August 22, 1485), was presented to Henry Earl of Richmond who became Henry VII.

There appears to be no cause for lamentation over the displacement of the Shāh Mīrī dynasty in Kashmīr. Its rulers had become quite effete. They sadly lacked the essential qualities of initiative and capacity to command. They also displayed weakness of character, and were not, therefore, capable of holding their place. It was only by a divine mercy, or it might be said, the diffidence of the Chaks, that they were allowed to maintain the rôle of super-numerary kings under Chak domination. As a matter of fact, they should have long been displaced to make room for kings of vigour and virility.

Addenda to Chapter IV

A short note on Lāhul, which is mentioned on page 170, is given here. Lāhul, with its rich pastures for sheep and the famous pashmīna goats, is a mountainous country between Western Tibet and North Punjāb, and never descends below 10,000 feet. It is a Wazīrī or canton of the Kulū sub-division of the Kāngra district, in the East Punjāb. On the north, Lāhul is bounded by the Ladākh province of Kashmīr, and on the west by the Chamba State. The population in 1901 was 7,205. Hiuen Tsiang notices it as a district lying north-east of Kulū and calls it Lo-hu-lo. The Lāhulis hold in their hands the trade between Ladākh and Central Asia, and also of Kulū and the East Punjāb. The rigours of climate and country have produced a sturdy people. A Lāhul woman's choice of jewels on festive occasions is an amazing collection of amber, turquoise, coral, and silver ornaments daringly worn together.

1. THE SHAH MIRI DYNASTY

[Chronology and Genealogy of the Muslim Kings of Kashmīr by T. W. Haig, C.M.G., J.R.A.S., 1918, page 468. This same is reproduced in The Cambridge History of India, Volume III, Turks and Afghāns, edited by Lt. Colonel Sir Wolseley Haig, Cambridge University Press, 1928, pp. 698, 699 and 700.]

A.H.				A.D.
747	1	Shāh Mirzā, Shams-ud-Dīn	1346
750	2	Jamshīd	1349
751	3	‘Alī Shīr, ‘Alā-ud-Dīn	1350
760	4	Shīrāshāmak, Shihāb-ud-Dīn	1359
780	5	Hindāl, Qutb-ud-Dīn	1378
796	6	Sikandar, Butshikan	1393-94
819	7	Mīr Khān, ‘Alī Shāh	1416
823	8	Shāhī Khān, Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn	1420
875	9	Hājī Khān, Haidar Shāh	Nov.-Dec.	1470
876	10	Hasan Shāh	Dec. 1471 or Jan.	1472
894	11	Muhammad Shāh	1489
894	12	Fath Shāh	1489
903	11	Muhammad Shāh, restored	1497-98
903-04	12	Fath Shāh, restored	1498
904-05	11	Muhammad Shāh, again restored	1499
932	13	Ibrāhīm Shāh I	1526
933	14	Nāzuk Shāh	1527
935	11	Muhammad Shāh, again restored	1529
941	15	Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh II	1534-35
947	14	Nāzuk Shāh, restored	June-July,	1540
947	16	Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt, usurper	Nov. 22,	1541
958	14	Nāzuk Shāh, again restored	1551
959	17	Ibrāhīm Shāh II	1552
962	18	Ismā‘īl Shāh	1555
964-968	19	Habīb Shāh	1557-1561

2. THE CHAK DYNASTY

968	1	Ghāzī Shāh	1561
971	2	Nāsir-ud-Dīn Husain Shāh	1563-4
977	3	Zahīr-ud-Dīn ‘Alī Shāh	1569-70
986	4	Yūsuf Shāh	1578-9
993-997	5	Ya‘qūb Shāh	1585-1589

(Mughul Emperors)

Note.—E. de Zambaur in his Manuel de Généalogie et Chronologie pour l’Histoire de l’Islam (Hanovre, 1927),—Part II, page 293, has different dates; for instance, 735 A.H. for the accession of Shams-ud-Dīn Tāhīr Mīrzā Swātī, 820 for that of Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn, and so on.

DATES OF THE SHAH MIRIS AND THE CHAKS

ACCORDING TO

THE 'A'in-i-Akbari' OF ABU'L FAZL.*

Thirty-two princes reigned 282 years, 5 months, 1 day.

A.H. A.C.

.. .. Rinjan of Tibet, a native of that country,
10 years and some months.

THE SHĀH MĪRĪS

			Y.	M.	D.
715	1315	Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn, minister of Sinha	Y.	M.	D.
		Devā	2	11	25
750	1349	Sultān Jamshīd, his son	1	10	0
752	1351	Sultān 'Alā-ud-Dīn, son of Shams-ud-Dīn	12	18	13
765	1363	Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn	20	0	0
785	1386	Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, son of Hasan-ud-Dīn(?)	15	5	2
799	1396	Sultān Sikandar, his son, whose name was
		Sankār	22	9	6
819	1416	Sultān 'Alī Shāh, his son	6	9	0
826	1422	Sultān Zainu'l 'Ābidīn, younger brother of
		Alī Shāh	52	0	0
877	1472	Sultān Hāji Haidar Shāh, his son	1	2	0
878	1473	Sultān Hasan Khān, his son	12	0	5
891	1486	Sultān Muhammad Shāh, his son	2	7	0
902	1496	Sultān Fath Shāh, son of Ādam Khān, son
		of Sultān Zainu'l 'Ābidīn	9	1	0
911	1506	Sultān Muhammad Shāh, a second time	0	9	9
		Sultān Fath Shāh, a second time	1	1	0
		Sultān Muhammad Shāh, a third time	11	11	11
		Sultān Ibrāhīm, his son	0	8	25
942	1535	Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, son of Fath Shāh	1	0	0
		Sultān Muhammad Shāh, a fourth time	34	8	10
		Sultān Shamsī, son of Muhammad Shāh	0	2	0
		Sultān Ismā'īl Shāh, his brother	2	9	0
		Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, a second time	13	9	0
		Sultān Ismā'īl Shāh, a second time	1	5	0
948	1541	Mirzā Haidar Gūrgān	10	0	0
		Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, a third time	1	0	0

THE CHAKS

		Ghazī Khān, son of Kāji Chak	10	6	0
971	1563	Husain Chak, his brother	6	10	0
		'Alī Chak, brother of Husain Chak	8	9	0

*Cf. English Translation by Colonel H. S. Jarrett, Vol. II, pages 379-80.

A.H.	A.C.		Period of reign
			Y.	M.	D.
986	1578	Yūsuf Shāh, his son ..	1	0	20
		Sayyid Mubārak Shāh, one of his nobles ..	0	1	25
		Lohar Chak, son of Sikandar, son of Kāji Chak ..	1	2	0
		Yūsuf Shāh, a second time ..	5	3	0
		Ya'qūb Khān, his son ..	1	0	0

NOTE.—The Kashmīr Sultāns, as given in Princep's Tables,† follow the above order of the Ā'in-i-Akbarī of Abu'l Fazl except that, between 948 A.H.=1441 A.C., and 971 A.H.=1563 A.C., we find—

A.H.	A.C.
960	1552	Ibrāhīm
963	1555	Ismā'il
964	1556	Habīb

Also that a few details of names of rulers are omitted between 891 A.H.=1486 A.C. to 911 A.H.=1505 A.C., which are given by Abu'l Fazl.

DATES OF THE SHAH MIRIS AND CHAKS

ACCORDING TO JONARAJA, CRIVARA, PRAJYABHATTA & CUKA.

[See the List of Kings at the end of Vol. III of Kings of Kashmīra by Jogesh Chander Dutt, Elm Press, Calcutta, 1898, pp. XXI, XXII, XXIII and XXIV at the end.]

	A.C.	Period of reign
Riñchana (Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn) ..	1320	3	1	19

THE SHĀH MIRIS

Shahamera alias Shamshadana (Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I, Shāh Mir) ..	1339	3	0	5
Jamsara (Jamshīd) ..	1342	0	1	10 (?)
Alāvadīna ('Alā-ud-Dīn) ..	1343	12	8	13 (?)
Shāhavadīna (Shihāb-ud-Dīn) ..	1354
Kumbhadīna (Qutb-ud-Dīn) ..	1373
Shekandhara (Sikandar) ..	1389
Alishāha ('Alī Shāh) ..	1413
Jainollābhadīna (Zain-ul-'Ābidīn) ..	1420	52	0	0
		(By calculation 50 years)
Haidara Shāha (Haidar Shāh) ..	1470	1	10	0

† The Copper Coins of the Sultāns of Kashmīr by C. J. Rodgers, J.A.S.B., Volume XLVIII, Part I, No. 4, 1879, pages 283-4.

Hasana Shāha (Hasan Shāh)	..	1472	12	0	5
Mahmada Shāha (Muhammad Shāh)	..	1484	2	7	0
Phataha Shāha (Fath Shāh)	..	1486	9	0	0
Mahmada Shāha (2nd time)	..	1514	0	9	9
Phataha Shāha (2nd time)	..	1515	1	1	0
Mahmada Shāha (3rd time)	..	1516	11	10	10
Ibrāhima Shāha (Ibrāhīm)	..	1528
Nājoka Shāha (Nāzuk Shāh)	..	1529	1	0	0
Mahmada Shāha (4th time)*	..	1530	5	0	0
Samsha Shāha (Shams-ud-Dīn II)	..	1537	23	0	0
Habhebha (Habīb Shāh)	..	1560	0	1	0

THE CHAKS

Gāja Shāha (Ghāzī Shāh)	..	1560	2	0	0
Hosaina Shāha (Husain Shāh)	..	1562	7	0	0
Ale Shāha ('Alī Shāh)	..	1569	9	0	0
Yosobh Shāha (Yūsuf Shāh)	..	1578
Momāra Khāna (Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī)		1578	0	1	7
Lahvara Chakka (Lohur Shāh)	..	1578	0	11	0
Yosobha (2nd time)	..	1579	8	0	0
Yākobha (Ya'qūb Shāh)	..	1587

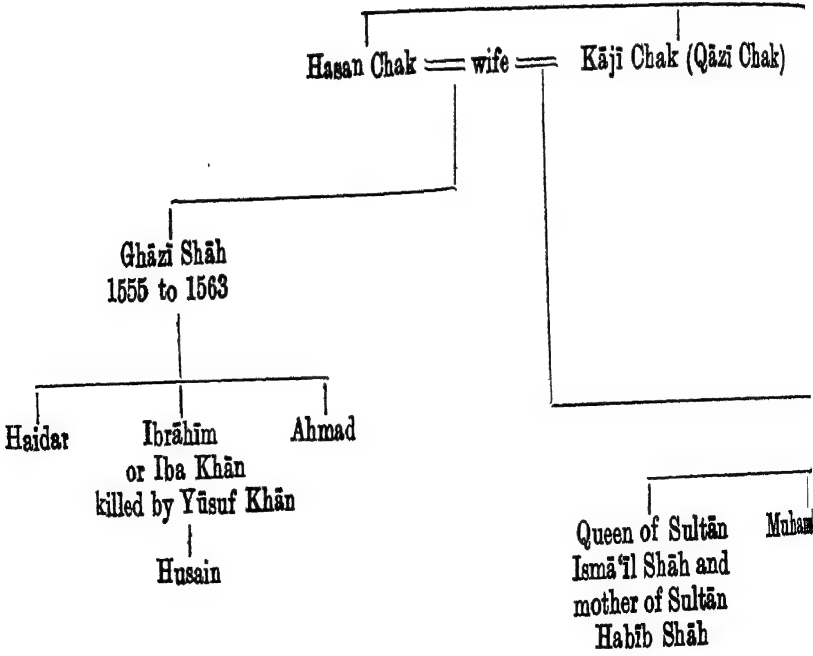

THE CHA

[1555-]

Lankar Chak migrates,

Pān

Halmat or Himmat Chak

DYNASTY

A.C.]

Dardistān to Kashmīr

hak

Husain Chak

Sālih Mōji, Queen of Sultān Muhammad Shāh, great-grandson of Bad Shāh

Tāj Chak or Tāzī Chak

Daulat Chak

Not known

Nāzuk

Habīb Chak

Nusrat Chak

Mas'ūd

Nāsir-ud-Dīn,
Husain Shāh
1563 to 1570

Yūsuf

'Alī Shāh
1570 to 1579

Abdāl

Shankar
(or Shakūr)

Ibrāhīm

Habīb

Yūsuf Shāh
(i) 1579
(ii) 1580 to 1586

Husain

Badī'ud-Dīn or Gauhar or Lohur Shāh
1579 to 1580

Shams

Muhammad

'a'qūb Shāh
1586

Ibrāhīm
or Iba Chak

Haider

CHAPTER V

KASHMĪR UNDER THE CHAKS

[1555 A.C. to 1586 A.C.]

From a perusal of its history, Kashmīr appears to be a land of hospitality. Shāh Mīr, the founder of the Shāh Mīrī dynasty, and Lankar or Langar Chak, the progenitor of the Chak dynasty, were well received. Though Lankar or Langar himself had not the distinction of wearing a regal crown, his descendants gradually so strengthened themselves that they were able to exert very great influence on the politics of Kashmīr: to enthrone and dethrone kings, and finally to wield the sceptre.

The history of the Chaks,¹ to whom a Dardic origin is ascribed, bears a strange resemblance to that of the Marāthas. [For the history of the word Dard, see Chapter VIII, section Kashmīrī language.] The Chaks—called the Chakreṣas or Chakras in the Kashmīr Chronicles—gradually rose from obscurity, and forced their existence even upon the attention of a wise ruler like Sultān Zain-ul-‘Ābidīn,² whose penetrating eye enabled him to predict the sovereignty they finally acquired. They sought and entered service with the nobles. They thus strengthened and consolidated their position till, at last, they were able to assert themselves under the redoubtable leadership of Kājī or Qāzī Chak (called by the Chronicles Kāñchana Chakreṣa or Kācha Chakra) and became an important factor in the politics of Kashmīr.

1. The word Chak is written by Sir Walseley Haig as Chakk but the more correct Kashmīrī pronunciation is something like Tsak or Tschak.

2. Lt. Newall's A Sketch of the Muhammadan History of Kashmīr.—J. A. S. B., No. 5,—1854, page. 146

It is noteworthy that the rise of the Chaks synchronizes with their conversion to the Shī'ite doctrine promulgated by Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, whom Malik Haidar Chāḍura calls Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn Muhammad 'Irāqī, in the first reign of Sultān Fath Shāh when Husain Chak became a Shī'a. And Husain's descendants continued to be Shī'as. To clarify the link it may be stated that Lankar or Langar Chak's fourth descendant, named Pāṇḍū Chak, had flourished as a feudal lord in the time of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn. Pāṇḍū had two sons, Himmat and Husain. Husain, as we said, became Shī'a while Himmat remained Sunnī. Himmat, however, had no sovereignty among his descendants, though they occupied high positions in civil and military employ. Shams, Rīgī, Mas'ūd and Bahrām are notable instances in this line of Himmat. It would be incorrect to say that change over to Shī'ism by Husain's line had fired the Chaks with an ambition for the throne. History has not yet proved it. The fact must not, however, be omitted that they were already strong enough to interfere in the trend of events and exert their influence when internecine war between Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh gave them time to make hey.

All through their career, either as partisans of a particular king, or as wielders of regal authority, they did not give much promise of their statesmanship. They showed narrow-mindedness too. No Shāh Mīrī showed such religious bias against Shī'as as Ghāzī Chak and Husain Chak displayed against the Sunnīs of Kashmīr. The bitterness of feeling resulting in a number of serious clashes between Shī'as and Sunnīs—and their number is put down at eighteen—earned for the Shī'a of Kashmīr the notoriety of Bē Pir like the Sunnī of Balkh. The Chaks were clever at intrigue too. But it must be admitted that they were good soldiers on the battlefield. Their exploits cannot be easily forgotten. Their patriotism and martial spirit were a great advantage to Kashmīr. One can, therefore, emphatically suggest that but for them, Kashmīr would have fallen an easy prey to the ambition of Haidar Dūghlāt or Bābur and his immediate successor, in rivalry of whom the Chak rulers took the title of Bādshāh in place of Sultān adopted by the Shāh Mīrīs.

Camping on the snows before entering Deosai on the way to Skardu.
Dr. Sufi, Dr. Bashir, Professor Beg and some Ph.D. scholars of the Panjab University Institute of Chemistry

A waterfall on the way to Skardu. Dr. Sufi on horseback.

GHĀZĪ CHAK

[962 to 970 A.H. or 1555 to 1563 A.C.]

It is not necessary to recapitulate the circumstances which installed Ghāzī Chak as the first ruler of his line. He started his regal career with discretion, and devoted his attention to the removal of evils which had, for long, paralysed the administration of the country.

Ghāzī Chak re-conquered or annexed such territories as had fallen off from the kingdom. In this attempt, he attained marked success in recovering Skārdū, Gilgit, Kishtwār, Pakhlī and Mānglī (near Pakhlī), besides bringing into subjection the chief of the Gakkhars. In order to ensure efficient administration of these territories, he appointed experienced and intelligent governors to control them.

[Ladākh or Ladāg or Great Tibet is one of the most elevated regions of the earth. Cultivation is sparse and is carried on uplands ranging from 9,000 to 14,000 feet high. The climate is very dry and healthy and the air is invigorating. There is a remarkable absence of thunder and lightning. Le^h is the only place of importance. The people style themselves Bho^ts. With the exception of one village of Shi'a Musalmāns in Chhachkō^t and of the Arghūns or half-breeds, practically the whole population, excluding the town of Le^h, is Buddhist among whom polyandry prevailed till recent years; it is now stopped by legislation. The Arghūns are the result of the union between Ladākhī women and Kashmīris or Yārqandīs. There are also some Turkī caravan drivers and Dogrās. In the waterless wastes of sand, says Major Gompertz (Magic Ladakh, 1928, page 45) are to be found the remains of old towns, of old civilizations, paintings and writings in scripts whose very names are unknown.

Baltistān, or Little Tibet, is a tract under the Wazīr-i-Wazārat of Ladākh. The rainfall is about 6 inches in the year. The air is dry and bracing. The snowfall is often considerable and is of great importance to the villages which depend on the snow for their irrigation. The old rulers of Baltistān were known as Gialpos or Rājās. 'Alī Sher Khān built the fort which lies in the tahsīl of the same name which is an important tract of Baltistān. In the early seventeenth century, 'Alī Mīr, chief of Skārdū, successfully invaded Baltistān. The Bāltīs are of the same stock as the Ladākhīs.

Though Ladākh and Baltistān are geographically similar, and their people ethnologically the same, the Bāltīs are generally Muslims while the Ladākhīs are Buddhists.

Tibet proper, the land of the Lāmas, is called Tibet only.]

Ghāzī was a just but somewhat stern ruler. In meting out justice, he showed no compassion even to his kith and kin. Once a servant belonging to his son, Haidar Khān, plucked 'unnāb (fruit of the jujube tree) while accompanying the Sultān. The Sultān observed this act of pilfering, and had the delinquent's hands cut off, a punishment which both grieved and incensed Haider Khān. Later on, when Ghāzī Chak sent Muhammad Malik, the youth's uncle, to admonish him for the sullenness he had displayed, the youth, in a fit of rage, stabbed his uncle. On this, Ghāzī Chak caused him to be hanged, and his remains were exhibited on the gibbet for eight days.

Ghāzī's sternness roused his own tribesmen against him. Nusrat Chak and Yūsuf Chak, sons of Rīgī Chak, rose in rebellion against him, but were successfully repressed. Later on, Shankar Chak, Bahrām Chak and Fath Chak, sons of Rīgī Chak,—who by the way, had seven or more sons—raised the standard of revolt at Sopōr, but were defeated and dispersed. Then, Shams Raina, son of 'Idī Raina and the grandson of Mūsā Raina, whom we met under Fath Shāh in his second term on pages 191-2, proceeded to Delhī to seek help from Humāyūn. Unfortunately for him, however, Humāyūn died as the result of a fall on the day of his arrival. On his return, he met Abu'l Ma'ālī, Humāyūn's favourite, who had been driven out by Bairam Khān, and had found refuge in the mountains of Gakkhar. Shams Raina induced him to invade Kashmīr. Encouraged by the previous success of Mirzā Haider Dūghlāt, Abu'l Ma'ālī proceeded to invade Kashmīr without hesitation. Ghāzī Chak, however, won over Sayyid Ibrāhīm Baihaqī and his followers to his side, and successfully defeated the invaders. Shams Raina's brother Muhammad Raina next year led a joint insurrection of the Rainas and some disaffected Chaks, but sustained a defeat.

In 1559, Ghāzī's possession of the throne was again disturbed by Qarā Bahādur, cousin of Mirzā Haider Dūghlāt, whom Yūsuf Chak the son of Rīgī Chak and others had induced to fight. It is stated that Qarā Bahādur took 10,000* horse with him. The battle took place in the Rajaurī mountains. Ghāzī Chak advanced in person to meet the enemy, and promised his men a gold coin for each head captured. The king was completely victorious, and 7,000 heads were presented to him after the engagement. It is said that he exceeded this promise and disbursed two gold coins per head.

J.A.S.B.*, No. 5,—1854, page 426.

The "Zakh", or inflated skin, used on the river: Shigar which joins the river Indus near Skardu. Dr. Sufi, with a hat, on the right.

An apricot garden in Skardu,

Ghāzī Chak was an able and energetic ruler. He was also a poet.* After reigning for over eight years, he abdicated the throne in favour of his brother Husain Chak on account of a very severe form of leprosy which prostrated him for about two years after which he died. His pride in his Shi'ite doctrine is expressed by Mullā Mir 'Alī Sairfī in the following quatrain :

گه دشمنان به رضى مرا نام بُرده اند
 گه دُستان موالى حيدر نوشته اند
 شکر خدا که دوست و دشمن به اتفاق
 نام مرا به نام او در نوشته اند

Some time after his abdication, he divided equally his effects and gave half to his son and other descendants, while he sent the other half to the merchants for sale. The price he demanded for these effects from the merchants was so exorbitant that they complained to Husain Shāh, who, on taking the matter up with Ghāzī Chak, so angered him that he sought to re-establish himself but was cleverly checkmated by Husain Shāh. Some time later, Husain Shāh, for reasons of personal safety and removing a rival from his path, thought of putting out the eyes of Ahmad Khān, Ghāzī Chak's son. Ghāzī naturally interceded for his son but failed, and died of a broken heart. He had already severely suffered from virulent leprosy as stated above.

HUSAIN SHĀH CHAK.

[971 to 978 A.H. or 1563 to 1570 A.C.]

Husain Shāh ascended the throne in 970 A.H. (1563 A.C.). Khusrav-i-'Adl is the chronogram of his accession. He was, comparatively speaking, a mild ruler, less bigoted than his brother, and solicitous about the well-being of his subjects. He regulated the efficient organization of his state finances. In the year 972 A.H. (1564 A.C.), Husain Shāh sent his brother Shunkar Chak as governor of Rajauri. The brother gathered an army and rebelled to seize the throne for himself. He was defeated by the minister Malik Muhammad Nāji,—the grandfather of Haidar Malik Chāḍura, our historian,—and the king's younger brother 'Alī

*Malik Haidar Chāḍura's History of Kashmir, page 201..

Khān Chak. This victory secured considerable favours for Malik Muhammad Nājī from the king.

The trouble, it appears, did not end here. Next year, in 973 A.H. (1565 A.C.), the Bādshāh happened to be hunting at Vethnār, in Tahsīl Islāmābād (Anantnāg). In his absence, Fath Chak, called also Khwāja Fath Baqqāl and surnamed Khān-uz-Zamān, a minister of the state, rebelled with his son Bahādur Khān. Fath Chak attacked the king's palace to seize the treasure and proclaim himself king.

Malik Muhammad Nājī who had been left in charge of the palace was, however, able by recourse to a clever stratagem to beat back Khān-uz-Zamān, and to kill his son. In the course of this contest, Mas'ūd Nāyak, an officer of the king's bodyguard, made himself conspicuous by his gallant and fearless behaviour. Khān-uz-Zamān was taken prisoner. On the Bādshāh's return he was led in chains to his presence. The Bādshāh rewarded Mas'ūd Nāyak with the title of Mubārīz Khān, and the pargana of Phāk on the Dāl as his jāgīr or assignment. Khān-uz-Zamān was, of course, executed for his treachery.

Mubārīz Khān, however, became rather proud of his power in course of time. The king had therefore real cause not only to be jealous but also to be afraid of him. On some pretext, the king imprisoned him, and appointed Malik Lūlī Lōn* in his place. Lūlī, too, did not enjoy his new office for long. He was detected in an attempt to embezzle forty thousand kharrwār of shālī or unhusked rice and was dismissed. 'Alī Koka was then appointed prime minister.

In 976 A.H. (1568 A.C.) Yūsuf Maṇḍav, a Shī'a fanatic, attacked and somewhat seriously wounded Qāzī-ul-Quzzāt Sayyid Habībullah Khwārizmī, a Sunnī Khatīb (or Sermonizer) of the Jāmi' Masjid, who was saved from being killed by Maulānā Mīr Kamāl-ud-Dīn, his son-in-law. We shall later meet Mīr Kamāl-ud-Dīn as Mullā Kamāl the teacher of 'Allāma 'Abdul Hakīm Siālkōtī, Mujaddid Alf-i-Sānī and 'Allāmī Sa'dullāh Khān in Chapter VIII under "Men of Learning." The king issued orders for Yūsuf's arrest. A jury of divines consisting of Mullā Shams-ud-Dīn Almās (known also as Mullā Yūsuf) and

*Lond written by mistake by Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn in his Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, litho, pp. 626-27 and De's Persian Text, Vol. 3, page 493.

Mullā Fīrūz Ganāi appointed by the king, had Yūsuf Mandav stoned to death.

Soon after this, there arrived in Kashmīr an embassy from Akbar's court led by Mirzā Muhammad Muqīm and Mir Ya'qūb, both of Shī'a persuasion. The Bādshāh welcomed them in person, and had his own tent pitched for their reception at Hūrapōr.* They then proceeded by boat to Srinagar, and were lodged in the house of Husain Māgre, a nobleman. Mirzā Muqīm committed an act of great indiscretion by interfering in the matter of the stoning to death of Yūsuf the Shī'a fanatic, referred to above. Purely an internal affair, it should have been settled by Husain Shāh himself. But unfortunately Husain Shāh absented himself from the city on this occasion to escape the clamour of the contending Shī'a and Sunnī parties whose passions were now roused against each other. Mirzā Muqīm instigated making over the divines, who had acted as judges in Yūsuf's case, to Fath Khān, a Shī'a official. Fath Khān had them executed, and dragged their dead bodies through the streets. After his return to the city, Husain Shāh, in his anxiety to avoid misrepresentation by Mirzā Muqīm at the court of Akbar, and lest the Emperor should be displeased at Husain Shāh's own hesitation to punish the divines, gave them suitable presents. Husain Shāh also agreed to give his own daughter for the emperor's son Salīm to wed. A deputation of Kashmīrīs, headed by Hāji Ganāi, waited upon Akbar to report the disgraceful treatment of the dead bodies of the divines, and seek redress at his hands. The deputation was successful in rousing Akbar against Mirzā Muqīm and against Husain Shāh Chak. On Mirzā Muqīm's return, Akbar had him executed for religious bigotry, and sent back Husain Shāh's presents. The emperor also sent back Husain Shāh's daughter. Husain Shāh received such a shock at Akbar's insult that, as a result of it as well as of his son's death, he did not survive more than a few months. Çuka, however, states that Husain Shāh died of epilepsy.

Husain Shāh seems to have had, in general, very catholic views. He set aside three days in the week to listen to the discourses of Muslim and Hindu religious scholars and itinerant friars. The remaining three days he devoted to the inspection of the army, to hunting, music and dealing out justice. Husain Shāh also possessed a taste for poetry. It is related that a poet, who usually received from him gifts and a robe of honour every 'Īd, sent him this line¹ before a particular 'Īd—

*Hūrapōr village in the Pīr Panjāl valley is about seven miles south-west of Shuplān. The ancient name of Hūrapōr was Çūrapura. Hūrapōr is the entrance and exit to and from Kashmīr towards Rajaurī. Population 1535.

خلعتِ شاهی مرا اسپے رسد یا زین رسد

The Bādshāh wrote back the following line :—

این چنین مَ فهم را نے آں رسد نے این رسد

Khawāja A'zam and Pīr Hasan Shāh quote other couplets of Husain Shāh—

آں ترکِ آلِ پُوش سوارِ سمند شد
یارانِ حذرِ کُنید کہ آتشی بلند شد
چائلِ کرده تبغ و بستہ خنجرِ یارِ می آید
دلا برخیز و کارے کُن کہ جانِ در کارِ می آید

It was the set practice of Husain Shāh, after Friday prayers, to order his treasurer to put aside a sum which he gave away in charity. Çuka says: "The goddess of wealth, though insulted by large expenditures, went with him." The Tabaqāt-i-Akbari says, Husain Shāh founded a college and lived in the society of pious and learned men in its precincts, and he allotted them the pargana of Zaina-pōr as their jāgir.

Before he died, the nobles at the court began to intrigue about the next successor. Some favoured a choice between Husain Shāh's brother, 'Alī Khān and Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī, while others preferred to have the youthful prince Yūsuf Khān as their next king. 'Alī Khān retired to Sopōr and returned with an army. Daulat Chak then advised the king to send the royal insignia to 'Alī Khān to avoid bloodshed. The king followed his advice, abdicated on account of epilepsy in 1570 A.C., and thenceforward remained at Zaina-pōr where he passed away in 1572 A.C.

1. Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 203.
2. Ibid., page 202.

'ALĪ SHĀH CHAK

[978 to 987 A.H. or 1570 to 1579 A.C.]

'Alī Khān ascended the throne as 'Alī Shāh Chak. Like his brother Husain Shāh, 'Alī Shāh too was a just and wise ruler. He showed great respect towards saints and friars. As Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī says—

والی نوران علی شاه، دوستدارِ صالحان

پُور او شهزاده یوسف با جاء و جلال

Although the Chaks were Shī'as, and the Shī'as of Kashmīr are condemned like the Sunnis of Balkh in the satirical Persian couplet—

گورگروه اند در جهان بے پیر

سُنی بلخ و شیعه کشمیر

it appears on the testimony of a great Sunnī leader, the lieutenant of Sultān-ul-'Arifin Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm, namely, Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī, that this ruler was good to the Sunnis.

An impostor from Īrān dressed in the garb of a darvish and named Shāh 'Arif came to Kashmīr. He claimed relationship with the reigning Safavī king, but was found out.

Soon after his accession, 'Alī Shāh put an end to all feuds among his nobles. He appointed Sayyid Muhammad Mubārak Baihaqī, who was a Sunnī, as his prime minister. Sayyid Muhammad Mubārak Baihaqī was the grandson of Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī whom we have known in the course of the struggle between Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh. Sayyid Muhammad Mubārak was the son of Sayyid Ibrāhīm Baihaqī. These Baihaqīs descended from Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, the father-in-law of Baḍ Shāh and had migrated to Kashmīr during the time of Sultān Sikandar from Baihaq a district to the North-West of Nishāpur in Īrān. They took a very prominent part in the politics of Kashmīr during the days of the Later Shāh-Mīris.

Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī, 'Alī Shāh's prime minister, a brave man indeed, seems to have been a person singularly disposed towards peace, and settling affairs by tact. He showed great wisdom on several occasions: notably in securing the king's pardon for 'Alī Chak, son of Naurūz Chak, who had been imprisoned for rebellion. He also restored peace and amity between the monarch and his son Yūsuf Khān who had killed, in an altercation, Ibrāhīm Khān, popularly known as Ibbā Khān, the son of Ghāzī Chak.

Bahādur Singh, the rājā of Kishtwār, who had ascended the gaddī in 1570 A.C. was defeated twice in succession. After his first defeat in 1572 A.C., the rājā offered to the Bādshāh's grandson, Ya'qūb Khān, his sister Shankar Devī. This lady, later on, gained the sobriquet of Fath Khātūn and subsequently took her husband, when he was defeated by Akbar, to Kishtwār. The rājā also promised to maintain the annual tribute. When he was defeated the second time in 1574, the rājā gave his son Nārāin Singh as hostage, and renewed his pledge for payment of tribute. The same year, 'Alī Shāh received Qazī Sadr-ud-Dīn and Maulānā 'Ishqī, Akbar's ambassadors, with a message of matrimonial alliance. He thereupon sent his niece, Husain Shāh's daughter, who had previously been sent back by Akbar, along with presents. He also included Akbar's name in the Friday sermon and struck coin in the Emperor's name, indicating that he owned Akbar as his suzerain.

Haidar Khān and Salīm Khān, sons of Nāzuk Shāh, allied themselves with certain nobles of Hindustān and proceeded to invade Kashmīr in 1575 A.C. 'Alī Shāh sent his nephews, Lohur Chak and Muhammad Chak, against the enemy. Muhammad Chak, cleverly as a mere matter of show and to hoodwink the adversary, took Lohur Chak prisoner, and boldly joined the enemy. Finding the earliest opportunity he turned the tables on Salīm Khān and put him to the sword, at which Haidar Khān fled. Thus ended this final attempt of Shāh Mir's descendants to regain the throne.

In 984 A.H. (1576 A.C.) Kashmīr suffered from a famine which lasted for three years. Food had become so scarce that, at times, people actually stooped to cannibalism. Zaitī Chak, popularly known as Zait Shāh, was a zealous darvīsh and a disciple of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm. When 'Alī Shāh asked Zaitī how long the famine was to last, Zaitī frankly told him that the cessation of famine would synchronize with his death. The king met his death while playing polo in the plain of the 'Idgāh, as the pommel of his saddle entered his stomach.¹ Before his death, however, he saw his son, Yūsuf, crowned king to prevent Abdāl Khān Chak, his own brother, from creating any mischief. Abdāl Khān Chak was eventually killed by Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī, the Vazīr-i-A'zam.

YŪSUF SHĀH CHAK (i)

[987 A.H. or 1579 A.C.]

Yūsuf Shāh continued to have Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī as his prime minister. But the king abandoned himself to the career of a voluptuary, which so estranged his minister that he resigned his post. Muhammad Baṭ was appointed in his place, and the king continued indifferent to the state.

The nobles banded themselves together and sought help from Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī who advised them to avoid rebellion. At the same time, he sent word to the king through Bābā Khalīl, a Shī'a divine, requesting him to treat the insurgents mildly in order that the revolt may not grow in volume. The king exhibited a lack of diplomacy when he asked Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī, on pain of death, to hand over the insurgents in chains to him. It was both a direct affront and a challenge which the Sayyid accepted readily.

Malik Muhammad Nājī² advised the king to be generous in order to win over to his side even his opponents. But to this Yūsuf would not listen. On the other hand, he dispatched soldiers under two Sardārs, Habīb Khān Chak and Muhammad Khān Chak, to fight Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī. Malik Muhammad Nājī lost his son in this contest. The king too lost his throne. Malik Nājī pined and died within a few weeks. Yūsuf relinquished the insignia of royalty and betook himself to the mountains of Brīñāl-Lāmar between Tahsīl Kulgām and the Pīr Pāntasāl range.

[Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī is known in Kashmīr history as Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī, the title of Khān being applicable in Kashmīr to those notables who were concerned with the control of the army, and to princes of the royal blood. Khān may be supposed to be, more or less, somewhat analogous to Duke in English usage except that a dukedom is hereditary but not a khānate in Kashmīr in that sense.]

1. C. J. Rodgers, J.A.S.B., 1885, page 135.

The Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, page 217.

SAYYID MUBĀRAK KHĀN BAIHAQĪ

[986 A.H. or 1578 A.C.]

Sayyid Mubārak, now installed as a ruler, started his short régime in a somewhat unceremonious way, rather Lenin-like in a socialist manner. He broke up the crown and divided its gems amongst the poor. His manifest disregard of his nobles, however, seriously offended them. They plotted for the return of Yūsuf Shāh. Sayyid Mubārak however, sent Dā'ūd Mīr, a courtier, with an invitation to the exiled king, who sent his sons, Ya'qūb Khān and Ibrāhīm Khān, intending to follow them himself. But he was secretly warned against this by Abdāl Baṭ, the commander of forces, who explained that the invitation was a ruse played by Sayyid Mubārak. Eventually, however, he gave battle and was severely defeated, whereupon he disappeared behind the Briñāl hill in Tahsīl Kulgām.

Abdāl Baṭ, the commander, manœuvred so successfully that he threw both Yūsuf Shāh and Sayyid Mubārak into utter confusion, and also caused them to fight each other. The result was that Abdāl's clever machinations secured the throne to Lohur Chak, since Sayyid Mubārak willingly offered to abdicate, after a sway of six months and two days according to Hasan, and eight months and fifteen days according to Khwāja A'zam, though Haidar Malik Chāḍura and Khalīl Marjānpurī set down the period as two months and fifteen days only. Sayyid Mubārak at his abdication recited the following lines :

شہا فقر و غنا از ما و ملک و عز و جاہ از تو
کہ دنیا را وفا نیست خواہ از ما و خواہ از تو

Yūsuf was balked of the prize of kingship for which he had been invited. The death of the Baihaqī took place in 1591 A.C., five years after the advent of Mughul rule in Kashmīr.

LOHUR SHĀH CHAK

[987 A.H. or 1579 A.C. to 988 A.H. or 1580 A.C.]

Badī'-ud-Dīn or Gauhar Shāh, better known as Lohur Chak, was Yūsuf Shāh's cousin, being the son of Shankar Chak. Abdāl Baṭ received the coveted office of prime minister under the Pādshāh.

Yūsuf Shāh Chak, on losing the crown which seemed to be within reach, repaired to Akbar's court at Fathpur-Sikrī, on January 2, 1580 A.C., to solicit help to regain his kingdom. That Emperor, it is needless to say, was only awaiting an opportunity like this to turn it to his own advantage. Akbar, therefore, willingly sent Rājā Mān Singh and Mīrzā Yūsuf with an army with the exiled king, and they were joined by Muhammad Baṭ, Yūsuf Shāh's vazīr, at Lāhore with an army one thousand strong. Yūsuf Shāh, on Muhammad Baṭ's advice, suspected that Akbar would usurp the kingdom himself, and was now smitten with remorse for unnecessarily seeking foreign help. He left Rājā Mān Singh and Mīrzā Yūsuf behind, on the pretext that it would be better for him to march alone with a view to sound his countrymen. We shall meet Mān Singh later.

Through the efforts of Muhammad Baṭ, Yūsuf was able to rally four thousand men around him before reaching Kashmīr. He crossed the river Jhelum, near the village Dalna, seven miles from Bārāmūla, to avoid Yūsuf Dār's three thousand soldiers deputed by Abdāl Baṭ. Yūsuf Shāh entered Srinagar triumphantly. Abdāl Baṭ was killed. Lohur Chak sought safety in abdication by flight and subsequent death. Lohur had reigned for about thirteen months during which Malik Haidar, practically an eye-witness, remarks that plenty ruled the land and that a kharwār of shālī or unhusked rice was available for a ḥalas (pice), and the people enjoyed prosperity.

YŪSUF SHĀH CHAK (ii)

[988 A.H. or 1580 A.C. to 994 A.H. or 1586 A.C.]

After an exile of a year and a half, Yūsuf Shāh re-established himself on the throne. In the beginning, he devoted his attention to the affairs of the state, freed the country from schism, and re-entered into friendly relations with Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī to whose son he gave one of his daughters in marriage. Malik Haidar Chādura, the historian, entered Yūsuf Shāh's service and continued in it for twenty-four years in Kashmīr and in Yūsuf's exile in Bihār.

It was Yūsuf Shāh who used to visit Gulmarg during the hot weather, and changed its name from Gaurīmarg (the mārg or path or pass of Gaurī, wife of Īva) or popularly Gurmarg or Horse's Meadow (from Gur, a horse) to Gulmarg.

'the Meadow of Flowers.' He used to visit Sonmarg, Ahrabal, and Achabal too. Yūsuf had his Zulīkhā in Habba Khātūn to whom he was attached as a prince. Their love romance is one of the most poetic episodes in the romantic literature of Kashmīr. On one brief separation, Yūsuf Shāh, cried out—

بر یادِ دُو زُلفِ بُتِ کشمیر نژاد
شد تارِ سروِ مَارسَر از گریهِ دُو چشم

[Tārsar and Mārsar are two lakes in the pargana Phāk. Tārsar is stated to mean the lake of Tārā, a goddess. Mārsar is the lake of Cupid.] Habba or Hub will receive notice, later on, among the 'Noted Women of Kashmīr' in Chapter VIII.

[Gulmarg is about 28 miles east of Srinagar, and 13 miles due south of Bāramūla. The Marg, which is shaped somewhat like the figure 8, is about 3 miles long, and varies in width from a few hundred yards to more than a mile. It is enclosed, on all sides, by hills densely wooded by deodār. The whole of its surface is dotted with flowers of every hue. The elevation of the Marg is about 3,000 feet above the level of the Valley of Kashmir, and above 8,700 feet above the sea. The climate is cold, bracing and salubrious. The rainfall is three times as much as at Srinagar and yet it is not more than two-thirds of that of Murree. Jahāngīr and Nūr Jahān, it is said, used to itch their tents for picnics on the stream that winds through Gulmarg, as, before them, Yusuf Shāh and Habba Khātūn used to enjoy life in their own days. Gulmarg is thus a land of Kashmīr's royal lovers.]

Peace did not reign long. Yūsuf Shāh's nobles soon began to show restiveness on account of his indifference to state affairs. Prominent conspirators like Shams Chak, 'Ālam Sher Māgre and Sayyid Yūsuf were hauled up. Later, Muhammad Bat, the Vazīr, and his brother Husain Bat, along with Yūsuf Chak, son of Husain Chak, were suddenly discovered in their designs against the king, and were imprisoned. But Yūsuf Chak, son of Husain Chak, escaped from prison, and joined Haider Chak, a commander of Lohur Chak's troops, at Lāhore, whence they quietly decided to proceed to Ladākh or Western Tibet. From that country they attacked Kashmīr, but were defeated, captured, and punished by having their eyes put out. The king's son Ya'qūb Khān also rebelled and joined Haider Chak. Both were defeated, but Haider Chak fled to Lāhore to Rājā Mān Singh. The Rājā already owed Yūsuf Shāh a grudge for the manner in which the latter had spurned his help. To checkmate Haider Chak's designs, Yūsuf Shāh sent

A beauty spot in Gulmarg.

Khwāja Qāsim with presents to Rājā Mān Singh. The Khwāja, on his return, pretended to have achieved success in his political mission, while Rājā Mān Singh had already assigned the districts of Naushehra and Bhimbar to Haidar Chak as jāgīr.

A little detail from Abu'l Fazl about this campaign will be reproduced here. "When the envoys,* Mīr Tāhir and Sālih 'Aqīl, returned from Kashmīr, Akbar dispatched Shāh Rukh Bahādur, Rājā Bhagvān Dās, Shāh Qulī Mahram, Mādhū Singh, Mubārak Khān and others under the charge of Mīrzā 'Alī Akbar Shāhī, Shaikh Ya'qūb Kashmīrī, Haidar Chak and others When the army marched to conquer Kashmīr, the idea of the leaders was that they would go by Bhimbar, as large armies could march by that route with ease and celerity, as also some of the landholders there were well-disposed." "The idea was that when the roads were cleared of snow and the winter had come to an end, they would advance through the passes. When the enemy were off their guard, the Mughul army was to proceed by the Pakli route where snowfall is less." (p. 723).

"On this news, Yūsuf Shāh Chak resolved to give battle, and sent off many experienced men in order that they might construct a fort near a gorge of the river Kunhār, a tributary of the Jhelum. In every defile they were to establish a strength and to prepare for war." The force that was sent had passed Bārāmūla by six kōs. To the good fortune of the Mughul army Yūsuf Shāh, however, suddenly recalled his men, setting store on the difficulty of crossing the passes, the advent of snow and rain, and the invading army belonging to a hot country. Yūsuf Shāh accordingly revised his plan.

But Yūsuf Shāh learnt rather late that Akbar's delegation had arrived near Pakhli or Hazāra, and the Mughul troops had traversed heights and hollows, and had come near Būliyāsa (old Bolyāsaka, perhaps now called Bunyār) on the right bank of the Jhelum some 50 miles away from Bārāmūla and six marches to Abbottābād. The expedition of Muhammad Shāh Rukh and Rājā Bhagavān Dās marched from the west and followed the bed of the Jhelum and the line of the modern road. But they did not get beyond the borders of Kashmīr. Jahāngīr refers to this when he says (The Tūzūk, Vol. II, p. 132) that Ya'qūb Shāh fought with Bhagavān Dās' army at Būliyāsa which he calls Bhūlbās and which he says is the boundary of Kashmīr. The fact is that Yūsuf behaved with great pusillanimity and deserted his army and country. Ya'qūb, however, fought vigorously; and the Mughul army suffered terribly from the cold, the dearth of provisions, the difficult roads, and the rain and snow, and were glad to retreat on any terms.

*Based on the Akbar-nāma, Beveridge's English Translation, Vol. III, Chapter LXXXV, pages 715-25.

Meanwhile, Akbar sent Tīmūr Beg to Yūsuf Shāh. Yūsuf Shāh, in turn, sent his son Ya'qūb Khān, who had now composed his differences with his father, with presents, to Akbar's court at Fathpur-Sikrī. On receiving the news of the death of Mīrzā Hakīm, Akbar's step brother, then governing at Kābul, the emperor resolved to proceed thither, and desired to interview Yūsuf Shāh on his way. When Yūsuf Shāh failed to put in an appearance, Akbar directed Mīr Tāhir and Sālih 'Āqil Dīwāna to present Yūsuf at court. Ya'qūb Khān reached Kashmīr after forced marches to apprise his father, who, spurred on by Khwāja Qāsim, was very angry at the insult Akbar had offered him. Yūsuf Shāh's nobles dissuaded him from going to Akbar's court. Yūsuf was not actually materially helped by Akbar in gaining the throne of Kashmīr. But, at the same time, it is true Yūsuf would not have been successful so easily had it not been known that Akbar was prepared to aid him. Akbar's historians henceforth treat Yūsuf as a vassal and call him Yūsuf Khān. Yūsuf's view was—as Sir W. Haig says (Cambridge History of India, Vol. III, page 292)—that, as he had re-gained his throne without the aid of foreign troops, he was still an independent sovereign. Akbar on 20th December, 1685, ordered Rājā Bhagavān Dās, Shāh Rukh Mīrzā and Shāh Qulī Khān to advance upon Kashmīr.

Akbar did not conduct his campaigns himself, and it was a weakness in him as a ruler, points out Lawrence Binyon,* that he did not always choose his lieutenants wisely. The three generals sent on the Kashmīr campaign quarrelled. One of them was "Bīrbal, a musician, a poet, a jester, rather than a soldier or commander." Akbar could hear the loss of eight thousand men more calmly than the loss of Bīrbal who was killed in the engagement. "Bīrbal, his dear Bīrbal, his merry companion, whose voice, as he talked or sang in the evenings verses of his own composition, was still in his ear : Bīrbal, for whom he had built so beautiful a house at Fathpur-Sikrī : Bīrbal, the one Hindu who had embraced the emperor's new religion of the Divine Faith." But according to the Siyar-ul-Muta'akhhirīn (Vol. I, page 192), Akbar had drawn lots between Abu'l Fazl and Bīrbal. The latter's name came up and consequently he had to go. As success from the military point of view could not be claimed, Rājā Bhagavān Dās tried to save the situation diplomatically by proposing terms, whereupon Yūsuf Shāh visited his camp. Taking advantage of Yūsuf's absence, the Kashmīr nobles placed Ya'qūb Khān on the throne, and further attacked the imperial army, inflicting a great loss upon it. Rājā Bhagavān Dās was obliged to make terms with Ya'qūb, the chief of which was the annual payment of tribute by Kashmīr to Akbar. The Akbar-nāma says that the Kashmīrīs offered to agree that "the pulpits and coins should make mention of the Shāhinshāh and that the mint, the saffron, the silk and the game should be imperial. A superintendent or dārūgha should be appointed for each department and then the army should return His Majesty accepted the agreement."

*Akbar by Lawrence Binyon, Peter Davies Ltd., 1932, pages 134-35.

The Rājā took Yūsuf Shāh to Akbar's court. But Akbar refused to ratify the treaty which Rājā Bhagavān Dās had made, and broke faith with Yūsuf by detaining him as a prisoner. Bhagavān Dās, sensitive on a point of honour, committed suicide.

Yūsuf Shāh Chak ceases, here, as a ruler. He was generous. He was cultured. He was a liberal Shī'ā. But he was weak and fickle. His lack of decision and his indifference to affairs of state cost him his crown. He should have controlled the factions and his nobles by tact and firmness. He lacked these and ended his life away from his own land. Yūsuf showed bravery in returning the attack of Sher Afgan Khān, whom he killed near Burdawān in Bengal.

YA'QŪB SHĀH CHAK.

[994 A.H. or 1586 A.C.]

As Habīb Shāh was the last of the Shāh Mirīs, the descendants of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mir, Ya'qūb Shāh was the last of the Chaks. On his accession, Ya'qūb made 'Alī Dār, a prominent official, his minister, and himself took to a life of ease and pleasure. Misrule naturally followed.

'Alī Dār, the first minister, rebelled, fled the city, and suffered death by drowning. The second minister, Muhammad Baṭ, relentlessly persecuted the Sunnīs. Qāzī Mūsā, the Chief Qāzī, was ruthlessly done to death by Ya'qūb Shāh. Ya'qūb, it seems, wanted the Qāzī to retain the name of Caliph 'Alī to the exclusion of the other three Caliphs of the Prophet in the public prayer. Qāzī Mūsā objected to it. He said that temporal rulers had nothing to do with spiritual matters. Ya'qūb was offended. He sent for the executioner and put Qāzī Mūsā to death. Qāzī Mūsā's house was also plundered.* The Sunnīs were naturally so alarmed that Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī and Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī petitioned Akbar for help and entered into the following covenant with him:—

1. That the ruling prince shall not interfere with religious affairs, the purchase and sale of commodities, and the rates of cereals.
2. That the dignitaries and officials of Kashmīr shall have no Kashmīrī, male or female, Hindu or Muslim, as slave. [Possibly this was to forestall the Mughul custom of taking slaves from subjugated areas.]
3. That the inhabitants of the country shall not be molested or oppressed in any way, or begār exacted.
4. That the nobles of Kashmīr having been a source of mischief shall have, for the present, no share in the administration of their country.

Qāsim Khān was ordered to march on 28th June, 1586 A.C., upon Kashmīr with an army of forty thousand horse and twenty thousand foot. He entered Rajaurī and proceeded to Srīnagar. Ya'qūb made several attempts to retrieve the situation, but met with no success. The flight of Yūsuf and Ya'qūb has been satirized in the following couplet:—

نه از یوسف نشان دیدم، نه از یعقوب آثار
عزیزان یوسف ارگم شد، چه شد یعقوب را بار

*A full account will be found in the Nawādir-ul-Akhbār by Rafī'-ud-Dīn Ahmad Ghāfil in the British Museum Catalogue of Persian Manuscripts, Add. 24,029, page 299. See note on the Nawādir-ul-Akhbār on p. 236, footnote.

Mirzā Qāsim entered Srinagar in 995 A.H. (1586 A.C.). From that date Kashmīr came under foreign domination. She now embarked upon her career as a Mughul province.

Now that we close the story of Kashmīr as an independent country, some observations on this loss of independence are perhaps pertinent.

Shāh Mīr was a foreigner to Kashmīr, but, as we said, he saved Kashmīr from subjugation by the Tughluqs. The Chaks brought about the defeat and death of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, and prevented Bābur and Humāyūn from forming Kashmīr into a principality of theirs. Kashmīr was conquered by Bābur's grandson, the great Akbar no doubt, but this conquest was due more to causes inside Kashmīr than to Akbar's military might. Akbar's own Prime Minister, Abu'l Fazl, had at one time admitted that if the ruler of Kashmīr fortified Kashmīr's passes, an army of "thousands of Rustams" would find it difficult, or rather impossible, to get possession of the country. (See the footnote on page 17).

The last descendants of Shāh Mīr lost Kashmīr by internecine warfare and by incompetence. But they were not bigots or religious fanatics. They were tolerant, forbearing and cultured. They made no distinction in the matter of their military recruitment. The Chaks, on the other hand, committed atrocities under the cloak of their new cult, though it is true the Shī'as had suffered from Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt. The Chaks confined recruitment to the army mostly to the Shī'as. And thus they made the army loyal to themselves alone, but not fit for the general defence of the country as a whole.

Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa (725-753 A.C.) had warned Kashmīr rulers against raising troops from a single district—implying thereby any single clan or caste. It was wise advice. The Chaks disregarded it. They raised their army and recruited or promoted their army officers mostly from among the Shī'as. The Chaks had themselves become the re-incarnation of feudal Dāmaras of yore. By their heroism the Chaks overthrew the Shāh Mīris. By their feudalism and factions they brought about their own fall. For, religious bigotry, the raising of troops mostly from among themselves, and the consequent factions caused in the people of Kashmīr, led to an invitation to Akbar to rid Kashmīr from fanaticism and oppression.

There is a lesson from the history of Bulgaria, to which reference cannot but be made. A quotation from the Historians' History of the World will appropriately illustrate it. "For many centuries the Bulgarians held the whole peninsula (of the Balkans) in suspense, shared their literature and culture with the remaining orthodox Slavic world, and by the doctrines of a native sect shook the whole of southern Europe, and what is the conclusion? The nation once so respected and feared, passed politically under the yoke of the Turks, intellectually under the yoke of the Greeks, and remained in this servitude until in our days it has shown that its task is not finished. The three causes which contributed directly to the fall of the Tŭrnova Empire (of Bulgāria) were Byzantinism, Bogomilism and medieval feudalism." (Vol. XXIV, page 175).

The causes which led to the fall of the Chaks were (i) medieval feudalism that promoted fights and factions among feudal lords, and (ii) Bogomilism, which in their case was religious fanaticism.

[The Bogomilism of Bulgaria was founded by a reformer, named Bogomil (literally, Love of God) about the first half of the tenth century A.C. The theology of Bogomilism was founded on the original two elements, a good and an evil, a kind of Manichaeism imported from the East.]

Let us now bury Ya'qūb Shāh before we turn to the birth of Mughul rule in Kashmīr.

We know Ya'qūb was married to Shankar Devī, the daughter of Bahādur Singh, the rājā of Kishtwār, in 1572 A.C. Shankar Devī, as already stated, became Fath Khātūn. In his defeat in 1586, Ya'qūb betook himself to Kishtwār, to the land of his devoted queen. From here he made one more attempt to recover Kashmīr in 1587, but failed. In 1588 Ya'qūb died* at Kishtwār and is buried towards the south of the tank of Sirkōt on the Chaugān, outside Kishtwār town. Fath Khātūn constructed a water-course in memory of her husband. This water-course must have been a great blessing to Kishtwār as it is afflicted with shortage of water. She also constructed a tank, and another water-course from Kālī Nāg to the village Zewar.

*Rafi'-ud-Dīn Ahmad bin 'Abd-us-Sabūr bin Khwāja Muhammad Balkhī Kashmīrī, takhallus Ghāfil, the author of the Nawādir-ul-Akhbār, a history of Kashmīr from the earliest times to the conquest of Akbar, and completed by the author at Shāhjahānābād in the month of Safar 1136 (1723 A.C.), says that the death of Ya'qūb Khān Chak was caused by means of a khāshak sent by Akbar.—Rieu's Catalogue, Vol I, 1879, page 300.

The last resting-place of the last independent Muslim ruler of Kashmīr is today but a low heap of lime and stone in a corner of a field in the possession of a Pandit!

This heap of stone and lime represents the last resting-place of the last independent Muslim ruler of Kashmīr, Ya'qūb Shāh Chak, in a field in Kishtwār.

بر مزارِ ما خریباں نے چراغے نے گلے
نے پر پروانہ سوزد نے صدائے بلبلے !

Pakhli.—The footnote 1, on page 87, treats of Pakhlī, which occurs so many times in this Chapter also, some more information about it is, therefore, given here. "An ancient Sarkār or district of the Mughul Sūbah of the Punjāb, now included in the Hazāra District of the North-West Frontier Province, Pakhlī roughly corresponds with the ancient Urasa which Ptolemy places between the Bidaspes (Jhelum) and the Indus. Its king was named Arsakes in the times of Alexander. Hiuen Tsiang found it tributary to Kashmīr. In the Kashmīr chronicle called the Rājataranginī, it appears, now as a separate kingdom, now as tributary to that State. In it lay Agror, the ancient Atyugrapura. In Bābur's time, this tract was held by the Khakha and Bamba tribes, whose chiefs had been the ancient rulers of the country east of the Indus but had been driven out by the Gībari Sultāns of Bājaur and Swāt; and the tract derives its name from Pakhlī one of these conquerors. In the Āin-i-Akbarī it is described as bounded on the east by Kashmīr, on the south by the country of the Gakhars, on the west by Attock, and on the north by Kator (Chitrāl). Under Durrānī rule, Saādat Khān, was chosen as chief of Pakhlī, then a dependency of Kashmīr. He founded the fort of Garhī Saādat Khān, which was the headquarter of Āzād Khān's rebellion against Timūr Shāh. Early in the nineteenth century Pakhlī comprised three districts: Mansehra in the south and south-east. Shinkiarī (subdivided into Kandhī and Maidān) in the north-east, and Bhīr-Kand in the centre. The valleys of Kāgān Bhogarmang and Agror were dependent on it."—The Imperial Gazetteer of India Vol. XIX (New edition), Oxford Press, 1908, p. 318-19] "The Pakhlī plain of the Mansehra Tahsil, 3,000 feet above sea-level, is 11 miles from north to south, and 10 from east to west. It is a fertile, highly cultivated tract, especially in the western portion which is irrigated by the Siran river."—Gazetteer of the Hazāra District, 1907. Compiled and edited by H. D. Watson, C. S., Settlement Officer, Chatto and Windus, London, 1908, p. 3.

The Mughul rulers concerned with the history of Kashmīr.

[1586 A.C. TO 1752 A.C.]

1. Jalāl-ud-Dīn Akbar, 1556 to 1605 A.C.=963 to 1014 A.H. Conquers Kashmīr in 1586 A.C.
2. Nūr-ud-Dīn Jahāngīr 1605 to 1627 A.C.=1014 to 1037 A.H.
3. Dāvar Bakhsh son of Prince Khusrū, the eldest son of Jahāngīr, 1627 A.C.=1037 A.H. Khusrū had died in 1622.
4. Shihāb-ud-Dīn Shāh Jahān, 1628 to 1657 A.C.=1037 to 1068 A.H.
5. Murād Bakhsh, the fourth son of Shāh Jahān, 1657 A.C.=1068 A.H.
6. Shāh Shujā, second son of Shāh Jahān, 1657 A.C.=1068 A.H.
7. Muhyi'd Dīn Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr, 1658 to 1707 A.C.=1068 to 1118 A.H.
8. A'zam Shāh, second son of Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr, 1707 A.C.=1118 A.H.
9. Kām Bakhsh, fourth son of Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr, 1707 A.C.=1119 A.H.
10. Qutb-ud-Dīn Mu'azzam Shāh 'Ālam Bahādur, 1707 to 1712 A.C.=1119 to 1124 A.H.
11. 'Azīm-ush-Shān, second son of Shāh 'Ālam Bahādur, 1712 A.C.=1124 A.H.
12. Mu'izz-ud-Dīn Jahāndār Shāh, eldest son of Shāh 'Ālam Bahādur, 1712 A.C.=1124 A.H.
13. Muhyi'd Dīn Farrukh Siyar, son of 'Azīm-ush-Shān, 1713 to 1719 A.C.=1124 to 1131 A.H.
14. Rafī'-ud-Darajāt, son of Rafī'-ush-Shān and third nephew of Jahāndār Shāh, 1719 A.C.=1131 A.H.

15. Rafī'-ud-Daula Shāh Jahān II son of Rafī'-ush-Shān and second nephew of Jahāndār Shāh, 1719 A.C.=1131 A.H.

16. Nasīr-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh, son of Jahān Shāh the fourth son of Mu'azzam Shāh 'Ālam Bahādur, and nephew of Jahāndār Shāh, 1719 to 1748 A.C.=1131 to 1161 A.H.

17. Muhammad Ibrāhīm, son of Rafī'-ush-Shān and nephew of Jahāndār Shāh (simultaneously with Muhammad Shāh), 1719 to 1720 A.C.=1131 to 1132 A.H.

18. Mujāhid-ud-Dīn Ahmad Shāh Bahādur, son of Muhammad Shāh, 1748 to 1754 A.C.=1161 to 1167 A.H.

Kashmīr then goes to the Afghān ruler, Ahmad Shāh Durrānī in 1752.

CHAPTER VI

KASHMĪR UNDER THE MUGHULS

[1586 A.C. TO 1752 A.C.]

Brave though the Chaks were, they lacked the qualities essential for the making of successful rulers and administrators. Hence the rapid close of their sway extending over only a generation—about 31 years. It is unnecessary to recapitulate the early Mughul attempts on Kashmīr since they have already been related in the preceding Chapter. They begin with Bābur, continue with Humāyūn and Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt, and are successful with Akbar. Akbar started interference with the affairs of Kashmīr in the time of ‘Alī Shāh Chak. Then he helped Yūsuf Shāh Chak against Lohar or Gauhar Shāh Chak. Later he detained Yūsuf, and finally ousted Yūsuf’s son, Ya’qūb, and annexed Kashmīr. The Mughuls held Kashmīr for 166 years. Disintegrating forces, however, gathered strength under the Emperor Muhammad Shāh, and Nādir Shāh’s invasion in 1739 A.C., hastened the disruption of the gigantic fabric of the Mughul empire. Nādir Shāh annexed Afghānistān. After his death, Ahmad Shāh Durrānī obtained complete control over Afghānistān and added Kashmīr to his dominions when the Emperor Ahmad Shāh, the son of Muhammad Shāh, was on the throne of Delhi.

The last effort of the last of the Chaks.

After its conquest by Akbar in 1586 A.C. Kashmīr did not readily submit to Mughul rule. Ya’qūb Shāh, the ex-Chak king, was still exerting himself to regain his lost kingdom. Ibrāhīm Chak, Ya’qūb’s brother, and ‘Alī Malik Chāḍura, the brother of Malik Haidar Chāḍura, joined him. They took the Mughuls unawares at Chēr-wanī* (in the Baḍgām Tahsil). Ya’qūb Shāh Chak re-entered Srinagar as king.

*Chēr-wanī and Chēr-ḡar are two names that appear in the Persian histories of Kashmīr in regard to the same place. Chēr-wanī means the garden of Chēr or wild apricots, Chēr-ḡar means the Ḡar or Karēwa or the alluvial plateau of wild apricots. The place Sayyid Abu'l Ma'ālī Baihaqī, the second son of Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī, Shamsī Chak, Sayyid Husain Baihaqī and Shams Duli next worsted the Mughuls. The whole country was up in arms and the loss of Kashmir was imminent.

[The Bahāristān-i-Shāhī is a history of Kashmir from the earliest times to 1023 A.H. (1614 A.C.). The author, whose name is not given, (Add 16,706, Riéu's Catalogue, Vol. I, 1879, pages 296-297), appears to have been a dependant of a Kashmiri, Sayyid Abu'l Ma'ālī Baihaqī, to whom he gives a prominent place in the later period of his history. This Sayyid, Abu'l Ma'ālī, was the second son of Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī who was raised for some months to the throne of Kashmir in 986 A.H. (1578 A.C.), and died in exile at Firūzābād in 999 A.H. (1590 A.C.). Abu'l Ma'ālī played an active part in the frequent broils which disturbed Kashmir for some years before its conquest by Akbar, and was thus placed under the command of Rājā Mān Singh under whom he served for four and twenty years. After the latter's death in 1021 A.H. (1612 A.C.), he was presented, with Haidar Malik Chādura, to the Emperor Jahāngir who conferred upon him a mansab.

This Abu'l Ma'ālī, therefore, should not be confused with Abu'l Ma'ālī whom Badāyūnī calls 'of noble Sayyid extraction and of the country of Kāshghar,' and was one of the Amīrs of Humāyūn. He married Māh Kūchak Begam's daughter Fakhr-un-Nisā, had quarrels with Bairam Khān, and was ultimately strangled to death by Mirzā Sulaimān at Kābul during the 'Id of Ramazān in the ninth year of Akbar's accession. Abu'l Ma'ālī, too, according to the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī (De's English translation, p. 734), and the Akbar-nāma (Beveridge's English Translation, Vol. 2, p. 154), did come on a raid to Kashmir in the first year of Akbar's accession and was at Naushahra, a town between Bhimbar and Rajauri. Abu'l Ma'ālī marched on to Bārāmūla and was defeated at Mārkalah near Paṭan by Ghāzī Chak, and 'turned his face to flight.' Shāh Abu'l Ma'ālī's incursion is noted by Pandit Shuka in the Kings of Kashmīra (p. 389)].

Qāsim Khān, Mir Bahr, the conqueror and viceroy of Kashmir, at last sought help from Akbar who dispatched Sayyid Yūsuf Khān Rizavī Mashhadī with a strong force of is four miles from Badgām, the headquarter of the Tahsīl of the same name. Badgām itself is nine miles from Srinagar. There was a fort at the end of the Karēwa or the Uḍar. It is in ruins now. Chēr-waṇī or Chēr-uḍar appears to have been a convenient battle-ground between Pūnch and Kashmir, as it lies on the route between Srinagar and Tosha-maidān and thence to Pūnch. Chēr-waṇī or Chēr-uḍar is 13 miles from Srinagar and 15 miles from Tosha-maidān. Dīwān Jawāla Sahāī, the Chief Minister of Mahārājā Gulāb Singh, populated it, and gave it the name of Jawālāpōr. Its population in 1941 was 769.

twenty-five thousand horse. The Emperor further instructed Muhammad Baṭ and Bābā Khalīl, two influential Kashmīrī nobles then residing at his court, to accompany Sayyid Yūsuf and render him all possible help. These nobles won over several powerful Chaks to their side. At the same time, Ya'qūb's indiscreet behaviour towards his nobles and his unfair treatment of Hindus and Sunnis brought about his final overthrow in August 1589. After three years' struggle with Akbar, Ya'qūb, then, surrendered to him, and retired to Kishtwār accompanied by Sayyid Abu'l Ma'ālī Baihaqī and Ibrāhīm Khān called Iba Khān.¹ The independence of Kashmīr was thus completely ended in 1589. Qāsim Khān, Mīr Bahr, came to the court with several Kashmīrī nobles, leaving Sayyid Yūsuf Khān Rizavī Mashhadī as governor in his place.

The end of Yūsuf Shāh Chak.

Yūsuf Shāh Chak was exiled to Bihār, where he was detained under the charge of Mān Singh, the governor. A year or so later, Yūsuf Shāh Chak was appointed to the 'command of 500,' a rank carrying a salary² ranging from 2,100 to 2,500 rupees a month and a grant in Bihār. Although this appointment was far from being commensurate to the dignity of a deposed sovereign, yet Yūsuf Shāh served in that capacity under Mān Singh for several years. The time and manner of his death do not appear to be recorded by Akbar's historians. But Haidar Malik Chāḍura says that Yūsuf died in Hindustān on account of acute insanity and deep melancholia, separated, as he was, from his own land, from his own kingdom, and from his own accomplished Queen Habba Khātūn.

1. The Ta'rikh-i-A'zmī, Ta'rikh-i-Hasan and Ta'rikh-i-Khalīl Marjānpūrī all spell this name as Eba Khān, while Pandit Nārāyan Kaul 'Ājiz', writes Amīna Khān.

The History of Kashmīr from the earliest times to 1122 A.H. (1710 A.C.) is by Nārāyan Kaul 'Ājiz'. The author was urged by Kashmīrian nobles to write its history which he began in the fourth year of the reign of Shāh 'Ālam in 1122 A.H. (1710 A.C.). 'Ārif Khān, a Kashmīrian who was the Nā'ib and Diwān of the Sūbadār, had collected the Sanskrit chronicles of Kashmīr, and Ibrāhīm Khān, afterwards 'Alī Mardān Khān, wished to become acquainted with their contents. The author had also before him the history of Malik Haidar Chāḍura. Nārāyan Kaul condensed all this material from Sanskrit and Persian into the present abridgement known as the Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by him. Nārāyan Kaul was also a fine poet of Persian.

2. V. A. Smith's Akbar, pp. 240-41.

The treatment of the ex-ruler of Kashmīr cannot be described, in the words of Dr. V. A. Smith, as generous. In fact, it is one of the chief blots on Akbar's character. Abu'l Fazl says that Akbar's appointment of Yūsuf Shāh was to test his fitness for restoration to Kashmīr. But there is no evidence that Akbar ever proposed to make amends for the wrong which he had done to Yūsuf Shāh Chak— that Yūsuf who disposed of Sher Afgan for Jahāngīr and corrected Akbar's great singer Miyān Tān Sēn, according to the testimony of Malik Haidar Chāḍura as already noted!

It is believed in Kashmīr that Akbar caused a change to be effected in the dress of the people, and the effeminate pheran (from the Persian pairahan, the long, loose shirt) was thus introduced together with the Kāngrī, or, in Kashmīrī, Kāngar,* the chafing vessel. "And it is possible," says Lieutenant Newall (page 434), "that this measure, one out of a long series of acts of systematic tyranny and spirit-breaking oppression, may have had its effect in changing the character of this once brave and warlike race." Such a belief, however, lacks authority.

Akbar's reign in Kashmir.

In May 1589 Akbar himself came to Kashmīr by traveling on horseback or on foot. To be precise like Abu'l Fazl, "His Majesty planted his standards in the city of Srinagar on 25th Khurdād, (5th June, 1589) after 8 hours 24 minutes." Pandit Čuka mentions that "Jalāl-ud-Dīn on the seventh bright lunar day of Āshāḍha pleased the Brāhmana boys with gifts of gold, and they blessed him. He then went to Mārtāṇḍa and gave cows adorned with pearls and gold to Brāhmanas. He was glad to see Kashmīra with its vines and walnut trees and of high and charming woods." (Kings of Kashmīra, Vol. III, page 417.)

Three well-known Qasīdas on Kashmīr.

Akbar spent a month visiting towns, villages, springs, and streams, of which the most important

*The statement that Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn "in his effort to reduce the proud spirit of the Hindus, insisted on the use of the kāngar, and the gown" is incredible on the face of it, in view of the Sultān's well-known attitude towards Hindus, and his invitation to those Hindus who had left the Valley for fear of Malik Sūhabhaṭṭa to return and re-settle.

The Jāmi' Masjid at Pāmpar which is noted for saffron and lies on the Jhelum, about 9 miles from Srinagar.

بسالِ سی و چهارمِ اواسطِ خرداد
 ز ابتدائِ جلوسِ خدیو عالمگیر
 ز نه صد و نود و هفت بود ماهِ رجب
 که یافت کوکبِ اقبالِ او چنین تیسیر
 سخن شناسا من فیضی ام ثنا گویت
 که بر پیاض سخن مدحت کتم تحریر
 اگرچه هند نژادم ولے باقبالت
 مرا ز دانشِ یونانیان دل ست خبیر
 دگر سخن بدعا تو ختم خواهم کرد
 چنانکه نظم شود منتظم به حرفِ اخیر

— اکبرنامه - مطبوعه کلکتہ - ۱۸۸۶ء - جلد سوم - صفحہ ۳۵

The poet 'Urfi also accompanied the emperor, and wrote the well-known Qasida the first two lines of which are:—

هر سوخته جانے که بکشمیر در آید
 گر مرغ کیاب است که با بال و پر آید
 بنگر که ز فیضش چه شود گوهر یکتا
 جائیکه خرف گر رود آنجا گهر آید

Andrew Wilson writing in 1875 says:—"It must be delightful to come to this Jhelum valley, in April or May, from the burned up plains of India, and it might revive even a dying man." And so 'Urfi is not alone,—two centuries after 'Urfi, Andrew Wilson corroborates him. So did Sir Lancelot Graham, ex-Governor of Sind, when he told me at Sonmarg in 1943 that he was dying and that Kashmir climate had revived him.

Munshi Ghulam Husain Tabatabai in his Siyar-ul-Muta'akhhirîn, (Volume I, page 199) notes the following lines in praise of Kashmir at Akbar's visit in the 34th year of his accession:—

چه کشمیر انتخابِ هفت کشور
 قسم خورده بغاکش آب کوثر

نظر چندانکه بر دستش گماری
 بجز آب زمرّد نیست جاری
 ترین گلشن ز جوش خنده گل
 نمی آید بگوش آواز بلبل

It must not be imagined that this was merely a pleasure trip to the Happy Valley. Akbar respected the feelings of his subjects by proclaiming that no soldier should molest any citizen. He fixed the camp of his army at Shihāb-ud-dīnpōr or Shādīpōr about nine miles in a direct line to the north-west of Srinagar, and himself halted in Bāgh Hasan Shāh Chak, Khwāja Bāzār, Nauhaṭṭa, Srinagar. On the representations to the Emperor of the Sūbadār, Sayyid Yūsuf Khān Rizavī Mashhadī, that the assessment was excessive Qāzī Nūrullāh and Totā Rām* had been directed by the Emperor to submit a report on land produce, and also to make the tax thereon uniform. But as the intended measure jeopardized the interests of both officials and landholders, the authorities deputed by the Emperor were considerably hampered in their task. Qāzī Nūrullāh reported the matter to the Emperor, who dispatched Hasan Beg and Shaikh 'Umar to help him. The Qāzī fixed the pay of the Kashmīr army in cash instead of kind. This precipitated the storm that was already brewing. Çuka also blames the Qāzī for his harshness which was responsible for quarrels caused among the Mughuls themselves (Vol. III, p. 418). The Sūbadār's officials and landowners both united. And Yādgar Mīrzā, his cousin, left in charge to act as Nāzim in the absence of Sayyid Yūsuf Khān Rizavī Mashhadī who had himself escorted Akbar out of the Valley, was declared as king. Kashmīr was once again in revolt. But it did not take long to suppress the rebellion, which lasted only fifty-one days. Yādgar Mīrzā was taken prisoner and beheaded. Prince Salīm interceded on behalf of Sayyid Yūsuf Khān Rizavī Mashhadī, whom the emperor pardoned. As a result of this insurrection Akbar asked Shaikh Faizī, Mīr Sharīf Āmulī, Khwājagī

*It is sometimes said that the Mughuls did not employ Kashmīrī Pandits in any high capacity. It is not so. Pandit Totā Rām was the peshkār or deputy of Mīrzā Yūsuf Khān and Pandit Mahādeva was 'Alī Mardān Khān's peshkār to whom he entrusted all powers of administration.

Muhammad Husain to scrutinize the accounts of Mar-rāj, while Khwāja Shams-ud-Dīn Khāfī and Kūar (Kañwar) Mān Singh were sent to examine those of Kam-rāj. Though the autumn crop was over, yet they were able by their skill to make an estimate of it. Çuka notes that, at this time, the Emperor ordered Shaikh Faizī “to distribute one thousand pieces of silver among Brāhmanas and beggars who dwelt in villages and in woods, and in other places.” (P. 423). Akbar appointed Qalich Khān governor of Kashmīr. Qalich continued in this office for six years. He spent this period chiefly in extirpating the Chaks and suppressing the malcontents.

The building of the Nāgar-nagar.

During the first visit, Akbar had directed Sayyid Yūsuf Khān Rizavī Mashhadī, his governor, to build the Nāgar-nagar, or Naga-nagarī as Çuka puts it (page 426), around the slopes of the Harī-parbat or the Kūh-i-Mārān (literally, the Hill of Snakes), and the work was completed at a cost of one crore and ten lakhs. The construction of this great bastioned stone-wall was undertaken, it was given out, chiefly with a view to provide work for the people. Under cover of this construction it was, perhaps, also intended to overawe the people of the Valley. Çuka says that the Mughuls were to live within the wall so that the soldiers could not, then, molest the local people (p. 426). The work was supervised by a Kashmīrī, Mīr Muhammad Husain Kanṭ by name, and completed during the reign of Jahāngīr. In the palace there was a little garden with a small building in it in which Akbar, according to Jahāngīr, used constantly to sit. As it was out of order, Jahāngīr deputed Muṭamad Khān to put the garden in order and repair the building. It was “adorned with pictures by master hands” so that it was “the envy of the picture gallery of China.” And Jahāngīr called the garden Nūr-afzā. (The Tūzūk, English Translation, Vol. II, pp. 150-151).

Palaces were erected and gardens were laid out. These added a charm to the natural beauty of the country. During his second visit to Kashmīr in 1592 A.C.=1000-1001 A.H., Akbar directed operations against Aju Rāi, the ruler of Tibet Kalān (major) and Khurd (minor), parts of Little Tibet (Baltistān)—who offered resistance. The latter was consequently replaced by ‘Alī Rāi who held a principality in that vicinity. Jahāngīr refers to ‘Alī Muhammad, the son of 'Alī Rāi, deputed by his father to be attached to the Mughul court (Vol. II, p. 288.)

On this second visit, Akbar was accompanied by Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad, the author of the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī.

[Khwāja Nizam-ud-Din Ahmad, whose year of birth may be taken as 958 A.H. or 1551 A.C., was the son of Khwāja Muqīm Hiravī (of Herāt). Khwāja Muqīm was one of Bābur's officials and about the close of his reign was Diwān-i-Buyūtāt or Barrack Officer, or perhaps, Steward of the Royal Household. Khwāja Muqīm acted as Vazīr of Humāyūn, and was an official of Akbar's government too.

In addition to being a student of history, Khwāja Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad, his son, was a patron of poets and apparently himself used to write poetry. The interest of Khwāja Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad in historical matters and his skill as a writer is evidenced by the fact, points out Dr. Bainī Prashād, in his Preface to B. De's English translation of the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, that when Akbar ordered the preparation of the History of the Kings of Islam or the Ta'rīkh-i-Alfī in 990 A.H. (1582 A.C.), he employed the Khwāja as one of the seven authors.

The Khwāja's interest in Sūfiism and theology is indicated by his association with Sūfis and Shaikhs and religious people in general. As Blochmann says, "Nizām-ud-Dīn was a pious Muslim," and yet "managed to rise higher and higher in Akbar's favour by keeping his religious views to himself." He is one of the two or three with whom the orthodox Mullā 'Abdul Qādir Badāyūnī is pleased.

In addition to being a scholar, Nizām-ud-Dīn was a good soldier and administrator. He was attached to Akbar's court, according to one statement, from the thirty-fifth year of his life. In 980 A.H. (1572 A.C.), the Khwāja was appointed Bakhshī in Gujrāt where his duty was to act as the head of the military department and to look after recruitment, reviews and other similar affairs connected with the army.

For his services in Gujrāt, the Khwāja was honoured with the gift of a horse, a robe of honour and an increase in his stipend. Later, the Khwāja carried on a successful campaign in Sorāth in the Ran of Kachh. He was, after this, appointed Bakhshī in the year 1000 A.H. (1591-92 A.C.). The Mīr Bakhshī, according to the Ā'in-i-Akbarī, was one of the nobles of the state.

Nizām-ud-Dīn was a great favourite of the Emperor at this time when he accompanied Akbar to Kashmīr. The Khwāja says his account of Kashmīr which terminates with the end of the 38th year of Akbar's reign, is written in a "summary manner" but that "most of the great events have been succinctly narrated." The reader will completely agree with this last part. And Mr. De, by his edition of the Persian text and English translation and scholarly notes, has made the whole work very intelligible and quite clear.

Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad utilized, for the compilation of the Tabaqāt in respect of Kashmīr, as he himself notes: (i) Ta'rikh-i-Mirzā Haidar and (ii) Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr. The first is the Ta'rikh-i-Rashidī and we have already discussed it. The other is the Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, the author of which is not mentioned. But Dr. Bainī Prashād in his Preface (p. xxx) says that this is probably the راج ترنگی translated from Sanskrit into Persian for Akbar in 998 A.H. by Mullā Shāh Muhmmad of Shāhābād not far from Ver-nāg, Kashmīr, and re-written in an easy style in 999 A.H. (1590 A.C.) by Mullā 'Abdul Qādir Badāyūnī. This manuscript is in the British Museum (Rieu's Catalogue, Volume I, page 296, Add. 24,032). [Reference to it will be found on pages 163-4 of Kashmīr.] The Tabaqāt closes with the year 1002 A.H. Firishta and others come after the author of the Tabaqāt.

[While staying at Lāhore in attendance on the Emperor, Khwāja Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad laid out or purchased a garden, and it was in this garden that he was buried after his death in his forty-fifth year, on the banks of the Rāvi, on 14th Safar, 1003 A.H. (19th October, 1694 A.C.) when he was expected to rise much higher in Akbar's favour.

گوهر بے بها ز دنیا رفت (A priceless pearl has left the world) gives the date of his death.]

Akbar spent the summer of 1597 A.C. in Kashmīr, introduced a lighter assessment of revenue and returned to Lāhore in the early winter. Towards the close of Akbar's reign, a severe famine occurred in Kashmīr. It developed to such an alarming extent that the emperor had to transport grain and cereals from Siālkōt to alleviate the misery of the sufferers. Two priests, Father Hierosme Xavier, a grand-nephew of St. Francis Xavier, and Beroist-de-Gpis who accompanied Akbar at his request to Kashmīr, relate their experience of this famine. The famine, they say, was so grievous that "many mothers were rendered destitute and having no means of nourishing their children exposed them for sale in the public places of the city. Moved to compassion by this pitiable sight, the Father bought many of these little ones, who soon after receiving baptism, yielded up their spirits to their Creator. A certain Saracen (Muslim) seeing the charity of the Father towards these children brought him one of his own; but the Father gave it back to the mother, together with a certain sum of money for its support; for he was unwilling to baptize it, seeing that, if it survived there was little prospect of its being able to live a Christian life in that country."

The new land assessment which had followed the remittances of the tax, called bāj tamgha, resulted in an

Bhimbar

Bhimbar is a small town situated in the plains, on the right bank of a stream of the same name, which flows into the Chenāb near Wazīrābād. It is about 29 miles north of Gujrāt, 22 miles east of Jhelum, and 50 miles north-west of Siālkōṭ.

The place is of some importance, as being the point of departure from the plains for Kashmīr; it is distant about 150 miles from Śrīnagar, by the Pīr Panjāl or Pantsāl route.

The town, which is mostly built of stone, is surrounded on all except the south side by a low hill, about 500 or 600 feet in height.

There is an old Mughul sarāī in the middle of the town, and a brick gaḥḥī or fort of no strength on the north; the former building is used as the thānah and the district officer's residence.

To the south of the town are two buildings for the reception of travellers. There is also a good encamping ground supplied with water from the nadī. This stream is usually shallow and fordable, but is liable to freshets.

Bhimbar was anciently governed by an independent Rājā; the last of the line, Sultān Khān, opposed Ranjīt Singh's designs upon Kashmīr, and is stated to have been blinded by Rājā Gulāb Singh who, in his early career, was an employé of Sultān Khān.

The ruins of the palace of the old Rājās of Bhimbar may be traced near the village, on the left of the road towards Kashmīr.

This small mosque, on the reverse, has a façade of three arches. "The outer face is soiled by constant exposure to the weather. It was originally covered with painted floral designs which still exist in considerable freshness on the inner walls where they were protected from the inclemency of weather. The lower part of the mural decoration consists of a dado divided into panels which are dark red, fringed with minutely worked floral scrolls. The façade of the arches, their intrados, pendentives, etc., are covered with painted cypresses, palms and various other trees and flowers, natural and conventional. The whole surface is glazed.

"There are two windows at the sides which originally possessed brick screens with star-shaped perforations. The core of the structure consists of rubble stones built in lime over which was applied a thick coat of lime bajri which again was superimposed by a thinner one of gypsum. The last served as the background of the paintings.

"The mosque is a very interesting relic."—Extract from the Kashmir Archaeological Report. See also page 520.

The Mosque at Bhimbar, a town south of Rajauri on the old Gujrat to Kashmir road.

[See note on the reverse.]

increase of revenue, which, as recorded by officials, amounted to over a lakh of kharwār. A *kharwār*¹ was equal to 3 maunds and 8 seers of Akbar's reign, and was reckoned at 16 dāms of Akbar's currency. In normal times, a maund of rice could be purchased for five annas.

In the reign of Akbar the Sūbah of Kashmīr included Kābul and Qandahār, according to the Ā'in-i-Akbarī (Vol. II, p. 134).

The re-alignment and construction by Muhammad Qāsim Khān, Akbar's chief engineer, of the great empire route by way of Gujrāt, Bhimbar and Shupiyān ensured the regularity of traffic with India. Faizī referring to such improvements says:

بِحُكْمِ حُسْرُو والا ز تیشه کوه کنان
هزار جَوِ روان کرد صاف تر از شیر
چنان بکوه و کمر خار را تراشیدند
که بهر موکبِ شاهی سزد ممر و مسیر
زمینِ عرصه کشمیر آسمان بگذشت
بِقَمَرِ دولتِ تقییلِ پایباده سریر

Jahangir.

Jahāngīr was essentially a lover of Nature and Kashmīr, therefore, appealed to him particularly. He paid eight visits to Kashmīr two of which were in the company of his father and six during his own reign, viz. 14th, 16th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st.

Jahāngīr was accompanied by his beautiful Queen Nūr Jahān "whose² romantic spirit appears to have led her lord and Emperor into the most secluded and picturesque recesses of the Valley." "Many of these pleasant retreats are to this day pointed out as the spots where the royal pair were wont to disport themselves in those days of regal abandon." The royal pair must have passed their time in festivities of every kind. In summer nights, the Dal lake

1. Kharwār, literally meaning an 'ass-load,' is the standard measure for weighing large quantities in Kashmīr. The word is abbreviated as khār (or khāri of the Rajātaraṅgiṇī). Nowadays a khār is equal to a little over two maunds. See footnote in Chapter X, Section "Weights and Measures."

2. Lieut. Newall's Sketch of the Mahomedan History of Cashmere, J. A. S. B., No. V, 1854, p. 436.

must have reflected brilliant illuminations and fantastic fireworks, and the air must have "re-echoed to the sound of song and dance." Akbar, Jahāngir and his Nūr Jahān, says Mrs. Stuart,¹ are far more vivid personalities in India than Elizabeth or the Stuart sovereigns are in England. To please his consort, Jahāngir is said to have introduced the *chinār*² or the plane tree from Irān, her native country. But this is wrong. The Kāshmīrī word bawayn shows the existence of the chinār in Kashmīr before Jahāngir, who himself refers to the girth and spreading shade of chinārs with wonder. Jahāngir's account of the journey and his impressions of the country, its people, their costumes and modes of life, of the variety of its picturesque scenery, his comments on men, women and things are all vividly recorded in his own inimitable style in his Memoirs. He built many palaces and summer-

1. Gardens of the Great Mughals, London, 1913, page 176.

2. The Chinār.—Shams-ul-'Ulamā' Sir Jivanji Jamshedji Modi traces the plane-tree to Irān. He finds its mention in the Pahlavi Bundehesh [the commentary on one of the 21 books of the Zend-Avesta]. The Bundehesh gives an account of the Creation as told in the Zend-Avesta. Herodotus refers to the plane-tree as being held in estimation by the Achemenian kings like Xerxes and Darius, the father of Xerxes. Later Persians call the plane-tree Darakht-i-Fazl or 'the Tree of Grace.' Teherān, by some, is called the 'City of Plane-Trees.' And hence, Longfellow's lines :—

Bright with the sheen of the dew, each glittering tree of the forest, Flashed like the plane-tree the Persian adorned with mantles and jewels.

—Evangeline, Part the First, II, Lines 22-23.

Pliny in his Natural History (Book XII, Chap. 1, pp. 357-58) refers to the plane-tree having been brought on the Ionian Sea into the Island of Diomedea to beautify the tomb of Diomedea. From there it was transplanted into Sicily and later to Italy, where it was planted as "a most singular, rare and special tree" throughout the peninsula. It was carried to Terwin and Tournay in France, where "it was counted as an appearance to the very soil." Those who walked and refreshed themselves under its shadow were to "pay a custom to the people of Rome." Spain, too, had the plane-tree. All this happened, says Pliny, about the time that Rome was sacked by the Gauls. The plane-tree came to be so highly esteemed that people would "water them with wine." Pliny gives several instances of large plane-trees in Italy, in the hollow trunks of which, kings and emperors had made banqueting places.—The Journal of the Anthropological Society of Bombay, Volume VI, 1901-03, No. 8, pages 427-434. Jahāngir also notes large plane-trees in Kashmīr. He says: "I myself was riding on a horse, with five at her saddled horses and two eunuchs, we went inside it,"—English Translation, Vol. II, p. 154. The chinār is also a native of Farghāna, Central Asia.

houses. He completed the construction of the celebrated Shālimār Gardens. The ruins of palaces at Mānas-bal, Acha-bal and Vēr-nāg, etc., attest to Nūr Jahān's taste in selecting picturesque sites.

The late Justice Shāh Dīn has beautifully described the scene in his well-known poem Shālāmār—

نُورِ جہاں جو حُسن میں پُتلی تھی نُور کی
 اور قد میں جیسے سرو لبِ جوئبار ہو
 آکر یہاں بجاتی تھی وہ دلغریب رنگ
 قُربان جس پہ جان سے سو لالہ زار ہو
 اور آنا اُسکے ساتھ شہِ مہ پرست کا
 جسکی نگہ سے چشمِ طرب میں چار ہو
 سامانِ عیش اور وہ عشرت کی محفلیں
 وہ راتیں جن پہ روزِ درخشاں نثار ہو

Baron Schonberg* gives us a moving picture, perhaps of these days, when he writes : “Kashmīr, the reputed cradle of the human race, that spot to which the sagas of the eastern nations have lent a religious veneration, and which the imaginings of the western poets have robed in all the beauties of an earthly Elysium—Kashmīr around which is flung all the voluptuousness of Asiatic fiction, and so much of the splendour of Asiatic history—where is the European who hears Kashmīr mentioned, and does not think of the glory of Ackbar, the pomp of Jehangir and the beauty of Nur Jehan?”

Thomas Moore has put these romantic days of Jahāngīr and Nūr Jahān in the vale of Kashmīr in beautiful poetry in his Lalla Rookh.—

‘Oh ! best of delights as it everywhere is To be near the loved One,—what a rapture is his
 Who in moonlight and music thus sweetly may glide
 O’er the Lake of Cashmere with that One by his side !
 If woman can make the worst wilderness dear,
 Think, think what a Heaven she must make of Cashmere !
 So felt the magnificent Son of Ackbar,

Travels*, Vol. II, pp. 1-2.

When from power and pomp and the trophies of war
 He flew to that Valley, forgetting them all
 With the Light of the Haram, his young Nourmahal,
 When free and uncrown'd as the Conqueror roved
 By the banks of that Lake, with his only beloved,
 He saw, in the wreaths she would playfully snatch
 From the hedges, a glory his crown could not match,
 And preferred in his heart the least ringlet that curl'd
 Down her exquisite neck, to the throne of the world !
 There's the beauty, for ever unchangingly bright,
 Like a long sunny lapse of a summer day's light,
 Shining on, shining on, by no shadow made tender,
 Till Love falls asleep in the sameness of splendour :
 This was not the beauty—oh ! nothing like this,
 That to young Nourmahal gave such magic of bliss !
 But that loveliness, ever in motion, which plays
 Like the light upon autumn's soft shadowy days,
 Now here and now there, giving warmth as it flies
 From the lips to the cheek, from the cheek to the eyes ;
 Now melting in mist and now breaking in gleams,
 Like the glimpses a saint has of heaven in his dreams !
 When pensive, it seemed as if that very grace,
 That charm of all others, was born with her face !
 And when angry,—for e'en in the tranquildest climes
 Light breezes will ruffle the flowers sometimes—
 The short, passing anger but seem'd to awaken
 New beauty, like flowers that are sweetest when shaken.

“ There too the Haram's inmates smile—
 Maids from the West, with sun-bright hair,
 And from the Garden of the Nile,
 Delicate as the roses there ;
 Daughters of Love from Cyprus' rocks,
 With Paphian* diamonds in their locks ;
 Light Peri forms, such as there are
 On the gold meads of Candahar ;
 And they, before whose sleepy eyes,
 In their own bright Kathaian bowers,
 Sparkle such rainbow butterflies,
 That they might fancy the rich flowers
 That round them in the sun lay sighing,
 Had been by magic all set flying !
 Everything young, everything fair,
 From East and West is blushing there,
 Except—except—O Nourmahal !
 Thou loveliest, dearest of them all,
 The one, whose smile shone out alone,
 Amidst a world the only one !

*Of Paphos, a city of Cyprus, sacred to Aphrodite or Venus.

"The board was spread with fruits and wine ;
 With grapes of gold, like those that shine
 On Casbin's¹ hills ;—pomegranates full
 Of melting sweetness, and the pears,
 And sunniest apples that Caubul
 In all its thousand gardens bears ;—
 Plantains, the golden and the green,
 Malaya's nectar'd magusteen ;
 Prunes of Bokhara, and sweet nuts
 From the far groves of Samarcand,
 And Basra dates, and apricots,
 Seed of the Sun,² from Iran's land ;—
 With rich conserve of Visna cherries,³
 Of orange flowers, and of those berries
 That, wild and fresh, the young gazelles
 Feed on in Erac's⁴ rocky dells.
 All these in richest vases smile,
 In baskets of pure sandal-wood
 And urns of porcelain from that isle
 Sunk underneath the Indian flood,
 Whence oft the lucky diver brings
 Vases to grace the halls of kings.
 Wines, too, of every clime and hue,
 Around their liquid lustre threw ;
 Amber Rosolli,⁵—the bright dew
 From vineyards of the Green-Sea gushing ;⁶
 And Shiraz wine, that richly ran
 As if that jewel, large and rare,
 The ruby, for which Kublai-Khan⁷
 Offer'd a city's wealth, was blushing,
 Melted within the goblets there !
 And amply Selim quaffs of each,
 And seems resolved the flood shall reach
 His inward heart,—shedding around
 A genial deluge, as they run,

1. Qazvin, in Irān, is on the main route to Europe. 16th and 17th century travellers spell it as in the text above.

2. 'Tukhm-i-Shams' is a kind of delicious apricot.

3. Visna is no other than Vishnia, originally Greek but now a Russian word, meaning cherry. The vishnia is a fine cherry in Russia proper and in Turkistān.

4. Erac now written 'Irāq. But here the reference is probably to the district of 'Irāq-i-'Ajām in Irān, situated to the west of Qumm between Hamadān and Isfahān.

5. Rosolio is the name of an Italian liquor. Here perhaps the meaning is Rosolli of amber colour, viz., yellow wine.

6. Green-Sea. The allusion is to the Persian Gulf.

7. A Mongol emperor (b. 1216, d. 1294) was the grandson of Changiz Khān. Kublāi Khān ruled as emperor of China and Central Asia from 1259 to 1294 A. C.

That soon shall leave no spot undrown'd,
For Love to rest its wings upon.

“Come hither, come hither,—by night and by day,
We linger in pleasures that never are gone ;
Like the waves of the summer, as one dies away.
Another as sweet and as shining comes on.
And the love that is over, in expiring, gives birth
To a new one as warm, as unequall'd in bliss ;
And, oh ! if there be an Elysium on earth,
It is this, it is this.

“The mask is off—the charm is wrought—
And Selim to his heart has caught,
In blushes, more than ever bright,
His Nourmahal, his Haram's Light !
And well do vanish'd frowns enhance
The charm of every brighten'd glance ;
And dearer seems each dawning smile
For having lost its light awhile ;
And, happier now for all her sighs
As on his arm her head reposes,
She whispers him, with laughing eyes,
‘Remember, love, the Feast of Roses.’”

—Thomas Moore.

ادھر اک وارث اورنگِ اکبر	جلوسِ خسروی فرما رہا تھا
شہِ جم جاہ نورالدین جہانگیر	شکوہِ بزمِ جم دکھلا رہا تھا
ادھر نورجہان کا جلوۂ حسن	در و دیوار کو چمکا رہا تھا
فروغِ عارضی مہرالنسا سے	جمالِ یوسفی گہنا رہا تھا
وہ حسن و عشق کا مَعْلٰی مَرَّع	زمانہ کو دکھایا جا رہا تھا
ادھر ماحوِ نوا، سزمستِ مطرب	سرودِ آسمانی گا رہا تھا
وہ تارِ چنگ بربط کی تڑپ سے	رگِ جاں میں لہو دوڑا رہا تھا
وہ تھی دربار کی شان آشکارا	کہ بندوں کو خدا یاد آ رہا تھا
یہ نقشہ دیکھ کر بزمِ شہی کا	سروشِ غیب یہ فرما رہا تھا

اگر فردوسِ بر روئے زمین است

ہمیں است و ہمیں است و ہمیں است

—چوہدری خوشی محمد، ناظر

نغمہ فردوس - حصہ اول - صفحات ۱۲۹—۱۳۰

[Malik Haidar Chadura.—Malik Haidar Chādura, whose History we have utilized, must here come in for a few words. Malik Haidar wrote his History of Kashmīr from the earliest times to his own, in Persian, in 1027 A.H. (1617 A.C.), the 12th year of the accession of Jahāngīr. The total number of pages of the copy used by me on loan from Khān Bahādur Maulavī Zafar Hasan, B.A. (Alig.), O.B.E., Retired Deputy Director-General of Archaeology, Nasheman, Delhi Gate, Delhi, is 235, the number of folios is 118. The size is 7"×4", the written portion of the folios being 5½"×2½". The number of lines per page is 17. This manuscript is a copy of the manuscript dated A.H. 1117=1705 A.C. There is another date: Rewārī, 16th September, 1893 A.C., Bhādōn S. 1950, 5th Rabī' 1, 1310 A.H. on this manuscript which may presumably be the date of its transcription from the 1117 A.H. copy. The British Museum MS. Add. 8906, (Vol. I, page 297), has 224 folios, size 10½" by 6¼", 12 lines per page 3½" long in nasta'liq, dated Shavvāl A.H. 1216 (A.C. 1802), and Add. 16,705 (page 298), has 230 folios, size 8½" by 4½", 16 lines per page, 3" long, in cursive nasta'liq, probably in the 17th century A.C. Āghā Hakīm 'Alī, B.A.-P.B., D.S. (Milan, Italy) Director of Sericulture, Srīnagar, secured me another copy of Haidar Malik's History which originally belonged to the late Malik Asadullāh and is now in possession of Hājī Mohd. Jawād of Jādī-bal, Srīnagar. This copy is very clear and has 262 pages, size 9½"×6½", 13 lines per page, in cursive nasta 'liq, dated 1297 A.H.= 1879 A.C.

Malik Haidar and his brother Malik 'Alī were Kashmīr noblemen descended from Malik Muhammad Nāji, the minister of Husain Shāh Chak. In the latter part of his History, Malik Haidar says that he had spent four and twenty years of his life in the service of Yūsuf Shāh Chak whom he followed in his banishment to his jāgīr in Bihār. Malik Haidar carried out with great success, as Faujdār of Jā'is, (Jā'is from jaish a 'camp' is a town, on the rail, in the Salon Tahsil of the Rāi Bareli district of the United Provinces, on the road from Lucknow to Sultānpur. Jā'is originally had a fortress called Udyanagar or Ujilekāngar) an expedition against Rājā Balbhadr, and was personally engaged with Shīr Afgan Khān in the attack in which the latter succumbed in 1016 A.H. (1607 A.C.). With his brother, 'Alī Malik, he protected Shīr Afgan's widow Mihr-un-Nisā Begam (afterwards Nūr Jahān) against all dangers and even received a wound. Haidar was warmly recommended by her to Jahāngīr who bestowed upon him the titles of Chaghatāi and Ra'is-ul-Mulk, with an office in the government of Kashmīr. The Ta'rikh-i-Khalāt Marjānpūrī (p. 166) mentions that Mihr-un-Nisā actually entered the house of Yūsuf Shāh Chak for personal safety.

When the Jāmi' Masjid at Srīnagar was consumed by fire during the reign of Jahāngīr, Malik Hasan, the father of Malik Haidar who was a Shī'a, was accused of having been concerned, along with other leading Shī'as, in the conflagration. It is said that, at the instance of Nūr Jahān, Haidar consequently re-built it at his own expense and the following chronogram illustrates :—

بِتَارِيخِ هَزَارِ وَبِسْتِ وَتَهْ اَزْهَجَرَتِ سَيِّدِ
 بَرُوزِ عِيدِ رُوزَةِ سُوخْتِهْ دَرِ نَوْبَتِ ثَانِي
 مَلِكِ حَيْدَرِ رَئِيسِ الْمَلِكِ دَرِ عَهْدِ جِهَانْگِيرِي
 نِهَادِ اَزْ نَوِ بِنَاشْتِ بَازِ رُوزِ عِيدِ قُرْبَانِي
 چَوْتَارِيخِ بِنَاشْتِ جُسْتِ، گُفْتَا هَاتِفِ غِيْبِي

ه ۱۰۲۹

نِهَادِ اَزْ نَوِ اسَاسَشِ بَازِ گَاهِ عِيدِ قُرْبَانِي

The Jāmi' Masjid, that was originally built by Sultān Sikandar was twice partially destroyed by fire previous to the reign of Jahāngir and was re-built by Sultān Hasan Shāh and later by Ibrāhīm Māgre Malik Haidar conducted several works of improvement and utility in Kashmīr. His brother, 'Alī Malik, is given the credit of the conquest of Kishtwār in 1029-30 A.H. (1619-20 A.C.).

The grave of the historian Ra'is-ul-Mulk Haidar Malik at Tsōdur or Chādura about 10 miles from Srinagar Chādura, to which Malik Haidar belonged, is pronounced in Kashmīrī as Tsōdur and written Chādura. It is a village in the Nāgām pargana about a mile from Nāgām itself; and is some ten miles south of Srinagar. The Khānqāh (tomb) of Mī Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, originally built by Daulat Shāh Chak, was also re-built by Malik Haidar.

"On Sunday, the 7th of Urdibihisht, I rode to the village of Chādura which is the native country of Haidar Malik," writes the royal visitor, Jahāngīr.* “In truth this is a very pleasant spot of ground, and has flowing streams and lofty plane-trees. At his request I gave it the name of Nūrpūr (the City of Light).” This is an allusion to Nūr Jahān and to Nūr-ud-Dīn Jahāngīr. “On the road there was a tree called halīhal; when one takes one of the branches and shakes it, the whole of the tree comes into movement,” he continues. “The common people believe that this movement is peculiar to that tree. By chance, in the said village, I saw another tree of the same kind, which was in similar movement. And I ascertained that it was common to that species of tree and not confined to one tree. In the village of Rāwalpūr, 2½ kōs from the city towards Hindustān, there is a plane-tree, burnt in the inside. Twenty-five years before this, when I myself was riding on a horse, with five other saddled horses and two eunuchs, we went inside it It has been noted in the Akbar-nāma that my father took thirty-four people inside and made them stand close to each other.”]

A Dutch Protestant's view of Kashmīr under Jahāngīr.

Francisco Pelsaert of Antwerp, a Dutch Protestant, in the service of the Dutch East India Company, was in India for seven years from 1621 to 1627 A.C. Pelsaert rose to be the President of the Dutch fleet. His commercial report to his employers written in 1626 is printed under the title of the Remonstrantie. In this booklet of 88 pages, Pelsaert gives us light glimpses of Kashmīr in Jahāngīr's reign (pp. 33-36). Though the observations are not quite accurate in all detail, and there are several obscurities, the extract has its interest for the general reader, as a whole, from the point of view of a fanatical Protestant trader of the time. Writes Pelsaert: “The city of Kashmir (viz., Srīnagar) itself is planted with very pleasant fruit-bearing and other trees, while two great rivers flow past it. The larger of these comes from Wirnagīe (Vēr-nāg), Achiauwel (Acha-bal) and Matiaro (Maṭan, referring to the river Lidar); the other rises from the ground like a well or spring, three kōs from the city, having its source at Saluara [Sōlur or Salura village, at one time was on the Anchār Lake—1½ miles from the large spring of Tulmul Tiratha. Sōlur is 13½ miles from Srīnagar] on an inland lake; but the water of neither of them appears to be sweet or healthy, and the inhabitants boil it before they drink it, while the king and the chief nobles have their water carried

*English Translation of the Tūzūk-i-Jahāngīrī by Alexander Rogers, edited by Henry Beveridge, 1914, Vol. II, pages 154-55.

3 or 4 kos from Swindesseway (the Sind river of Kashmīr, which passes the village Gādūr, about eight miles from Srinagar by road and boat) where the water is clear and snow-white. King Jahangir began the construction of a wooden aqueduct, to bring good water from a distance of 10 or 12 kos into the fort, but realizing that it could be easily poisoned by enemies or malcontents, he abandoned it after having spent fully 10,000 rupees. In Kashmir foreigners usually suffer from the flux, and many die of it; the cause must be water, and also the quantity of fruit which is available.

“ On the East side of the city lies a great stronghold, with a wall of grey stone fully nine or ten feet thick, which joins it to a high rocky hill, with a large palace on the summit, and another somewhat lower or half way up, towards the North, as well as two or three residences with separate approaches, but the principal ones lie on the South towards the East. In the centre of this fort is the King's palace, which is noteworthy rather for its elevation and extent than its magnificence. The Queen lives next to the King, on the North side; next to her her brother, Asaf Khan, and, a little further on, Mukarrib Khan. [Shaiḵh Hasan with the title of Muqarrab Khān was some time governor of Delhi. From his childhood he was always in Jahāngīr's service and in attendance on him.] On the other or southern side, lives Sultan Shahriyar, the King's youngest son, who is married to the Queen's daughter by her first husband. On the south-west live Khawja Abdul [Abu'l] Hasan and also other great nobles, all of whom reside within the fortress and round the hill in a circle of about a kos in circumference. The city is very extensive, and contains many mosques, as their churches are called. The houses are built of pine-wood, the interstices being filled with clay and their style is by no means contemptible. They look elegant, and fit for citizens rather than peasants and they are ventilated with handsome and artistic open-work, instead of windows or glass. They have flat roofs entirely covered with earth, on which the inhabitants often grow onions, or which are covered with grass, so that during the rains the green roofs and groves make the city most beautiful on a distant view.

“ The inhabitants of the country and the city are for the most part poor, but they are physically strong, especially the men, who can carry quite twice the load of a Hindustani ; this is remarkable in view of the fact that men and women get so little food. Their children are very handsome and fair, while they are young and small, but when they grow up they become yellow and ugly, owing to their mode of life, which is that of beasts rather than men. The women are small in build, filthy, lousy, and not handsome. They wear a coarse grey woollen garment, open from the neck to the waist. On the forehead they have a sort of red band, and above it an ugly, black, dirty clout, which falls from the head over the shoulders to the legs ; cotton cloth is very dear and their inborn poverty prevents them from possessing a change of raiment.

“ They are fanatical Moslems. It was their twelfth king (obscure sentence) who observed this creed, before king Akbar's General, Raja Bhagwan Das, overcame the country by craft and subtlety, the lofty mountains and difficult roads rendering forcible conquest impossible.

“ Kashmir produces many kinds of fruit, such as apples, pears, walnuts, etc., but the flavour is inferior to those of Persia or Kabul. In December, January and February the cold is very great, with constant rain and snow ; the mountains remain white with snow, except in places where the sun shines in the warm weather, causing heavy floods in the rivers.

“ The reason of the King's special preference for this country is that when the heat in India increases, his body burns like a furnace, owing to his consumption of excessively strong drink and opium, excesses which were still greater in his youth. He usually leaves Lahore in March or April, and reaches Kashmir in May. The journey is very difficult and dangerous, besides being expensive, for pack animals cannot cross the mountains, and practically everything must be carried on men's heads. All the nobles curse the place, for it makes the rich poor, and the poor cannot fill their stomachs there, because everything is excessively dear ; but apparently the King prefers his own comfort or pleasure to the welfare of his people.

“ Kashmir yields nothing for export to Agra except saffron of which there are two kinds. That which grows near the city sells in Agra at 20 to 24 rupees the ser ; the other kind, which grows at Casstuwary (Kishtwār), 10 kos (?) distant is the best, and usually fetches 28 to 32 rupees the ser (of 30 pice weight). Many pamris are also woven; these are cloths 3 ells long and 2 broad, woven from the wool (it is more like hair), which grows on the hind-quarters of the sheep, very fine and as soft as silk. They are worn here (i.e. in Agra) in wraps in the winter because of the cold, and look very well and fine, having a surface like boratos (a thin woollen cloth fashionable in Europe at this period). Walnuts, which are plentiful, are also exported to Agra.

“The goods sent from Agra to Kashmir are coarse, unbleached, cotton-cloth, yarn for local consumption, and also pepper and opium. Nutmeg, cloves and mace are too dear, and their use is unknown; but all of them are, as might be expected, brought there when the King is in residence.”

Qalīch Khān and Sa‘ādat Khān, governors under Jahāngīr, suppressed the Chaks with a strong hand. All their hauteurs departed. The poor Chaks took to humbler ways of life, and either went in for humbler jobs or settled down as husbandmen, farmers and horse-keepers. I‘tiqād Khān imposed severe, unjust restrictions upon the agriculturist class. He introduced the evil practice of requisitioning or attaching fruit gardens, of reserving forests and villages. He exacted forced labour particularly in connexion with the plucking of saffron flowers, which formed an asset of imperial revenue. Shāh Jahān, however, revoked these practices by issuing a special farmān (command) after his accession.

Jahāngīr did not neglect the welfare of his subjects. In 1621 A. C. (1031 A. H.) he abolished the vexatious tax Rasūm-i-Faujdārī “to ease the subjects and soldiers.” He prohibited in Rajaurī the immolation of Muslim women in emulation of their Hindu sisters who devoted themselves to flames with the remains of their husbands. A girl of twelve* years of age had been buried alive in the grave of her dead husband just before the arrival of Jahāngīr in 1619. The strangulation of daughters at birth by men without means was stopped. He also forbade intermarriage between Hindus and Muslim women. The conversion of

The History of Jahangir* by Francis Gladwin, edited by Rao Bahādur K. V. R. Aiyangar, Paul & Co., Madras, 1930, page 92.

Chingas Sarai

Chingas Sarāi is a small and scattered village situated on a flat table-land, about 200 feet above the right bank of the Tawī river. It lies on the Bhimbar route into Kashmīr, between Naoshahra and Rajauri, about 13 miles north of the former place, and 15 miles south of the latter. There is a bungalow for the accommodation of travellers, about a quarter of a mile from the village.

The old Sarāi, from which the village takes its name, is close to the bungalow. Water is procurable from a bāolī or from the river beneath. The hill sides in the vicinity are covered with under-wood and firs, but on the opposite side of the river there is good grazing ground. Next to the Mughul mosque at the Sarāi is the grave entombing Jahāngīr's entrails.

In proof of the ophiolatry that prevailed in these hills, the ancient slabs sculptured with figures of snakes have been adduced. A most curious example of these stones exists at this village where, among a number of small lingams under a pīpal tree, is a rudely carved slab, representing a serpent with its long coils spreading over the whole length of the stone, and a devotee with clasped hands standing below.

Muslim girls to Hinduism and then their cremation with Hindu husbands at one time was as large as 4,000 in Rajauri and Bhimbar.¹ Shāh Jahān followed his father's policy in the matter. In Shāh Jahān's time, in the seventh year of his reign, an investigation was made into the complaints of Muslims of Bhimbar against the Hindus who burnt the Qu'rān and oppressed the Muslims. On the report of the investigating official, Shaikh Mahmūd Gujrātī, an order was issued that, if a Hindu wanted to be converted to Islam, his family should not place any obstacles in his way.² During the present Dogrā rule a Hindu, on conversion to Islam, loses right to his share of the family property.

Owing to difficulties experienced in his journey, Jahāngīr ordered suitable lodgings to be constructed for himself and the harem at convenient stages. He further ordered a garden to be built at the Vēr-nāg Spring. In this garden, there was a picture gallery in which the pictures of Humāyūn, Akbar, Jahāngīr and Shāh 'Abbās of Irān were painted. According to the contemporary, Francisco Pelsaert,³ Vēr-nāg was "the most delightful pleasure-resort where the King had the best hunting grounds in the whole of India." Dilāwar Khān and Irādat Khān, two of his governors, also constructed gardens on the Barārinambal lagoon fed by the Mār-nāla and situated in the southeast of Srinagar, and at Nāopōr a village five miles south of Sopōr.

Seven⁴ Sūbadārs or governors were appointed by Jahāngīr, one after the other, to govern Kashmīr. With the exception of Qalich Khān (1606) and Irādat Khān (1620), all were just, and numerous are the instances of their justice. The Hindus of Kashmīr complained against Qalich Khān to the Emperor Jahāngīr who communicated, after the epigrammatic style of Ja'far Barmakī (see Al-Kāmil al-Mubarrad, Lahore, 1337 A.H.=1928 A.C., Vol. I, p. 301), the following warning to him :—

حکومت پناہ ! داد خواہان تو بسیار، شکر گزاران تو کم، آبِ سحاب
بر لبِ تشنگان بریز - ورنہ از حکومت برخیز -

1. Qazvīnī's Bādshāh-nāma, pp. 444-5, also 'Abdul Hamīd Lāhaurī's Bādshāh-nāma, Vol. I, section ii, page 58.

2. 'Abdul Hamīd's Bādshāh-nāma, Vol. I, section ii, page 585.

3. Jahāngīr's India : The Remonstrantie of Francisco Pelsaert, 1925, page 33.

4. Muhammad-ud-Din Fauq, Mukammal Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr, Part II, page 198.

[Protection of Governance. Thy complainants are many, th thanksgivers few. Pour cloud-water on the thirsty people, or el relinquish thy administrative post.]

The *Dabistān*¹ says that Pandit Çri Kanta, a Kashmīr conversant with Hindu sciences and knowing the Shāstras was invested by Jahāngīr with the dignity of a judge o the Hindus in order that, in every concern of personal lav and custom, they should have complete autonomy.

According to his autobiography, Jahāngīr married a Kashmīrī lady. ‘After him, by the daughter of the princ of Kashmīr who was of the society of the Jōgis, I ha another daughter, who died a year old.’²

As regards territorial extension, Jahāngīr’s reign witnessed the conquest of Kishtwār. A description of thi conquest in the language of the royal diarist is worthy o reproduction. It reads almost like the dispatch of a modern war correspondent—

“On the tenth of the Ilāhī month of Shahriwar, in my 14th year, Dilāwar Khān with 10,000 horse and foot, determined to conquer Kishtwār. He appointed his son, Hasan by name, with Gird ‘Alī Mīr Bahr to guard the city and administer the territory. A Gauhar Chak and Aiba Chak laid claim to Kashmīr as heirs, and were stirring up strife in Kishtwār and were wandering in the valley of confusion and ruin, he left Haibat, one of his brothers, with a force at Desu, which is near the Kotal of the Pīr Panjāl, by way of caution Dividing his forces at that place, he himself hastened with a force by the road of Sanginpūr, sending his son Jalāl, with Nasrullāl ‘Arab, and ‘Alī Malik Kashmīrī and a band of Jahāngīrī servants by another road, and his elder son Jamāl with a band of zealous young men as an advance-guard to his own force. At the same time, he placed two other forces to move forward on his right and left. As no horses could go on the road by way of precaution, he took some with him, but left nearly all his sipāhīs’ horses behind and sent them to Kashmīr (i.e. Srinagar). The young men girded the belt of duty on their waists, and went up hills on foot. The ghāzīs of the army of Islam fought from post to post with the ill-fated unbelievers as far as Narkōṭ, which was one of the enemy’s strongholds The ill-fated Aiba Chak with many of the people of ruin were slain. By the death of Aiba, the Rājā became powerless and without heart, and took the road of flight, and, crossing by the bridge, stopped at Bhandarkōṭ which is on the other side. . . . Dilāwar Khān drew up his forces at Bhandarkōṭ In short, for four months and ten days, Dilāwar Khān having planted the foot of courage at Bhandarkōṭ made endeayours to cross over Jalāl, Dilāwar

1. Shea and Troyer’s Translation—pages 164-165.

2. The Valley of Kashmīr, page 194, footnote 2.

Khān's son, with some of the servants of the Court and a band of Afghāns, about 200 in number, crossed over in safety, made unawares an attack on the Rājā, and blew loudly the trumpets of victory . . . The men rushed on the Rājā and made him prisoner . . . Dilāwar Khān . . . having crossed the river (Mārū) came to Mandal Badr which was the capital of the country, and is three kos from the river. The daughter of Sangrām, Rājā of Jammu and the daughter of . . . Sūraj Mal son of Rājā Baso were in the Rājā's house (i.e., married to him). By Sangrām's daughter he had children. Before the victory he had sent his family for refuge to the Rājā of Jaswāl and other Zamindārs . . . Dilāwar Khān took the Rājā with him, and came to kiss the threshold, leaving Nasrullāh 'Arab with a body of horse and foot to guard the country.

"The whole income of the Rājā consists of fines, and for a small offence he takes a heavy sum. From whomsoever is wealthy and in comfortable circumstances the Rājā, on some pretext, clears out all that he has. From all sources his income is about Rs. 100,000. In time of war 6,000 or 7,000 men on foot collect together. There are but few horses among them. The Rājā and the chief men have about fifty between them. I bestowed a year's revenue on Dilāwar Khān by way of reward."*

During the régime of Dilāwar Khān, following the appearance of a comet, it is said, rats appeared in alarming numbers and considerably damaged the crops. The epidemic of plague infested the country so virulently that the dead were thrown into the river without even the last rites being performed. Let Jahāngīr himself describe it: "On this day (Wednesday, 17th Isfandārmuz, 12th year of Jahāngīr's reign=1617 A.C.) a report of the chronicler of events arrived, that the plague had taken firm hold of the country (Kashmīr) and that many had died. The symptoms were that the first day there was headache and fever and much bleeding at the nose. On the second day the patient died. In the house where one person died all the inmates were carried off. Whoever went near the sick person or a dead body was affected in the same way. In one instance, the dead body was thrown on the grass, and it chanced that a cow came and ate some of the grass. It died, and some dogs that had eaten its flesh also died. Things had come to such a pass that from fear of death fathers would not approach their children, and children would not go near their fathers. A strange thing was that, in the ward in which the disease began, a fire broke out, and nearly 3,000 houses were burnt I trust that the Almighty will have mercy on His sinful slaves, and that they will be altogether freed from such calamities.”¹

The Tūzūk-i-Jahāngirī*, English Translation by Alexander Rogers and Henry Beveridge, Royal Asiatic Society, London, 1914, volume II, pages 135-139.

“On this day (Wednesday, the first of the month of Āzar=March 1617 A.C., the 12th year of Jahāngīr’s reign) Kashmīr reports were laid before me. One was that in the house of a certain silk-seller two girls were born with teeth, and with their backs as far as the waist joined together, but the heads, arms and legs were separate: they lived a short time and died.”²

During the time of Jahāngīr, Kashmīr yielded a revenue amounting to 7,46,70,000 dāms, which undoubtedly indicates the increase of prosperity enjoyed by Kashmīr during his rule.

Shah Jahan.

Shāh Jahān visited Kashmīr four times during his reign at intervals of five or seven years. The first visit took place in 1043 A.H. (or 1634 A.C.), when Shāh Jahān arrived in Srinagar on June 5. “The enchanting beauty of this province hypnotized Shāh Jahān,” writes the author of History of Shahjahan of Dikli,³ “and though he had no staff of painters with him to reproduce its natural beauty, he had a number of excellent writers at court who have described Kashmīr in glowingly picturesque language, which is poetic in spirit though prose in form.” The descriptions of Kashmīr written by Mīrzā Amināi Qazvīnī (Pādshāh-nāma, British Museum, Or. 173) and Jalāl-ud-Dīn Tabātabāi (Pādshāh-nāma, British Museum, Or. 1676), the versified narratives of Qudsī and Kalīm are instances. Mīrzā Amināi Qazvīnī was in the royal retinue on this occasion. Shāh Jahān’s second visit took place during January to October 1640 A.C. Another visit is recorded in 1645. The last visit took place in 1651 which, however, was cut short on account of floods and storms. And Shāh Jahān returned to Lāhore. It was at the time of Shāh Jahān’s first visit that the Hindu rājā of Bhimbar announced the adoption of Islam, and was given the title of Rājā-i-Daulatmand (or the Rājā of Riches).

1. The Tuzuk-i-Jahāngīrī, English Translation by Rogers and Beveridge, Royal Asiatic Society, London, 1909, Volume, I, pages 442-443.

2. Ibid., page 406.

3. History of Shahjahan of Dikli by Dr. Banārsī Prasād Saksena, the Indian Press Ltd., Allahābād, 1932, pages 314-17.

Shāh Jahān appointed nine governors altogether, of whom two, namely, Zafar Khān and 'Alī Mardān Khān were re-appointed. I'tiqād Khān, who had been appointed by Jahāngīr, continued in office till his high-handedness and oppressive rule brought about his removal. Prince Murād visited Kashmīr in 1640 A.C., and remained as governor for a year, being followed by 'Alī Mardān Khān. During his stay, Prince Murād married a daughter of the Malīks of Shāhābād. Shāhābād was formerly called the Vēr-nāg pargana, according to Hasan, and was re-named Shāhābād by Shāh Jahān.

Zafar Khān's original name was Ahsanullāh Khān Ahsan. Zafar Khān was the title conferred on him by Shāh Jahān on account of his triumphant courage and coolness. He succeeded I'tiqād Khān. In reality, Ahsanullāh's father, Abu'l Hasan Turbatī, was nominated to the governorship. He was, however, too infirm and aged to assume the onerous duties of office in person. The son deputized for the father. Zafar's excellent administration won the Emperor's approbation and he was confirmed in his post.

The final conquest of Tibet was effected by Zafar Khān. Its brief detail is this. Chaks were given asylum in Little Tibet (Baltistān). Jahāngīr's Sūbadār of Kashmīr, Hāshim Khān, son of Qāsīm Khān Mīr Bahr, attempted to reduce 'Alī Rāi Marzbān (Warden of the Marches) of Skārdū to submission but failed. In Shāh Jahān's time, Abdāl, 'Alī Rāi's son, gave protection to Habīb Chak and Ahmad Chak. Zafar Khān, therefore, persuaded Abdāl to acknowledge Mughul sovereignty and to read the Khutba in Shāh Jahān's name in 1634. But Abdāl, within the next two years, repudiated his submission. Shāh Jahān ordered Zafar Khān to subjugate Little Tibet. With 2,000 cavalry and 10,000 infantry, Zafar Khān forced Abdāl to resume submission and to pay an indemnity of one million rupees. In the course of the fight, Abdāl's son, Daulat, a lad of fifteen, showed considerable pluck in sallying out of his fort at Shakar on the other side of the Nil-āb or the Indus, in Little Tibet, but was driven back by Mīr Fakhr-ūd-Dīn of the Mughul army. Daulat, on being overwhelmed, escaped with his father's cash and jewellery. Zafar Khān, however, brought Abdāl and the families of Habīb Chak and Ahmad Chak to Kashmīr and left Muhammad Murād, Abdāl's Vakil, in charge of the country.

Zafar is chiefly remembered for the removal of hardships which I'tiqād Khān¹ had imposed upon the people of Kashmīr, and which were beautifully brought to the notice of Shāh Jahān by a Kashmīrī poet in a striking and significant poem in honour of the Emperor's birthday :—

خسروا، دانشی پڑوها، داورا، دین پرورا
 اهل کشمیر اند در دیوان عدالت داد خواہ
 زعفران گویند خندان سازد اندھناک را
 آمدند از زعفران در گریہ جمع بیگناہ

The poet, in the first couplet, addresses the Emperor saying that 'We have a plaint in Your Majesty's Court.' In the second couplet the poet says that saffron causes the sad and the sorry to laugh, but here innocent people are made to weep on account of saffron !

To this effect, Zafar, therefore, obtained a farmān from Shāh Jahān which was engraved on a stone and put into the masonry of the gate of the Jāmi' Masjid in Srīnagar and is there still. The translation² of this farmān is :

GOD IS GREAT

Shāh Jahān the King, Defender of the Faith.

Copy of the auspicious order of His Majesty, Solomon-like in dignity, Sāhib Qirān the Second (or Lord of the Conjunction), which was recorded on the 7th of Isfandār-maz (February) Ilāhī, (or according to Akbar's calendar), at the request of the humblest of dependants who is known by the name of Zafar Khān, with reference to the removal of the wrongs done in the time of former Sūbadārs in beautiful Kashmīr, and were the cause of the misery of the subjects and inhabitants of these regions.

Since all our exalted desire is turned to the contentedness of the people, we gave the order for the repeal of some Acts

1. I'tiqād Khān Mirzā Shāhpūr was the son of I'timād-ud-Daula and the brother of Āsaf Khān and of Nūr Jahān. In the 17th year of Jahāngīr's reign, he was appointed to the governorship of Kashmīr. Habīb Chak and Ahmad Chak revolted and created trouble, but were forced to flee to Tibet. I'tiqād died at Āgra in 1060 A.H. (1650 A.C.).

2. Modified from the English translation by (1) Rev. I. Loewenthal, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta, 1865, Volume XXXIII, No. 3, 1864, pages 288-90, and by (2) Sir Jivanji Jamshedji Modi, Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, New Series, 1926 Volume II, pages 199-202.

which in the beautiful country of Kashmir became a cause of distress to the inhabitants of the land. Of the number of those matters one is that, at the time of collecting the saffron, men used to be impressed for this work without any wages except a little salt, and the people have suffered much distress. We ordered that no man should, by any means, be molested as to gathering the saffron. And as to saffron grown on crown lands, the labourers must be satisfied and receive proper wages. And whatever grows on lands granted in Jagir, let the whole saffron in kind be delivered to the Jagirdar that he may gather it as he likes. Another grievance is that in the time of some of the Subadars of Kashmir they used to levy two dam for wood (fuel) on each kharwar of rice, and during the government of I'tiqad Khan four dam for the same purpose were levied on each kharwar. Since on this account also the people were much distressed, we ruled that the people should be entirely relieved of this tax, and nothing should be taken on account of wood (fuel). Another grievance is that a village whose rental was more than 400 kharwar of shali, was obliged to furnish to the authorities of the place two sheep annually. I'tiqad Khan, during his rule, took 66 dam in place of each sheep. Since on this account also the people were much annoyed, we gave strict order that it should cease; neither should the sheep be taken nor money in their place; the people shall be held excused from paying this impost. Moreover, I'tiqad Khan, during his incumbency, levied a summary poll-tax of 75 dam on each boatman whether a young or an old man or a boy, whilst it was the established custom formerly to levy 60 dam on a young man, 12 on an old man, and 36 dam on a boy. We ordered that the former custom should be re-established, that the wrong done by I'tiqad Khan be redressed, and that people should not act in accordance with it. Another grievance is that the Subadars, in the fruit season, placed their own men in each garden, large and small, which appeared to contain good fruit, to watch the fruit for themselves and did not allow the owners of those gardens to use the fruit; hence much loss was caused to these people, so that some of these men have destroyed the fruit trees. We ordered that no Subadar should lay an embargo on the fruit of the orchard or garden of any one. It is proper that noble governors and competent collectors and the officials of this and future times in the province of Kashmir should consider these orders as lasting and eternal, nor should they admit any change or alteration in these regulations. Whoever admits any change or alterations, will fall under the curse of God, and the anger of the King.—Written on the 26th (March) Āzar Ilāhī, (or according to Akbar's calendar).

Ahsanullāh Khān planted several gardens to add to the beauty of the country. He also introduced varieties of new fruits and flowers in Kashmīr. He was a talented person and patronized Mīrzā Muhammad 'Alī Sā'ib of Isfahān, who afterwards became the poet-laureate of Irān whence he wrote to Zafar Khān—

تُوَر دستان را به احسان یاد کردن همت است

ورنه هر نخل پیاے خود ثمر می افکند and received a reward of five thousand rupees from him. Zafar, too, was grateful to Sā'ib for literary advice—

طرز یاران پیش احسن بعد ازین مقبول نیست

تازه گوئیهای او از فیض طبع صائب است

Zafar Khān has himself left behind a Masnavī called the Haft Manzil in praise of Kashmīr, which he presented to Shāh Jahān on his third visit at the picturesque waterfall of Ahrabal, Tahsīl Kulgām. In one place, in his Masnavī, Zafar Khān says :—

الهی تا بود کشمیر آباد ز گلزار خراسان مدد یاد

بهر کسی هر چه خواهد بے سخن ده مرا کشمیر و بلبل را چمن ده

[While Kashmīr lasts, O God !

Remind not me of the Garden

Of my Khurāsān.

To each man grant his wish—

To the nightingale the garden

And to me Kashmīr !]

Zafar Khān's two other Masnavīs are also known. One is Jahva-i-Nāz and the other is Maikhāna-i-Rāz. The reason why the Jahva-i-Nāz is so named is—

از آن نامشې نهام جلوه ناز که کرده دفتر حسن یتان باز

The Maikhāna-i-Rāz has—

به شش ماهه این تسخیر منظوم گشت به میخانه راز موسوم گشت

The Ahsan-ul-Hikāyāt, a collection of thirty-one anecdotes by Hāfiz Muhammad Rizā, was written in Kashmīr during Ahsan's régime. Zafar Khān's son, Muhammad Tāhir Āshnā, whose title was 'Ināyat Khān, held the office of the Dārūgha-i-Kutub-Khāna or Keeper of the Imperial Library. Āshnā was a poet and also wrote the Mulakhkhas, a history of the first thirty years of the reign of Shāh Jahān. It was Zafar Khān's patronage of poetry and learning that Abū Tālib Kalīm wrote in his Pādshāh-nāma— making a reference to Zafar Khān's expedition for the conquest of Tibet in 1046-47 A.H.=1636-37 A.C.

ظفرخان، ز فتح و ظفر شادمان به کشیر از مهکت شد روان

[Zafar Khan "Ahsan."]—Perhaps a short note on Zafar Khān is needed here. Khwāja Mirzā Ahsanullāh's takhallus was Ahsan. He was the son of Khwāja Abu'l Hasan Turbatī (i.e. of Turbat-i-Haidarī, a town south of Mashhad in Khurāsān, Irān). Khwāja Abu'l Hasan was at one time the Adviser of Prince Dāniyāl, and the Dīwān of the Deccan, and later Mīr Bakhshī, and had the title of Rukn-us-Saltanat. In the 19th year of Jahāngīr's reign, 1033 A.H. (1623 A.C.), Ahsanullāh was appointed Governor of Kābul, and received the title of Zafar Khān or the 'Lord of Victory' with the mansab of 1,500 which was subsequently raised to 2,500.

In the fifth year of Shāh Jahān's reign, 1041 A.H. (1631 A.C.), he was deputed to Kashmīr as the lieutenant of his father who was nominated to the governorship of Kashmīr. This position, according to the Bānkipur Catalogue (Vol. III, p. 117), Ahsanullāh held to the twenty-sixth year of Shāh Jahān's reign, after which he was transferred to Taṭṭah. But Zafar Khān was really the lieutenant of his father for one year, and twice governor of Kashmīr, first in 1042 A.H. (1632 A.C.), for seven years, and the second time in 1052 A.H. (1642 A.C.), for four years as supported by the Maāthir-ul-Umarā' of Shāh Nawāz Khān (pp. 757-59).

Ahsanullāh was dwarfish but very keen and quick-witted. His father was a staunch Sunnī, but he himself was a zealous Shī'a. Ahsanullāh married Buzurg Khānam and had a son, Mirzā Muhammad Tāhir Āshnā, who was given the title of 'Ināyat Khān', as noted above.

Ahsanullāh died in 1073 A.H. (1662 A.C.), at Lāhore, and was buried near the grave of his father in Mughulpura. 'Ināyat Khān died in 1081 A.H. (or 1670 A.C.) in Kashmīr. Mirzā Khurshīd was the brother of Ahsanullāh.]

Khwāja Khāwand Mahmūd of Bukhārā came to Kashmīr during Zafar Khān's régime, and gave impetus to the Naqshbandī tarīq when the poet Mashrabī wrote—

هست جاغ شادمانی ز آنکہ در کشمیریان
 قُطِبِ حق، پیرِ خلائق، مُرشدِ دوران رسید
 خواجہ والا گھر خاوندِ مجود، آنکہ فیض
 از وجودش ظاہر و باطن بہ مُشتاقان رسید

Ibrāhīm Khān who became afterwards known as 'Alī Mardān Khān was originally an Irānian. He is said to have come by a treasure at Qandahār, but not willing to surrender it to his master, the Shāh of Irān, sought Shāh Jahān's protection. 'Alī Mardān was just and generous. So lavishly did he spend his money that even Shāh Jahān was astonished. 'Alī Mardān was thus, no doubt, popularly credited with the possession of the philosophers' stone. As Lawrence¹ notes, it was believed that through this stone he was enabled to build splendid serāis on the Pīr Panjāl route to India. Pandit Mahādev was the secretary employed by 'Alī Mardān Khān during his second tenure of office. Pandit Mahādev also profited by his master's generosity considerably.

Besides planting gardens, 'Alī Mardān raised a number of serāis or inns, and also repaired the Hūrapōr road. Notwithstanding his tendency to a life of ease, he was generally solicitous of the welfare of the country. The Emperor, too, was no less keenly interested in the material advancement and well-being of the people of Kashmīr. And when a severe famine broke out in the days of Tarbiyat Khān, the Emperor appointed capable officers to organize relief measures. Tarbiyat Khān, being unable to cope with the task, he was removed. Corn was exported from Lāhore, Jullundur, Siālkōt, Kalānaur, and other districts of the Panjāb, to be distributed free among the sufferers. All the queens and princes voluntarily contributed towards the relief fund started for the purpose. During the régime of Iashkar Khān, the last governor under Shāh Jahān, the country, however, enjoyed such a spell of prosperity that a bag of shālī or unhusked rice could be had for a fowl.²

1. The Valley of Kashmīr, page 195.

2. The Tā'rikh-i-Khatāi, folio 192.

The Mughul Sarai at Thanna (in the Rajauri Tahsil, Riasi District) on the old Mughul route to Kashmir.

Tavernier was not, therefore, wrong when he said that Shāh Jahān "reigned not so much as a King over his subjects, but rather as a father over his family and children."

A galaxy of famous poets.

Both under Jahāngīr and Shāh Jahān, Kashmīr shone with a galaxy of famous poets like Kalīm,¹ Qudṣī,² Auḡī,³ Tughrā,⁴ Mir Ilahī,⁵ Nadīm,⁶ Fasīhī,⁷ Fahmī,⁸ and Khwāja Mūmin.⁹ Their verses are often quoted by lexicographers. Some of the poets were, of course, of Persian origin; but they loved Kashmīr more than their own native land, and there lived their lives. Zafar Khān,¹⁰ in the preface of his Dīvān, particularly mentions the names of Maulānā Haidar Muhammad, Muhammad Muqīm Jauhari, Qāzī Muhammad Qāsim better known as Qāzī-zādah as distinguished poets of his time in Kashmīr. The presence of so many men of culture and learning contributed to the intellectual attainments of this country in literature and belles lettres.

Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr

Unlike his predecessors, Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr visited Kashmīr only once. He became seriously ill in the summer of 1664 A.C., and came to Kashmīr in the following months to restore his health. Princess Raushan Ārā accompanied the Emperor. Bernier arrived in the Valley early in 1665 A.C. His Travels give a graphic account of this royal visit. The Emperor's experience of the journey was not, however, a happy one. The passage of the Chināb river was a scene of confusion. Again, in the Pīr Panjāl Pass, an elephant carrying the ladies stepped back and forced fifteen animals behind him over the precipice. Three or four women were killed. Some elephants rolled down to the bottom of a khad or ravine. A number of men were injured rather seriously. Jān Muhammad Qudṣī, the poet, was not wrong, therefore, when he said :

رہ پیچیدہ تر از موی زنگی بہ تندی چوں در تیغِ فرنگی

[The road is more tortuous than the curl of a blackmoor's hair; in sharpness it is like the sword of the Firangī.]

- | | | |
|----------------|---|----------------|
| 1. Of Hamadān. | 2. Of Mashhad. | 3. Of Kashmīr. |
| 4. Of Mashhad. | 5. Of Asadābād near Hamadān. | |
| 6. Of Kashmīr. | 7. Of Herāt. | 8. Of Kashmīr. |
| 9. Of Kashmīr. | 10. The Bānkīpur Catalogue , Vol. III, page 118. | |

‘Āqil Khān has, as it were, replied to it :

بے رنج مَحال است بہ فردوسی رسیدن

ہموارشی رہ گلشنِ کشمیر ندارد

Nawwāb Zafar Khān Ahsan says—

مرا اندیشہ راہیست جانکہ کہ آنجا خضری ہم گم کند راہ

بہم پیچیدہ میگردد چو مکتوب دریں رہ عمرِ خضر و صبرِ ایوب

The progress to Kashmīr of Aurangzīb ‘Ālamgīr did not obstruct* the necessary business of the state. Attended by all his officers, the decisions of each department were carried from the camp to every corner of the Empire. Expresses stood ready on horseback at every stage : and the imperial mandates were dispatched to the various provinces as soon as they were sealed in the Tent of Audience. The nobles, as was customary in the capital, attended daily the Presence : and appeals were discussed every morning as regularly as when the Emperor remained at Delhi. The petitioners followed the court ; and a small allowance from the public treasury was assigned to them as a compensation for their additional expense in attending the imperial camp. In this manner, Aurangzīb ‘Ālamgīr arrived in Kashmīr.

The beauty, the cool and salubrious air of the country induced ‘Ālamgīr to relax his mind for a short time from business. He wandered over the Valley after a variety of pleasure ; and soon recovered that vigour of constitution which his attention to public business as well as his late sickness had greatly impaired. Here Dr. Bernier (on Rs. 300 per month in the service of Dānish-mand Khān, the Emperor’s Foreign Minister) attended on ‘Ālamgīr and helped him in the restoration of his health. The summer Bernier visited Kashmīr, Fidāi Khān, grandmaster of the artillery, ‘Ālamgīr’s trusted foster-brother, was stationed as a guard below the pass at Bhimbar until the heat was over and the Emperor returned.

“ Aurangzīb, to whom business was amusement, added the most extensive knowledge of the affairs of the empire to an unremitting application," wrote Lieutenant-Colonel Alexander Dow* in 1772 A.C., 65 years after Aurangzib's death. "He made himself minutely acquainted with the revenue paid by every district, with the mode of proceeding in the inferior courts, and even with the character and disposition of several judges. He ordered the register of the rents to be left open for the inspection of all, that the people might distinguish extortion from the just demands of the Crown. He commanded that men versed in the usages of the several courts, in the precepts of the Coran, and in the regulations established by edict, should attend at the public expense, and give their opinion to the poor in matters of litigation. He established a mode of appeal beyond certain sums: and he disgraced judges for an error in judgment and punished them severely for corruption and partiality. His activity kept the great machine of Government in motion through all its members: his penetrating eye followed oppression to its most secret retreats and his stern justice established tranquillity, and secured property over all his extensive dominions."

*Lieut.-Colonel Alexander Dow’s History of Hindostan, London, 1772, Vol. III, pages 354-55.

The number of governors, appointed by Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr, was fourteen, of whom Ibrāhīm Khān held the appointment thrice, while Saif Khān was sent twice. It was in the time of Ibrāhīm Khān, the son of 'Alī Mardān Khān, that the poet Mirzā Dārāb Jūyā, born in Kashmīr, flourished. In Jūyā's Divān, the ghazals open with—

الہی رہ نما سوئے خود این مدھوشِ غافل را
ز درت جامہ زیب داغ چوں طاؤسِ گن دل را

In spite of pressure of work and personal attention devoted by the Emperor to all departments of the state, he was earnestly concerned in the welfare of this province.

'Ālamgīr's remark کشمیری ترین صوبہ نیست کہ مقرر کنیم

[There is no Kashmīrī in this province whom I may appoint] in the Ruqa'āt-i-'Ālamgīrī, page 95, must be a reason for pride to the Kashmīrī coming, as the remark does, from an exacting hard taskmaster of the high standard of 'Ālamgīr. Nothing escaped 'Ālamgīr's vigilant eye. And he did not hesitate to introduce effective measures to improve the condition of the people. Ibrāhīm Khān was twice removed from governorship for backing the Shī'as in sectaria feuds. Similarly, Muzaḥḥar Khān paid dearly for his imposition of heavy taxes. Hence it cannot be said the Mughul Sūbadārs had a free hand in Kashmīr. The subjects were treated mildly and justly, and the Sūbadārs were, with the rare exceptions of Muzaḥḥar Khān and Abū Nasr Khān vigorous advocates of justice. Saif Khān caused Khwājā Muhammad Sādiq Naqshbandī to be flogged to death for inflicting a like punishment on a Hindu official charged with defalcation in state accounts. Saif Khān was the brother-in-law of Shāh Jahān, their wives being sisters. He acted as governor twice. Qivām-ud-Dīn Khān is famous for his invention of the Takhtah Kulāh or Kulāh-i-Takhtah 'the Wooden Cap,' presumably on the analogy of the Fool's Cap, for criminals.

*Lt.-Colonel Alexander Dow's History of Hindostan, London, 1772, Vol. III, pages xxvi-vii.

I'timād Khān, Iftikhār Khān, Hifzullāh Khān, Islām Khān and Fāzil Khān, governors one after the other, acted in an impartial manner and did their best in personally dealing out justice, and in looking after the people. Saif Khān, in his second term of office, held the census of the Valley about 1670 A.C. According to Hasan, this census showed the population of Kashmīr to consist of 12,43,033 souls including 90,400 infantry and 4,812 cavalry. No authority is quoted and no details are forthcoming and no comment can, therefore, be offered. Possibly this census may have been on the lines of the census of the Mughul Empire of India during Akbar's reign in 989 A.H.=1581 A.C. The Mughul governors also tried to improve the general appearance of the country and its towns by laying out gardens, erecting mosques, building rest-houses populating villages. A jāgirdār of the time, Chaudhrī Mahēsh Pandit's garden is mentioned as a model of beauty and taste. These governors relieved the agriculturist class of the heavy taxes imposed by preceding governors. Fāzil Khān is associated with a well-known Madrasah. It was in his time that the Sacred Hair of the Prophet was brought to Kashmīr by Khwājā Nūr-ud-Dīn Ishbarī. Fāzil Khān recommended Kashmīrīs for mansabs and the Emperor approved of his recommendations. Khwājā 'Ināyatullāh was, perhaps, the first of the Kashmīrī Mansabdārs. He rose to the rank of 4,000 and was made Imperial Revenue Minister in 1717 in Farrukh Siyar's time.

Fire, famine, earthquake and flood, each occurring at intervals, inflicted on the people considerable hardships, including loss of property. In those days, it was difficult adequately to cope with these calamities in the nick of time. Nevertheless, steps were promptly taken to alleviate misery whenever it was possible to do so. After the Kāwdora¹ fire, Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr sent Ibrāhīm Khān with urgent and explicit orders to help the people re-build their houses and to furnish a report on the progress of the measures taken. It was only after the houses had been re-built, that an effort was made to re-construct the Jāmi' Masjid, which had also perished in the fire.

Sectarian fights between the Shī'as and Sunnīs were not uncommon in those days. As a matter of fact, it is a mistake to judge the happenings of those times from the present-day point of view. Europe itself was passing through the ordeal of the Reformation. Religious feelings were bitter everywhere. It was particularly so in Kashmīr where Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī's successful propagation of Shī'ite doctrines had proved fruitful. The minds of both Shī'as and Sunnīs were, therefore, in a state of frenzy. Moreover, as fresh converts the Shī'as must have been very zealous, at times, fanatical. The Chaks, who were Shī'as by faith, had lost their domination only recently. The aggrieved minds of the Shī'as looked upon this fact both as personal and religious grievance. It is, therefore, not surprising that riots and disturbances between the Shī'as and the Sunnīs were not unusual.

Regarding external affairs touching Kashmīr, there are several deserving notice. For instance, the Qalmuqs,² invaded Tibet Kalān (major). Daldal Namjal, the ruler of Tibet Kalān, himself being unable to defend the country, sought help from the Emperor of Delhi. Consequently, Fidāi Khān was ordered by Ibrāhīm Khān, the then governor, to drive out the Qalmuqs. This was successfully done. But, later, when the ruler of that country rebelled, he was chastised by Saif Khān. Subsequently, he embraced Islam,

1. Kāwdora is the name of a big mahalla or ward near the shrine of Makhdūm Sāhib in Srinagar.

2. Qalmuq, Qalmaq or Qalmiq is the Turkish name for a Mongol people. In the 16th century, under the name of Oriat (Confederation) they roamed about a vast region in Central Asia between the Altai and Tian-Shan, and the Desert of Gobi and Lake Balkhash and the Caspian.

For ferocity they are called قلمق بد مغلولق or Qalmuqs of evil creation. The Qalmuqs followed Buddhism in contrast to the Dungans—speaking Chinese, who adopted Islam.

and returned to Tibet where he built a grand mosque. Similarly, the rājā of Rajaurī became a convert to Islam after his defeat, when his kingdom was restored to him in the third tenure of Ibrāhīm Khān's governorship. The rājā of Jammu broke out into open revolt, and was reduced to submission by Hifzullāh Khān who had succeeded Ibrāhīm Khān in 1686 A. C.

'Abdullāh Khān, the ruler of Kāshghar, passed through Kashmīr about 1667-8 A.C., on his way for a pilgrimage to Mecca. According to one version, he had to hand over his kingdom involuntarily to his son Nawāzish Khān. 'Abdullāh Khān was received and entertained in a royal manner by Mubārīz Khān the governor, the successor of Saif Khān. And when, very much later, Arsalān Khān, 'Abdullāh Khān's nephew, came to Kashmīr for help against his own son, the matter was referred to 'Ālamgīr by Ibrāhīm Khān, the governor of Kashmīr during 1701 to 1706 A.C. On receipt of orders, Ibrāhīm Khān communicated the Emperor's wishes to the fugitive prince, asking him to seek help from the governor of Kābul. As a matter of fact, 'Ālamgīr had the intention of conquering Kāshghar, but he was dissuaded from entering upon the campaign. Kashmīr, this shows, was at that time a strong outpost of the Mughul Empire.

Lalla Rookh.

At the mention of 'Abdullāh Khān of Kāshghar, the reader may not resist the temptation of regaling himself with an intriguing reference to the celebrated poem of Thomas Moore known as Lalla Rookh (Lāla Rukh or Tulip Cheek), though the hero and the heroine and their parentage and marriage are all purely imaginary. Says Moore ;*

*Thomas Moore (May 1779 A.C.—February 1852) was an Irish poet and musician. In 1798 Moore graduated, and in the next year left for England to keep his terms at the Middle Temple. He was a social success in London. But his social successes involved him in expenses far beyond his means. His publishers advanced him money which relieved him of his debts. In 1814 Moore contracted with the firm of Longmans for 3,000 guineas to supply a metrical romance on an Eastern subject. Moore retired to a cottage in the neighbourhood of Donington Park, where with the help of Lord Moira's library he read himself slowly into familiarity with Eastern scenery and manners. According to Florence Parbury, (the author of The Emerald Set with Pearls, vide its Notes), "the particulars of the visit of the king of Bucharia to Aurangzib are found in Lt.-Col.

"In the eleventh year of the reign of Aurangzebe, Abdalla, King of Lesser Bucharía, a lineal descendant from Alexander Dow's History of Hindostan, London, 1803, Volume III, pages 418-19. I reproduce it below for the information of the reader :—

"An opportunity offered itself to his (Aurangzib's) magnificence and generosity in the beginning of the eleventh year of his reign. Abdalla, king of the Lesser Bucharía, lineally descended from the great Zingis, having abdicated the throne to his son Aliris, advanced into Tibet, in his way to Mecca. He sent a message to Aurangzebe, requesting a permission for himself and his retinue to pass through India. The emperor ordered the governor of Cashmire to receive the royal pilgrim with all imaginable pomp, and to supply him with every article of luxury and convenience at the public expense. The governors of districts were commanded to attend Abdalla from province to province, with all their followers. The troops, in every place through which he was to pass, were directed to pay him all military honours; and in this manner he advanced to Delhi and was received by the Emperor at the gates of the city. Having remained seven months in the capital, he was conducted with the same pomp and magnificence to Sûrat where he embarked for Arabia."

The Lalla Rookh was published in 1817. It was an immediate success. Moore's fame speedily became European. "No poem of the time was more translated into foreign languages." But the poets of Moore's own day, who knew and liked Moore, never cared for Lalla Rookh. Leigh Hunt condemned it as "too florid in its general style." Moore was an amatory poet and he made successes by writing about love.

The story of "the Feast of Roses at Cashmere" is "most lavishly decorated." "Lalla Rookh is a work of very secondary merit and retains its place in literature mainly as an example of an extinct taste," says Stephen Gwynn in Thomas Moore (English Men of Letters, 1905, page 90).

"Kashmír is a dream of loveliness" says Florence Parbury. "The marvel lies in that Moore should have described so clearly and accurately a land he never visited." (The Emerald Set with Pearls by Florence Parbury.—Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd., London.)

"No poem has ever had greater popularity than Lalla Rookh for it has been translated into all European and most Eastern languages, while Rubinstein, Schusmann, Felicia David, Sir Sterndale Bennette and many others have composed operas based upon parts of its romance."

"The greatest tribute to Moore's genius was the splendid entertainment given in the apartments of Frederick I, at the visit of the Grand Duke Nicholas in 1822. The different stories were represented in tableaux, vivants, songs and dances and all the characters were impersonated by members of the Royal House and Court."

At the close of the gorgeous pageant, the Empress of Russia who had herself played the part of "Lalla Rookh" exclaimed with a sigh: "Is it then all over? Is there no poet who will impart to others and to future times some notion of the happiness we have enjoyed this evening?"

Upon this Baron de la Motte Fouque promised to attempt it. It was from this grand fête that the translation of Lalla Rookh into German by Fouque originated. The French dancer, Jules Joseph Perrot, used Lalla Rookh, in 1846, in his shows in London, Paris and Milan.

the Great Zingis, having abdicated the throne in favour of his son, set out on a pilgrimage to the Shrine of the Prophet; and, passing into India through the delightful valley of Cashmere, rested for a short time at Delhi on his way. He was entertained by Aurungzebe in a style of magnificent hospitality, worthy alike of the visitor and the host, and was afterwards escorted with the same splendour to Surat, where he embarked for Arabia. During the stay of the Royal Pilgrim at Delhi, a marriage was agreed upon between the Prince, his son, and the youngest daughter of the Emperor, Lalla Rookh*—a Princess described by the

The Oxford Companion to English Literature* (compiled and edited by Sir Paul Harvey, Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1937, page 439) will accordingly be read with interest :—

We have written about Moore and the background of his Lalla Rookh. Now a word about Lalla Rookh the book itself.

Lalla Rookh, a series of oriental tales in verse, connected together by a story in prose, by Thomas Moore was published in 1817.

The prose-story relates the journey of Lalla Rookh, the daughter of the Emperor Aurungzebe, from Delhi to Cashmere, to be married to the young King of Bucharia. On the way, she and her train are diverted by four tales told by Feramorz, a young Cashmerian poet, with whom she falls in love, and who turns out, on her arrival at her destination, to be the king of Bucharia himself. An element of humour is introduced by the self-important chamberlain, Fadladeen. A series of accidents on the way has thrown him into a bad temper, which he vents in pungent criticisms on the young man's verses (in the style of the 'Edinburgh' reviewers), and he is correspondingly discomfited on discovering the latter's identity. The four tales are as follows :

The Veiled Prophet of Khorasan. The beautiful Zelica, half demented by the loss of Azim, her lover, supposed dead, is lured into the harem of Mokanna, a repulsive impostor who poses as a prophet, on the promise of admission to paradise. Azim, returning from the wars, finds Zelica wedded to Mokanna, and joins the army of the Caliph, on its way to punish the blasphemy of Mokanna. The latter is defeated, throws himself into a vat of corrosive poison, and dies. Zelica, seeking death, puts on his veils, and being mistaken for the prophet, is killed by Azim and dies in his arms.

Paradise and Peri.—A peri, one of 'those beautiful spirits of the air who live on perfumes,' offspring of fallen angels, is promised admission to paradise if she will bring to the gate the gift that is most dear to heaven. She brings first a drop of the blood of a youthful warrior who dies to free India from the tyrant Mahmood of Gazna, but it fails to open the gate. Then the expiring sigh of an Egyptian maiden who dies from grief at the loss of her plague-stricken lover; this is equally unavailing. Lastly, the repentant tear wrung from a criminal by his child's prayer to God, and this opens the gate.

The Fire-Worshippers, a tale of the Ghebers or Persians of the old religion, who maintained their resistance against the conquering Moslems. Hafed, a young Gheber, falls in love with Hinda, daughter of the Emir poets of her time as more beautiful than Leila, Shirine, Dewildé,* or any of those heroines whose names and loves embellish the songs of Persia and Hindostan. It was intended that the nuptials should be celebrated at Cashmere where the young king, as soon as the cares of the Empire would permit, was to meet, for the first time, his lovely bride, and, after a few months' repose in that enchanting valley, conduct her over the snowy hills into Bucharia.

"The date of Lalla Rookh's departure from Delhi was as splendid as sunshine and pageantry could make it. The bazaars and baths were all covered with the richest tapestry; hundreds of gilded barges upon the Jumna floated with their banners shining in the water; while through the streets groups of beautiful children went strewing the most delicious flowers around, as in that Persian festival called the Scattering of the Roses: till every part of the city was as fragrant as if a caravan of musk from Khoten had passed through it. The Princess, having taken leave of her kind father, who, at parting, hung a cornelian of Yemen round her neck, on which was ascribed a verse from the Koran, and having sent a considerable present to the Fakirs, who kept up the Perpetual Lamp in her sister's tomb, meekly ascended the palankeen prepared for her: and, while Aurangzebe stood to take a last look from his balcony, the procession moved slowly on the road to Lahore.

"Seldom had the Eastern world seen a cavalcade so superb. From the gardens in the suburbs to the Imperial Palace, it was one unbroken line of splendour. The gallant appearance of the Rajahs and Mogul Lords distinguished by those insignia of the Emperor's favour, the feathers of the egret of Cashmere in their turbans, and the small silver-rimmed kettle-drums at the bows of their saddles; the costly armour of their cavaliers, who vied, on this occasion, Al Hassan, who has been sent from Arabia to quell this resistance. Hafed scales the rocks on which her bower stands, and wins her love. Presently Hinda is captured by the Ghebers and discovers that her lover is their chief. The Ghebers are betrayed to Al Hassan, and Hafed throws himself on a funeral pyre. Hinda leaps from the boat on which she is being carried back to her father and is drowned.

The Light of the Harem, a story of Nourmahal, the beloved wife of Selim, son of the Great Akbar. The Feast of Roses is being celebrated in the Vale of Cashmere, but Nourmahal has quarrelled with her husband. Namouna, the enchantress, teaches her magic song, which Nourmahal sings, masked at Selim's banquet, and thus wins back his love.

*Dewal Devi.

with the guards of the great Keder Khān,* in the brightness of their silver battle-axes and the massiness of their maces of gold;—the glittering of the gilt pine-apples (a large golden knob) on the tops of the palankeens;—the embroidered trappings of the elephants bearing on their backs small turrets, in the shape of little antique temples, within which the Ladies of Lalla Rookh lay as it were enshrined: the rose coloured veils of the Princess's own sumptuous litter, at the front of which a fair young female slave sat fanning her through the curtains, with feathers of the Argus pheasant's wing;—and the lovely troops of Tartarian and Cashmerian maids of honour, whom the young King had sent to accompany his bride, and who rode on each side of the litter, upon small Arabian horses:—all was brilliant, tasteful, and magnificent, and pleased even the critical and fastidious Fadladeen (Fazl-ud-Dīn) Great Nāzir or Chamberlain of the Haram, who was borne in his palankeen immediately after the Princess.

“During the first days of their journey, Lalla Rookh, who had passed all her life within the shadow of the Royal Gardens of Delhi, found enough in the beauty of the scenery through which they passed to interest her mind, and delight her imagination; and when at evening or in the heat of the day, they turned off from the high road to those retired and romantic places which had been selected for her encampments,—sometimes on the banks of a small rivulet, as clear as the waters of the Lake of Pearl; sometimes under the sacred shade of a Banyan tree, from which the view opened upon a glade covered with antelopes; and often in those hidden embowered spots, described by one from the Isles of the West, as “places of melancholy, delight, and safety, where all the company around was wild peacocks and turtle-doves”;—she felt a charm in these scenes, so lovely and so new to her, which for a time, made her indifferent to every other amusement. But Lalla Rookh was young, and the young love variety; nor could the conversation of her Ladies and the Great Chamberlain, Fadladeen (the only person, of course, admitted to her pavilion), sufficiently enliven those many vacant hours, which were devoted neither to the pillow nor the palankeen. There was a little Persian slave who sung sweetly to the Vina, and who, now and then, lulled the Princess to sleep with the ancient ditties of her country, about the loves of Wamak and Ezra, the fair-haired Zal and his mistress Rodahver; not forgetting the combat of Rustam with the terrible white demon. At other times she was amused by those graceful dancing girls of Delhi, who had been permitted by the Brahmins of the Great Pagoda to attend her.....

*Khāqān of Turkistān at the end of the eleventh century.

“It was recollected that, among the attendants sent by the bridegroom, was a young poet of Cashmere, much celebrated throughout the valley for his manner of reciting the Stories of the East, on whom his Royal Master had conferred the privilege of being admitted to the pavilion of the Princess, that he might help to beguile the tediousness of the journey by some of his most agreeable recitals . . .

“For the purpose of relieving the pauses of recitation by music, the young Cashmerian held in his hand a kitar*—such as, in old times the Arab maids of the West used to listen to by moonlight in the gardens of the Alhambra—and having premised, with much humility, that the story he was about to relate was founded on the adventures of that Veiled Prophet of Khorasan, who in the year of the Hegira 163, created such alarm throughout the Eastern Empire

“They had now arrived at the splendid city of Lahore, whose mausoleums and shrines, magnificent and numberless, where Death seemed to share equal honours with Heaven would have powerfully affected the heart and imagination of Lalla Rookh, if feelings more of this earth had not taken entire possession of her already. She was here met by messengers, dispatched from Cashmere, who informed her that the king had arrived in the Valley, and was himself superintending the sumptuous preparations that were then making in the Saloons of the Shalimar for her reception

“They were now reposing for a time in the rich valley of Hussun Abdaul, which had always been a favourite resting-place of the Emperors in their annual migrations to Cashmere. Here often had the Light of the Faith, Jehan-Guire, been known to wander with his beloved and beautiful Nourmahal.

“About two miles from Hussun Abdaul were those Royal Gardens which had grown beautiful under the care of

*From the Arabian قيتار meaning a guitar or lyre or harp.

so many lovely eyes, and were beautiful still, though those eyes could see them no longer. This place, with its flowers and its holy silence, interrupted only by the dipping of the wings of birds in its marble basins filled with the pure water of those hills, was to Lalla Rookh all her heart could fancy of fragrance, coolness, and almost heavenly tranquillity...

“Who has not heard of the Vale of Cashmere,
 With its roses the brightest that earth ever gave.
 Its temples and grottos, and fountains as clear
 As the love-lighted eyes that hang over their wave?
 Oh! to see it at sunset,—when warm over the lake
 Its splendour at parting a summer eve throws,
 Like a bride, full of blushes, when lingering to take
 A last look of her mirror at night ere she goes!—
 When the shrines through the foliage are gleaming half shown,

And each hallows the hour by some rites of its own.
 Here the music of prayer from a minaret swells.
 Here the Magian his urn, full of perfume, is swinging,
 And here at the altar, a zone of sweet bells
 Round the waist of some Indian dancer is ringing.
 Or, to see it by moonlight,—when mellowly shines
 The light over its palaces, gardens and shrines;
 When the waterfall gleams, like a quick fall of stars,
 And the nightingale's hymn from the Isle of Chenars
 Is broken by laughs and light echoes of feet
 From the cool, shining walks where the young people meet—

Or at morn, when the magic of daylight awakes
 A new wonder each minute, as slowly it breaks,
 Hills, cupolas, fountains, call'd forth every one
 Out of darkness, as if but just born of the Sun.
 When the spirit of Fragrance is up with the day,
 From his Haram of night-flowers stealing away;
 And the wind, full of wantonness, woos like a lover
 The young aspen-trees, till they tremble all over.
 When the East is as warm as the light of first hopes,
 And day with his banner of radiance unfurled
 Shines in through the mountainous portal that opes,
 Sublime from the valley of bliss to the world!

"But never yet, by night or day,
 In dew of spring or summer's ray,
 Did the sweet Valley shine so gay,
 As now it shines—all love and light,
 Visions by day and feasts by night!
 A happier smile illumines each brow,
 With quicker spread each heart uncloses.
 And all is ecstasy,—for now
 The Valley hold its Feast of Roses;
 The joyous time, when pleasures pour
 Profusely round and, in their shower,
 Hearts open like the season's rose,—
 The flow'ret of a hundred leaves,
 (Gul-i-Sad Barg or the rose of a hundred leaves)
 Expanding while the dew-fall flows,
 And every leaf its balm receives.

'Twas when the hour of evening came Upon the Lake, serene and cool,
 When day had hid his sultry flame
 Behind the palms of Baramoule,
 When maids began to lift their heads,
 Refreshed from their embroidered beds,
 Where they had slept the sun away,
 And waked to moonlight and to play.—

"Of the happiness of the King and Queen of Bucharia, after such a beginning, there can be but little doubt."

Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr did not remain in Hindustān during the second half of his reign. The Deccan engaged his attention. And there he passed away in 1707 A.C., after a long reign extending over a period of fifty years. The emperor's whole stay in Kashmīr was for three months only.

Mullā Tāhir Ghanī, the great poet of Kashmīr, died during the reign of Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr. The ancestors of the late Sir Muhammad Iqbāl, who were Kashmīrī Brāhmans of the Saprū caste, embraced Islam in this reign.

Nawāzish Khān Rūmī, the governor-elect, was on his way to Kashmīr when he received the news of 'Ālamgīr's death. After a year, Ja'far Khān succeeded Nawāzish Khān Rūmī. Ja'far Khān proved to be a tyrant and a drunkard. He died of hard drinking after having been governor for one year and three months. Governors and high officials on assumption of office in Kashmir were welcomed by hereditary singers by grand receptions held in honour of such occasions. This was stopped by 'Ālamgīr. During Ja'far Khān's governorship, Qāzī Haidar, surnamed "Qāzī Khān," a Kashmirī by birth, who held the important office of the Qāzī-'l-Quzāt or Chief Justice under 'Ālamgīr, passed away. The Qāzī's remains were interred in his own garden in the village of Bachhapōr in the Phāk pargana, on the Dal.

The death of 'Ālamgīr was followed by a short and sharp contest for the throne which ended in the death of two of his sons and three of his grandsons in the field. His eldest surviving son Mu'azzam Shāh 'Ālam was at Jamrūd, near Peshāwar, when on 22nd March, 1707, he heard of his father's death and set out for Āgra, crowning himself as Bahādur Shāh at the bridge of Shāh Daula, 24 miles north of Lāhore. Meantime A'zam Shāh after hastening to his father's camp at Ahmadnagar had ascended the throne on 14th March. But, in their fights, A'zam lost the day and lost his life in June. Kām Bakhsh who had crowned himself at Bijāpur was disposed of some four miles outside Hydarābād, Deccan, on January 13, 1709. Bahādur Shāh then reigned till February 1712 and died on the 27th of that month.

Later Mughuls

At the time of Bahādur Shāh's death all his four sons Jahāndār Shāh, 'Azīm-ush-Shān, Rafī'-ush-Shān and Jahān Shāh were with him at Lāhore. The brothers fought. Ultimately Jahāndār Shāh was victorious. But he gave himself up to pleasure. And in January 1713, therefore, Farrukh Siyar, the son of 'Azīm-ush-Shān, enthroned himself and ruled till 1719, when the Sayyid Brothers 'Abdullāh and Husain 'Alī intrigued. They strangled Farrukh Siyar in April 1719. Rafī'-ud-Darajāt, a youth of twenty, was set upon the throne, but was a consumptive and therefore was made to give room to his elder brother, Rafī'-ud-Daula, on 4th June, 1719. He lived within the fort almost a prisoner of the Sayyid Brothers when Raushan Akhtar, the son of Jahān Shāh (the fourth son of Bahādur Shāh), was crowned under the title of Nasīr-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh on 28th September, 1719.

During Muhammad Shāh's time the Sayyid Brothers set up Prince Muhammad Ibrāhīm, a brother of Rafī'-ud-

Darajāt and Rafi'-ud-Daula on 14th October, 1720. A coin was actually struck in Ibrāhīm's name. But he was arrested and carried before Muhammad Shāh who received him royally, and kept him under watch and ward. Nādir Shāh, then, appeared on the scene. His invasion of India naturally weakened Mughul authority. And Delhi experienced a terrible massacre. But Ahmad Shāh Durrānī's invasion was repelled near Manupur, 10 miles north-west of Sarhind, by Prince Ahmad Shāh, the son of Muhammad Shāh, in 1748.

On the death by dropsy of Muhammad Shāh, Prince Ahmad ascended the throne of Delhi on 29th April, 1748, as Mujāhid-ud-Dīn Ahmad Shāh Bahādur. In 1751 Ahmad Shāh Durrānī demanded and obtained the cession of the Punjāb and Multān from Ahmad Shāh the Mughul ruler of Delhi. The acquisition of the Punjāb enabled the Durrānī to take Kashmīr in 1752 in the course of his third invasion of India.

The governors under Shāh 'Ālam, Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr's son, had begun to send representatives in their place to rule the country. The practice acquired considerable vogue in later years. Amānat Khān and Musharraḥ Khān were both representatives of Khwāja 'Ināyatullāh who had been appointed to succeed Nawāzish Khān Rūmī. Other than this, there is very little of importance to chronicle in the brief reign of Shāh 'Ālam (Bahādur Shāh I) which terminated in 1712 A.C.

The only notable incident which took place in Kashmīr at this time was the revolt of Rājā Muzaffar Khān Bamba in 1124 A.H. (1713 A.C.), and his taking possession of Darāva* and Karnāva (modern Karnāh) both fiefs of the Sūbadār of Kashmīr. 'Ināyatullāh Khān, the governor, was unable to reduce him to subjection owing to the death of the Emperor Jahāndār Shāh in 1124 A.H. This task was, however, performed by 'Alī Muhammad Khān in the reign of the next ruler, Farrukh Siyar. The same Sūbadār also punished Abu'l Fath, the zamīndār of Pūnch. But 'Alī

*The Ta'rikh-i-Hasan, folios 258-59; Ta'rikh-i-Khalīl Marjānpūrī folio 234. Darāva is the name of a pargana which formed part of the possessions of the rājās of Karnāo, and until the time of Sher Ahmad, the last of the line, the inhabitants seem to have held their lands rent-free on conditions of feudal service. Darāva lies in the valley of the Kishangangā river, a tributary of the Jhelum.

Karnāv or Karnāh is now a tahsīl in the Muzaffarābād district, lying north-west of Kashmīr to the south side of the Kishangangā river.

Muhammad Khān did not prove to be a good governor. He was recalled for levying unjust taxes.

Farrukh Siyar's mother, Sāhiba Niswān, was a Kashmīrian lady. Her brother Khwāja 'Ināyatullāh had the title of Shāista Khān.¹ When Farrukh Siyar's marriage to the daughter of Ajīt Singh of Jodhpur took place in 1715 A.C., Shāista Khān was sent to bring the bride from her home at Jodhpur to Delhi. 'Ināyatullāh rose to the rank of 4,000 and was made Imperial Revenue Minister in April, 1717. "He tried to purge the administration of the abuses that had recently crept into it and to restore the regulations and discipline of Aurangzib's time."² This raised him a host of enemies.

Muhammad Murād Kashmīrī.

Muhammad Murād Kashmīrī rose to the status of Haft-hazārī and ten thousand sowārs, with the title of Rukn-ud-Daula I'tiqād Khān Bahādur Farrukh Shāhī, and had the sarkār of Morādābād as his sūba re-named Rukn-ābād. Muhammad Murād entered employment under Mīr Malik Husain Khān Jahān Kokaltāsh the foster-brother of Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr. Later, he was attached to the camp of Shāh 'Ālam I. It was in the time of Jahāndār Shāh in 1713 A.C. that his rise began and reached its climax in that of Farrukh Siyar. Murād was second Mīr Tūzuk or Marshal of the Empire of Delhi. The emperor said one day to the great nobles in darbār : "You have heard, have you not, I'tiqād Khān is related to my exalted mother." Murād became an enemy to the intrigues of the Sayyid Brothers in his loyalty to Farrukh Siyar, and was imprisoned in Sayyid Husain 'Alī's house. On the 12th of Ramazān 1139 A.H. (2nd May, 1717 A.C.), Murād died in Delhi at the age of seventy-two.³

Immigration of the Nehrūs.

In Farrukh Siyar's time, Pandit Rāj Kaul, a scholar of Sanskrit and Persian, attracted the notice of the emperor during the royal visit to Kashmir. At the emperor's instance the family of Rāj Kaul migrated to Delhi about 1716,⁴ and

1. William Irvine's Later Moghals, Sir Jadu Nāth Sarkār's edition, Vol. I, page 144 and page 304.

2. The Cambridge History of India, Vol. IV, page 337.

3. William Irvine's Later Moghals, edited by Sir Jadu Nāth Sarkār, Volume I, page 342.

4. Jawaharlal Nehru—An Autobiography, John Lane, the Bodley Head, London, Reprinted January, 1941, page 1.

later came to be known as the Nehrū family of Allāhābād and produced Pandit Motī Lāl Nehrū and his son Pandit Jawāhar Lāl Nehrū.

Muhammad Shāh.

Nasīr-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh ascended the throne of Delhi in 1719 A.C. A youth of 17, Muhammad Shāh was extremely handsome, large of limb and strong. But his sedentary life of inactivity and sexual excess soon impaired his constitution, and he became a confirmed invalid by the time he was only 40. The evil was aggravated by his taking opium, and this drug habit made him weak and emaciated till at last it became impossible for him to move from his palace. As the fires of youthful passions burnt themselves out in Muhammad Shāh, says Sir Jadu Nāth Sarkār,* a deep melancholy settled on him, and towards the end of his life he loved to frequent the society of faqīrs and to hold long converse with them, discussing spiritual questions like an initiate. Though he neglected his public duties, "he was free from insolent pride, caprice and love of wanton cruelty. Nor did he lack consideration for others." He showed courage "when instead of fleeing to Bengāl as advised by his friends, he voluntarily went into Nādir Shāh's captivity in order to save his people and capital from the horrors of violent assault and forcible subjugation to incensed victors."

It cannot be denied that the emperor's personal character up to now had largely accounted for good administration in distant provinces. But Muhammad Shāh and his nobles abandoned themselves to a life of ease and pleasure. Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr had left a completely settled empire at his death, says Colonel Alexander Dow. Its disintegration commenced in the reign of Muhammad Shāh (1719-1748 A.C.) who is said to have once thrown an urgent report of an important conspiracy into a barrel of wine as 'useless bother—

ایں دفتر بے معنی غرقِ مے نابِ اولیٰ

Muhammad Shāh did not recover from the effects of his orgy till two days after.

Muhammad Shāh, however, "never gave his consent to shedding blood or doing harm to God's creatures. In his reign the people passed their lives in ease, and the empire outwardly retained its dignity and prestige. The foundation of the Delhi monarchy were really rotten, but Muhammad Shāh by his cleverness kept them standing. He may be called the last of the rulers of Bābur's line, as after him the kingship had nothing but the name left to it." (Siyar-ul-Muta'akhkirīn, 111, 25). Muhammad Shāh died in 1748, having been on the throne for 29 years.

The Modern Review* of Calcutta, December, 1931, page 611.

In Muhammad Shāh's reign, the history of Kashmir presents little else but a record of local riots and internecine struggles. Under him Kashmir entered upon a new phase of political life in that the Sūbadārs completely abstained from ruling their provinces in person as already mentioned and deputed trusted agents answerable to them for good conduct and administration.

Mīr 'Ināyatullāh Khān Kashmīrī.

Muhammad Shāh invested Mīr 'Ināyatullāh Khān with the governorship of Kashmir. 'Ināyatullāh Khān was Kashmīrī by birth, and was descended from Qāzī Mūsā Shāhid who was killed in Ya'qūb Shāh Chak's days. 'Ināyatullāh was originally Mīr 'Ināyatullāh, and later became known as Mīr 'Ināyatullāh Khān. He had six sons of whom the more notable were : (i) the elder Hidāyatullāh known first as Vazārat Khān, then as Sa'dullāh Khān Mīr-i-Sāmā and (ii) the younger son was 'Ati'atullāh Khān who was given as title his father's name 'Ināyatullāh Khān. Mīr 'Ināyatullāh is known in Kashmir as Yanna Sōr as he built the wall or sōr of Hazrat Makhdūm's mausoleum, Yanna being nicknamed from 'Ināyatullāh. His mother, Hāfiz Maryam, taught the ladies of the royal seraglio in the days of Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr, notably Zīb-un-Nisā. Hāfiz Maryam's mother Jān Begam, the daughter of Mullā Shar' Mīr 'Adl, taught the princesses in Shāh Jahān's time. Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr had such great confidence in 'Ināyatullāh's ability that he made him Vazīr-i-A'zam when Nawwāb 'Umdatul Mulk Madār-ul-Mahāmm Ja'far Khān the Prime Minister of the realm, was ill. 'Ināyatullāh compiled the Ahkām-i-'Ālamgīrī. All signed royal commands were collected and edited by him under the title of Kalimāt-i-Tayyibāt. 'Ālamgīr had a high opinion of 'Ināyatullāh's literary attainments and was impressed by his diction, style and mode of calligraphy. 'Ināyatullāh was handsome, good-natured, grave, and scrupulously honest. He was simple in his habits and loved to mix with fuqarā' or friars,

'Ināyatullāh¹ himself' seems to have been a conscientious man and selected his Nā'ibs or deputies with a view to proper government of the country.² His Nā'ib, Mīr Ahmad Khān, made honourable amends for the excesses of his predecessors by his good and equitable administration. But trouble arose from a strange quarter.

Mullā 'Abdun Nabī Muhtavī Khān or Mahbūb Khān, who was given the title of Dīndār Khān by his followers, had risen on account of his learning to the post of Shaikh-ul-Islam of Kashmīr in the time of Shāh 'Ālam Bahādur. 'Muhtavī or Mahbūb Khān Mullā 'Abdun Nabī' is mentioned in the Maāthir-ul-Umarā (Vol. III, page 761) as one of the learned men of the time and as selfish in obtaining his object under the cloak of advancing the cause of Islam. The Mullā was also a big landlord. A case of corruption by Pandit revenue clerks demanding gratification from the agents of Mullā Muhtavī brought forth from him summary orders of ostracism for the corrupt clerical caste. Pandit Majlis Rāi, Sarraf-i-Pādshāhī or the Royal Cashier, reported these restrictions to Shāhpūr Khān, Mīr Bakhshī of Kashmīr. The Mīr Bakhshī was a Shi'a. It appears that disputes developed. And Pandits and Shi'as joined hands to oppose the Shaikh-ul-Islam. Riots ensued. Mullā Muhtavī Khān was murdered by a faction of the Shi'as. His two younger sons were also put to death.³

Mullā Sharaf-ul-Dīn, 'Abdun Nabī's son, stepped into the shoes of his father, and kept up trouble. Mīr Ahmad Khān, the Nā'ib of the Sūbadār Mīr 'Ināyatullāh Khān, could not control the situation and was consequently replaced. The second Nā'ib, 'Abdullāh Khān, also failed, and was replaced by Mūmin Khān Najm-i-Sānī, the third Nā'ib, who likewise failed in restraining the Shaikh-ul-Islam. Insurrections were still prevalent. 'Ināyatullāh resigned his post as Sūbadār. The Mughul Viceroy of Lāhore, 'Abdus Samad Khān Ahrārī Saif-ud-Daula Bahādur Dalīr Jang who defeated Bandā Bairāgī, and was the father of Zakariyā Khān the governor of Lāhore during 1720-26, was appointed to fill it in 1720 A.C. 'Abdus Samad Ahrārī had 'Abdullāh Khān Deh-bīdī (originally from Deh-bīd, a village almost midway between Shīrāz and Isfahān, Īrān) as his Nā'ib.

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Khalīl, folio 254, also Ta'rikh-i-Hasan folio 265.

2. Lieutenant Newall, J.A.S.B., No. 5, 1854, page 442.

3. The Muntakhab-ul-Lubāb of Khāfī Khān, Calcutta, 1874, Part II, page 870.

Saif-ud-Daula proceeded from Lāhore with a large army. He took summary action against Mullā Sharaf-ud-Dīn, Shaikh-ul-Islām (the son and successor of Muhtav Khān) who had become the leader of the insurrection after his father. Saif-ud-Daula put the Mullā to death and hanged fifty insurgents. He also removed the restrictions imposed by the former Shaikh-ul-Islām, Mullā Muhtav Khān, against the Pandits who had been forbidden, for time, to use the turban, to ride, to wear the tilak or the vermilion mark on the forehead—somewhat paralleling the stricter and much more humiliating restrictions imposed on the Jāts and Lohānas of Brāhmanābād, the then capital of Lower Sind, by the Brāhman ruler Chack or Jajji (History of India as told by its own Historians—Ellist and Dowson, Vol. I, page 151). This action was so much esteemed by the Pandits that one of them sang of Saif-ud-Daula ‘Abdus Samad in Kashmīrī :—

“ Haqqa ! āv Samad phutrān zīn,

“ Na rūd kunih Sharaf, na rūd kunih Dīn.”

[Verily Samad came swiftly, and Sharaf-ud-Dīn was nowhere. Literally, “Sharaf-ud-Dīn came breaking the saddle, and there remained neither Sharaf (His Highness) nor Dīn (i.e., nor his zeal for his faith) anywhere.”]*

In 1724 A.C.=1137 A.H. ‘Ināyatullāh was re-appointed governor of Kashmīr, third time but died after a few months at Delhi. Aqīdat Khān, the next governor-elect, appointed Mīr Fīrūz-ud-Dīn Nawwāb Abu’l Barakāt Khān Fīrūz Jang Sūfi, to give him his full subsequent title, his Nā’ib but he proved a failure. Āghur Khān succeeded ‘Aqīdat Khān in 1727 A.C. Āghur came himself to Kashmīr, but began to oppress the people, and sent Abu’l Barakāt, who opposed him, as a prisoner to Delhi. The people became so incensed against Āghur for his oppression that they finally chased him out. He escaped to Bārāmūla where he received orders of his dismissal. Dil Dilīr Khān Pānīpatī, Fakhr-ud-Daula Bahādur, and ‘Atīatullāh known as ‘Ināyatullāh Khān the second, the younger son of the first Mīr ‘Ināyatullāh Khān Kashmīrī, succeeded one after the other.

Abu’l Barakāt, who had been removed from the office of the Nā’ib, appeared, on release from Delhi, as the champion of popular cause in times of fires, floods, earthquakes and windstorms and helped them. He rose against the governor, ‘Ināyatullāh the second, conspired with the leading landlords of Pūnch, Muhammad Zamān and Walī Muhammad, and had the governor killed on 16th Shawwāl, 1154 A.H.=1741 A.C., at the hands of Pandit Dayā Rām, their accomplice. The Mughul Nā'ibs or deputies fought either with the neighbouring chiefs and nobles, or with their own master, as was the case of Abu'l Barakāt when he was the Nā'ib himself.

The Kashmīrī Pandit* by Pandit Anand Kaul Bāmizai, page 50.

Beginning of the transfer from Mughul to Afghān rule.

Nādir Shāh's presence in Afghānistān and his subsequent invasion of Hindustān exerted an unfavourable influence on all provinces, particularly Kashmīr, which was not far away from Afghānistān, the home of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, Kābul and Qandahār being included in the Sūbah of Kashmīr under Akbar as already noted before. When Nādir Shāh placed the crown of Hindustān on the head of Muhammad Shāh, the Emperor bowed and offered the provinces of his empire west of the river Indus from Kashmīr to Sind. Kashmīr proper, however, does not appear to have been annexed by Nādir Shāh. But the Ta'rikh-i-Kashmīr by Mullā Khalīl Marjānpūrī and the Ta'rikh-i-Hasan by Pīr Hasan Shāh assert that Fakhr-ud-Daula obtained order of appointment as Sūbadār of Kashmīr in 1152 A.H.=1739 A.C. from Nādir Shāh, and ruled for forty days in Nādir's name and gave currency to Nādir's coin as well. Subsequently, however, Fakhr-ud-Daula, probably on revised orders from Delhi, accepted 'Ināyatullāh Khān the second as the Sūbadār of Muhammad Shāh and left Srīnagar.

Circumstances then combined further to unsettle authority, and caused anarchy to become rampant in Kashmīr. The situation did not improve under Ahmad Shāh who succeeded Muhammad Shāh on the throne of Delhi in 1748 A.C., a year after Nādir Shāh's death.

Such was the condition of Kashmīr when, in 1747 A.C., some of the nobles wrote to Ahmad Shah Durrānī, who had taken the place of Nādir Shāh, to annex Kashmīr. When this letter fell into the hands of Afrāsiyāb, the Mughul pro-consul, these nobles broke out into open revolt, and asked Ahmad Shāh, the Mughul emperor of India, to appoint a governor. Consequently, Mīr Muqīm Kanṭh was appointed as such, as a temporary measure, but he was soon driven out by Abu'l Qāsim, the son of Abu'l Barakāt.* In 1752 A.C., when Ahmad Shāh Durrānī was at Lāhore preparing for an invasion of Hindustān, Mīr Muqīm and Khwāja Zahi Didamarī of Kashmīr craved his assistance. Thereupon Ahmad Shāh Durrānī dispatched ‘Abdullāh Khān Ishāl Aqāsī with a considerable force. After some ineffectual negotiations, Abu’l Qāsim, the Mughul Nāzim, fought the Afghāns at Gund-Nīmat (near Shupiyān) for fifteen days. His commander-in-chief, Gul Khān Khaibari, deserted him, whereupon Abu’l Qāsim, the last Mughul governor of Kashmīr, fled and was taken prisoner. The Valley of Kashmīr passed on to the Afghāns.

*The Ta'rikh-i-Hasan, folio 287.

Summary of the benefits of Mughul Rule.

Before we turn to the Afghāns, we must sum up comments on the Mughuls. The Mughuls were generally solicitous for the welfare of the country and its people. The visits of emperors to the Valley stimulated its trade and encouraged its industries. The Mughul empire, suggests Mr. W. C. Smith,¹ was allied to the middle class, and during its most flourishing period it had middle class commerce as a secondary and very important basis of income, its primary basis being land. It appears that copper mines were worked during Jahāngīr’s time in Kashmīr, and the Emperor made a grant of these mines to a private individual to be worked.² Jahāngīr is, perhaps, the pioneer in opening up, as it were, the tourist trade of the Valley. During the entire period of one hundred and sixty-six years in which Kashmīr was under the Mughuls, there are, out of 63 governors, only six instances of high-handed treatment of the Kashmīrīs. According to Colonel Alexander Dow,³ an Orientalist, and a civil servant under the East India Company in 1772 A.C., whom we quoted before, “the uncommon abilities of most of the Princes with the mild and humane character of all rendered Hindustan the most flourishing Empire in the world during two complete centuries.” Sir Jadu Nāth Sarkār mentions⁴ the following six gifts of the Mughul Empire to India: (1) the uniform administrative type throughout the Sūbas; (2) one official language; (3) one uniform system of coinage; (4) an all-India cadre of higher public services, the officers being transferred from province to province every three or four years; (5) the frequent march of large armies from province to province, and (6) deputation of inspecting

1. Islamic Culture, Hyderabad, October, 1944, page 362.

2. G. T. Vigne’s Travels, Vol. I, page 337.

3. History of Hindostan, Vol. III, page 23.

4. The Modern Review of Calcutta, December, 1931, page 611.

officers from the central capital. To these may be added the fact that the patronage of, and interest in, art shown by Mughul rulers in India is unparalleled in any cultural history of humanity in the world.

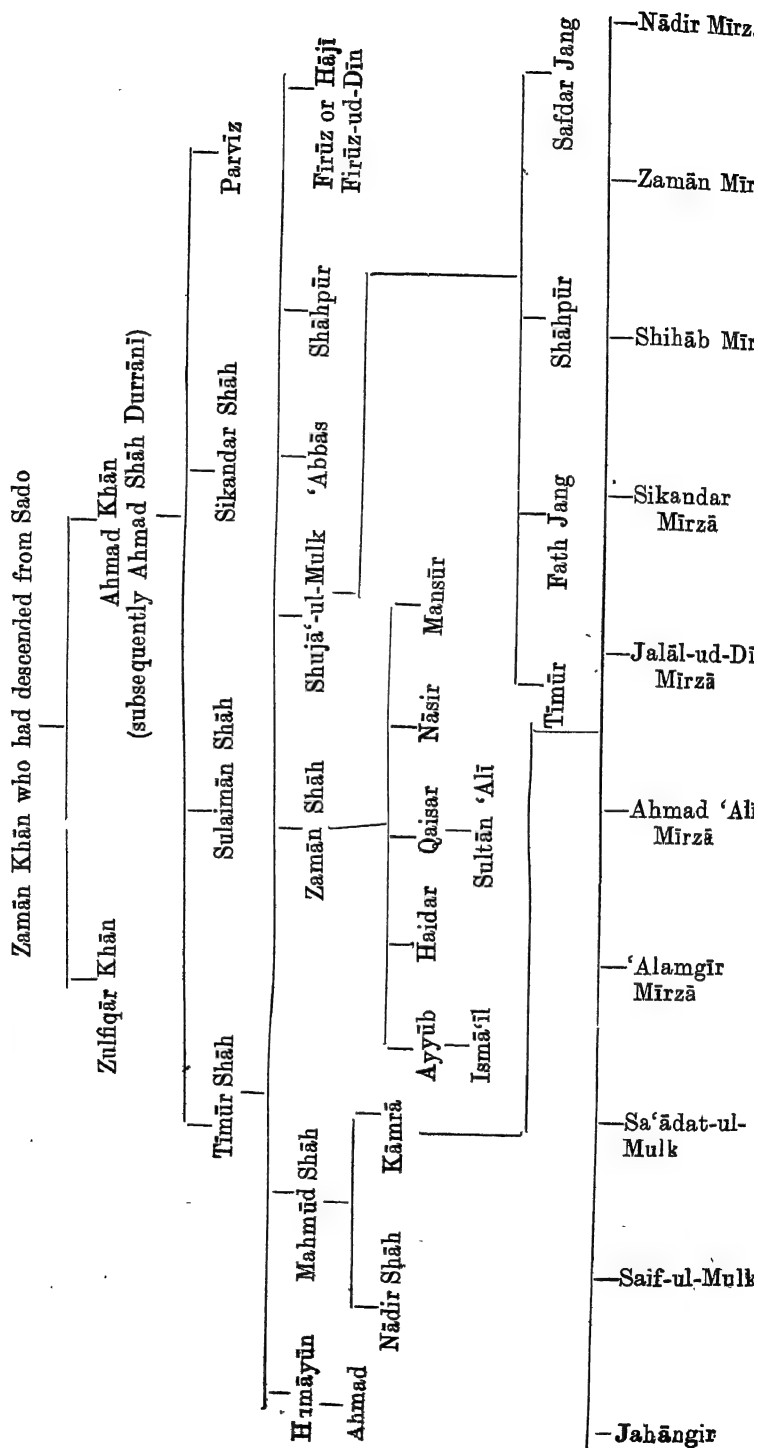

We cannot do better than close this Chapter by a quotation from Dr. Sachchidānanda Sinha¹ the scholarly ex-Vice-Chancellor of the Patna University and ex-Minister, Bihār, on the Mughuls in Kashmīr. "Ever since Akbar added Kashmīr to his dominions," says Dr. Sinha, "the Valley cast its spell upon him and his descendants. Kashmīr formed the inspiration of the greatest Moghal Emperors during the years that it was an appanage of the Delhi throne. Akbar, Jahangir, Shah Jahan, and Aurangzeb, each, in turn, made it his summer resort. "Truly," exclaimed Jahangir, "this is the paradise of which priests have prophesied and poets sung." For nearly a century and a half, these four great Emperors came, from far-away Delhi and Agra, in stately progress across the Pir Panjal, with glittering retinues and splendid state, with escorts and audiences, tributes and forced labour, from the dusty glamour of an Indian court to the cool and quiet of a Kashmir summer. And Jahangir, when stricken with his fatal illness, knowing that his hour was near, turned to this one spot of all his wide Indian dominions, and died at Behramgul,² almost within sight of his beloved and favourite land. Fourteen summers he had spent in the Kashmir Valley, coming in with the blossoming of the lilac and the wild iris in the spring, and setting out back towards the plains of India when the saffron flowers had bloomed in the autumn."

زغفرانے دیدہ، باید راہ ہندوستان گرفت

1. Kashmir: "The Playground of Asia" by Dr. Sachchidananda Sinha, Revised and Enlarged Edition, Allahābād, 1943, pages 5-6.

2. Bahrām-Galah is a small village in the Mendhar Tahsil of Pūnch and has a population of 328. It was Jahāngir's favourite shooting place. At the bottom of a high mountain, a wall was built for resting a matchlock. And the country people driving the deer down the side of the mountain afforded Jahāngir excellent sport. A foot soldier drove a deer before him. The soldier's foot slipped. He fell down the mountain and was killed. This so affected Jahāngir that he left off shooting, and retired to his tent in great concern. It seemed to him as if the angel of death had visited him under the form of this unfortunate man. From that moment he sunk into despair. He proceeded from Bahrām-Galah to Thanna and thence to Rajauri, commencing his stage about three o'clock in the afternoon as usual. He breathed with the utmost difficulty during the night, and expired on Sunday morning. It was the 28th of Safar A.H. 1037=28th October, 1627 A.C. Jahāngir was in the sixtieth year of his age and twenty-second of his reign.

THE DURRĀNĪ DYNASTY OF AHMAD SHĀH

CHAPTER VII

KASHMĪR UNDER THE AFGHĀNS

[1752 A.C. TO 1819 A.C.]

Before we present the position in Kashmīr under the Afghāns, it is necessary to know who the invader from among the Afghāns was, his successors, their fights for power in Afghānistān, for Afghān politics naturally had their repercussion on the course of events in Kashmīr during this period. We did not do this in the case of Mughul rule as the invader came from Āgra, and the broad outline of Mughul history in India is fairly well known to the general reader. In the case of the Afghāns it is not Āgra or Delhī but distant Herāt, Qandahār and Kābul, that affected the destinies of the people in the Valley of Kashmīr. Therefore, a bird's-eye view of the happenings in Afghānistān will enable the reader of Kashīr to understand the background of the drama staged in Srinagar.

Ahmad Shāh Durrānī.

Ahmad Shāh Durrānī who conquered Kashmīr in 1752 A.C. was the son of Muhammad Zamān Khān, an Afghān of the Sadozaī clan of the Popalzai branch of the Abdālī tribe living in the province of Herāt. Zamān Khān's father 'Abdullāh Khān was the son of Hayāt Sultān. The Sadozaī clan was so called on account of its chief Sado who had obtained certain concessions from Shāh 'Abbās the Great of Irān in the sixteenth century. Sado's companion was Muhammad. From Muhammad, Hājī Jamāl Khān, the father of Pāinda Khān—whose son Amīr Dūst Muhammad Khān later ruled at Kābul—descended. Zamān Khān had migrated to Multān where Ahmad was born. The exact date of Ahmad's birth is however not known, though the Encyclopaedia of Islam gives 1722, and the Encyclopaedia Britannica gives 1724, and therefore 1722-24 may be considered approximate. The Sadozaīs to whom Zamān Khān belonged were—it is said—Shī'as, and hence a surmise that they derived their name from 'Abd-i-'Alī or the Servant of Caliph 'Alī. Sayyid Jamāl-ud-Dīn Asadābādī, widely known as Afghānī, accordingly spells the name 'Abdālī. As, however, the Abdālīs later turned strict Sunnīs, the second version is that they were called Abdālī because they were descended from Abdāl, the founder of this clan, who was so called by his own pīr Khwāja Abū Ahmad Abdāl Chishtī,¹ a saint. Abdāl had three grandsons called Popal, Bārak, Haloko and Mūsā. Popal had six sons, of whom the third was Bāmī. Bāmī's eldest son was Sado. The two principal clans of the Durrānīs whose government, Mountstuart Elphinstone² says, was at all times democratic, were the Popalzais and the Bārakzais. The Sadozais, or the royal race, was one of the branches of the Popalzais. The Bāmīzai in which the vizārat was vested was another branch of the same clan. Second in influence to the Popalzai and greater in extent was the tribe of Bārakzais. The elder brother of Ahmad Khān was Zulfiqār Khān. Before the advent of Nādir Shāh, there was trouble in Irān when Zamān, Zulfiqār and Ahmad returned to Herāt from Multān.

The Afghāns revolted against Nādir Shāh. He defeated them. By way of punishment Nādir removed the Ghilzaīs inhabiting Qandahār to Herāt and forced the Sadozais from Herāt to Qandahār. During the execution of this transfer of Afghāns, Zulfiqār and Ahmad were taken prisoners presumably on account of some protest against, or interference in, the orders of Nādir by them. Zulfiqār and Ahmad struck Nādir as promising youths. The elder brother rose to the command of a large clan in 1737 and was in course of time made governor of Herāt, where he lost his life in a fight with the Ghilzaīs. Ahmad was enlisted in the personal staff of Nādir on account of his bright features, his keen intelligence and conspicuous gallantry.

Nādir Shāh was murdered near Mashhad in eastern Irān on the night of 9th June, 1747. In the confusion that ensued, Ahmad Khān seized a major part of the treasury and the famous diamond, the Kūh or Koh-i-Nūr, 'the Mountain of Light,' and hastened to Qandahār. En route in October, 1747, the Afghān chiefs elected him their leader and called him Ahmad Shāh. Hājī Jamāl—the father of

1. The Wāqī'āt-i-Durrānī of Munshī 'Abdul Karīm, a contemporary of King Zamān Shāh, translated into Urdu by Mīr Wāris 'Alī Saifī, the Nizāmī Press, Cawnpore, 1292 A.H., page 3.

2. An Account of the Kingdom of Caubul, London, 1815, page 542.

Pāinda Khān and grandfather of Dūst Muhammad Khān—who was also a candidate, withdrew in favour of Ahmad Shāh. Ahmad Shāh was crowned in the mosque at Qandahār by pouring on his head a measure of wheat which to the Afghāns is symbolic of abundance and prosperity. Ahmad Shāh was thus the first to lay the foundation of the kingdom of Afghānistān. Hājī Jamāl first, and later Shāh Valī Khān Bāmīzai, was appointed Ashraf-ul-Wuzarā or the prime minister.

How Ahmad Shāh Abdālī became 'Durrānī' is explained by the circumstance of his pīr Muhammad Sābir Shāh calling him Durr-i-Daurān, 'The Pearl of the Age.' But Ahmad Shāh preferred to be styled Durr-i-Durrān, or 'The Pearl of Pearls,' states the Hayāt-i-Afghānī of Sardār Muhammad Hayāt Khān (page 129), hence the name Durrānī applied to the Abdālīs. The Encyclopaedia of Islam, however, discards the version about Durr-i-Daurān and accepts Durr-i-Durrān. Ahmad Shāh was about 25 then.

Ahmad Shāh claimed the provinces that Nādir had wrested from the Emperor Muhammad Shāh as a part of the Durrānī kingdom, which included Qandahār, Ghaznī, Kābul, Hazāra, Peshāwar, Derajāt, Multān and Sind. Ahmad Shāh invaded India ten times; it was the fifth invasion which brought about the defeat of the Marathas at the third battle of Pānipat in 1761. It was in the course of his third invasion in 1752 that Kashmīr was annexed under the circumstances already narrated at the close of the preceding chapter of Kashīr.

In 1757 during his fourth invasion Ahmad Shāh married Timūr to Zuhra Begam the daughter of 'Ālamgīr II, and himself married Hazrat Begam the daughter of Muhammad Shāh emperor of Delhī.

Without going into the details of the busy life of Ahmad Shāh here, suffice it to say that he died in October 1772 (1186 A.H.) of complications arising from nasal gangarine. He was highly esteemed by the Afghāns who called him Ahmad Shāh Bābā, respecting him as a saint. His mausoleum at Qandahār is declared a bast or a sanctuary where not even criminals can be touched. In the words of Elphinstone, Ahmad Shāh "was himself a divine and an author and was always ambitious of the character of a saint."

Timūr Shāh.

Ahmad Shāh was succeeded by his son Timūr Shāh, born in December, 1746, at Mashhad in Īrān, when Ahmad Shāh was serving Nādir. Ahmad Shāh's three other sons were: Sulaimān Shāh, Sikandar Shāh and Parvīz. Shāh Valī Khān, the Vazīr, wanted to enthrone Sulaimān who was his son-in-law. The Vazīr was therefore killed at the instance of Timūr Shāh. Qāzī Faizullāh was nominated prime minister. And Sardār Pāinda Khān, who was the son of Hājī Jamāl Khān and the chief of the Bārakzaīs, was given the title of Sarfrāz Khān. He came over to the side of Timūr having deserted Shāh Valī Khān. Pāinda Khān, as already stated, later becomes famous as the father of Amīr Dūst Muhammad Khān. Pāinda Khān really replaced his own brother, Rahīm-dād Khān, whose testy emper did not appeal to the people.

Timūr transferred his capital from Qandahār to Kābul as more peaceful, but usually wintered at Peshāwar. Timūr invaded India five times. When he was occupied with his fourth invasion, mostly with the Sikhs in the Punjāb, Āzād Khān, the governor, revolted against his authority in Kashmīr. Of this we shall hear later.

Timūr Shāh defeated Murād Shāh, king of Bukhārā (Turkistān) who was preparing to invade Afghān territory in December, 1790.

According to Sayyid Jamāl-ud-Dīn Afghānī,* Timūr had three hundred women in his harem and not one of them was Afghān, and that he left 32 sons.

At last Timūr Shāh died on 20th May, 1793, and was buried at Kābul which he loved best in the whole of his empire.

Zamān Shāh.

Zamān Shāh with the support of Pāinda Khān Bārakzaī obtained through Timūr's favourite queen, succeeded Timūr. He was about 23 years of age and his empire comprehended Kābul, Ghaznī, Qandahār, Herāt, Khurāsān, Balkh, Peshāwar, Kashmīr, Sind, Multān, Bahāwalpur and the Derajāt of Ismā'īl Khān and Ghāzī Khān. Zamān Shāh however had his troubles. Usually they were from his brothers and nephews and from Īrān. The principal brothers were in order: (1) Humāyūn, (2) Mahmūd, (3) Zamān, (4) 'Abbās, (5) Shujā', (6) Shāhpūr and (7) Fīrūz. Then Humāyūn had his son Ahmad. Mahmūd's sons were Nādir Mīrzā and Kāmran. Zamān had four sons: Haīdar, Qaisar, Nāsir and Mansūr.

The Ta'rikh-i-Afghānistān*, translated from Arabic into Urdu by Maulavi Mahmūd 'Alī Khān of Bhopāl, Islāmiya Steam Press, Yakī Darwāza, Lāhore, 1342 A.H., pages 60-61.

Āghā Muhammad Khān, the founder of the Kājār dynasty of Īrān, at one time demanded Balkh, but had to give up the idea on account of the Russian invasion of his own country. Zamān Shāh's advances in India were the cause of alarm to the British in India, particularly when he was at Lāhore in 1797. In 1798 he re-visited Lāhore and appointed Ranjīt Singh to be the rājā of Lāhore to the exclusion of unpopular Afghāns, and returned to Herāt to meet the threat of Fath 'Alī Shāh Kājār, the successor of Āghā Muhammad Khān Kājār, and installed Shujā'-ul-Mulk, his own brother, as governor of Herāt.

The policy of Zamān, contrary to that of his predecessors, was to keep the chiefs at his court without consulting them on affairs of state. The chiefs of the Bārakzaīs, of the Qizilbāsh or the Īrānian settlers in Afghānistān, and other notables were accordingly alienated. According to Elphinstone, the source of Zamān's errors was his choice of Rahmatullāh Sadozai with the title of Vafādār Khān for the office of Vazīr (page 568). And Vafādār used his power against Sarfrāz Khān on the allegation that Sarfrāz Khān was plotting against Zamān and working for Shāh Shujā',

About the close of 1799, a conspiracy was organized in Kābul by the leading chiefs owing to the insolent behaviour of the Prime Minister, Vafādār Khān. The plot was betrayed. The conspirators, including Sarfrāz Khān, the leader of the Bārakzaīs, were executed. Fath Khān, the eldest of the twenty-one sons of Pāindā Khān, escaped to Khurāsān where he joined Prince Mahmūd, Tīmūr's second son. Mahmūd, on Fath Khān's advice, advanced against Zamān Shāh. Zamān's chief ally Ahmad Khan Nūrzāī was won over with the result that Zamān had to fly for his life. Vafādār Khān was executed. Zamān took shelter with 'Āshiq Khan Shinwārī, a staunch supporter of his, in 'Āshiq Khān's castle, which is located in Shinwārī area, about 25 miles west of Jalālābād. But 'Āshiq Khān betrayed him. It was in 'Āshiq's castle, Elphinstone says, that Zamān secreted the Koh-i-Nūr in the wall of his apartment whence it was afterwards extracted on Shujā's accession. Asad Khān, Fath Khān's brother, accompanied by a surgeon, caused the destruction of Zamān's eyes in 1801.

"So fell Zaman Shah, the once dreaded Afghan monarch, whose threatened invasion of Hindostan had for years been a ghastly phantom haunting the Council-Chamber of the British Indian Government," writes John William Kaye, the author of the History of the War in Afghanistan (London, 1857, Vol I, page 23). "He survived the loss of his sight nearly half a century and, as the neglected pensioner of Loodianah, to the very few who could remember the awe which his name once inspired, must have presented a curious spectacle of fallen greatness—an illustration of the mutability of human affairs scarcely paralleled in the history of the world. He died at last full of years, empty of honours, his death barely worth a newspaper record or a paragraph in a state paper." Zamān, according to Kaye, came to Ludhiāna, survived his blindness for nearly half a century, and remained a neglected pensioner of the British. But according to Jamāl-ud-Dīn Afghānī, Zamān proceeded to the Amīr of Bukhārā where his beautiful daughter was married to the Amīr. Fath 'Alī Shāh Kājār of Irān received him in Teherān whence Zamān moved to Baghdād whose Vālī at the time was Dā'ūd, and at last died in the Hijāz. But the fact is that Zamān died at Ludhiāna as a British pensioner getting Rs. 4,000 per mensem, and is buried close to his wife under a big dome in Sarhind. Shujā' was over twenty at the blinding of Zamān.

Shujā'-ul-Mulk.

On the fall of Zamān Shāh in 1801, Shujā'-ul-Mulk who was holding his post at Peshāwar, marched on Kābul in September 1801 after having proclaimed himself king of Afghānistān. Fath Khān defeated Shujā'. Mahmūd, the elder brother of Zamān and Shujā', after seven years of waiting, conflict and misfortune, ascended the throne at Kābul in 1801 A.C. He showed generosity to the army and to his chiefs. Vazīr Fath Khān, whom we have already known as the eldest son of Pāinda Khān (Sarfrāz Khān) was given the title of 'Shāh Dūst.' He is the Warwick of Afghānistān or its King-Maker. Sher Muhammad Khān son of Shāh Valī Khān Bāmīzāi, was named Mukhtār-ud Daula. Sardār 'Abdullāh Khān Halokozaī, called by Kashmīrī historians Alkūzaī and by some 'Alikūzaī—father of Yār Muhammad Khān—who had been confined in the Bālā Hisār of Kābul by Shāh Zamān, was released from this fortress, and made governor of Kashmīr. Kāmraī Mirzā, his own son, was sent out to fight Shāh Shujā', who fled to the fastnesses of the Khybar Pass. Mahmūd's two rivals, Shāh Shujā' and Prince Qaisar, Zamān's son, who had lost Herāt which he held during his father's time, were now out of the way. Mahmūd ruled in peace. There were however, riots twice between Ghilzaīs and Durrānīs but they were quelled.

Two years and six months after Mahmūd's accession Shī'a-Sunnī or Qizilbāsh and Afghān clashes at Kābul stirred the country. Mahmūd was indolent and Fath Khān was absent from the capital trying to track out Shujā'. In difference to the Sunnīs on the part of Mahmūd disappointed them. Fath Khān returned to Kābul to find the situation out of control. Shujā' was endeavouring to subsist himself and a few followers by the sale of royal jewels in the Afrid country, when an express was sent to him to come to Kābul. On his arrival the revolution was complete. Mahmūd was imprisoned in Bālā Hisār, Kābul, and Shujā' was enthroned in the same city on 13th July, 1802. Fath Khān fled. 'Ashī Khān Shinwāri who had betrayed Zamān was executed and thus met the doom he deserved. Shāh Shujā', in his autobiography* written by him at Ludhiāna in 1826-27, says

*Biographical sketch of Shah Soojah, ex-King of Cabul, written by himself at Loodianah in 1826-27. Translated by the late Lieutenant Bennet of Artillery. The Calcutta Monthly Journal, 1839.

“Shāh Mahmūd after swearing on the Qur’ān he would not again be guilty of treachery, sent some of his principal attendants to request the royal pardon, which was granted and had him conveyed from the outer to the inner fort with all due respect to his rank.” Fath Khān likewise sought pardon and was given the same. Shujā’ then set out to overawe Kashmīr as ‘Abdullāh Khān Halokozaī was assuming independence. While Shujā’ was so occupied, Fath Khān set on Prince Qaisar to contest his uncle’s throne. Shāh Shujā’ naturally returned in haste to meet this new danger, and quelled it. On the intercession of Zamān, Qaisar’s father and Mukhtār-ud-Daula who had deserted Mahmūd to join Shāh Shujā’, the young Prince was pardoned. It was about this time that Elphinstone’s mission came to Peshāwar and halted from the 25th of February to the 14th of June, 1809.

Finding things unfavourable in Kābul on a repulse at Nimla by Mahmūd in August 1809, Shāh Shujā’ dispatched his harem and his blind brother Zamān Shāh to Rāwalpindī. He made “new efforts to splinter up his broken fortunes.” But he met failure after failure. He marched on Peshāwar and took Bālā Hisār or the royal fortress there from the governor of Peshāwar, Muhammad ‘Azīm Khān Bārakzaī, but was carried away in 1812 by Jahāndād Khān first to the fort of Peshāwar and afterwards to the Valley of Kashmīr through the bribery of the Sūbadār of Kashmīr, Jahāndād’s brother, ‘Atā Muhammad Khān Bāmīzaī, the son of Mukhtār-ud-Daula. Shujā’ appears to have remained in Kashmīr for about a year. “When Shāh Mahmūd heard of the way in which we were treated,” writes Shujā’, “the latent feelings of fraternal affection were aroused within him and he immediately sent a force into the Bārakzaī country. After plundering the whole tribe of ‘Atā Muhammad Khān, he carried men, women and children into captivity. Finding that this had not the desired effect, viz., our release from bondage, he sent a force to Kashmīr under Fath Khān.” ‘Atā Muhammad advanced to give him battle. But his own men went over to the Vazīr. When threatened by Fath Khān early in 1813, ‘Atā Muhammad implored the assistance of his captive. “Seeing his escape could not be effected without our aid, he came,” says Shāh Shujā’, “to our place of confinement, bare-headed, with the Qur’ān in one hand, a naked sword in the other, and a rope about his neck, and requested our forgiveness for the sake of the sacred volume.” Forgiveness was given, Fath Khān had asked for Ranjīt Singh's assistance. Mohkam Chand who led the Sikh expedition accordingly advanced on Kashmīr. Fath Khān was invading Kashmīr from another direction. The rebel Nāzim submitted. Shujā' says: "Mohkam Chand, on the part of Ranjīt Singh, informed us that his master was anxious that we should proceed to Lāhore as soon as at liberty, and visit the residence of our seraglio in that city. He also mentioned that his master's fame would be enhanced by our going. According to Fath Khān's petition, we agreed to this and marched towards Lāhore with Mohkam Chand and other Singhs, whilst Fath Khān returned to Shāh Mahmūd in Kābul." Ranjīt Singh, it soon became very clear, coveted the possession of the Koh-i-Nūr diamond.

On the second day of arrival in Lāhore an emissary from Ranjīt demanded the gem in the name of his master. The fugitive monarch asked for time to consider the request. "We then," writes Shāh Shujā', "experienced privations of the necessities of life and sentinels were placed over our dwelling. A month passed in this way. Confidential servants of Ranjīt Singh then waited on us, and inquired if we wanted ready cash, and would enter into an agreement and treaty for the gem. We answered in the affirmative. Next day Rām Singh brought 40,000 or 50,000 rupees and asked again for the Koh-i-Nūr which we promised to procure when some treaty was agreed upon. Two days after this Ranjīt Singh came in person. After friendly protestations, he stamped a paper with safflower and swearing by the Granth of Bābā Nānak and his own sword he wrote the following security and compact—That he delivered over the provinces of Kōt Kamālīa, Jhang Siyā and Kalānaur to us and our heirs for ever; also offering assistance in troops and treasure for the purpose of again recovering our throne. We also agreed if we should ever ascend the throne, to consider Ranjīt Singh always in the light of an ally. He then proposed himself that we should exchange turbans, which is, among the Sikhs, a pledge of eternal friendship, and we then gave him the Koh-i-Nūr. According to John William Kaye (Vol. 1, pages 110-1) Ranjīt Singh stripped the wretched monarch of everything that was worth taking, and "even after this," says Shujā' "he did not perform one of his promises." As a matter of fact, indignities were heaped on the unfortunate Shāh. Spies were set over him. And guards surrounded his dwelling

"We thought of the proffered friendship of the British Government and hoped for an asylum at Ludhiāna" writes Shujā'. . . . "The members of the seraglio with their attendants, all dressed in the costume of the country, found a safe conveyance to the cantonments of Ludhiāna." But his own escape was yet to be effected. "Seven ranges of guards," continues Shāh Shujā' "were put upon our person, and armed men with lighted torches watched our bed. . . . Several months passed in this manner."

After all, Shujā' foiled Ranjit's efforts. Disguised as a mendicant, he escaped with two followers into the street, and emerged thence through the main sewer which ran beneath the city wall. Out of Lāhore, instead of proceeding towards Ludhiāna, Shujā' made for Jammu, was joined by some Sikhs discontented with Ranjit Singh, and reached Kishtwār, the rājā of which offered hospitality. "Tired of an idle life," Shujā' frankly says, "we laid plans for an attack on Kashmīr." The rājā of Kishtwār offered help with men and money. But, in Kaye's words, it was not written in Shāh Shujā''s book of life that his enterprises should result in anything but failure. His attack on Kashmīr closed in defeat and disaster. He himself says: "We were only three kōs from 'Azīm Khān's camp with the picturesque city of Kashmīr (viz., Srinagar), full in view when the snow began again to fall, and the storm continued with violence without intermission, for two days. Our Hindustānīs were benumbed with a cold unfelt in their sultry regions, the road to our rear was blocked up with snow and the supplies still far distant. For three days our troops were almost famished. Many Hindustānīs died. We could not advance. And retreat was hazardous. Many lost their hands and feet from being frost-bitten, before we determined to retreat." At the earnest request of the rājā of Kishtwār, Shujā' remained during nine months beneath his host's hospitable roof. Then he marched through Kulū, crossed the Sutlej for a journey to Ludhiāna and joined his family in the month of September 1816. He spent two years of quiet. The Durrānī empire was rent by intestine convulsions. The Bārkaizī Sardārs were dominant at Kābul. Shāh Mahmūd and other princes threatened his domination. In the meantime, 'Azīm Khān invited Shāh Shujā' to re-assert his claim to the throne of Kābul. Shujā', weary of repose, and, as Kaye remarks, unwarned by past experience, flung himself into this new enterprise, only to add another that long list of failures which it took nearly a quarter of century more to render complete.

While Shāh Shujā' was in Ludhiāna, Fath Khān he set out to meet the Kājār invasion from the west Afghānistān. While engaged on this expedition, the foolish behaviour of Dūst Muhammad Khān, Fath Khān's young brother, in Prince Kāmran's palace by tearing the jewelled waist-band from the person of Taqīya Begam, Prince Kāmran's sister, drew an oath from him to avenge the outrage. Dūst Muhammad fled to Kashmīr to his brother 'Azīm Khān for safety, and Kāmran wreaked vengeance on Fath Khān by first blinding him and then hacking him in pieces. Shāh Shujā' does not allude to this outrage. He merely says that Fath Khān grew ambitious and wanted to take the reins of government into his own hands, where Prince Kāmran ended the minister's life. Dūst Muhammad resolved to avenge his father's murder. 'Azīm did not agree upon the plan, nor did he undertake its execution but gave three to four lakhs of rupees to defray the charge of the expedition. Prince Jahāngīr, the young and beautiful son of Kāmran, was the nominal ruler of Kābul at this time. But the actual administration of affairs was in the hands of 'Atā Muhammad Khān Bāmīzai, ex-governor of Kashmīr who had instigated Kāmran to kill Fath Khān. Dūst Muhammad Khān advanced on Kābul and encompassed the death of 'Atā Muhammad Khān Bāmīzai, and made himself master of Kābul though he put Prince Sultān 'Alī, one of the sons of Tīmūr, nominally on the throne. At this time Mahmūd and Kāmran marched down from Herāt and 'Azīm Khān came from Kashmīr. Shāh Shujā' in 1818 was again invited from Ludhiāna by 'Azīm Khān, saying that Fath Khān's relations swore to restore him and that 'Azīm Khān would march to Peshāwar to receive him and he would bring him with all the troops and treasury of Kashmīr. By this stratagem Mahmūd and Kāmran were made to flee. Shujā' was balked of the crown. Dūst Muhammad Khān retained Kābul and Ghazni and gave away the other provinces to his brothers. At this stage, we close the connexion between Kābul and Kashmīr in 1819 when Sikhs conquer Kashmīr.

The Afghān's bad start in Kashmīr.

The Afghān's made a bad start in Kashmīr. 'Abdullāh

Khān Īshak Aqāsī,¹ the Afghān governor, ruled Kashmīr for six months, but his exactions led no less than eighty big merchants to return to their native towns in India. Trade was much affected. People of the upper classes suffered.² Before his departure from Kashmīr, ‘Abdullāh Khān appointed Sukh Jīwan Mal administrator, A‘zam Khān,³ paymaster of the Afghān forces in Kashmīr, and Khwāja ‘Abdullāh alias Khwāja Kījak³ (distortion of Kūchak)⁴ the administrator’s Nā‘ib or deputy. He also made Khwāja Abu’l Hasan Bānde Sukh Jīwan’s adviser. On his return to Kābul, ‘Abdullāh Khān presented his master with a crore of rupees which he had wrung from the exhausted people of Kashmīr. He also took to Kābul Abu’l Qāsim Khān Sāfi, the former Mughul Nā‘ib, Mir Firūz-ud-Dīn Nawwāb Abu’l Barakāt Khān Firūz Jang Sūfi’s son, to whom Ahmad Shāh Durrānī showed considerable favour.

On the departure of ‘Abdullāh Khān Īshak Aqāsī from Kashmīr, the country was ruled by Sukh Jīwan as Nāzim or administrator. Khwāja Abu’l Hasan Bānde acted as chief adviser to the Nāzim. It is unfortunate that, under Afghān rule, several of the total of fourteen governors tried to sever their connexion with Kābul, and to establish themselves as independent rulers of the country because of the preoccupations of Afghān rulers in Irānian or Indian campaigns, or internecine struggles for the throne of Afghānistān. Some of these Nāzims enjoyed a brief spell of independence but were, at last, reduced to subjection. Sukh Jīwan was the first to assert his independence with the aid of Abu’l Hasan Bānde a Kashmīrī notable. The reason, it is said, was a heavy financial demand by Ahmad Shāh Durrānī for his campaigns which Sukh Jīwan felt could not be met with as ‘Abdullāh Khān had already drained off from the Valley as large a sum as one crore of rupees. Khwāja Kījak,⁵ Malik Hasan Khān Irānī, A‘zam Khān and Mirzā Khān opposed him, but were defeated at Bārāmūla by Sukh Jīwan who established touch with ‘Ālamgīr II at Delhi. Sukh Jīwan next

1. Shāghhāsī, a Mongolian rank, presumably introduced into Central Asian courts from the descendants of Chingīz Khān, means Lord Chamberlain.

2. The Ta’rikh-i-Hasan, folio 305.

3. The Ta’rikh-i-Khalīl, folio 292.

4. The Ta’rikh-i-Hasan, folio 305.

5. Ibid., folio 306.

repelled the attack led by ‘Abdullāh Khān Īshak Aqāsī. Sukh Jiwan was tempted to assert independence of Ahmaṣ Shāh Durrānī on account of his campaigns in the Punjāb and the subjugation of the Marathas in the third battle of Pānīpat that took place in 1759-61.

A severe famine engaged Sukh Jiwan's attention for some time. Abu'l Hasan Bānde proved himself very capable in alleviating the miseries of the famine-stricken people. He prevented many deaths from starvation by advancing loans of seed grains. These loans were only realized in full as late as 1250 A.H. (1834 A.C.).²

Finding the Punjāb in a disturbed condition, Sukh Jiwan Mal attempted³ the conquest of Siālkōt, Bhimba and Akhnūr.⁴ But he suffered a heavy defeat at the hand of Yār Khān, governor of Siālkōt, owing chiefly to the jealousy of Ranjīt Dev, the rājā of Jammu.

Sukh Jiwan quarrelled with Abu'l Hasan Bānde on account of the machinations of Mīr Muqīm a notable, drove him to Pūnch, wreaked vengeance upon his kinsmen and appointed Mīr Muqīm himself in his place. But Sukh Jiwan also suffered. The reason is that Sukh Jiwan Mal had a rival in Rājā Ranjīt Dev who was induced by Shāh Valī Khān, the Durrānī prime minister, to come to Lāhor and guide an expedition to recover Kashmīr. The Afghā troops numbering about 3,000 supplemented by a contingent of Ranjīt Dev were placed under the command of Nū ud-Dīn Khān Bāmizāī. This small expedition, led in June, failed as all the passes leading into Kashmīr were strongly guarded, and it was found difficult to cross the flooded rivers and swollen streams. The second expedition organized in October 1762 A.C. on a larger scale achieved complete success. The Durrānī army entered Kashmīr by the Tosh Maidān. Sukh Jiwan Mal came to oppose the invaders at the head of 50,000 troops but, just at the time of battle he was deserted by his commander-in-chief Bakht Mal. Sukh Jiwan Mal was, therefore, easily defeated and captured after he had governed for eight years and four months. He was immediately blinded by a lancet and was sent to

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Hasan, folio 306.

2. Ibid., folio 306.

3. Ibid., folio 307, and the Ta'rikh-i-Khalīl, folio 294.

4. Akhnūr, on the Chināb, is 18 miles from Jammu. Its present population is 3,398.

Lāhore where Ahmad Shāh Durrāni was then halting. Sukh Jiwan was brought in chains before Ahmad Shāh who caused him to be trampled to death. The severity of this punishment is understandable when we remember that Sukh Jiwan revolted against Afghānistān despite repeated warnings, having kept on defying his master for about nine years. Later, he had entered into conspiracy with 'Ālamgīr II to restore nominal Mughul rule in Kashmīr and to seek permission to strike his own coin, and resumed all jāgīrs of mansabdārs. 'Ālamgīr had conferred the title of Rājā on him.

Rājā Sukh Jiwan Mal was a Khatri, born and educated at Kābul. His family traced its origin to Bherā in Khushāb, Punjāb. He took service under Shāh Valī Khān the vazīr of Ahmad Shāh Durrāni, and rose to the position of governor of Kashmīr, having once previously been commissioned to realize tribute from Mu'in-ul-Mulk the sūbadār of the Punjāb. In the beginning of his régime Sukh Jiwan Mal appeared to be a good governor. In fact, he showed great consideration to Muslims. The author of the Khizāna-i-'Āmīra, Ghulām 'Alī Āzād Bilgrāmī, Sukh Jiwan's contemporary, writes about him :

مُشارِ الیه جوانِ خوشرو، مُتصف به اوصافِ شائسته، قریبِ اسلام
 بود۔ جیع مزاراتِ بزرگان و باغاتِ کشمیر را ترمیم نمود۔ و هر روز بعد
 فراغ از دیوان دو صد کس مُسلمین را بروئے خود الوانِ اطعمه میخوراند۔
 و در هر ماه دوازدهم و یازدهم طعام نیاز پُخته به مردم تقسیم می نمود۔
 وارد و صادر را چه درویش و چه غیر آن، در خورِ حالِ هر کس مراعاتی می
 کرد۔ و در هر هفته یکباره مشاعره مقرر کرده بود۔ جیع شعراء کشمیر حاضر
 می شدند۔ در آخرِ مجلس شیلانی میکشید۔ و پنج کس از شعرائِ نامی
 را که با هر یک ازینها ده ده کس از مُستعدان کُمکی مُعین کرده بود امر
 فرمود که تاریخِ کشمیر از ابتدای آبادی تا زمانِ او تحریر نمایند۔ سر
 حلقه آن پنج کس محد توفیق بود که توفیقِ تخلص میکنند۔ و نامِ اصلی او
 لاله جو است بزبان کشمیر۔ امروز در موزونان کشمیر نظیر ندارد۔

["He was a handsome youth, possessed of good qualities and inclined towards Islam. After finishing court business, he fed two hundred Muslims with a variety of food every day. On the 11th and 12th of every month, he got sacramental food cooked and distributed among the people. He bestowed favours on every visitor to the court whether he was poor or not. Once in every week he held a poetical conversazione. It was attended by all the well-known poets. At the end of it he gave a dinner. He engaged five (seven?) of the best scholars to complete a history of Kashmir from the earliest habitation to his own time. Each writer was provided with ten assistants. The head of these historians was Muhammad Taufiq with Taufiq as his nom de plume, and was known as Lāla-jū in Kashmiri. He is a poet unrivalled in Kashmir today"].

Rājā Sukh Jiwan Mal appears to have been the forerunner of another great Khatri, His Excellency the late Mahārājā Sir Krishn Prashād Bahādur, Madār-ul-Mahāmm of Hydarābād, Deccan, in his love of letters and culture and refined taste. After his quarrel with Abu'l Hasan Bānde, Sukh Jiwan also replaced Mīr Muqīm by Pandit Mahānand Dar at whose incitement he became an oppressor, and subjected Muslims to considerable hardships, forbade even the call to prayer and imposed various other restrictions upon them. Before his tragic death, he was blinded when he composed the following verses so full of pathos:

چشم از وضع جهان پوشیده به سر بسر احوال ان تا دیده به
هر که چوں من داشت جا بر فرق گل عاقبت در خاک و خون غلطیده به
چند روز خود تماشا کرده ام زین چمن گلخانه عبرت چیده به
گر دهی شیرش دهد زهرت عوض زین سیه مار جهان ترسیده به
باز اگر چشم جهان بیه دهند چوں گدایان در بدر گردیده به

هر چند گفتم نفسی دنی را باید نه کردن تا کردنی را
این نفسی سرکش نشنید از من تا دید آخر تا دیدنی را

En passant it is interesting to observe that Ahmad Shāh Durrānī had, at one time, offered the governorship of Kashmir to Mughlānī Begam, the governor of Lāhore during 1754-1756.² Rājā Sukh Jiwan promised her annual

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Hasan, folio 308.

2. Later Mughal History of the Panjab by Dr. Hari Rām Gupta, Lāhore, pages 144-5.

tribute. This prevented her from accepting the offer of the courtiers of Kashmīr who conspired against Sukh Jīwan. The promised tribute never reached Mughlānī Begam from either side.

The re-assertion of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī's sovereignty over Kashmīr is expressed in this couplet:

کشمیر گرفت بارِ دیگر سلطانِ احمد بزورِ شمشیر
فرمود زبانِ تیغ، تاریخ او فتحِ محمود باز کشمیر

Nūr-ud-Dīn Khān Muslih-ud-Daula Bāmizai was appointed governor in succession to Rājā Sukh Jīwan. He ruled Kashmīr for some time,¹ and endeavoured to restore the exhausted country. The people were, on the whole, happy and prosperous under him. His successor Buland Khān remitted unjust taxes,² treated Hindus and Muslims alike.³ In 1765 Nūr-ud-Dīn Khān Bāmizai was again appointed governor. Mīr Muqīm Kanth and Pandit Kailāsh Dar were his councillors, the latter being responsible for the revenue of the country. Mīr Muqīm induced Nūr-ud-Dīn to demand daily payments of revenue from Pandit Kailāsh Dar who, however, encompassed⁴ the death of his antagonist through an accomplice, Hakīm Mīr. When the secret became known, Nūr-ud-Dīn made no attempt to bring the culprit to justice. It was probably due to this neglect that he anticipated orders of his removal. Leaving his nephew Jān Muhammad Khān in his place, Nūr-ud-Dīn proceeded to plead his case at Kābul. Meanwhile, La'l Khān Khatak displaced Jān Muhammad Khān, and began a career of terrorism and oppression. Khurram Khān was dispatched from Kābul to fill Nūr-ud-Dīn's place, but his entry was resisted by La'l Khān Khatak who was defeated, and retired to the fort at Biru situated to the west of Srinagar, near Paṭan.

Faqrullāh, Mīr Muqīm Kanth's son, who was seeking an opportunity to avenge his father's murder, now made his appearance at Sopōr with the army of Sultān Mahmūd

1. There is a difference of opinion about the duration of his first régime. Lt. Newall (J.A.S.B., No. 5, 1854, page 447) states it to be 8 years, the Ta'rikh-i-Hasan reduces it to only three months. The Ta'rikh-i-Khalil and Diwan Kirpā Rām's Gulzār-i-Kashmīr give two years.

2. Lt. Newall, J.A.S.B., No. 5, 1854, page 447.

3. The Ta'rikh-i-Khalil, MS., folio 298.

4. The Gulzār-i-Kashmīr, page 234, Ta'rikh-i-Khalil, folio 298.

Bamba. La'ī Khān Khatak opposed him but, on being defeated again, retired to his fort with the loss of an eye. Faqīrullāh, therefore, suddenly found himself in the governor's seat in 1767 A.C. His allies among the Bambas oppressed the people. Kashmīr knew no authority for a period of eleven months. It is indeed strange how Ahmad Shāh Durrānī could allow such a state of affairs. At last, in 1769 A.C., Nūr-ud-Dīn was, for the third time, appointed governor, as no other person was considered capable of enforcing order in the country. Faqīrullāh sought refuge with the ruler of Muzaffarābād after an unsuccessful engagement against Nūr-ud-Dīn near the village of Gaurīpōr (or Gandīpōr, population 212) in Tahsīl Pulwāma. Faqīrullāh was intending further resistance when he was seized with a severe malady due to excessive drinking and died at Shādīpōr. Nūr-ud-Dīn ruled for two years, and suppressed the malcontents with a strong hand.

Pandit Kailāsh Dar had induced his patron, Khurram Khān, to try for the sūbadārship of Kashmīr during his stay at Kābul. In this project he, at last, succeeded in 1770 A.C., and relieved Nūr-ud-Dīn of the charge. Khurram Khān showed inability to rule, and when he displayed timidity also, Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher Qizilbāsh, his commander-in-chief, drove him out, and installed himself as governor. Rather than seeking help from some outside prince in a future contingency, Jawān Sher organized the Hānjīs or boatmen, a sturdy class of people capable of serving his purpose. Amīr Mohammad Khān Jawān Sher built the fort of Sher-garhī,¹ till recently the residence of the Mahārājā Bahādur of Kashmīr, and also the bridge known as Amīrā Kadal. Kadal in Kashmīr means a bridge. The re-construction of a building on the island called Sona Lānk, and the Amīrābād garden are also this governor's memorials.² But he committed vandalism in pulling down the royal palaces and other buildings including Akbar's Darshanī Bāgh and the Jharōkah-i-Shāhī on the Dal, which the Mughul emperors and their nobles had built.

1. Shergarhī is re-named Narsingharh by Mahārājā Hari Singh. Amīrā Kadal, on re-construction, was called "Pratāp Kadal," but the people continue the old name. The same is the case with Shergarhī. It remains Shergarhī in popular parlance.

2. Lt. Newall, J.A.S.B., No. 5, 1854, page 448. The Gulzar-i-Kashmīr, page 237.

The death of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī on 13th April, 1772, A.C., emboldened Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher actually to set himself up as an independent ruler. And he was in power for six years. He was cruel both to Hindus and to Muslims, and avenged the murder of Mīr Muqīm by killing Pandit Kailāsh Dar. His rule thenceforth became notorious for oppression and high-handedness, due to his Peshkār or Chief Secretary, Mīr Fāzil Khān. Srinagar at this time suffered very much owing to a flood in the Jhelum.

At last in 1776 A.C., Timūr Shāh, Ahmad Shāh Durrānī's son, appointed Hājī Karīmdād Khān Bāmīzai, to the governorship of Kashmir. The Hājī hailed from Qandahār. He had taken part in the battle of Pānīpat by leading his cavalry. After defeating Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher, the Hājī sent him in chains to Kābul, where he remained in prison for a considerable time, but was, at last, pardoned by Timūr Shāh.

“Amir Khan, a Persian, one of the late governors of Kashmir, erected a fortified palace on the eastern side of the lake” (the Dal), wrote George Forster* in 1783. “He used to pass much of his time in this retreat, which was curiously adapted to the enjoyment of the various species of Asiatic luxury; and he is still spoken of in terms of affection and regret; for like them, he was gay, voluptuous, and much addicted to the pleasures of the table. There is not a boatman or his wife that does not speak of this Khan with rapture and ascribe to him a once abundant livelihood. The governor, like many of his predecessors, trusting in the natural strength of his province, and its distance from the capital, rebelled against his master (Timur Shah, the reigning emperor of the Afghans). The force sent against him was small and ill-appointed, and might have been easily repelled by a few resolute men stationed in the passes. But in the hour of need, he was abandoned by the pusillanimous fickle Kashmirians who reconciled their conduct to the Persian, by urging, that if he had remained in Kashmir, he would have converted them all to the faith of Ali and cut them off from the hope of salvation.” Amīr Jawān Sher was a Qizilbāsh, born and brought up in Afghānistān.

Hājī Karīmdād began his régime by reducing to subjection Murād Khān, the rājā of Skārdū, from whom he exacted tribute and demanded hostages. For this achievement, Tīmūr Shāh conferred upon him the title of Shujā'-ul-Mulk. Next, Karīmdād defeated Ranjīt Dev, the rājā of Jammū, who had invaded Kashmīr with an army of 30,000 strong. He further directed his forces against Mahmūd Khān, the chief of Muzaffarābād, who had hampered him in his expedition against Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher. In this operation, Karīmdād had to suffer considerable chagrin owing to the treachery of Fath Khān, the chief of Kathāī (now in Tahsīl Urī), who led Tār Qulī Khān and his army into a close defile, where he despoiled them of all their weapons and equipment. Tār Qulī was at once put to death on his return. In 1195 A.H. (1780 A.C.), Karīmdād Khān himself conducted an army against Mahmūd Khān, but was beaten back by Bahādur Khān, son of Bira Khān Kakar. Next year, he was more fortunate in conquering Kishtwār.

Journey*, Vol. II, pages 15-16.

Hājī Karīmdād was rather heartless and killed alike Hindus and Muslims on provocation. His exactions, through Aslam Harkāra¹ his unscrupulous tax-collector, exceeded even those of the notorious I'tiqād Khān, the Mughul sūbadār, and compelled many to leave the country. Zar-i-Niyāz, a tax on mansabdārs and jāgīrdārs, was exacted from officials and landlords, Zar-i-Ashkhās, another tax, from merchants and bankers, Zar-i-Hubūb a tax on grain (hubūb, of which the singular is habb, means grain) from farmers. Certain Pandits who were concerned in a conspiracy with the Bambas against Karīmdād were exposed to suffocation by smoke. For liberating them Karīmdād realized a large indemnity called Zar-i-Dūd. Dūd means smoke. He was advised by Dilārām Qulī to extort dāgh-shāl,² an anna per rupee on the price of every piece of shawl from the shawl weavers. His good deeds consisted in the repairing of the roof of the Jāmi' Masjid from out of the rents of the mosque waqf, and in visiting the tombs of saints. He avenged the murder of Khwāja Kamāl-ud-Dīn Naqshbandī, the Sajjāda-nashīn of the Khānqāh-i-Naqshbandiyya (situated in the Khwāja Bāzār of Srinagar), by executing Anwar Malik Shāhābādī and his accomplices who had killed the Khwāja. The Khwāja was murdered during the time of Amīr Jawān Sher who was a Shī'a. Karīmdād treated the Shī'as harshly

1. Harkāra literally means a messenger or a process-server.

2. The Dāgh-shāl, or shawl marking, has also been the name of the State department controlling shawl trade.

and devastated Amīrābād founded by Amīr Jawān Sher, on the Dal, near the Nandpōr village in the Mīr Bahrī pargana. Under Karīmdād's régime, the country suffered from earthquakes for three months at intervals, and many men were rendered homeless. He died in 1197 A.H. (1783 A.C.), after a term of office of seven years. His son, Āzād Khān, being away on an expedition, his death was kept a secret till the latter's arrival.

Āzād Khān succeeded his father, Hājī Karīmdād Khān, in 1783 A.C. He was "capable and displayed remarkable energy in establishing his authority." "Azad Khan is eighteen years of age," wrote George Forster¹ in 1783. "He has few of the vices of youth. He is not addicted to the pleasures of the harem nor to wine. He does not even smoke the hookah. But he is ferocious and bad tempered." It is for his bad temper and ferociousness that he is called the Nādir Shāh of Kashmīr. He was capricious in that, while he dressed his slaves and followers magnificently, he himself wore very simple clothes. He frequently went out hunting.

Āzād appointed Dilārām Qulī as his Peshkār or Chief Secretary. He employed three thousand Sikhs, and reorganized his army. He turned his attention to extend his influence among the neighbouring chiefs.² The rājā of Kishtwār was the first to be made to submit. Rustam Khān of Pūnch, being unable to withstand him, abandoned the city, which was pillaged for a week. But Rustam Khān subsequently appeased him by offering rich presents, and later Rustam's daughter was married to Āzād. Subsequently a son from this marriage was named Fath Jang Khān. The rājā of Rajaurī was also reduced to submission. Āzād Khān tried but failed to make a canal to irrigate the Māyasum plain then outside Srinagar proper. He commandeered the services of the village-folk of Mar-rāj and Kam-rāj for that purpose, but could not complete the work.

Āzād Khān wished to free himself from his allegiance to Tīmūr Shāh who was occupied with his fourth invasion of India in 1785. Tīmūr, however, dispatched a state notable Mīrzā Muhammad 'Alī entitled Kifāyat Khān Nusrat to

1. Journey, pages 30-31.

2. The Ta'rikh-i-Khalīl, folios 309-10, and the Ta'rikh-i-Hasan, folio 322.

exact tribute from him. Kifāyat Khān returned with three lakhs of rupees,¹ but his mission was not altogether a success. Tīmūr Shāh then deputed Āzād Khān's elder brothers, Murtazā Khān and Zamān Khān, to chastize Āzād Khān. They were, however, defeated after three days' fighting, and were prevented by famine and cholera from making another attempt. Consequently, Āzād Khān continued his career of independence. Āzād Khān's cousin Pahlwān Khān and others made an unsuccessful attempt upon his life, after which they broke out into rebellion, but were, at last, seized and done to death.

During Āzād Khān's régime, the country suffered from a frightful famine. Even salt could not be had at Rs. 4 per seer. A series of earthquake shocks added to the people's misfortunes. They complained to Tīmūr Shāh earnestly entreating him to act promptly for their relief. Elphinstone puts this event during the interval between Tīmūr's expeditions to Sind in 1786 and against Bahāwal Khān of Bahāwalpur in 1788. Saif-ud-Daula Madad Khān Durrānī and Pāinda Khān Bārakzai came with fifty thousand horse and foot.² From Muzaffarābād one detachment under Pāinda Khān was dispatched by way of Bārāmūla, where he engaged Āzād Khān. Madad Khān Durrānī himself advanced with the other by way of Karnāh, and effected his entry into Srīnagar. Āzād Khān, thereupon, fell back on the Khushīpōr Karēwah adjacent to Zaina-kōṭ and Hākursar Lake, where he was deserted by his chiefs. Reduced to hard straits, he fled to Pūnch. When hemmed in he shot himself to death. He was only 27 years of age then. "Though he grievously oppressed the people, the extravagant mode of life of Azad Khan," says Baron Hügel,³ caused the money collected from the revenue and taxes to circulate again into the hands of the natives indirectly, who derived also immense profits by the increased exportation of their manufactures."

Saif-ud-Daula Madad Khān Durrānī then ruled for nine months—likewise badly. A Kashmīrī Pandit poignantly put the situation in half the line—

ظلم آزاد را رسید مدد
(Madad out-Heroded Āzād)

1. The Ta'rikh-i-Hasan, folio 323.

2. The Ta'rikh-i-Khalīl gives the strength of the punitive army as 4,000 horse and foot, folio 311.

3. Travels, page 11,

Before he could restore order and tranquility, he was relieved by Mīr Dād Khān. This nobleman ruled for seven months and imposed unjust taxes. He reduced Mīr Ja'far Khān of Kam-rāj to submission. Mīr Dād died in 1788 A.C.

Juma' Khān Durrānī Halokozāi was the next important governor who held office for four years. The Ahsan-ut-Tawārīkh of Qāzī Aziz-ud-Dīn, the Muftī-i-A'zam, Kashmīr, notes that Juma' Khān left Kābul on 27th Sha'bān 1202 (1787 A.C.) for Pakhlī, whence he dispatched his nephew in advance. Juma' Khān himself entered Kashmīr in Ramazān. He set Mīr Ja'far Kanṭh free from his prison. Munshī Bhawānī Dās Kāchru, a poet of note, supplied Juma' Khān with a beautiful monogram for his seal :

چو حق تقسیمِ روزِ نیک و بد کرد مُدَّ جَعِه را مخصوصِ خود کرد

Hasan 'Alī Khān Bamu of Kam-rāj, Rustam 'Alī Khān of Pūnch, Karamullāh Khān of Rajaurī all showed signs of restiveness and were successfully defeated. Juma' Khān's chief sin lies in realizing, through contracts, the dues pertaining to the offices of the Qāzī and the Judge. Under his order the Shī'as were prohibited from observing their "passion week." The parts of the city known as Khānayār* and Rainawārī suffered from a heavy flood caused by the Qāzizāda Dam, now called Sadd-i-Qāzizāda or the Suthu, giving way to heavy rush of water. Juma' Khān Halokozāi died of dysentery in 1793, and was buried in the compound of the tomb of Sayyid Qamr-ud-Dīn Khwārizmī (who died in 907 A.H. = 1501 A.C. in the precincts of Shergarhī). Later, however, his body was removed to Qandahār.

Rahmatullāh held the governorship temporarily till the arrival of Mīr Hazār Khān in 1792 A.C. In Hazār's tenure Tīmūr Shāh passed away on 18th May, 1793, at Kābul when he was preparing to invade India for the sixth time. Zamān Shāh, the next ruler, confirmed Mīr Hazār Khān in his post.

Mīr Hazār Khān, however, set himself up as an independent governor, and imprisoned his father Mīrzā Khān who had been deputed from Kābul to advise him to desist from declaring independence. Mīr Hazār was hard upon the Shī'as and the Hindus and imposed jizya on the latter.

*Khāna-yār, literally, means the ward or mahalla of the Khāns,

Ahmad Khān Shahinak-bāshī, the general, and Rahmatullāh Khān were appointed by Zamān Shāh to chastize him. It is apparently to this event that Elphinstone refers when he says that the remaining months of 1793 and part of 1794 were occupied in reducing Kashmīr (page 566). A number of Mīr Hazār's nobles having deserted him, he took sanctuary in the Khanqāh-i-Mu'allā, but was subsequently enticed out and imprisoned. His régime extended over a period of one year and two months.

In 1794 A.C. Rahmatullāh Khān ruled for four months, but was recalled for quarrelling with Ahmad Khān Shahinak-bāshī. Kifāyat Khān succeeded him in 1794. Kifāyat was a generous, well-meaning person. During his brief stay of one year, the Sunnī-Shī'a quarrels were stopped. He suppressed a rebellion of the Bambas in Kam-rāj. He is associated with a garden in Khānayār. A serious quarrel among his nobles, however, led to his dismissal in 1795. Arsalān Khān was next invested with the governorship of Kashmīr. Following the practice of the later sūbadārs under the Mughuls, he sent Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher to rule in his place. Some of Muhammad Khān's relatives, who were officers of a body of the Jawān Sher tribesmen, rebelled against him, and besieged him in the Shergarhī fort. A compromise being arrived at, Muhammad Khān shared his authority with them. Soon after this, Hāfiz Sher Muhammad Khān Mukhtār-ud-Daula, the son of Shāh Valī Khān, the prime minister of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, having been directed from Kābul, arrived in Kashmīr. He took all the contending parties with him to Kābul. This Mukhtār-ud-Daula subsequently became the prime minister of Zamān Shāh.

'Abdullāh Khān Halokozaī filled the vacant post of governor in 1795 A.C. He ruled the country for about eleven years. For the first three years of his régime, the country was governed by one or other of his brothers who it seems, performed their duties sincerely and conscientiously. In 1213 A.H. (1798 A.C.) on returning from Kābul, he systematically began to strengthen himself and entertain ambitious designs, apparently when he saw that government in Kābul was changing hands rapidly. He first managed to free the capital from the presence of the chiefs and noble likely to be inimical to him. Next, he appointed men of humble origin to higher posts. He also enlisted an arm of thirty thousand men, and entered into alliance with th neighbouring chiefs. It was in this connexion that he married the daughter of Fath Khān Bamba, the chief of Muzaffarābād. He ruled the country mildly and justly.

'Abdullāh Khān quarrelled in 1800 A.C. with his Dīwān, Har Dās who was a protégé of Diwan Nand Rām. Nand Rām was the favourite of Rahmat Khān with the title of "Vafādār Khān" conferred by Zamān Shāh, and was the prime minister at Kābul. Nand Rām rose to be a minister at Kābul in the time of Zamān Shāh and hence gave an occasion to his own people to say.

سیم از معبود، ضرب از نند رام

Nand Rām's position so emboldened the Kashmīrī Pandit as to say, even though secretly, in national pride—

سکه زد در مُلکِ کابل نند رام اے مسلمانان بخوانید رام ارام!

'Abdullāh Khān's quarrel consequently resulted in his recall, and finally in his imprisonment in the Bālā Hisār at Kābul. Before leaving Kashmīr, he set up his brother, 'Atā Muhammad Khān, in his place and secretly wrote to him as well as to the chief of Muzaffarābād to hold the country for him, and resist the new governor. The vazīr of Kābul, Vafādār Khān, appointed as governor 'Abdullāh Khān's brother, Vakīl Khān, who was then in Kashmīr, and sent Mullā Ahmad Khān to execute his orders. 'Atā Muhammad Khān first killed Vakīl Khān, and then defeated and captured Mullā Ahmad Khān.

In 1261 A.H. (1801 A.C.) Zamān Shāh was seized and blinded, and his brother Mahmūd Shāh, ruler of Herāt, was declared king of Afghānistān. These circumstances encouraged the insurgents all the more. Further, 'Abdullāh Khān conspired, and escaped to Kashmīr with Jān Nisār 'Alī Khān, the commandant of Bālā Hisār at Peshāwar whom he presented with a lakh of rupees. He then attended to his affairs in Kashmīr, built a fort in the pargana of Biru, and finally withheld the tribute, thereby proclaiming his independence. G. T. Vigne's reference to the working of copper mines in Kashmīr during 'Abdullāh Khān's time may explain the latter's affluence.

At this stage, Kābul was undergoing a change of rulers. Mahmūd Shāh who deposed Zamān Shāh was himself deposed by Zamān's brother Shujā'-ul-Mulk.¹ Shujā' in 1806 A.C. dispatched Hāfiz Sher Muhammad Khān Mukhtār-ud-Daula to bring Kashmīr to subjection. Sher Muhammad Khān arrived at Muzaffarābād and pretended negotiations chiefly with the object of taking his adversary unawares. After receiving reinforcements from the neighbouring rājās, he made a sudden attack on 'Abdullāh Khān's army which retreated, but offered battle at the village Doāb-gāh below Sopōr at the junction of the Pohur and the Jhelum, whence he fled to his fort at Biru. 'Atā Muhammad Khān, son of Hāfiz Sher Muhammad Khān, was ordered to besiege that fort. During this siege, in 1807 A.C., 'Abdullāh Khān died. As Elphinstone says, 'Abdullāh Khān was a man of good talents and great courage. He was liked by both Afghāns and Kashmīrīs. "He is commended for his love of justice and his skill in administering it, for his liberality his affable manners, and his princely magnificence. He was also a great encourager of learning and poetry. Perhaps no Durrāni has left a character so generally admired" (pp. 595-96). Elphinstone's mission to Kābul arrived at Peshāwar on the 25th of February, 1809, and left Peshāwa on the 14th of June.

In 1809 Kābul was again a scene of strife and struggle between various claimants to the throne. Mahmūd Shāh was set free, whilst Prince Qaisar, Zamān's son, and Prince Kāmran, Mahmūd's son, waged wars against each other. In these internecine struggles, Hāfiz Sher Muhammad Khān Mukhtār-ud-Daula son of Shāh Valī Khān, vazīr of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, was killed, and Shujā'-ul-Mulk was defeated by 'Azīm Khān and took asylum under Ranj Singh.

Hāfiz Sher Muhammad Khān Mukhtār-ud-Daula, before being killed, had left Kashmīr after a sojourn of five months appointing his son² 'Atā Muhammad Khān as his Nā' with the sanction of Shāh Shujā'. The year of his installation, viz. 1221 A.H. (1806 A.C.), is obtained from the chronogram Afzāl-i-Rahmānī.

'Atā Muhammad Khān's excellent régime is like a large oasis in the desert patches of the Afghān sovereignty.

1. Zamān Shāh and Shujā'-ul-Mulk were from the same mother, a lady of the Yūsufzai tribe.

2. Lt. Newall writes that this governor was the son of the governor 'Abdullāh Khān on page 452, while on page 450 he calls him brother of the same person.—J.A.S.B., No. 5, 1854.

Kashmīr. The people prospered under him. Considerable advance took place generally. In one year during his rule, one crore of rupees accrued to the treasury owing to the revival of trade. The revenue from other sources also doubled. Many persons came by hidden treasures which they were allowed to keep. Most of the important suits were dealt with personally by him, and in the case of disputed succession, he allocated the share of each claimant. In public and private life, he observed simplicity, and showed due deference to men of learning and piety. His structures at Charār Sharif are still there.

About 1810 Nidhān Singh Atha,¹ disgusted with Ranjīt Singh, quitted the Punjāb, and entered the service of 'Atā Muhammad Khān.

In 1810 'Atā Muhammad Khān declared his independence because Shāh Shujā' and Shāh Mahmūd in turn sent expeditions against him. 'Atā struck coin in the name of the saint Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī with a very appropriate legend on it which the reader of Kashīr must have seen on page 101. Akram Khān, Atā's successor-designate, and Afzal Khān were dispatched by Shāh Shujā'-ul-Mulk to divest him of his authority, and to reduce him to submission. They were severely defeated at Shāhdara,² in the Rajaurī Tahsīl. And 'Atā Muhammad returned to his capital in triumph. He now built fortifications at Sopōr, Bārāmūla, at the summit of the Kūh-i-Mārān, and constructed several smaller forts and bastions in other strategic localities from Muzaffarābād onwards. He also laid stores of ammunition against future emergency. Through Dīwān Nand Rām and his own brother Jahāndād Khān, he played the stratagem of inviting Shujā'-ul-Mulk from Talamba, a town 60 miles north-east of Multān, in the Punjāb, on the confluence of the Rāvī and the Chināb. Here Shujā' was halting having been ousted from Afghānistān by Mahmūd Shāh—the second son of Timūr Shāh. Shujā' came to Kashmīr with Hasan Khān and Mullā Hidāyatullāh. 'Atā Muhammad confined the ex-king Shujā' in the Kūh-i-Mārān (Harī-parbat) fort, and dispatched his brother Jahāndād Khān to take possession of the Attock fort.

1. Hügel's Travels, page 369.

2. Shāhdara is a village with a population of 773 at the census of 1941.

How Ranjīt Singh was interested in Kashmīr.

Fath Khān, the vazīr of Shāh Mahmūd, resolved to punish the governors of Attock and Kashmīr for the assistance they had given to Zamān Shāh and Shāh Shujā'. In this manner, from the proximity of the territories, Fath Khān and Ranjīt Singh were brought into close communication. In 1813 they entered into an agreement. By this agreement it was stipulated that Ranjīt Singh, in consideration of a share of the plunder—a present of eight lakhs—and some prospective advantages, would not only allow Fath Khān a free passage through his territories but furnish him with an auxiliary force of 12,000 Sikhs. "As both parties were adepts in fraud," say Henry Beveridge in A Comprehensive History of India (Vol. III, p. 227), "each endeavoured to turn the agreement to his own sole advantage." Fath Khān, having recovered Kashmīr, refused to share the plunder alleging that the Sikhs had not assisted him according to promise. And Ranjīt Singh, by means of an intrigue, made himself master of Attock, and refused to part with it. It appears that, though Fath Khān wanted Ranjīt to observe benevolent neutrality, he did not like Ranjīt's army entering the Valley. Fath Khān, therefore, hurried into Kashmīr ahead of Ranjīt's troops led by Mohkam Chand. But Mohkam too reached by a short cut. Fath Khān refused to reward the Sikhs because they did no fighting. The chief gain to the Sikhs was the securing of the person of Shāh Shujā'.

For the broad details of this affair let us refer to Ranjīt Singh's historian Kanhayyā Lāl, the author of the Zafā-nāma-i-Ranjīt Singh,* who writes:—"At this time Fath Khān, who governed the district of Peshāwar on behalf of the sovereign of Afghānistān, sent an envoy with presents to Ranjīt Singh to inform him that 'Atā Muhammad governor of Kashmīr, had cast off his allegiance to the then ruler of Afghānistān (Mahmūd Shāh), and had been joined by the fugitive Shāh Shujā' who hoped to recover his throne by his aid: but that the governor of Kashmīr might once be reduced to obedience if the forces of Ranjīt Singh were to co-operate with those of Fath Khān and invade Kashmīr. Accordingly Ranjīt Singh ordered his command-in-chief Dīwan Mohkam Chand to march at once to Kashmīr and when the latter reached the frontier, Fath Khān likewise arrived from the direction of Peshāwar. However, when they crossed the Pīr Panjāl they found that all the chiefs and rājās of the mountains had become unfriendly, and being unwilling to meet them had gone out of their way. When the united forces reached Hūrapōr, the first point across the pass in the Kashmīr Valley, they first met with resistance at Ballapōr near Shupīān, but defeated 'Atā Muhammad, who thereupon retreated to the fort of Shergarhī which they beleaguered, and took it only after they had occupied Śrīnagar and established an Afghān administration. When the fort of Shergarhī was taken, both 'Atā Muhammad and Shāh Shujā' became prisoners, and Fath Khān, who hated them mortally, believed he had them in his grasp, but was disappointed by Mohkam Chand, who took them under his protection." But according to the Tarīkh Sultānī pp. 233-35) Fath Khān surrendered Shāh Shujā' to (Mohkam Chand. Kanhayyā Lāl continues: "The Afghān general immediately dispatched a courier to Ranjīt Singh, with a request to order both these exalted prisoners to be given up to him. The question, however, being a knotty one the Mahārājā did not wish to decide it hastily. And whilst Ranjīt was considering what answer to send, a messenger arrived from Talamba with presents from Shāh (or Wafā) Begam, the spouse of Shāh Shujā,' who had taken up her residence in that town. The lady expressed her anxiety and requested the Mahārājā not to surrender Shāh Shujā' to his enemy, Fath Khān, but to receive him at the court of Lāhore, in which case she promised to present Ranjīt Singh with the famous diamond, Kūh or Koh-i-Nūr, which she described as a gem of priceless value, and indeed a "Mountain of Light."

*Mr. E. Rehatsek's English translation in the Indian Antiquary November 1887, pages 339-40.

The Kūh-i-Nūr or the "Mountain of Light."

[The diamond Koh-i-Nūr weighing 900 ratīs, or 737½ carats, was found in the dominion of Golkanda at a place called Kollur on the Krishna river about 1656, and was presented in an uncut state by Mīr Jumla to Shāh Jahān. When Tavernier handled this diamond in Aurangzīb 'Alamgīr's treasury in 1665, it weighed 319½ ratīs or 269 9/16 carats, having been reduced to this size by a Venetian impostor named Hortensio Borgia, it is said, by wasteful grinding instead of cleaning. When in British possession, the Koh-i-Nūr was re-cut at Amsterdam reducing the weight to 106½ carats.

The diamond was on the famous peacock throne which Shāh Jahān constructed. When Nādir Shāh after his conquest of Delhi took possession of the throne, and broke it up, the Koh-i-Nūr could not be found. At last, however, the discovery was made through a woman of the harem of the Emperor Muhammad Shāh that he had concealed it in his turban. Accordingly, Nādir Shāh on day politely offered him brotherhood by the usual ceremony of exchanging turbans on such an occasion, which the emperor could not refuse. Thus the diamond fell into the possession of Nādir Shāh who gave it this name in 1739. When Shāh Zamān, who had obtained it, was a fugitive, he concealed the diamond in the chin of a wall, but Shāh Shujā' who had recovered it, was compelled to give it to Ranjīt Singh or Ranjīt seized it as the price of hospitality. In the end, the Koh-i-Nūr came into the possession of the East India Company in 1849 who presented it to Her Majesty the Queen of England when it adorned the British Crown.

The original setting with models of the stones, as then worn, is in the Jewel House, London. The Koh-i-Nūr is however, in Queen Elizabeth's crown at present.

The gem was valued at £140,000.

It is on account of the Koh-i-Nūr and other diamonds that the word 'Golconda' has come to be a synonym in the English language for "fabulous wealth," as the Concise Oxford Dictionary and Murray's A New English Dictionary have it, an illustration being—To the lover of poetry 'Paracelsus' will always be a Golconda.]

"The Mahārājā, delighted with the offer, willingly granted the request of Shāh Begam. Meanwhile a letter arrived from 'Atā Muhammad, who likewise prayed not to be surrendered to Fath Khān. He further desired to place his services entirely at the disposal of the Mahārājā, and offered him the fort of Attock, which was yet held by Jahāndād Khān, the commandant whom he had himself appointed to it. Hereon the Mahārājā sent a very complimentary letter to Diwan Mohkam Chand thanking him for what he had done, enjoining him to crush Fath Khān altogether if he should offer further resistance, and then bring Shāh Shujā' to Lāhore with all due honour, to treat 'Atā Muhammad with the greatest consideration, and make arrangements with him for taking possession of Attock all of which the Dīwān undertook to effect.

"In due course of time the commander-in-chief, Dīwan Mohkam Chand, arrived with the army in Lāhore, bringing also Shāh Shujā' who met with a friendly reception, a obtained a provision for his maintenance. Faqīr 'Azīz-ud-Dīn having been dispatched with troops to take possession of Attock, was received with demonstrations of submission by Jahāndād Khān, who at once yielded, and a Sikh garrison having been quartered therein, its works were likewise repaired. The Mahārājā was so pleased with this successful transaction that he made 'Atā Muhammad a present of a lakh of rupees and a dress of honour. Ranjīt Singh now bethought himself of the Koh-i-Nūr, promised by Shāh (or Wafā) Begam spouse of Shāh Shujā', and desired to obtain possession of it. She had indeed joined her husband, but the "Mountain of Light" was not forthcoming until the supplies were stopped, whereon Shāh Shujā' at last surrendered it. This happy event Ranjīt Singh celebrated with a great banquet.

"The carousals of the Mahārājā had not yet come to an end when a courier arrived with the information that Fath Khān was besieging the fort of Attock, and that the garrison, being in great distress for food, expected reinforcements. Accordingly Dīwan Mohkam Chand and Ghāzī Khān were immediately dispatched at the head of numerous troops, and reached Attock by forced marches. The Sikhs found that the whole surrounding population sympathized with the besiegers, but it being the hot season, and almost unbearable to the Afghāns, accustomed to their cold mountain climate, they were defeated in the first engagement, chiefly because they suffered from burning thirst, which many hastened to quench in the river even during the battle. The siege having been abandoned, Mohkam Chand entered the fort without meeting an enemy, and after having abundantly provided the famishing garrison with food, returned with all the booty he had gained to Lāhore, where the Mahārājā overwhelmed him with honours. Having made a vow to perform a pilgrimage to Jwālāmukhī in the lower Himālayas after the prosperous termination of the Afghān campaign, the Mahārājā now hastened to fulfil it. After performing his adorations to the goddess, replenishing her treasury, and spending large sums in alms, the Mahārājā determined to surprise the ruler of Kashmīr, who was his enemy, and enrolling all the mountain chiefs to aid him with their forces, began the march. But it was autumn. The cold weather had set in. On arriving near the Pīr Panjāl Pass, it was found to be blocked up with snow. Therefore Ranjīt Singh marched back to Lāhore. It had been reported to the Mahārājā that Shāh Shujā' possessed a great deal of jewellery and precious stones, which he might be induced to part with, and messengers were at once sent with offers to purchase them, but he replied that, being a poor exile, he had nothing for sale and had already given away the priceless Koh-i-Nūr. All excuses were, however, of no avail, and he was forcibly deprived of all his precious stones, which dastardly act exasperated and perhaps also frightened him, so that he planned and executed the flight of his harem." The author, however, adds that after his harem had escaped, "Shāh Shujā' was imprisoned, but succeeded in making, during the night, a hole in the wall of the room where he had been confined, and escaping from it walked on foot and in disguise to the British frontier, where he made himself known, and met with a kind reception."

It is a serious blot on Ranjīt's character that he should have behaved in this shabby manner towards Shāh Shujā', whose elder brother Shāh Zamān had appointed him ruler of Lāhore in preference to an Afghān governor. Moreover, Shāh Shujā' was an invited guest, once a ruler, now in distress, under his own wing and shelter and maintenance, and had already robbed him of the "Mountain of Light!"

Vazīr Fath Muhammad Khān Bārakzai was ruling Kashmīr under orders of Mahmūd Shāh for some months. Fath Muhammad Khān, Dūst Muhammad Khān and Yār Muhammad Khān and 'Azīm Khān and several others were brothers as already noted. Fath Muhammad left his brother Sardār 'Azīm Khān in his place. He himself returned to Kābul. Thence he led a huge army to dispute the possession of Attock, but returned defeated.

In 1813 Sardār Muhammad 'Azīm Khān assumed charge of governorship. He allowed Pandit Sahaj Rām to continue in the post of Dīwān, and at the same time appointed Dīwān Hīra Dās as Sāhib-i-Kār or administrator.

Ranjit Singh making obeisance to Zamān Shāh on receiving the rulership of

[By courtesy of the Keeper of Government Records, West Punjāb, Lāhore.]

نواب عظیم خان

Sardār Muhammad 'Azīm Khān, Governor of Kashmīr from 1813 to 1819, who repelled Maharājā Ranjīt Singh's invasion of Kashmīr in 1814.

In 1814 Ranjīt Singh invaded Kashmīr with 10,000 Sikhs to realize the second instalment of eight lakhs of rupees which had been promised him by Vazīr Fath Khān. Ranjīt Singh himself stayed at Pūnch, while his army reached the village Salh by unfrequented paths. Another detachment reached Rayār (15 miles from Baḍgām) by way of Tosha Maidān, which is ten miles south-east of Gulmarg, and is one of the most beautiful marghs or meadows of Kashmīr. At first a detachment of the Afghān force was repulsed. The town of Shupīān was attacked. But the assault failed. The Sikhs retired to the mountain passes. 'Azīm Khān proved himself equal to the occasion, and confronted the main army. The Sikhs were considerably hampered by adverse conditions caused by heavy rain and intense cold, and Hügel adds, want of supplies. On receiving information that his Hūrapōr army had perished to the last man, Ranjīt Singh himself had to flee almost alone to Mandī on 30th July, 1814, after the complete loss of his baggage, and a great portion of his army. ‘Abdullāl Khān pursued him up to the Kotlī pass in the Mīrpu district, and returned with much booty which included Ranjīt Singh’s favourite horse, the Lailī.¹ Ranjīt Singh’s departure unnerved the Sikh army which retreated after fighting for eight days.

[The historical importance of the Tosha Maidān route² is best illustrated by the fact that it was chosen on two occasions for expeditions aiming at the invasion of Kashmīr. Mahmūd of Ghazna, in 1021 A.C., invaded Kashmīr when Abū Raihān al-Bīrūnī accompanied him. Mahmūd failed. Ranjīt too failed in this, his first invasion of Kashmīr. Hiūen Tsang visited Pūnch by the Tosha Maidān route about 633 A.C.]

Let us hear this campaign from Kanhayyā Lāl, the author of the Zafar-nāma-i-Ranjīt Singh.³ “Ranjīt Singh’s desire of subjugating Kashmīr having again become dominant, he determined to attack Muhammad ‘Azīm, the Afghān governor of the Valley, and went against him in Samat 1871 (A.C. 1814) with numerous rājās of the mountains, accompanied by their forces. He remained for some time at Siālkōt, till he was joined by his allies, and then marched into the mountains where also ‘Az Khān, the chief of Rajaurī, came to meet him, paid him homage and tribute. Then Ranjīt Singh went on to Dera Bahrām, i.e., Bahrām Gala, near the Pīr Panjāl Pass, where he encountered a force of the enemy but routed it, whereon it took refuge

1. “The Maharaja let me know that this horse (Lailī) had cost him 60 lakhs of rupees and 12,000 soldiers, having been the occasion of several wars. It was the property of Yar Mohammad Khan of Peshawar and Ranjīt Singh made the delivery of the animal to him one of the conditions of peace. The cunning Mohammedan, however, who considered this article humiliating to him, evaded it several times by sending another horse under the name of Laili, and it was owing to a plan devised by General Ventura that it was eventually obtained.”—Baron Hügel’s Travels, London, 1185, page 333.

Moorcroft, when he met Ranjīt on 8th May, 1920, at Lāhore, saw such a large body of horses as money alone could not buy. The Mahārājā had obtained from Fath Khān and his brothers of Bukhāra, as presents and by purchase, some of the horses of his stud.—The Journal of the Panjāb University Historical Society, April 1933, page 90.

Ranjīt’s passion for horses amounts almost to insanity, wrote W. G. Osborn in 1840 (page 91).

2. Dr. Stein’s Ancient Geography of Kashmīr, page 81.

3. The Indian Antiquary, Vol. 17, January 1888, page 18, English translation by E. Rehatsek.

in the fort, which was besieged and surrendered. Then he continued his progress to Pūnch, where he halted several days and sent an envoy to Muhammad 'Azīm, requiring him to submit. The latter replied that he was not subject to the Mahārājā, but to the Shāh of Kābul, who had entrusted him with the government of Kashmīr, which he was prepared to defend. Ranjīt Singh now determined immediately to attack him. Crossing the Pīr Panjāl range, Ranjīt marched to Hūrapōr, where he found numerous Afghān and Kashmīrī forces collected, and gave them battle. During the fight, so violent a fall of rain took place that it caused an inundation, and, the cold being very intense, disheartened the Punjābīs so much, that they were defeated; three of their high officers being killed, namely, Gurū Singh, Mahesha Singh, and Dāsa Singh. Whilst the battle was yet raging, the treacherous 'Az Khān, who had joined the forces of Ranjīt Singh only on compulsion, informed him that most of the troops left by him at Hūrapōr had been slain or captured. This news was false. But it was believed by the Sikhs to be true. And Ranjīt forthwith retreated in great haste to Bhimbar on the frontier of Kashmīr. But on ascertaining that 'Az Khān had made a mendacious statement, he desired immediately to return and subdue Muhammad 'Azīm. The sardārs of his court, however, made strong representations to the contrary, boldly giving him the advice to retreat with his forces to Lāhore which he was ultimately compelled to adopt. They also suggested that in Lāhore preparations might be made for renewing the campaign if necessary, but that meanwhile the Mahārājā ought to send to the Afghān governor of Kashmīr a conciliatory letter, mixed notwithstanding with threats, counselling him to abandon the siege of Hūrapōr, and to allow the Sikh garrison to depart. This Ranjīt Singh did, and was in a short time joined by the garrison of Hūrapōr, which had capitulated, and brought a friendly reply from Muhammad 'Azīm. The march back to Lāhore now began immediately, but Dīwān Mohkam Chand, who had already fallen sick in Kashmīr, expired on arriving in the capital of the Punjāb. His loss was much deplored by Ranjīt Singh, who appointed his two sons Rām Dyāl and Motī Rām to succeed him as Dīwāns, and put them in charge of various military expeditions."

Colonel D. Ochterlony,* Agent, Governor-General,

Punjab Government Records*, 1911, Vol. 2, pages 390.

"Loodeana," reports Ranjīt Singh's rout to Mr. J. Adam, Secretary to Government in the Secret, Political and Foreign Department, on 13th of August, 1814, in the following dispatch:—

"I have this instant received intelligence that Runjeet's Army, which had advanced beyond Peer Punjal, had been encountered and defeated with considerable loss by the Nāzim's troops. Runjeet had in consequence ordered their retreat which was conducted so irregularly and in such disorder as to become a disagreeable flight which all his personal exertions could not prevent, and at the date of the letter (28th July), the Kashmerean army and Rohulla Khan, the Poonch Rajah, were pursuing.

"It is probable this, with the distress experienced, will induce Runjeet to abandon his enterprise, and if he succeeds in effecting a decent retreat I am inclined to think he will owe it in some degree to his regular battalions but more to the mismanagement of the enemy opposed to him."

After this victory, 'Azīm Khān naturally called to account those leading Pandits whom he considered solely responsible for inducing Ranjīt Singh to undertake the invasion of Kashmīr. Many Muslims also suffered with the Pandits for their complicity both losing their estates, which were, however, on investigation, afterwards restored. The native soldiery was also dismissed by 'Azīm. At this time, the inhabitants of Kashmīr suffered from a famine, which claimed a heavy toll of human lives.

Shujā'-ul-Mulk, having freed himself from the grip of Vazīr Fath Khān, found himself involved in trouble with Ranjīt Singh, who took from him the Koh-i-Nūr diamond and other precious stones. Afterwards, Shujā'-ul-Mulk betook himself to British territory and resided at Ludhiāna, whence he proceeded to Kishtwār, and made an abortive attempt or two to conquer Kashmīr. At last, after obtaining help from Lord Auckland, he re-captured Kābul and Qandahār, but was assassinated after a brief reign of two years.

'Azīm Khān had entrusted the task of collecting the revenue to three Pandits, namely, Bīrbal Dar, Mīrzā Pandit, and Sukh Rām. The first-named had an amount of one lakh outstanding against him. When called upon to pay it, he addressed 'Azīm Khān impertinently. But the latter granted him a respite to pay the arrears on Mīrzā Pandit offering himself as surety. Pandit Bīrbal Dar utilized the respite in fleeing from the country. Bīrbal's flight, in mid-winter in 1818-19, across the snow-covered mountains, it is said, was made possible on account of the support of Malik Nāmdār and Malik Kāmdār of Kulgām.¹ The influence of Rājā Dhyān Singh, the brother of Gulāb Singh, procured Bīrbal Dar an easy admittance to Ranjīt Singh's court. Pandit Vasa Kāk, the director of communications, conducted Bīrbal's wife to a place of safety. But those who had aided Bīrbal Dar in his flight were traitorously betrayed by his own son-in-law, Pandit Tilok Chand. Naturally 'Azīm Khān was hard upon them.

Bīrbal's wife, Kud Māl Ded, put an end to her life.²

In 1819 A.C. Vazīr Fath Khān, whose eyes had been put out by Shāh Kāmran (son of Mahmūd and grandson of Tīmūr Shāh) ruler of Herāt, sent for 'Azīm Khān from Kashmīr to assist him in carrying out his ministerial duties and to fight Kāmran. 'Azīm Khān sent all his property with Sahaj Rām to Kābul. He handed over the governorship to his brother Jabbār Khān and started for Kābul.

1. Inside Kashmīr, page 177.

2. In Kashmīr people still speak of Bīrbal's wife having killed herself by swallowing a piece of diamond, some actually assert by licking almās. K.B. Miṃān Afzal Husain, M.Sc. (Panjab), M.A. (Cantab), Vice-Chancellor, Panjab University, drew my attention to the untenability of this theory. On referring the matter to Dr. S. D. Muzaffar, M.Sc. (Panjab), Ph.D. (Cambridge), Professor of Chemistry, the Panjab College of Engineering and Technology, Mughulpura, Lāhore, I am grateful to him for an expression of opinion on the matter in his letter dated 5th June, 1942. This opinion is as follows:—"You have asked my opinion whether anyone can die of eating a precious stone. The position regarding this question is, that, medically speaking, none of the precious stones acts as a poison in the same sense as arsenic, oxide or opium, etc. They have nothing in them to upset the various chemical processes going on in the body and especially the blood of a person. But if they are powdered in such a manner that they have sharp edges, then their action is the same as that of swallowing chips of glass with sharp edges, which cut the body tissues, and dig into them causing permanent sores which may lead to internal blood poisoning. It is well known that glass powder acts in this manner, and people have been killed by putting glass powder in their food. Therefore, you are quite right if you assume that the lady in question ate a precious stone which was presumably polished and did not have very sharp edges. But if the same stone was powdered and eaten, it could act as a poison." A well-known scholarly Hakīm of Lāhore also felt doubtful of the truth of dying by swallowing a diamond.

A large portion of Afghān troops was also dispatched to Qandahār to beat Kāmran.

Jabbār Khān was the last of the Afghān governors. Several of these governors displayed a strange propensity towards persecution and high-handedness, which finally put an end to their rule. Contrary to his predecessors, Jabbār Khān was, however, extremely mild and just, but was ordained to rule for four months only !

It has already been stated how Pandit Bīrbal Dar had gone to Ranjīt Singh's court. When the Pandit heard of 'Azīm Khān's departure for Kābul, he urged Ranjīt Singh to attack Kashmīr. Remembering his previous failure, Ranjīt Singh dreaded the suggested step. At last, Bīrbal Dar held himself responsible for all consequent loss in case of failure. As a guarantee, the Pandit surrendered his son Rāj Kāk Dar, who subsequently held a high administrative post during Sikh rule in Kashmīr, as hostage to the 'Lion of the Punjab.' The Mahārājā then agreed to follow Bīrbal's advice, knowing that a large part of the Afghān army of Kashmīr was fighting in Qandahār against Shāh Kāmran of Herāt.

An army of thirty thousand Sikhs led by experienced generals like Sardārs Hari Singh Nalwa, Jawālā Singh, Hukam Singh, Rājā Gulāb Singh and Diwan Misr Chand accordingly invaded Kashmīr. The main body was led to Thanna, and a detachment was conducted by way of the Darhāl pass. Jabbār Khān arrived with his army at Hūrapōr, and also sent a detachment to Pīr Panjāl (Pantsāl) to guard the road. The Afghāns repulsed the invaders, and mastered two guns. But they did not improve their success. The rallied Sikhs again attacked the Afghāns, and, in the words of Captain Cunningham, won an almost bloodless victory. Owing to superiority of numbers on the side of the Sikhs, Jabbār Khān's soldiers lost heart. Their leader himself, however, fought desperately. Jabbār Khān, sustained, it is said, eighteen wounds, and was picked from the battlefield by his adjutant who ordered immediate retreat. It was after many days that Jabbār recovered consciousness. Later on, taking his precious property with him, he started for Kābul by way of Bārāmūla, thus leaving the Sikhs in complete possession of Kashmīr.

The two factors that helped Ranjīt Singh in the conquest of Kashmīr in 1819 were the acquisition by him of immense booty from the fall of the fort of Multān in 1818, and the withdrawal of almost all the veteran Afghān troops from the Valley to beyond the Indus in the internecine war of Afghānistān. Raw levies left in the Valley were no match against the re-organized Sikh army well provided by the loot of Multān.

Lāhore was illuminated for three days in honour of the event. But strange to say, Ranjīt Singh himself did not enter Kashmīr on account of a superstitious dread.

The version of this victory by the author of the Zafar-nāma-i-Ranjīt Singh would bear repetition and is reproduced below : "Information having arrived from Kābul that Fath Khān, the vazīr of Mahmūd Shāh, had fallen into disgrace and been deprived of sight by the Shāhzāda Kāmran, Governor of Herāt, and that a civil war was raging in Afghānistān, the Mahārājā considered this a good opportunity for conquering both Peshāwar and Kashmīr, the more so as the latter province was now governed by Jabbār Khān, whom Muhammad 'Azīm had left as his Nā'ib, or lieutenant, when he returned to Afghānistān. Ranjīt Singh accordingly marched in the direction of Peshāwar. In a short time he crossed the Rāwī, the Chināb, and the Jhelum. But when he reached the banks of the Indus, he found no boats. Crossing it without any, in an almost miraculous manner, on horseback, with his army, he safely reached the opposite bank, conquered the fort of Khairābād and then the fort of Jahāngīr, whereon Fīrūz Khān, the chief of the Khatak tribe of Afghāns humbly came to pay him homage. When Yār Muhammad, the governor of Peshāwar, heard of the approach of Ranjīt Singh, he forthwith retired to the Yūsufzai mountains. The Mahārājā took possession of the fort, appointed Jahāndād Khān commandant of it, and departed again after a sojourn of only three days. Whilst encamped near Attock, Ranjīt Singh received the offer of a nazarāna of a lakh of rupees from Yār Muhammad, who also promised annually to pay a similar sum on condition of being re-installed governor of Peshāwar, and the Mahārājā consented. Meanwhile news arrived that Yār Muhammad had by the aid of Dūst Muhammad nevertheless attacked Jahāndād Khān, and expelled him from Peshāwar, of which they took possession. The Mahārājā at once dispatched his son, Kharak Singh, with ten thousand men to reduce the two invaders, but the blow aimed at them was avoided by the arrival of the promised and long delayed nazarāna, and a profession of allegia on the part of Yār Muhammad. Having terminated t affair to his satisfaction, the Mahārājā returned to Lāh with the money he had obtained. But as his heart was b on the conquest of Kashmīr he could not rest long.

“The army having been got ready in St. 1876 (A.C. 18 it happened at the same time that Jabbār Khān, who v at that time Governor of Kashmīr, had not only dismiss but also disgraced and reduced to penury his Dīwān, Pan Birbar by name. On this the latter hastened to Lāh breathing vengeance, and urged Ranjīt Singh to subjug Kashmīr. The Mahārājā consented to the proposal l apprehended that he would be disappointed in the enterpri as on a former occasion, unless he could obtain the certair of being supported by all the chiefs of the country. Accor ingly the said Dīwān sent letters to the Rājās, inviting th to make profession of loyalty to Ranjīt Singh, and in short time received satisfactory replies from mar Even ‘Az Khān of Bhimbar, who had been an adversar now promised to support Ranjīt Singh, as well as the ch of Rajaurī and the commandant of Pūnch, wherefore t army at once began its march. Devīchand received orde to hasten to the town of Rajaurī and there to await t arrival of the Mahārājā at the foot of the Himālayas, b meanwhile to carry on intercourse with the mounta chiefs, and to make sure of their allegiance. Ranjīt Sin went from Lāhore first to Amritsar, where he perform his devotions in the temple of Rāmdās, distributed abunda alms among the holy men of that locality, and then quick marched to Kashmīr. Here he met with a friendly rece tion, because he was accompanied by the fugitive Dīwā He nevertheless thought it convenient not to advance furth after reaching Bhimbar.

“Having for some time remained in that pleasur town and concentrated his forces, Ranjīt Singh ordere Prince Kharak Singh, with Devīchand for his lieutenant to advance. They marched with friendly chieftains till the reached the Pīr Panjāl range of the Himālayas, where the encountered the enemy, and an action of several day duration ensued in which the Sikhs were victorious. Havin thus defeated the united Afghān and Kashmīr forces, the continued their journey with the intention of conquerin Srīnagar likewise. Samad Khān and Mihrdil Khān, th two principal Afghān officers of Jabbār Khān, the Govern of Kashmīr, anxious to impede the further progress of th Sikhs, attacked them, but were again routed, and Mihrdil was slain. Jabbār Khān now took refuge in the fort of Shergarh. At this Ranjīt Singh's army meeting with no further opposition, at once entered the city of Srinagar. After having regulated the administration, the Mahārājā intended to attack Jabbār Khān, who had shut himself up in the fort of Shergarh, and found that he had evacuated it, but left all his wealth behind, which pleased Ranjīt Singh greatly. Having thus conquered Kashmīr, the Mahārājā appointed Dīwān Devichand to be Governor of it, spent a couple of weeks at Rajauri, then took the fort of 'Azimgarh with its Kashmīri garrison by a single assault and marched back to Amritsar, where he made large presents to the temple of Rāmdās and distributed alms. Lastly the Mahārājā returned to Lāhore, where he bestowed robes of honour and other rewards upon his officers and troops, ordered general rejoicings to celebrate the victory, and dispensed hospitalities in royal fashion."*

The date of the Sikh conquest of Kashmīr is contained in their war-cry, the letters of which correspond to the Bikramī year 1876 or 1819 A.C.

بولو جی واہ گرو جی کا خالصہ - بولو جی واہ گرو جی کی فتح

The end of Muslim rule in the Valley of Kashmīr.

So ends Muslim rule in Kashmīr. It began with the conversion of Rinchana in 1320 A.C. The Shāh Miris, the descendants of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn Shāh Mir or Shāh Mirzā, ruled from 1339 A.C. to 1555 A.C. The Chaks succeeded them, and ruled till 1586 when Akbar conquered Kashmīr. The Afghāns came in 1752 A.C., and their rule closed in 1819 A.C. From A.C. 1320 to 1819 it is 499 according to the solar calculation. And from A.H. 720 to 1235, it is 515 according to the lunar computation. Thus Muslim sovereignty continued in Kashmīr for nearly 500 years.

The Afghān who applied the lancet to the eyes of Humāyūn the eldest son of Timūr Shāh, and who applied it to those of Zamān Shāh and yet to those of Vazīr Fath Khān applied it also to the relation between Kābul and Kashmīr. Had the Afghān sūbadār followed the example of the Governor-General of India in his attitude to changes of government in Britain, and been indifferent to changes of Whigs and Tories or Liberals and Conservatives or Unionists and Labourites, he may not have ruined his own line and ruined the relationship between Kābul and Kashmīr. The fights of Qaisar and Kāmran for power brought about powerlessness to the Durranīs. The stupidity of the Afghān, his greed and his exactions are responsible for this loss to him. His poplar, his palace, his pulāo or pilaff, his patronage of the Pandit's ability and the impetus he gave to pashmīna (shawl or woollen fabric), and the effect his contact had on Indian dress are all forgotten. But his intolerance and extortion are still on the lips of those whose ancestors suffered at his hand and who, therefore, say :

*The Indian Antiquary, Volume 17, January 1888, pages 19—21, E. Rehatsek's English translation.

پرسیدم از خرابی گلشن ز باغبان
افغان کشید و گفت که افغان خراب کرد

The only defence of the Afghān suggested is his quick disposal of state affairs which, after the soft Mughal looked rather rough and ready.

As Muslim rule closes in Kashmīr, it is appropriate here, to proceed to discuss the cultural value of the impact of Muslim State and Society in Kashmīr. We shall treat the subject as an exposition of Muslim Polity in Kashmīr. The following three chapters, viz. VIII, IX and X will therefore, deal with that subject under three different heads. The thread of the continuity of political history will be resumed in Chapter XI with 'Kashmīr under the Sikhs.'

Pandit Mohan Lāl Kashmīrī alias Āghā Hasan Jān.

A picturesque figure forces itself on our attention here and we digress a little.

Rāmnaṭh alias Pandit Mohan Lāl, born in 1812 A.C. of an offshoot of the Zutshī's who had migrated to Delhi was a remarkable man. Mohan's father was Rāi Brahn Nāth whose father Pandit Manī Rām held a high rank at the Mughul court in the reign of Shāh 'Ālam II (1759-1806), the son of 'Ālamgīr II.*

Mohan Lāl was taught Urdu and Persian at home. He joined the English class opened in 1829 at the Persian College at Delhi that was founded in 1792 during Mughul rule. In 1829 this college acquired a large accession of income by the munificent gift of Rs. 1,70,000 from Nawwāb I'timād-ud-Daula, formerly minister at Lucknow, buried in the premises of the Anglo-Arabic College, Delhi. The English class later developed into the Delhi English College. Mohan Lāl studied here for three years. In 1831, when about 19, he went to Bukhārā as the Persian interpreter to Sir Alexander Burnes on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per annum. The earliest classmate of Mohan was Shahāmat 'Ālī, later the author of An Historical Account of the Sikhs and Afghans, who was Persian Secretary with the Mission of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Claud M. Wade, C.B., to Peshāwar in 1839. Shahāmat 'Ālī accompanied Sir Claud in the military expedition on which he was sent to conduct Shāhzāda Tīmūr, the eldest son of Shāh Shujā'-ul-Mulk, with the Sikh auxiliary force, by the Khaibar Pass to Kābul.

Mohan Lāl was probably the first Kashmīrī Pandit to receive English education, and probably the first Indian to educate his daughter in England.

After Central Asia, Mohan Lāl visited Egypt, England, Scotland, Ireland, Belgium and Germany.

Shāh Kāmran of Herāt was delighted with his Persian. Mīrzā 'Abbās of Irān created him, at the age of 20, a Knight of the Persian Order of the Lion and Sun. Shāh Shujā'-ul-Mulk, king of Afghānistān, granted him an Order of the Durrānī Empire. Mahārājā Ranjīt Singh presented him with Rs. 500 and a robe of honour. The Mughul Emperor Muhammad Akbar Shāh conferred upon him a khil'at with some jewels on a turban which His Majesty tied with his own hands. Mohan Lāl was well received in England and other countries of Europe. Queen Victoria invited him to a royal ball. Frederick William IV of Prussia entertained him at a dinner.

Life and Work of Mohan Lāl Kashmīrī 1812—1877* by Dr. Hari Rām Gupta, M.A., Ph.D., D. Litt., formerly Lecturer, Forman Christian College, Lahore, now Principal, Vaish Degree College, Bhiwānī, District Hisār, Panjāb. Minerva Book Shop, Anārkali, Lahore, 1943. The above note is based mostly on this book.

Mohan Lāl published a journal of his tour on his return from Central Asia in 1834. Twelve years later, this work was re-published with the addition of his travels in Europe. At this same time, he published his life of Dūst Muḥammad Khān, the Amīr of Kābul, in two volumes. His style of English received a very favourable comment from the editor of the now defunct Englishman of Calcutta.

Mohan Lāl retired at 32 on a pension of £1,000 per annum.

Nawwāb Mīrzā ‘Alā-ud-Dīn Khān (1833-1884), ruler of the Lohāru State near Delhi, whose pen-name was ‘Alī calls Mohan Lāl, in a Persian poem, Āghā Hasan Jān. Pandit Jawāhar Lāl Nehrū* says, that ‘Mohanlal became a Muslim and in Irān married a girl of the royal family, hence his title of Mīrzā. Dr. Hari Rām Gupta says that a grandson of Mohan Lāl is Āghā Hydar Hasan of Hydarābād (Deccan) who states that Mohan Lāl kept a diary from 1831 till his death though strangely enough Dr. Gupta omits to mention the fact of Mohan Lāl’s conversion to Islam. Mohan Lāl had in all seventeen wives. Wherever he went he managed to take a new wife. In his later days “he was swept away by the love of wine and women.”

At Ludhiāna Mohan Lāl built for the Shī‘as what is known as Āghā Hasan Jān’s Imāmbāra. Close by it there runs a road bearing his name. Mohan Lāl died in 1877 at the age of 65, and was buried in Delhi in his garden called the Lāl Bāgh, near Āzādpur on the Delhi-Pānīpat road. There is no tomb, but only a platform, said to contain the bodies of Mohan Lāl or Āghā Hasan Jān and his favourite wife Hydarī Begam whom Mohan Lāl obtained by implicating some male members of the Begam’s family during the confusion of the Indian Revolt. The platform is in a dilapidated condition. The garden no longer belongs to Mohan Lāl’s family.

The fascinating personality of Mohan Lāl gives us “intimate and revealing glimpses of the early days of British rule in North India, of the Punjāb under Mahārājā Ranjīt Singh, of the British campaigns through Sind and in Afghānistān, of the disasters in Kābul and of the prevailing conditions in Central Asia in the thirties of the nineteenth century." Welcoming risk and danger and facing death often enough, Mohan Lāl, in the words of Pandit Jawāhar Lāl Nehrū, "was yet a lover of pleasure and the soft ways of life—a politician and scholar, with something of the poet and the artist in him, which peeps out continually from his Memoirs and Travels."

*Jawāhar Lāl Nehrū—An Autobiography—London; Reprinted January 1941, page 14.

Major B. D. Basu,* however, reproduces John William Kaye's following remark: "The Moonshēe (Mohan Lāl) seems to have been endowed with a genius for traitor-making the lustre of which remained undimmed to the very end of the war" (History of the War in Afghanistan, Vol. I, revised edition, London, 1857, p. 459). The Major adds that the English found in Mohan Lāl "a tool ready at hand to give effect to their nefarious scheme" in creating trouble in Afghānistān.

* Rise of the Christian Power in India, second edition, Calcutta, 1931, p. 819.

IMPORTANT CONTEMPORARY EVENTS IN POLITICS AND CULTURE IN THE WORLD

DURING THE PERIOD OF MUSLIM RULE IN KASHMĪR FROM 1320 A.C. or 720 A.H. to 1819 A.C. or 1235 A.H.

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmir	Kashmīr
A.C.
1320
1323			Conversion of Rīnchen or Rīncana to Islam at the hands of Bulbul Shāh. Rīnchen becomes Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn—the first Muslim ruler of Kashmīr.
1324	‘Usmān I rules in Turkey. Multuk-ut-Tawā’if (Petty Kings) ruling in Spain 1037—1466. Ghiyās-ud-Dīn Kurt rules at Herāt. Sultān Nāsir rules over Egypt. Edward II rules in England. Robert I rules in Scotland. Charles IV rules in France. Ludwig of Bavaria rules in a part of Germany.	Ghiyās-ud-Dīn Tughluq Shāh rules in Delhi. Death of Shaikh Sharaf-ud-Dīn Abū ‘Alī Qalandar of ‘Irāq at Pānīpat-Karnāl, Punjāb. Death at Delhi of Abū’l Hasan Yamin-ud-Dīn known as Amīr Khusrav.	Commencement of the Kashmīrī Era which continued till the advent of Mughul rule in the Valley. The First Muslim Mosque in Kashmīr known as the Rīnchen or Rintan Mosque. Death of Rīnchen or Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn.

1325 Ismā'il of Granada assassinated.

Ghiyās-ud-Dīn Tughluq Shāh crushed to death under the wooden pavilion on the Jumna at Delhi.

Muhammad Tughluq ascends the throne.

Death of Nizām-ud-Dīn Auliā at Delhi.

The Jāmi' Masjid at Cambay constructed.

1326 Pope John XXII issues bull against the practice of magic.

Transfer of Muhammad Tughluq's capital from Delhi to Devagiri, re-named Daulatābād.

Death of Shaikh Najm-ud-Dīn Hasani Sijzi (or Sijistāni) known as Mir Hasan Dihlavi or the Sa'di of India at Daulatābād in the Deccan.

1328 Ibn Taimiyya, the forerunner of Wahhābism dies in captivity at Damascus.

Invention of gunpowder.

1330

- 1332 Walk-ud-Dīn 'Abdur Rahmān ibn Khaldūn born in Tunis on 1st Ramazān, 732 A.H.
- 1333 Public medico-botanical garden at Venice.
- 1334 Death of Shaikh Safiy-ud-Dīn (of Ardabil) after whom the Safavī dynasty of Irān is named.
- 1335 Ashikaga Shogunate begins in Japan.
- 1336 Tīmūr (signifying in Turkish 'Iron') born at Kash or Shahr-i-Sabz (the Green City) in Transoxiana.
- 1337 Giotto, the artist of Florence, Italy, died.
- 1339 The Nuzhat-ul-Qulāb of Hamdullāh Mustaufī (740 A.H.)
- 1342 Death of the poet Khwājū of Kirmān.
Abu'l Fidā becomes Prince of Hamah in Syria.
- Abū 'Abdullāh ibn Battūtah, the traveller, visits India.
- Sayyid Jalāl-ud-Dīn Ahsan Shāh rules as independent Sultān of Madura.
- Muslims seized Anegundi, the old capital of the principality that afterwards expanded into the kingdom of Vijayanagar.
- Birth of Lalla 'Ārifā, in 735 A.H. (approximate).
- Foundation of the Vijayanagar empire in the south, also of the city of Vijayanagar.
- Muhammad Tughluq sends an army to invade China but meets with a serious disaster.
- Accession of Shāh Mīr.
Suicide of Kotā Rānī.
Death of Shāh Mīr.
Accession of Sultān Jamshīd.
- Ibn Battūtah leaves the service of Muhammad Tughluq and proceeds to China.

Kashmīr

India excluding Kashmīr.

The World excluding India.

Accession of Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn.
 Death of Sultān Jamshīd on his deposition in 745 A.H.

Date.

1343

1344

Cities of southern and southwestern Germany form the Swabian League.

Muhammad Tughluq receives the diploma of investiture from the Khalifa of Egypt, Al Hākīm III.
 Poet Badr-ud-Dīn known as Badri-Chāch from his native city of Chāch (Shāsh) or Tāshqand goes on a mission from Delhi to Daulatābād.

1345

Abu'l Fidā, the author of the geographical work Taqwīm-ul-Buldān and the Universal History
'Ta'rīkh-i-Mukhtasar, dies.
 First apothecary shop in London.

1346

The Turks take the Morea.
 Cannon used at the Battle of Crecy.

1347

Calais taken by Edward III of England.
 Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, founded.
 William Ockham or Occam, the English critic of Catholicism, died.

Zafar Khān Bahman Shāh founds the Bahmani kingdom of the Deccan.

1348

Terrible pestilence in London.
 Board of Health and Quarantine

Muhammad Tughluq besieges Gir-nār near Junagadh in Kāthiāwār.

- | | | | |
|------|---|--|--|
| 1349 | Order of the Garter instituted in England. | Capture of Girnār near Junāgaḥ by Muhammad Tughluq. | Severe famine in Kashmīr, due to untimely rain. 'Alā'-ud-Dīn's generous measures save people from starvation. |
| 1351 | The Statute of Labourers regulating prices and wages passed in England. | Death of Muhammad Tughluq and accession of Firūz Tughluq. | The poet Amritdatta flourishes. |
| 1352 | Corpus Christie College, Cambridge, founded. | Ilyās Shāh unites the two Bengāl principalities. | |
| 1354 | | | Death of Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn.
Accession of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn. |
| 1355 | | Firūz Tughluq cuts a canal from the Sutlāj to Jhajjar and later another canal from the Jumna to Hānsī-Hisār.
Free hospitals for the poor by Firūz Shāh Tughluq.
Death of Ziyā-ud-Dīn Barnī, the author of the Ta'rikh-i-Firūz Shāhī , which is a complement of the Tabaqāt-i-Nāswī , in 758 A.H.
Ibn Battūtah finishes his Travels on 13th December, 1355. | |
| 1359 | | | Kashmīr starts on a career of foreign conquests, namely, those of the Punjāb, Sind, Kābul, Qandahār and Tibet. |

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmir	Kashmīr
1360	Treaty of Bretigny between England and France.	Accession of Fakhr-ud-Din Mubarak in Madura.
1361	The Turks enter Thrace and take Adrianople.	Capture of Kāngra or Nagarkōṭ by Sultān Firūz Shāh of Delhi.	Udakpatī, the Rāja of Nagarkōṭ (Kāngra), submits to Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn after his marauding expedition round Delhi.
1364	‘Allāma Taqī-ud-Dīn Maqrīzī born at Cairo. Murād I of Turkey defeats King of Hungary and Poland and Princes of Bosnia, Servia, and Wallachia on the banks of the river Maritza in Turkey flowing into the Ægean Sea.
1367	Timūr assumed the title of the Great Khān.	Completion of the great mosque at Gulbarga.
1368	Ibn-Yamin, the poet, dies. The Mongol (Yuan) dynasty of China fell and the Ming dynasty succeeded and continued till 1644.
1370	Gregory XI proscribed Wycliffe's doctrines. John of Arderne, an English surgeon, writes a surgical treatise.
1372		‘Alā’-ud-Dīn Sikandar Shāh rules as the last Sultan of Madura.	The first visit of Shāh Hamadān. Mir Muhammad born to Shāh

Madrasahs established throughout the Valley for the teaching of the Qur'ān and the imparting of Muslim learning.

Death of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn in 775 A.H.

Accession of Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn.

Birth of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, the patron-saint of Kashmir in 779 A.H. at Kaimūh village in the Advīn Pargana. Kaimūh is two miles to the west of Bijbihāra, which is 28 miles to the south-east of Srinagar.

The second visit of Shāh Hamadān.

Flood in Kashmir.

1373

1374 Petrarch, the Italian poet, died.

1377 Rome again the seat of the Pope on the return of Pope Gregory XI.

Extinction of the Muslim dynasty in Madura by Bukka I of Vijayanagar.
Atala Masjid of Jaunpur commenced.

Ibn Battūtah dies.

1378 The Great Schism. Urban VI in Rome, Clement VII at Avignon.

1379 Ibn Khaldūn, the Arab historian, proceeds from Spain to Tunis to collect material for his History.

1380 First invasion of Irān by Timūr.

Kabīr, the Muslim poet and mystic, born at Benāres.

1381 Poll-tax imposed : Peasant's Revolt in England. Wat Tyler murdered in the presence of King Richard II of England.

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmir	Kashmīr
1383	Moscow burnt.		The third visit of Shāh Hamadān.
1384	Second invasion of Irān by Tīmūr. Ibn Khaldūn appointed Chief Judge at Cairo to administer justice according to the Mālikī Law.		Death of Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī or Shāh Hamadān in 786 A.H. at Khatlān in Turkistān. He had already introduced industries, spread Islam by his persuasiveness in Kashmīr, and given impetus to Muslim learning in the Valley, himself having lived by sewing caps.
1387	Death of Shāh Shuja' of Irān, the patron of Hāfiz, the poet. Death of Wycliffe. Tīmūr's first entry into Shirāz. The legendary interview between Tīmūr and the poet Khwāja Shams-ud-Dīn Hāfiz.
1388	Khwāja Bahā-ud-Dīn Naqshband, founder of the Naqshbandī order of Dervishes, born in 718 A.H. = 1318 A.C., dies.	Death of Sultān Firūz Tughluq of Delhi.
1389	Death of Khwāja Shams-ud-Dīn Hāfiz of Shirāz.		Accession of Sultān Sikandar in 791 A.H.
1392	Third and last invasion of Irān by Tīmūr.	Dilāwar Khān, governor of Mālwa,
1393	Tīmūr occupies Baghdad.		Visit in 796 A.H. of Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī, son of Shāh Hamadān

- 1394 Tīmūr returns to Trāq. Malik Sarwar Khwāja Jahān founds the Sharqī dynasty of Jaunpur.
- 1395 Tīmūr's invasion of Russia goes as far as Moscow. Convocation of Buddhist priests in Ceylon.
- 1397 Tīmūr confers the kingdom of Khurāsān on his son Shāh Rukh. Pir Muḥammād, son of Amīr Tīmūr captures Uch.
- 1398 John Huss, Rector of the University of Prague, preaches Wycliffism. Invasion of India by Tīmūr : Sack of Delhi.
- Sikandar proceeds to Bārāmūla to meet Tīmūr. The meeting, however, does not take place.
- Jāmi' Masjid of Srinagar commenced by Sultān Sikandar.
- Persecution of Hindus in Kashmīr by Malik Sūhabhatta, prime minister or Regent during the minority of Sultān Sikandar.
- Abolition of sultee in Kashmīr.
- Establishment of the great college opposite to the Jāmi' Masjid, Srinagar.
- Sikandar's invasion of North-West India.
- Erection of the Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā or the Chilla-khāna of Shāh Hamādān by Sultān Sikandar in 798 A.H.

KASHĪR

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding India

- 1399 Tīmūr lays the foundation-stone of his magnificent Jāmi' Masjid at Samargand.
- 1400 Tīmūr captures Aleppo and Damascus.
Ibn Khaldūn accompanies the ruler of Egypt to Syria on a campaign against Tīmūr. Ibn Khaldūn is taken prisoner but soon released.
Chaucer dies.
- 1401 Persecution of Lollards who were burnt alive in England.
Sack of Baghdād by Tīmūr.
- 1402 Tīmūr writes a letter to Charles VI of France on 1st August 1402 on receipt of a letter from the latter through a Franciscan friar named Francois Ssathru stating
- Birth of Prince Shāh-rukḥ or Shāhī Khān, afterwards Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin, in 804 A.H.
Completion of the great Jāmi' Masjid of Srinagar by Sultān Sikandar.

that Tīmūr was glad that King Charles was giving a severe hiding to their common enemy Sultān Bāyazīd against whom Sigismund of Hungary was fighting and to whose help Charles had sent an army (805 A.H.).

This letter is preserved in Les Archives Nationales, Paris.

Tīmūr captures the Ottoman Sultān Bāyazīd called Yildirim (the Thunderbolt) after the Battle of Ankara or Angora.

1403 Sultān Bāyazīd dies in captivity.

1404-1447 The Mosque of Gauhar Shād Āghā wife of Shāh Rukh, the son of Tīmūr, builds the noblest mosque in Central Asia (Mashhad) the crowning architectural achievement of the Mongols.

1405 Death of Tīmūr at the age of 71 (lunar years) after 36 years' reign.

1406 Ibn Khaldūn dies at the age of 78 on 26th Ramazān, 808 A.H., at Cairo.

Alp Khān, known as Hushang Shāh Ghūrī of Mālwa, ascends the throne on the death of Dilāwar Khān and builds Shādīābād (The City of Joy) known as Māndū. The Chinese eunuch Teheng Hono visits Ceylon for the purpose of removing the tooth-relic but is plundered.

- 1407 France laid under an interdiction by the Pope.
- 1408 Frūz Shāh Bahmanī builds an Observatory near Daulatābād.
- 1411 Atala Masjid of Jaunpur completed. Rāmānanda the great Vaishnava reformer.
- 1413
- 1414 The poet Mullā 'Abdur Rahmān Nūr-ud-Dīn Jāmī born in Jām (near Herāt) in Khurāsān.
- 1415 John Huss burnt alive for preaching Wycliffism. Wood engraving introduced into the West.
- 1416
- 1417 The Assamese conquer North Eastern Bengāl. Kabir died.
- 1420 Pope Martin V preaches a crusade against the followers of John Huss of Prague.
- 1422
- Death of Sultān Sikandar in 816 A.H.
- Accession of Sultān 'Alī Shāh.
- Death of Malik Saif-ud-Dīn (Sūhabhatta).
- 'Alī Kadal over the Jhelum built by Sultān 'Alī Shāh.
- Death of Sultān 'Alī Shāh in 823. A.H.
- Accession of Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin. (Bad Shāh).
- Bad Shāh's visit to the Çarada Temple.

- 1424 The Zaḡfar-nāma of Shāraf-ud-Dīn 'Alī Yazdī.
- 1425 Insane Asylum at Saragossa, Spain.
- 1426 University of Louvain, Belgium, founded.
- 1427 Jalāl-ud-Dīn Dawwānī, the author of the Akhlāq-i-Jalālī, born in the village of Dawwān in the province of Fars in Iran.
- 1429 Siege of Orleans raised by Joan of Arc.
- 1431 Joan of Arc burnt at Rouen, France.
- Renaissance architecture.
- François Villon, robber, assassin, vagabond and lyrical poet of France, born.
- 1432
- 1433
- 1435
- Ahmad Shāh of Gujrāt builds the Jami' Masjid at Ahmadābād which town is later formally founded in 1431.
- Kashmīr acquires fame in arts and crafts.
- The Royal University of Nau Shahr founded during his reign.
- Punjab and Tibet re-conquered.
- Zaina Kadal bridge over the Jhelum built by the Sultān.
- The poet Uttā Soma flourishes under the patronage of Bad Shāh.
- "Sona Lank" built by Bad Shāh in the Dal lake (approximate).
- Ahmad Shāh Bahmanī transfers his capital from Gulbarga to Bidar.
- Ahmadābād founded.
- Sultān Hushang Shāh of Mālwa dies at Māndū and Ghaznī Khān ascends the throne at Māndū.
- Rānā Kumbha ascends the throne of Chitor.
- Chānd Minar in Daulatābād citadel constructed.

KashmīrIndia excluding KashmīrDate The World excluding India

1436 . Francisco Ximenes (1436-1517), a Spanish statesman and Cardinal who, after being Queen Isabella's confessor, became Archbishop of Toledo, Provisional Regent of Castile and Cardinal and Inquisitor-General in 1507, and printed the Complutensian Polyglot Bible.

1438

1439 William Byngnam erects "God's House" at Cambridge for the training of grammar school masters.

1442 'Allāma Maqrīzī dies.

1443

1444 . The truce of Tours.

Mahmūd ascends the throne of Māndū, and founds the Khālījī dynasty of Malwa.

Death in 842 A.H. of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī, the Patron Saint of Kashmīr.

Zaina-nagar or Nan Shahr founded by Bad Shāh, near Srinagar.

The Zaina Lānk Palace built in the Wulur Lake by Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidīn.

The Tomb and Mosque of Sayyid Muhammad Madanī, a foreign envoy, were built in Srinagar in 848 A.H.

- 1445 Discovery of Cape Verde by the Portuguese.
Jalāl-ud-Dīn-as-Suyūtī, the author of the Ta'rikh-ul-Khulafā, born at Suyūt in Upper Egypt.
- 1446 First printed books—Coster in Haarlem.
- 1450 The whole of Normandy passed over to the French.
Cardinal Cusanus suggests timing the pulse and weighing blood and urine.
University of Baraelona in Spain founded.
- 1452
- Kushk Mahall—the seven-storied palace—ordered to be built at Chanderī near Lalitpur (U.P.)
- Mosque and Tomb of Shaikh Ahmad Khattī at Sarkhej, near Ahmedābād, commenced by Muhammad Shāh of Gujrat, and finished five years later by Qutb-ud-Dīn.
- Buhlāl Lodi ascends the throne of Delhi and founds the Lodi dynasty, the first Afghan empire.
Kabīr, a Khalifa of Shaikh Taqī Suhrawardī and later of Shaikh Bhika Chishtī and the pupil of Rāmānand, in Hindi poetry and Hindu mysticism, flourishes.
- Mahābhārata* translated into Persian by Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī under the orders of Bad Shāh (approximate).
Death of Shaikh Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh in Sūnagar in 849 A.H.
Jonarājā, the poet and historian, flourishes under Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin.
- Death of Mir Muhammad Hamadānī at Khatlān in Turkistān.
- Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin's Dogrā Queen of Jammu—his second wife—died in 856 A.H., having given birth to four sons, one of whom died early.
Bahram fights his father Bad Shāh in 856 A.H.

- | | | | |
|------|--|---|--|
| Date | The World excluding India | India excluding Kashmīr | Kashmīr |
| 1453 | Constantinople taken by the Turks under Muhammad II, which ended the Eastern Roman Empire. It was re-named Istanbul. | | |
| | University of Glasgow founded. | | |
| 1454 | Death of Sharaf-ud-Din 'Alī of Yazd. | The Jāmi' Masjid of Māndū commenced by Hushang Shāh was completed by Mahmūd Khaljī. | |
| 1455 | War of the Roses. | | Death of Qriyabhaṭṭa, the Superintendent of the Courts of Justice of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn. |
| 1456 | Greece subjected to the Turks. | | |
| 1457 | The first newspaper in the world was printed in Nuremberg (Bavaria, Germany). | | |
| 1458 | | The Jāmi' Masjid of Jaunpur built. | |
| 1459 | | Accession of Sultān Mahmūd Begarha to the throne of Gujrat. | Death of the historian Pandit Jonarāja. |
| 1460 | | | Famine in Kashmīr.
Sopōr bridge over the Jhelum built by Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn |

- 1461 Ottomans take Trebizond.
Edward IV deposes 'Henry VI (England).
- 1464
- 1465 Casablanca, a seaport on its Atlantic coast and second town of Morocco, founded by the Portuguese on the site of the ancient Anfā which they destroyed was the meeting place of the late President Roosevelt of U. S. A. and Premier Winston Churchill of England in 1943.
- 1466
- 1467 The Venetians and the Florentines at war, for six weeks the respective armies were within walking distance of each other.
Iran conquered by Turkomāns.
- 1468
- 1469 Jām Nizām-ud-Dīn known as Nanda of Sind routs the army of Shāh Beg of Qandahār.
- Construction of the Zaina-dab in Nau Shahr, near Srinagar.
Firearms first introduced into Kashmir.
- Death of Bad Shāh's Queen Baihaqī Begam. Conflagration at Sopōr.
- Rānā Kūmbha of Chitor is stabbed to death by his son Uda.
Bābā Nanak, the founder of Sikhism, born at Talwandi re-named, according to a statement, by Ranjīt Singh as Nankāna Sālīb, now in the Shaikhūpur district of the West Punjab.
- Crops spoilt by excessive rain.
Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn took active measures for counteracting famine.

Kashmīr

India excluding Kashmīr

The World excluding India

- | | | | |
|------|--|---|---|
| 1470 | Death of Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidin in 874 A.H.
Accession of Sultān Haidar Shāh in 874 A.H. | | |
| 1471 | Printing introduced by Caxton into England.
Michael Angelo born. | | Death of Ādam Khān, eldest son of Bad Shāh, in a fight with Mughuls at Jammu in 1472 A.C. |
| 1472 | | Madrasa (or college) of Khwāja Mahmūd Gāwān at Bidar, Deccan. | Accession of Sultān Hasan Shāh in 877 A.H. |
| 1473 | The Polish astronomer, Nicolaus Koppernigk or Copernicus, born at Thorn in Poland. | | |
| 1474 | | | |
| 1475 | Edward IV of England invades France. | Khondmīr, the historian, born at Herāt. | |
| 1476 | Jāmi's Nafahāt'l Uns (Breaths of Fellowship) written. | Buhlāl Lodi annexes Jaunpur. | Encouragement of music by Hasan Shāh. |
| 1477 | | | Prince Muhammad Shāh born in 882 A.H. |
| 1479 | First edition of Avicenna printed. | | Sultān Hasan Shāh builds the bridge over the Jhelum at |

- 1480 Ivan III, Grand Duke of Moscow, throws off the Mongol allegiance. Inquisition established in Spain. Dancing in Italy.
- 1481 Death of Sultān Muhammad II of Turkey while preparing for the conquest of Italy.
- 1483 Bāyazīd II, Turkish Sultān (to 1512). Richard III deposes Edward V of England. The Yūsuf-u-Zulāikḥā by Maulānā Jāmi composed in his 70th year. Raphael born. Use made of the compass and the Sextant. Cervante's Don Quixote Part I written. Martin Luther born in November. The Lailā-va-Majnūn composed by Maulānā Jāmi.
- 1484 Great fire destroys half of Srinagar including the Jāmi' Masjid and the Khanqāh-i-Mu'allā. Sultān Hasan Shāh re-builds the Mosque and the Khānqāh.
- 1485 Richard III slain at Bosworth Field in England.
- Execution of Khwāja Mahmūd Gāwān.
- Zahir-ud-Din Muhammad Bābur born in Farghāna, Russian Turkistān now called Kirghizia.
- Expedition to conquer Balkistān and Ladākh dispatched by the Minister Sayyid Hasan Baihaqi in the reign of Sultān Hasan Shāh in 888 A.H.
- Death of Sultān Hasan Shāh in 889 A.H. Muhammad Shāh a child. Sayyid Muhammad Amin Awasi, the poet, is killed in a skirmish in 889 A.H., and is buried near Bulbul Lānkar.
- Nimai who became Chaitanya (or Awakened) the founder of Vaishnavism born at Nudea (Navādvīp), Bengāl.

Kashmīr

India excluding Kashmīr

The World excluding India

Fath Shāh ascends the throne of Kashmīr in 892 A.H.

Arrival of Shaikh or Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī in Kashmīr. Chaks converted to Shī'ism.

The Mahākālī gateway of the Narnāla Fort, near Akot in District Akola, Berar, Central Provinces, was erected by Shihāb-ud-Dīn Mahmūd Shāh.

Rise of the Ahmādnagar, Bijāpur, Gōlkanda, Bīdar and Berār kingdoms.

The great Oriya poet, Dīn Krishna Dās, author of the Rassakalola flourished about this time.

1486 Diaz goes round the Cape of Good Hope.

1487 } The Tuzkīra-tush-Shu'arā' (Memoirs of Poets) written by Amīr Daulat Shāh Samarqandī (1487).
1527 } The Bahāristān (Spring Land) of Jāmī composed (1487).

1490 } The Majālisu'n Naḡā'is of Mīr 'Alī Shīr Nawā'ī written (1490).
1512 }
1491 } Fall of Granada.
1492 }

The termination of the struggle of 800 years between the Moors and Christians of Spain is celebrated throughout Christendom. Henry VII of England rang the bells of old St. Paul in London in joy.

1492 Discovery of America by Columbus, who sees tobacco smoked for the first time in Antilles or the West Indies.

Death of Mullā Nūr-ud-Dīn 'Abdur Rahmān Jāmī at Herāt.

Within months after the fall of the alternative of conversion or exile, and about 150,000 leave the country for different parts of Europe and the Ottoman Empire.

- 1493 Appearance of syphilis in Europe.
Muhammad Shāh becomes Sultān second time in 898 A.H. at the age of 16.
Birth of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm in 900 A.H.

1494 Aberdeen University founded. The Bābur-nāma begins.

Death of Amīr Daulat Shāh of Samarqand, the author of the Tazkīratush Shu'arā' or Memoirs of Poets.

The Ahlāq-i-Muhsinī by Hāsain-i-Kāshifī, the 'Preacher.'

- 1496 Charles VIII of France invades Italy.

- 1497 Passage to the East Indies by the Cape of Good Hope discovered by Vasco da Gama, who left Lisbon on 8th July 1497.
Jesus College, Cambridge, founded.

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding India

- | | | | | |
|---------------------------------|--|---|---------------------------------------|---|
| 1498 | Insurrection of Perkin Warbeck finally quelled in England. | Vasco da Gama, whose pilot from the east coast of Africa to the west coast of Southern India, was an Arab, landed at Calicut on 20th May, 1498. A Moorish Muslim merchant from Tangier (or Tunis) introduced da Gama to the Zamorin's court, and acted as an intermediary between the Portuguese, who knew no Indian language, and the people of Malabar who knew no Western language. | India excluding Kashmīr | Mirzā Haider Dughlāt born at Tāshqand, Turkistān, Central Asia.
Earthquake in Kashmīr. |
| 1499 }
1502 } | Muslims persecuted and finally expelled from Spain after the alternative of conversion or exile had been offered to them. | Budhan, a Brāhman of Kntain (near Lucknow), asserted that Hinduism and Islam were both equally acceptable to God, if acted upon with sincerity. | Kashmīr | Mirzā Haider Dughlāt born at Tāshqand, Turkistān, Central Asia.
Earthquake in Kashmīr. |
| 1499 | Switzerland becomes an independent republic.
Maps of the world.
Ismā'il Safavī founds the Safavi Dynasty of Irān after expelling the Turkomāns. | Budhan, a Brāhman of Kntain (near Lucknow), asserted that Hinduism and Islam were both equally acceptable to God, if acted upon with sincerity. | Kashmīr | Mirzā Haider Dughlāt born at Tāshqand, Turkistān, Central Asia.
Earthquake in Kashmīr. |

The Island of St. Helena discovered by the Portuguese.

1500

Rise of Burmese literature.

Peasants' Wars in Germany.

1502, }
1514, }
1524, }
1502

Cardinal Ximenes de Cisneros (1496-1517) burnt the Muslim Library of Granada in the Square of Sivaramla, Spain.

Mahmūd Langāh rules Multān.

Jalāl-ud-Dīn Dawānī, the author of the Akhlaq-i-Jalālī, died.

Sikandar Lodi fixes his capital at Agra.

Bābur expelled by Shaibānī Khān from Farghāna.
Bābur conquers Kābul.

Sayyid Muhammad Jaunpuri, born in 1443, announces his claim to the office of the Mahdī. Later, his death.

Death of Qāsim Barīd at Bidar.

Bābur's mother Qutlugh Nigār Khānam dies.

Husain Wā'iz Kāshifī, author of the Anwār-i-Suhailī (Lights of Canopus) dies.

Christ College at Cambridge founded.

Earthquake in India and Irān.

Sultān Fath Shāh builds Fath Kadal (bridge) over the Jhelum.
Pandit Ḡrīvara Sanskritizes Mullā 'Abdur Rahmān Jāmī's Yūsuf-u-Zulāikihā during the reign of Sultān Muhammad Shāh.
Fath Shāh regains the throne of Kashmir in 911 A.H.

1505

The World excluding India.

Date

1506

Portuguese arrive at Colombo.
Portuguese defeated at Chaul by Egyptians and the ruler of Gujrāt.

1507

Albuquerque at Goa.

1509

Accession of Henry VIII of England.

The Jāmi' Masjid at Chāmpānīr completed by Sultān Mahmūd Begarha.
Defeat of Egyptians and the ruler of Gujrāt by Almeida.

1509-27

Rānā Sāngā reigns at Chitor.

1510

The Portuguese under Noronha, a nephew of Albuquerque, capture Goa Fort from Mir 'Alī.

1512

Sultān Salīm of Turkey, who rules to 1520, becomes Khālifa.

1513

Macchiavelli, suspected of treason, leaves Florence and composes
The Prince, which he dedicates to Lorenzo de Medici in the Death of Sultān Fath Shāh's chief minister, Mūsā Rīna or Raina.

Muhammad Shāh regains throne third time in 920 A.H.
Bābūr visits the tomb of Shāh
Hamadān in 920 A.H. at Khatlān in Turkistān, after 134 lunar years of Shāh Hamadān's death.
Sultān Fath Shāh third and last time regains throne in 921 A.H.
Muhammad Shāh fourth time ruler of Kashmīr in 922 A.H.

Soares' attempt on Aden.

Ibrāhīm Lodī ascends the throne.

Kabīr dies at the age of 60 at Maghar (in the District of Basti) about 15 miles from Gorakhpur, United Provinces, the shrine being in charge of Muslim Kabīr-panthīs having been built by Bijli Khān, adevotee of Kabīr.

1514

1515

1516 Sir Thomas More's Utopia (Nowhere) published in Latin.

Corpus College, Oxford, founded.

1517 Sultān Salīm of Turkey annexes
Egypt. He also takes Aleppo.
Luther propounds his theses at Wittenberg. He also translates the Bible.

1518

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmir	Kashmīr
1519	The poet Bābā Fughānī of Shīrāz dies. Magellan's expedition started to sail round the world. Cortez from Spain conquers Mexico City.	Death of Fath Shāh in exile in 925 A.H., but his dead body is brought to Kashmīr for burial.
1520	Sultān Sulaimān the Magnificent (to 1566) ruled from Baghdād to Hungary. Height of Ottoman Power, 1520-1566. Death of Raphael. Ignatius Loyola wounded at Pampeluna.	Battle of Raichūr (Deccan).	Sikandar Shāh, son of Fath Shāh, revolts against Muhammad Shāh.
1521	Luther ex-communicated by the Diet at Worms.	Shāh Beg Arghūn conquers Sind.	Shaikh Ya'qub Sarfī born.
1522	Magellan discovers the Philippines. Gulbadan Begam, the authoress of the Humāyūn-nāma , born at Kābul.	Khondmīr's Habīb-us-Siyar written. Bābūr wins the battle of Pānīpat,	Shaikh or Mir Shams-ud-Din 'Irāq of India, and enters Āgra on May 10, 1526.
1523	Turks occupy Buda.
1526

Fall of the Bahmanī Kingdom of the Deccan.

Barā Sonā Masjid (Great Golden Mosque) at Gaur, Bengal, completed by Nusrat Shāh.

Chaitanya died at the age of 42.

Invasion of Ava by the Shāns.

1527

War with the Pope.
Germans storm Rome.
Death of Macchiavelli.

1528

Sulaimān of Turkey besieged Vienna.
Sweating sickness spreads over Europe.

The State Bank of Naples, Italy, the oldest Bank, established.

Persecution of Protestants begins in France.
Henry VIII of England begins quarrelling with the Papacy.

1530

The Tuzuk-i-Bāburī written by Bābur. The Bābur-nāma ends.
Battle of Ghāgra. Conquest of Bengal.

Bābur dies in his 48th year on December 26, 1530, and Humāyūn ascends the throne.

Krisnadeva of Vijayanagar dies.
Bahādur Shāh annexes Mālhwā.
Bakshu, a singer, flourishes at the court of Bahādur Shāh.

Goa becomes the Portuguese head-

Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh I rules in 934 A.H.

Sultān Nādir Shāh, better known as Nāzūk Shāh, rules for the first time, in 935 A.H.

Sultān Muhammad Shāh ascends the throne fifth time in 936 A.H. and continues for seven years.

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmir	Kashmīr.
1531	The Royal Printing Press established in France.		Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt invades first Ladākh, then Kashmīr, and then Tibet Proper on behalf of Sultān Sa'īd Khān.
1532	Robert Stephens prints his Latin Bible.
1533	Montaigne, the first of European essayists, born in France.
1534	The Pope's authority in England abolished.	Bassein ceded to the Portuguese.	Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt returns to Ladākh from his expedition against Tibet Proper.
1535	Jesuit Order founded. Sir Thomas More beheaded in England.	Second sack of Chitor. Sher Khān Sūr defeats Humāyūn at Chaunsa.
1536	Henry VIII of England executes his Queen Anne Boleyn, on a charge of infidelity. The Inquisition is introduced by the Portuguese Church. Wales is united to England in matters of law. The first Poor Law forbids begging in England.

1537	Bahādur of Gujrat is drowned at Diu.	Death of Sultān Muhammad Shāh in 943 A.H.
1538	Death of Al-Mutawakkil, the last of the 'Abbāsīd Caliphs.	Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn II rules. Sultān Ismā'īl Shāh I succeeded Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn II in 944 A.H.
1539	The Society of Jesus founded.	Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh II succeeds Sultān Ismā'īl Shāh I in 945 A.H.
	Dissolution of the greater monasteries in England.	Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt becomes an adherent of Humāyūn.
	The 'Ardabil Mosque Carpet woven at Kāshān, Irān.
1540	Cromwell, Lord Essex, beheaded. Portuguese settle at Macao in China, 38 miles from Hong-Kong. St. Francis Xavier preaches Christianity in Japan.	Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt conquers Kashmir on the invitation of a faction of Kashmirī nobles, and acts as Humāyūn's governor but sets up Nāzuk Shāh as the Sultān of Kashmir in 946 A.H.
1541		The Tārīkh-i-Rashādī ends with the year 948 A.H. = 1541 A.C.

- | | | | |
|------|---|--|--|
| Date | The World excluding India | India excluding Kashmīr | Kashmīr |
| 1542 | Queen Catherine Howard beheaded by Henry VIII of England. Portuguese reach Japan. | Akbar born at Amarkot. Sher Khān Sūr ascends the throne. Francis Xavier lands at Goa. | |
| 1543 | Death of Copernicus. The first Protestant is burnt in Spain. | Sher Shāh Sūr builds the fortress of Rohtās (in the Jhelum district of the Punjab) to hold Gakhars in check. | |
| 1544 | Beginning of the Sharifs of Morocco. Humāyūn at the court of Shāh Tahmāsp Safavī. | Dādū, poet and reformer, born in Ahmadābād (Gujrāt) preaches against idol worship. | Death of Kājī Chak in 951 A.H. |
| 1545 | The Council of Trent (to 1563) assembled to put the Church in order. | Death of Sher Shāh Sūr. Islām (Salīm) Shāh Sūr reigns. | Naghz Beg revives shawl-weaving in Kashmīr (approximate). |
| 1546 | Death of Martin Luther. Trinity College, Cambridge, founded by Henry VIII. | Salimgarh at Delhi first built by Salīm Shāh Sūr. Circumcision of Akbar. | |
| 1547 | Cervantes born. Death of Henry VIII of England. | Tulsi Dās commences his Rāmāyana . Chānd Sultāna of Ahmadnagar born. | Use of tea introduced by Mīrzā Haider Dūghlāt (approximate). Mīrzā Haider invades Kishtwār during the time of its ruler, Rājā Rāi Singh. |
| 1548 | Rebellion in Peru. Lima University founded in | | |

- 1549 First Jesuit mission arrived in South America.
- 1551 Anatomical theatres at Paris and Montpellier.
- 1552 Somerset beheaded in England.
- 1553 Rabelais, the writer, died.
Death of Edward VI of England.
Michael Servitus burnt for 'the crime of honest thought.'
- 1554 Queen Mary of England persecutes the Protestants.
Russia annexes Astrakhan.
First tobacco seeds arrive in France from Brazil.
- 1555 Diet of Augsburg.
- 1555-56 Ridley, Latimer and Cranmer
- The Malik-i-Maidān gun cast at Bijāpur.
- Prince Hindāl killed in a skirmish.
- Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt killed at Khānpur on the Mughul road to Srinagar.
- Sultān Ismaʿil Shāh II, ascends the throne in 958 A.H.
- Severe earthquake.
- Saint Francis Xavier dies.
- Death of Islām (Salīm) Shāh Sūr.
- Sultān Habib Shāh, the last of the line of Shāh Mir, is crowned in 961 A.H.
- Habba Kadal (bridge) over the Jhelum built by Sultān Habib Shāh.
- Shāh Miris close their rule with the dethronement of Sultān Habib Shāh in 962 A.H.
- Ghāzī Chak, the first ruler of the Chak line, ascends the throne in 962 A.H.
- Defeat of Sikandar Sūr at Sirhind. Humāyūn resumes sway. Portuguese war in Ceylon.
- Khwāja Habibullāh Nau Shahri, poet, born.

Kashmīr

India excluding Kashmīr

The World excluding India

Date

- | | | | |
|---------|---|---|--|
| 1556 | Death of Ignatius Loyola, the founder of the Jesuits. | Humāyūn dies.
Akbar succeeds to the throne.
Defeat of Hemu at Panipat. | |
| 1557 | | | Arām Kashmīrī wrote his history called the Tuhfat-us-Sādāt for Sayyid Mubārak Bukhārī, the head of the powerful order of the Bukhārī Sayyids of Gujarāt, Western India. |
| 1558 | Tobacco brought from America for the first time. | | |
| 1560-62 | | | |
| 1560 | Tobacco plant introduced into Holland from France.
England adopts the smoking habit. | Subjugation of Jaunpur, Mālwa, and Khandesh by Akbar.
Dismissal of Bairam Khān by Akbar.
Akbar grants religious freedom throughout his empire.
Inquisition established by the Portuguese at Goa. | |
| 1561 | Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, born.
The Merchant Taylors School founded in London. | | |
| 1562 | Witchcraft made a capital offence in England. | Marriage of Akbar to Jaipur princess.
Tān Sain, musician and singer, | ‘Allāmah ‘Abdul Hakīm, the future pupil of Mullā Kamāl Kashmīrī, born at Siālkot, Punjāb (approxi- |

Husain Shāh Chak rules.

- 1563 End of the Council of Trent and the reform of the Catholic Church.
- 1564 Spenser's Faerie Queene.
Shakespeare born.
Galileo born.
Calvin dies.
- 1565 Parker's Advertisements for the repression of Puritanism in England issued by the archbishop.
- 1566 Death of Sulaimān the Magnificent of Turkey.
The Royal Exchange founded by Gresham in London.
Revolt of the Netherlands.
Rugby School founded.
Church of England founded.
- 1567 Faizī presented at Akbar's court.
Fall of Chitor.
Akbar re-builds the Dargāh of Khwāja Mu'in-ud-Dīn Chishtī (b. 1143 A.C., d. 1233 A.C.) at Ajmer and issues the first farmān for its upkeep by assigning certain villages.
- 1568 Mary Stuart, mother of James I of England, escapes from Scotland to England.
- Abolition of the Jizya by Akbar.
Conquest of Gondwāna by Akbar.
- Battle of Talikota: Vijayanagar empire destroyed.
Decline of Portuguese trade at Goa.
- Āgra Fort commenced by Akbar on the site of an older one, constructed by Salīm Shāh Sūr, the son of Sher Shāh Sūr.

Date

1569

Prince Salim (Jahāngīr) born.
Orders given for building Fathpur Sikrī.

Arabia is reduced by Sinān Pāshā for the Sultān of Turkey who is prayed for in Mecca.

Re-construction of the Ka'ba by Sultān Salim II.

The Pope excommunicates Queen Elizabeth of England.

1571

Cyprus taken by Turkey from the Venetians.

Birth of Kepler, the German astrologer, the pupil of Tycho Brahe the Dane (1546—1601), who was the first in Europe to have attempted to measure the distance between the earth and the sun.

Massacre of St. Bartholomew.

The revolt of the Dutch from Spain.

Abdication of Sultān Husain Shāh Chak in 978 A.H.

'Alī Shāh Chak ascends the throne. A great famine.

Embassy from Akbar to the court of Sultān 'Alī Shāh Chak.

Humāyūn's tomb at Delhi completed.

Muhammad Qāsim Hindu Shāh Firishṭa, the historian, born.

Jodhpur was conferred by Akbar on Rāi Singh of Bikaner.

Prince Murād, second son of Akbar, born at Sikrī.

Shaikh Salim Chishtī dies.

Tulsi Dās' Rāmāyaṇa completed.

First invasion of Kishtwār by 'Alī Shāh Chak.

Ya'qūb Khān Chak, grandson of 'Alī Shāh, married to Shankar

Devī (later called Fath Khātūn)

1572

- 1573 Nobunaga ends the Ashikaga Shogunate in Japan.
- 1574 Amardās, the third Sikh Gurū, died and was succeeded by his son-in-law Gurū Rām Das who enjoyed Akbar's patronage. Gurū Rām Dās founded the city of Amritsar and constructed the temple of Har-mandir in the centre of the large tank.
- Abu'l Fazl introduced at Akbar's court.
- 'Abdul Qādir Badāyūnī presented at the court of Akbar.
- 1575 The use of tobacco forbidden in the churches of Spanish America.
- Gulbadan Begam and Salīma Sultāna Mahfūz proceed to the Hajj.
- Sultān Nāzuk Shāh or Nādir Shāh's sons Haidar and Salīm attempt an invasion of Kashmir to recover the throne for the Shāh Mirīs.
- Death of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm in 984 A.H.
- 1576 The head Lāma of the chief monastery of Lhassa is made Grand Lāma of Tibet.
- Dā'ūd Khān Kararānī, the last ruler of Bengāl, subjugated by Akbar.
- Second invasion of Kishtwār by 'Alī Shāh Chak.
- Famine due to untimely snowfall.

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding India

- Date 1577 The World excluding India Ivan IV (the Terrible) took the title of Tsar of Russia.
- 1579 North's Translation of Plutarch's Lives. North's Translation of Plutarch's Akbar's Debates on religion (1578-1579). Thomas Stevens, first Englishman, in India.
- 1580 Portugal united to Spain by conquest on the death of Henry I of Portugal. Formation of the 12 Sūbahs (provinces) by Akbar.
- 1579 Death of 'Alī Shāh Chak in 987 A.H. Yūsuf Shāh Chak. Sayyid Mu-bārak Baihaqī. Lohur Shāh Chak.
- 1580 Yūsuf Shāh Chak again ascends the throne in 988 A.H.

Comet.

Gurū Rām Dās obtains a grant of the site of the Pool at Chak, supposed to have been the favourite resort of Gurū Nānak, from the Emperor Akbar on payment of Rs. 700 Akbarī to the Zamīndārs of Tung who owned the land. The place was known as Rāmdās-pur or Gurū kā Chak.—The Transformation of Sikhism by Sir Gokul Chand Nārang, 1912, page 25. But the Tawārīkh-i-Khālsa says it was a jāgīr conferred by Akbar on the Gurū.

Muhammad Qulī Qutb Shāh Ma'ānī (b. 1550, d. 1611), who begins to rule Golkunda, is possib-

- 1581 The first arrival of tobacco in Turkey and Poland (approximate).
 Birth at Gujrāt, in the West Punjāb, of Shāh Daulah, whose Chitāās (or dwarf-headed mendicants) roam about the Punjāb.
 Gurū Arjun Dev compiles the Ādi Granth (1581—1606).
 Amritsar, called Chak under Muslim rule, becomes the Holy City of the Sikhs when the fourth Gurū Rām Dās dug a large talāo or tank, and called it Anrita Sara. It was called by the Hindus Rāmdāspura—Baron Charles Hügel's Travels in Kashmir and the Punjāb, 1845, page 391.
 First Jesuit Mission at the court of Akbar.
 Din-i-Ilāhī proclaimed by Akbar.
- 1582 Death of Nobunaga of Japan.
- 1583 Hakluyt's Collection of Voyages.
 Galileo discovers the principle of the pendulum.
 Edinburgh University founded.
 Sir Walter Raleigh's expedition to Virginia.
- Habba Khātūn, queen of Yūsuf Shāh Chak, builds the bridge over the Jhelum at Pānda-chhuk.

Date The World excluding India

1584

Akbar establishes the Ilahī era.
Death of Daswanth, the artist.

1585

Arrangements for the conquest of Kashmīr by Akbar.

Kashmīr

Murder of Qāzī-l-Qūzāt Sayyid
Mūsā by Ya'qūb Shāh Chak.
Deputation of Shaikh Ya'qūb
Sarfi and Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī to the court of Akbar for intervention to save the Sunnis.
Yūsuf Shāh goes over to Bhag-wāndās.

Ya'qūb Shāh succeeds his father for a few months.

End of Chak rule after 31 years by the annexation of Kashmīr to the Mughul empire by Akbar on 1st Zīqa'd, 994 A.H. or 4th
October, 1586.

1586

Babington (England) Plot.
Battle of Zutphen in Holland.

1587

Shāh 'Abbās the Great of Irān begins at the age of seventeen his reign of 42 years (1587—1629), during which he develops the material resources of the country, extends his rule along the Persian Gulf and the Afghan Frontier, recovers territory from

- 1588 Defeat of the Spanish Armada by England.
Death of the Irānian poet, Muṭa-sham Kāshānī.
Dr. Timothy Bright invents shorthand.
- 1589 The Academy of Kieve, the first educational institution, founded in Russia.
- 1590 Isfahān made the capital of Irān.
- 1591 Queen Elizabeth founds Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland.
- 1592 Falkland Isles discovered by Davis.
The remains of Pompeii discovered.
- Francis Bacon's The Praise of Knowledge.
Comenius, the educator, born.
The Portuguese build a fort at Mombasa.
Montaigne, the French essayist, died.
- Murtazā Nizām of Ahmadnagar succeeded by his son Miran Husain.
- Death of Todar Mal and Bhagwān Dās.
- Second Jesuit Mission at the court of Akbar.
- Conquest of Sind by Akbar.
Chār Minār built at Hydarābād (Deccan).
The poet 'Urfi Shīrāzī dies in India in 919 A.H.
- Death of Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī, ex-Pādshāh of Kashmīr in 999 A.H. or 1591 A.C.
- Second visit of Akbar.
- Nizām-ud-Dīn, the author of the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī, accompanies Akbar.
- Death of Ya'qūb Sulāh Chak at Kishtwār, in exile.
- First visit of Akbar to Kashmīr. Faizī accompanies Akbar and proposes the Qasīda on Kashmīr. Also 'Urfi Shīrāzī.

India excluding Kashmīr

The World excluding India

Date

1593

Bakhshī Nizām-ud-Dīn's Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī ends.

Shaikh Mubārak dies.

Subjugation of Qandahār and Balūchistān by Akbar.

Shaikh Ya'qūb Sarfī dies.
Akbar asks Mullā 'Abdul Qādir Badāyūnī to re-write the Bahr-ul-Asmār of Mullā Ahmad Shāhābādī's translation of the Rājataranginī.

1595

Chānd Bibī successfully defends Ahmadnagar against the Mughuls.
Faizī dies.

Drake and Hawkins lead the last expedition to the West Indies.

1596

Badāyūnī's History ends.

Annexation of Berār.

Publication of Abū'l Fazl's Ā'in-i-Akbarī.

Famine in Kashmīr.
The wall around the Hari-parbat.
Fort built ostensibly as a relief measure.

The British capture Cadiz from the Spaniards.

The French philosopher, René Descartes, born at La Haye, Touraine, France.

1597

Bodley bequeaths his library to Oxford University.

Francis Bacon's Essays (1597—1623).

Third visit of Akbar.

Laying of foundation of Nāgar-nagar fort on the Hari-parbat.

1598

Philip III banished the still remaining Moors from Spain. Irreparable damage to the country

1598	Death of Hideyoshi of Japan. Francis Bacon (Lord Verulam) arrested for debt. The first Jewish synagogue in Amsterdam, Holland.
1599	The Royal Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow established. Velazquez, the Spanish painter, born.	Capture of Ahmadnagar.	Death of Prince Murād in India.
1600	Iyeyasu founds the Tokugawa Shogunate in Japan.	Capture of 'Aligarh. Occupation of Burhānpur. English East India Company formed.	Rebellion of Prince Salīm in India.
1601	Shintoism revived in Japan.	Anārkalī's tomb built by Jahāngīr in Lāhore.
1602	Shakespeare's Hamlet . Harvey becomes M.D. at	The Akbar-nāmah of Abu'l Fazl ends with the account of Akbar's fortieth year of reign. Murder of Abu'l Fazl. Gulbadan Begam dies.

Kashmīr

- The World excluding India*
- 1603 Death of Queen Elizabeth.
Accession of James I of England.
- 1604 At the Hampton Court Conference, James I of England agrees to the revision of the Bible.
- 1605 Bacon's Advancement of Learning.
Cervantes' Don Quixote Part I.
James I of England renews his earnest appeal to Sultan Ahmad of Turkey for the release of Sir Thomas Sherley languishing in prison in Istanbul for three years.
Gunpowder plot to frighten James I.
- 1606 Virginia Company founded by the English.
- India excluding Kashmīr*
- Murder of Chānd Bibī.
Khwāja Muhammad Bāqī Billah Bīrang dies at the age of 41, at Dihli in 1012 A. H.
- The Sultān of Ahmadnagar grants Poona to Māloji, the grandfather of Shivāji, in 1604.
Tobacco introduced into the Mughul empire having just been brought by Portuguese traders at Bijāpur.
- Nyaung Ram Meng, king of Burma, died.
Jahāngir succeeds to the throne on the death of Akbar.
'Abdullāh Muhammad bin Sirāj-ud-Dīn 'Umar al-Makki al-Āsafī Ulūgh Khānī, generally known as Hājī ad-Dabīr, wrote The Arabic History of Gujarat, Western India.
- Gurū Arjun disappears in the Rāvi having offended Jahāngir by his
- Akbar and Salim reconciled by Salima Begam.
Famine due to untimely rains.
Grain imported from the Punjab by Akbar's order.
Cholera raged for 40 days.
- Death of Prince Dānyāl in India.
Prince Salim arrested at Āgra.
- Akbar's death.
Jahāngir's rule begins.

Death in Srinagar of the poet,
Mazharī, who wrote in Persian (approximate).

1608 Milton born.
Saint François de Sales publishes his Vie Dévote.

1609 Independence of Holland.
Microscope invented.

Hawkins at Agra.

1609 Logarithms invented.
Shakespeare's Sonnets published without his sanction.

Mullā Wajhī, the author of the Sab Ras, who wrote, in twelve days, his masnavī entitled Qutb-i-
Mushṭarī, the love-story of Sultān Muhammad Qulī Qutb
Shāh of Golkunda and a girl of Bengāl.

1610 Final expulsion of the Moors from Spain.

1611 Baronets first created in England.

Jahāngīr marries Nūr Jahān in Hindustān.

Death of Muhammad Qulī Qutb
Shāh, ruler of Golkunda, probably the first literary writer of Urdu, as already noted in the events of 1580.

Death of Muhammad Husain Kashmirī Zarrīn Qalam (The Golden Pen), Akbar's court calligraphist.

1612 Danish East India Company
founded.

Stone basin of the Vēr-nāg Spring built by Jahāngīr.

1613 Prohibition of tobacco in Russia.
British Factory established at Sūrat by permission of Jahāngīr.

India excluding Kashmīr

The World excluding India

1614 The City of New York, U.S.A., was sold to Dutch settlers for about 24 dollars by Manhattan Indians.

Raleigh's History of the World.

The Addled Parliament of England.

1615' Cervantes' Don Quixote Part II. appears.

1616 Shakespeare and Cervantes die.
The Ta'rick-i-'Alam Arā-i-'Abbāsī composed by Sikandar Munshi.
Smoking introduced into Switzerland.

Sir Thomas Roe's embassy from James I to the Mughuls.

Udaipur conquered by Prince Khurram, afterwards Shāh Jahān.

Bubonic plague breaks out in parts of Northern India.

The poet Zuhārī of Turshīz (situated to the west of Mashhad and the north of Turbat-i-Hydari, in Khurāsān) dies in an affray in the Deccan.

The Dutch commenced trade in India near Sūrat, and established a factory at Ahmadābād.

Birth of Mullā Muhsin Fānī (approximate).

Akhun Rahnumā Kashmīrī revives carpet-weaving on his return from the Hajj via Central Asia.

Raī's-ul-Mulk Malik Haider Chā-dura writes his History of Kashmīr.

Dilāwar Khān, Governor of Kashmīr.

1618 The Thirty Years' War begins between the Evangelic Union under the Elector Palatine and the Catholic League under the

- 1619 Jahāngīr visits Kashmīr. Laying out of the Shālāmār Bāgh. Jahāngīr's inscription at Ver-nāg. Prince Khurram leaves Kashmīr to command the Imperial Forces against Malik Ambar of Ahmad-nagar. Fire in Srinagar. Jāmi' Masjid re-built second time.
- 1620 Bacon's Nomum Organum declares experience the starting point and induction the true method of knowledge. First Negro slaves landed at Jamestown in Virginia by a Dutch ship.
- 1621 Nūr Jahān's mother, 'Ismat Begam, dies.
- 1622, I'timād-ud-Daulah dies. Prince Khusrav dies. Nūr Jahan's Patthar or Nau or Shāhi Masjid built in Srinagar under the supervision of Malik Haidar of Chādura.
- 1623 Rūp Bhawānī, Kashmīrī poetess, is born.
- 1624 Tulsi Dās dies at Benāres.

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmīr	Kashmīr
1625	Charles I of England reigns.	Dutch factory at Chinsura, Bengāl.	Jahāngīr leaves Kashmīr for Lāhore.
1626	Sir Francis Bacon (Lord Verulam) died.	Ghawwāsī of Golkunda writes, in the Dakkanī Urdu, the first work of fiction entitled Saif-ul-Mulūk Shahzāda Mīr and Badr-ul-Jamāl Shahzāda Hasīm ; the second work of fiction, the Tūtī-nāma , being written in 1639, both masnavīs .
	Madame de Sévigné, the queen of letter-writers, born.	Prince Parvīz dies.
		Death of Malik Ambar.
		'Aldur Rahīm Khān-Khānān dies at Delhi.
1627	Death of Hakīm Sharaf-ud-Dīn Hasan Shifāi , court-physician of Shāh 'Abbās the Great, and a well-known poet.	Shāh Jahān succeeds Jahāngīr. Sivājī born.	Jahāngīr orders the construction of the cascade at Vērṇāg.
		Ibrāhīm Rauza built at Bījāpur.
		Death of the poet Tālib Amulī.	Jahāngīr leaves Lāhore for Kashmīr in March 1627.
			Jahāngīr dies at Bhimbar in October 1627, on his way back from Kashmīr.
1628	The English Petition of Right .	The tomb of Jahāngīr at Shāhdara built by Shāh Jahān.
1630	Gustavus-Adolphus of Sweden invades Germany.	Rājā Hirde Shāh, the Gond ruler, makes Rāmnaḡar (near Mandla, Central Provinces), his capital and builds his palace.	Enthronement of Shāh Jahān.
			The author of the Dabistān meets Āzar Kaiwān in Kashmīr.
			Mullā Tāhīr Ghanī , the great poet of Kashmīr, was born

Dāra Shukūh's bridge over the Jhelum at Bijbihārā. Shāh Jahān visits the Valley. Chashma-i-Shāhi Garden laid out.

Death of Muntāz Mahall at Burhānpur on the Tāptī, Central Provinces. Building of the Taj Mahall begun. Hugli taken from the Portuguese.

Zinat-un-Nisā' Begam born at Aurangābād (Deccan). Nashūt Bāgh laid out.

Nasim Bāgh laid out. Bridge on the Jhelum at Pāmpōr.

First consignment of pepper sent from Cochín by the English to England.

Building of the Lal Qalā' of Delhi commenced by Shah Jahān. The Assamese invaded Bengāl but were repulsed by Islām Khān. Zīb-un-Nisā' Begam born at Daulatābād, Deccan.

The author of the Dabistān meets Sūfi Mullā Ismā'il Isfahānī in Kashmīr.

The Rāvi Canal completed. Jahān Arā completes the Mūnis-ul-Arwāh, the life of Khwāja Mu'in-Gustavus-Adolphus killed at the battle of Lützen, in Saxony, Germany. The philosopher, Spinoza, born.

Cardinal Richelieu founds the Académie Française. Wallenstein, German soldier and statesman, is murdered. Lully, the musician, born.

Japan closed to Christianity and the West until 1865. The Turks defeat the Irānians and take the city of Baghdād.

1631
1632

1634

1635

1638

1639

Kashmīr

The World including India India excluding Kashmīr

The Saffinat-ul-Auliya of Prince Dārā

Shukūh in 1049 A. H.

Death of the poet, Jalāl Asūr.

The English occupy Hugli.

The Achabal Spring Garden laid out.
Bāgh-i-Ilāhi laid out near Bachhapōr which is further up Nasīm.

Hakīm 'Im-ud-Din of Chiniōt, who became Nawwāb Wazīr Khān and ruler of Lāhore in the time of Shāh Jahān, completed the Wazīr Khān's Masjid at Lāhore in 1051 A. H. = 1641 A. C.

Gurū Hargobind, who was the first Sikh Gurū to enter upon a military career, dies.

The Sakinat-ul-Auliya of Prince
Dārā Shukuh in 1052 A. H.

Tāj Mahall completed.

Mullā Muhsin Fānī at Mashhad in Irān (probable).

Date

1640

Charles I of England summons
the Long Parliament.

1641

The first attempt at Parliamentary reporting was made.

1642

Galileo died.

Newton born.

Barometer invented.

Lewis XIV of France began his reign of 72 years.

1643

Ming Empire succumbs to the rebel Li.

Wu San-Kwei opens China to the Manchūs.

The Manchūs establish themselves

- 1645 Nūr Jahān dies.
Mullā Muhsin Fānū composes the Dabistān-i-Mazāhib (probable).
Prince Dārā Shukūh writes his Risālah-i-Haqq-numā in 1646 while in Kashmīr.
- 1647 Death of the poet, Qudsī of Mashhad, in Iran.
- 1648 Milton's Letter on Education.
The first newspaper advertisement appeared.
- Transfer of the capital from Āgra, to Delhī (Shāhjahānābad).
Lāl Qalā' of Delhī completed.
Jāmi' Masjid of Jahān Rāi or Ārā Begam, at Āgra, completed.
Completion of new Delhī and the Jamuna Canal.
- 1649 Air Pump invented.
Cromwell Protector (till 1658).
Execution of Charles I of England.
- The Jāmi' Masjid at Delhī built.
Nādir-uz-Zamān Hāmid Lāhorī, the engineer-builder of the Taj Mahal, dies.
Maunucci, the Venetian physician, arrives at Āgra.
- 1650 Death of the French philosopher, René Descartes, at Stockholm, Sweden, where he had gone on invitation from Queen Christina of Sweden.
- 1651 The English acquire St. Helena.
Hobbes' Leviathan
- Hammām (bath) and Masjid for his tutor, Akhūn Mullā Shāh, built by Dārā Shukūh at Srinagar.
- Death of Abū Talīb Kalām, the poet.

The author of the Dabistān is attacked by a disease.

The Maḡma'-ul-Bahrain of Prince Dārā Shukūh.

China checks the advance of Russia south of the Amur.

Göl Gumbaz built at Bijāpur.

The philosopher, Spinoza, was summoned before the elders of the synagogue on a charge of heresy and excommunicated. Muhammad Kiuprili, Grand Vazir of Turkey under Muhammad IV (1648—87).

Aurangābād in the Deccan named as such.

Cinchona, [after the name of the Peruvian Viceroy of Spain, Del Chinchon, about 1640 A.C.], first introduced into Calcutta during the malaria epidemic of 1657.

Cromwell founds the Durham University which is suppressed at the Restoration and revived in 1837.

The first shipping paper was published.

Aurangzīb deposes Shāh Jahān

Cromwell died.

- 1659 The French dramatist Molière's first masterpiece.
- 1660 Royal Society of England founded.
- 1661 Daniel Defoe born.
Ahmad Kiuprili succeeds his father as Grand Vazir of Turkey.
Turks invade Transylvania.
K'ang Hsi commences reign in China.
- 1662 Descartes' L'Homme, his first treatise on physiology, published.
Death of Pascal, French writer.
- 1663 First hospital in American colonies (Long Island, New York).
Milton finishes his Paradise Lost.
New York captured by the English.
- 1664 French East India Company established.
- 1665 The Great Plague in England.
Newton announces the Law of Gravitation.
- 1666 The Raskol (Great Schism) in the Russian Church.
- 1668 England, Holland and Sweden form the Triple Alliance.
- Sivāji murders Afzal Khān.
Bernier arrives in India.
Dārā Shukūh executed.
- Acquisition of Bombay by the English from Portugal.
- Mir Jumla dies before reaching Dacca.
- Sivāji loots Sūrāt.
- Sivāji surrenders to Aurangzib.
Tavernier in India.
- Wali Dakhani, the Chaucer of Urdu poetry, born at Aurangzib Dacca.
- 'Allāma 'Abdul Hakīm of Siālkōṭ, the pupil of Mullā Kamāl Kashmīrī, dies.
Severe earthquake.
- Aurangzib visits Kashmīr.
Bernier comes to the Valley in the service of Nawwāb Dānishmand Khān.
Naukadal (new bridge) over the Jhelum built.
Mullā Tāhir Ghannī, the great poet of Kashmīr, dies.

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmir	Kashmīr
1669	The Turks captured Crete from the Venetians after 20 years' war.	Jāt rebellion near Mathurā.
1670	The poet Mīrzā 'Alī Muḥammad Ṣā'ib (born at Tabriz) dies at Isfahān.	Princess Raushan Rāi Begam commonly known as Raushan Arā dies.	Safā Kadal (bridge) over the Jhelum built. Lachhman Dās, known as Banda Bairāgi, born at the village Golad (Mendhar Tahsil, Pūnch State, Kashmīr).
		Buddha Singh, son of Bahār Māl, and great-great grandfather of Ranjit Singh, adopts the Sikh religion.	Mullā Muhsin Fānī , the well-known philosopher-poet of Kashmīr, and the author of the Dabistān-i-Mazāhib dies.
		Regained and Samson Agonistes .
1672	Peter I, called the Great, born in Moscow on May 30th.	Satnāmī insurrection in Mewāt.
1673	Death of Molière, the French dramatist. St. Helena was recovered from the Dutch by Captain Munden

- | | | | |
|------|---|---|--|
| 1674 | Death of Milton.
New Amsterdam finally becomes British and is re-named New York, U.S.A. | The Jāmi' or Shāhi Masjid, Lāhore, built by Aurangzib.
Sivājī enthroned as independent rājā.
Pondicherry founded by François Martin. | Fire in Srinagar.
The Jāmi' Masjid re-built third time. |
| 1675 | The Royal Observatory at Greenwich.
Dryden's Aurangzeb produced. | Sikh Gurū Tegh Bahādūr killed by a Sikh. | |
| 1676 | Death of the Turkish Grand Vazir, Ahmad Kiuprili.
Mustāfa Kiuprili, his brother, succeeds in the office. | Gurū Govind Singh born. | |
| 1676 | Leibnitz, the philosopher, visits Spinoza. | | |
| 1679 | Habeas Corpus Act in England. | Aurangzib attacks Bijāpur.
Re-imposition of the jizya. | |
| 1680 | Mullā Muhsin Faiz, poet, philosopher, and theologian of Kāshān, dies. | Death of Sivājī.
Qāzī Mahmūd Bahrī, one of the earliest poets of Urdu, born in Gogī village in the Deccan (approximate). | |
| 1682 | The Rye House Plot.
Peter the Great of Russia (to January 1725). | Sir John Child, Governor of Bombay. | Continuous rain for one month spoils crops. |

Kashmīr

India excluding Kashmīr

Date

The World excluding India

- 1683 The last Turkish attack on Vienna defeated by John III of Poland.
- 1684 Bishop George Berkeley born.
- 1685 Bach and Handel, the musicians, were born.
- John Locke's Two Treatises on Government.
- 1686 Newton's Principia published.
- 1687 Deposition of Muhammad IV and accession of Sulaimān II of Turkey.
- 1688 Revolution in England.
Flight of James II.
William of Orange enters London in December.
- 1689 Treaty of Nerchinsk between Russia and China.
- Aurangzib drives out the English from Bengal.
Fall of Bijāpur.
Fall of Golkunda.
Pondicherry was established by the French.
Bombay was constituted a presidency, and made supreme over all the East India Company's establishments in India.
- Execution of Rājā Sambhājī.
Sirāj-ud-Dīn 'Alī Khān Ārzū born.
Shāh 'Abdul Latīf of Bhīt (Hydarābād, Sind), whose poetry is a classic of the Sindhi language, was born in 1680 and died in
- Farrukh Siyar born of his Kashmīrī mother.
- Sunnis and Shī'as quarrel.
- Khwāja 'Abdur Rahīm Shaikhmān who died in Srīnagar in 1786 was born in Tashqand.

- 1690 Presbyterianism established in the national Church of Scotland. Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding published.
- 1693 Locke's Thoughts on Education. The printing press in New York. Bank of England incorporated. Voltaire born. First modern University of Halle founded in Germany.
- 1695 Henry Purcell, the musician, died. Death of La Fontaine, the greatest French poet of the 17th century. English "Assassination Plot" discovered.
- 1696 George Sale, the first English translator of the Qur'an, born. New English East India Company (General Society) incorporated.
- 1697 Establishment of Fort William at Calcutta. Embassy from Istanbul arrives at the court of Aurangzib. Job Charnock dies.
- 1698 Gurū Gobind Singh founds the Khālṣa (from the Persian word Khālīṣa) i.e., chosen or elect of God. Shāh Daulah of Gujrāt (Punjab) dies at the age of 115. The Jāmi' Masjid of Sira, Tumkur district of Mysore State, was made of hewn stone. Sayyid Mirān Hashimī, a court-poet of 'Alī 'Adil Shāh of Bijapur, died. Mughuls besiege Satārā.
- 1699 Hiḫṣullāh Khān hands over charge to Muzaḫḫar Khān as Sūbadār of Kashmīr. Khwāja Nūr-ud-Dīn Ishbarī or Ashawarī Kashmīrī brought the sacred hair of the Prophet from Bijapur. This led to the construction of the Ziyarat (shrine) at Hazrat-bal, Srinagar.

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding India

- 1699 Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge founded.
- 1701 War of the Spanish Succession.
- 1703 Leningrad founded by Peter I, and called St. Petersburg, re-named Petrograd in August 1914, and given its present name on January 26, 1924.
- 1704 Hassān-ul-Hind Mir Sayyid Ghulām ‘Alī Āzād Bilgrāmī, a well-known author, born.
- 1705 Moscow University founded by Peter the Great.
- 1706 Death of Wali-ullāh Walī Dakhani (1118 A.H.) at Ahmadābād.
- 1707 Death of Aurangzīb at Ahmad-nagar.
- 1708 Gurū Govind Singh who had gone to the Deccan on the invitation and in the service of Aurangzīb died at Nānded, Deccan, of wounds inflicted by two Pathāns whose father was killed by the Gurū.
- 1709 Russia takes Kamaskatka. Fielding born.
- 1710 Influenza in Europe.
- 1711 Permanent Union of the two English East India Companies.
- 1712 Jalāl Khān, Subādār of Kashmīr.

- | | | | |
|------|--|--|---|
| 1709 | Russian prisoners first sent to Siberia. | Death of Prince Kām Bakhsh. | |
| 1710 | | Anglo-Arabic College, Delhi, founded by Nawwāb Ghāzi-ud-Dīn Khān Firūz Jang, Father of Āsaf Jah I, the founder of the Āsaf Jāhī dynasty of the Deccan. | |
| 1711 | Pope's Essay on Criticism . Addison and Steele edit the Spectator . David Hume, English philosopher, born. Death of Boileau, the French critic. The Father of Russian science as well as the Founder of Russian Literature, Michael Lomonosov, born in the village Denisovka, now Lomonosov, Archangel Gubernia. His death occurred on April 15, 1765. | | Madrasa Sayyid Mansūr established. |
| 1713 | Peace of Utrecht. Frederick the Great of Prussia born. | | Accession of the Emperor Farrukh Siyar. |

India excluding Kashmīr

Date

1714 Accession of the House of Hanover in England on the death of Queen Anne.

Tripoli becomes independent of Istanbul.

1715 The Morea re-taken by the Turks. Death of Louis the Fourteenth of France.

1718 The Battle of Cape Passero in Sicily.

Voltaire's tragedy (Œdipe.)

1719 Defoe's Robinson Crusoe.

The Westminster Hospital founded.

1720 The Duke of Savoy becomes king of Sardinia.

Muhammad bin 'Abdul Wahhāb born in Najd.

1721 Peter the Great declared Emperor of Russia.

1722 The Safavī dynasty of Irān collapses.

Famine in Isfahān.

Entered First India Company set up

Bālāji Vishwānāth Peshwā.

Bandā Bairāgī put to death.

Mirzā Muhammad Rafī' Saudā,
Urdu poet, born at Delhi.

Khawāja Mir Dard, poet of Delhi, born.

Nizām-ul-Mulk becomes Prime Minister of Delhi.

Muhammad Mir Sūz, poet of Delhi, born.

Death of the poet Bedāl in 1133 A.H.

The Delhi Mughul ruler re-took

Ajmer from the Rāthor Rājput who had seized it in 1719.

The Shahidganj Mosque, Lāhore, erected.

Murder of the Emperor Farrukh Siyar.

Accession of Emperor Muhammad Shāh.

Rūp Bhawānī, Kashmīrī poetess, dies 1720.

- 1723 Adam Smith, English Economist born.
- 1724 The South Sea Bubble.
German Philosopher, Kant, born at Königsburg in Prussia.
Compulsory education of both sexes in Saxony.
- 1725 Expulsion of Christians from Japan.
Behring, a Dane, discovers the Behring Straits.
Death of Peter the Great of Russia.
- 1726 Düst Muhammad Khān Bārakzāi, an officer of the guard in the service of Aurangzib, after thirty years' labour, made himself independent in Mālwa, and founded the State of Bhopāl, died.
- 1728 Oliver Goldsmith born.
- 1729 Nadir Quli aids the deposed Shāh of Irān and defeats the Afghāns.
- 1730 Field Marshall Alexander Surovov, a Russian soldier, strategist and tactician, born on November 24.
- Āsaf Jāh Nizām-ul-Mulk established in the Deccan.
Muhammad Taqī Mir, poet, born.
Famine due to excessive rain.

The World excluding India

Date

1731 The first French newspaper Gazette de France published in Paris.

1732 Nādir deposes Tahmāsp, the Shāh of Irān, on the ground of incompetence and sets up his infant son, 'Abbās III.

1733 Death at Birstal (near Leeds) of Dr. Joseph Priestely who discovered oxygen.

1734 George Sale's English Translation of the Qur'ān appeared. Shaikh 'Alī Ḥazīm born in 1692 at Isfahān leaves for India.

1735 End of the war between Turkey and Nādir Shāh of Irān.

1736 Ch'ien Lung becomes Chinese Emperor.

1736-7 Nādir proclaimed Shāh of Irān, and lays the foundations of Bushire

India excluding Kashmir

Earthquake and Flood.

Hājī Muhammad Muhsin, the great philanthropist, born at Hugli, near Calcutta, Bengāl.

'Allāmah Sayyid Murtazā Bilgrāmī, known in Arabia and Egypt as Zubaidī (on account of his long residence in Zubaid, Yemen) born in 1145 A.H.

Dumas, Governor of Pondicherry.

Mīr Hasan, poet, born in Delhi (approximate).

The Persian Translation of the Qur'ān by Shāh Waktullāh of Delhi (1737-8 A.C.)

Kashmīr

Mirzā Muhtasham Khān Fidā, poet, born.

Khawāja Muhammad A'zam Mustaghni Kaul (?) Didamari wrote his Wāq'at-i-Kashmīr or his History of Kashmīr called also the Tārīkh-i-A'zamī in Persian.

- 1738 Nādir Shāh captures Qandahār and Kābul. Khwāja 'Abdul Karīm of Kashmīr arrives at Shāhjahānābād (Delhī).
- 1739 Beginnings of the Methodist Movement in England. Bālājī Rāo Peshwā.
- 1740 'Abdul Wahhāb of Najd commences his Puritan Movement. Anwar-ud-Dīn, Nawwāb of Karnātic. Sa'ādat Khān Nawwāb Vazīr of Oudh. 'Alī Vardī Khān Nawwāb of Bengāl. Nazīr Akbarābādī born. Husain Dūst Khān known as Chandā Sāhib captured by the Marathas. Nānā Farnavīs born at Satārā.
- 1741 Linnaeus' botanical garden at Upsala, Sweden. An historical and critical account of the Theatres of Europe by M. Riccobon of the Italian Theatres at Paris. Rise of the Rohillas. Wars of the Karnātic begin. Begam Samrū born. 10,000 houses swept away by flood.
- 1745 Jacobite Revolt in England. Field Marshall Mikhail Kutusov of Russia, who defeated Napoleon in 1812, was born on September 16th.

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding India

- | | | | |
|------|---|---|--|
| Date | The World excluding India | India excluding Kashmīr | Kashmīr |
| 1746 | The Swiss educator, Pestalozzi, born. | Mirzā Muhammad, subsequently known as Sirāj-ud-Daula, was married at Murshidābad, Bengāl. Shāh 'Abdul 'Azīz of Delhi born in 1139 A. H. | Death of the Emperor Muhammad Shāh of Delhi. |
| 1747 | Francisco Goya, the Spanish painter, born. | Haibat Jang, father of Sirāj-ud-Daula, killed by an Afghan. | Accession of the Emperor Ahmad Shāh of Delhi. |
| 1747 | On the assassination of Nādir, his cavalry-general, Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, founds the kingdom of modern Afghanistan. | Ahmad Shāh Durrānī's first invasion of the Punjāb. | |
| 1748 | Excavation of Pompeii begins. Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. | Death of Nizām-ul-Mulk Āsaf Jāh. | |
| 1749 | Goethe born. A.G. Werner, the geologist, born. | Insurrection of the Wahhābīs. Anwar-ud-Dīn killed by Chandā Shāh at Ambūr. | Mīr 'Abdullāh Baihaqī, a scholar and poet, born in 1163 A.H. |
| 1750 | Voltaire leaves for Berlin on the invitation of Frederick the | Shāh Rafī-ud-Dīn of Delhi died at the age of 70 in 1163 A. H. Muzaffar Jang succeeds Nāsir Jang. | |

महमद शाह दुर्रानी की पहली पंजाब की आसफ जाह की हत्या.

1751

The Pennsylvania Hospital founded at Philadelphia, U.S.A.

Ghulām Hamadānī Mus-hafī, poet of Delhi, born at Amroha, U.P.
Salābat Jang succeeds Muzaffar Jang.

1752

Madame Frances D'Arblay, better known as Fanny Burney, English novelist and diarist, born.

The Sunehri (golden) Masjid of Delhi built by Farīd Khān.
Clive's defence of Arcot.

Abu'l Faṭḥ, Tipū Sultān, born of Haidar 'Alī and Fātima on Saturday. Named Tipū after the Saint Tipū Mastān Valī.

Ahmad Shāh Durrānī conquers Kashmir.

'Alī Vardī Khān cedes Orissa and pays chauth for Bengal to the Marathās.

End of Mughul rule in the Valley.

1754

Recall of Duplex to France.
King's College (later, Columbia University) founded at New York, U.S.A.

Chandā Sāhib killed by Tanjoreans.
Ghāzī-ud-Dīn deposes the Emperor Ahmad Shāh.

Famine due to excessive rain.

Sukh Jiwan Mal, Sābedār of Kashmir, a patron of literary men.

Accession of Alamgir II.
Nawāb Shujā'-ud-Daulah becomes ruler of Oudh.

1755 Kant's Theory of the Heavens.

Sa'adat Yār Khān Rangīn, Urdu poet, born.

Moscow State University founded on the initiative of the Russian scientist, Michæl Lomonosov, whose name it bears.

Date The World excluding IndiaIndia excluding Kashmīr

- 1756 Mozart, the musician, born.
- 1756-63 Seven Years' War between Austria and Prussia and their respective Allies.
- 1757 Pitt's ministry formed in England.
- 1758 Noah Webster, the lexicographer, born.
- 1759 Canada lost. Battle of Quebec.
- 1759-1806 The British Museum in London and the world's biggest library established in 1759.
- 1760 George III of England.
Voltaire's Tancrède.
- 1761 First Treaty between Turkey and Prussia.
Resignation of Pitt.
- Supposed year of the so-called Black Hole of Calcutta.
Sirāj-ud-Dīn 'Alī Khān Arzu died.
- The Battle of Plassey. Conquest of India by the British begins under Clive.
Ahmad Shāh Durrānī sacks Delhi.
- Ghāzī-ud-Dīn murders 'Ālamgīr II.
Forde captures Masulipatam.
Shāh 'Ālam is titular king of Delhi.
- Salabat Jang, hemmed in at Udayagiri, cedes large territory to Marathas.
Battle of Wandiwāsh.
Capture of Bussy.
English take Pondicherry.
Defeat of the Marathas at Pānipat
- 'Abdul Wahhāb Shā'iy begins his versified history of Kashmīr (approximate).

- 1761 Rousseau's famous novel, La Nouvelle Heloise, wherein he illustrates the superiority of feeling to intellect.
J.G. Lehman, a German miner, and one of the founders of the Science of Geology, appointed Professor of Chemistry and Director of Imperial Museum, St. Petersburg (Leningrad).
- 1762 The Shahidganj Mosque, Lāhore, seized by Sikhs.
Death of Shāh Waliullāh, divine of Delhi, born in 1159 A. H.
Haider 'Alī becomes the ruler of Mysore.
Massacre of Patna.
- 1762-63 War between England and Spain.
The Spaniards and the French invade Portugal which is saved by the English.
Peace of Paris. Canada ceded to England.
- 1763 Special professional training required of all German teachers.
Rousseau's Emile.
- 1764 Expulsion of Jesuits from France.
Battle of Buxar. Shāh 'Ālam accepts English protection.
Sikhs besiege Lāhore and compel Kabuli Mal, the governor of AhmadShāh Durrānī, to make over the town and fortress to them.
- Mir Qāsim becomes Nawwāb of Bengāl.
Nizām 'Alī imprisoned Salābat Jang and invested himself with the Sūbādārship of the Deccan.
- Sukh Jiwan Mal, governor of Kashmir, blinded and dismissed.
- Khawāja Muhammad A'zam Dida-mari, the historian, dies.

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding IndiaDate

1765 The Stamp Act in England.

Clive obtains the Divani of Bengal, Bihār and Orissa from the Mughul Emperor.

Death of Mir Ja'far.
Najm-ud-Daula succeeded his father Mir Ja'far as Nawwāb of Bengal.

Saif-ud-Daula succeeded his brother Najm-ud-Daula as Nawwāb of Bengal.

Hydarābād, the capital of Sind before the advent of British rule, was founded by Ghulam Shāh Kalhora in 1768 on the old Neran-Kot, and named after his pīr Sayyid Haidar 'Alī Shāh.

Flood.

Famine in Bengal.
Mubārak-ud-Daula, the third son of Mir Ja'far, became Nawwāb of Bengal.

Shāh 'Ālam goes to Delhi with the Marathas.

1766

1769 Napoleon Bonaparte born.

Steam Engine.

The Infant School movement begins in France.

William Smith, called "Strata" Smith, the father of English Geology, born.

1770 Beethoven born.

Hegel born.

Wordsworth born.

John Hunter's treatise on the teeth published.

Amir Sher Jawān, governor of Kashmīr.

1771

CHART OF CONTEMPORARY EVENTS

1772	First Partition of Poland.	Warren Hastings governor of Bengāl.	Shergarhī, the royal palace of Srinagar, constructed and named after the Governor Amīr Sher Jawān.
		George Hodley publishes the first grammar of Urdu or Hindustānī.
		‘Usmān Marwandī of Irān known as Qalandar Lāl Shāh Bāz died in Sehwan (Sind).
1773	Medical Society of London founded. Jesuit order suppressed by Clement XIV.		Death of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī. Accession of his son Tīmūr Shāh who removes the capital from Qandahār to Kābul. Amīrā Kadal (bridge) over the Jhelum river constructed and named after the Nāzim, Amīr Sher Jawān.
1774	Suicide of Clive in England. Death of Oliver Goldsmith.	Suppression of the Rohillas. The Regulating Act passed. Warren Hastings becomes governor-general of India. Rohilla war. Bogle’s mission to Tibet. Rām Mohan Roy born at Rādhānagar in the District of Hugli,	Khawāja Kamāl-ud-Dīn Naqshbandī killed.

India excluding KashmīrThe World excluding India

Date

1775 Jane Austen born.

Immanuel Kant reads a German translation of the works of David Hume.

Shujā'-ud-Daula becomes Naw-wāb Vazīr of Oudh.

Case of the Begams of Oudh. Bahādur Shāh II, Zafar, born. Nand Kumar was arrested under a warrant of the Supreme Court at the suit of Mohan Prashād on a charge of forgery and was tried by Sir Elijah Impey, convicted and sentenced to be hanged.

1776 American War. Declaration of Independence by the United States.

The first volume of Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire appears. Death of David Hume.

Lord Pigot, who had been governor of Madras, was arrested and imprisoned at St. Thomas Mount where he died in the following year.

Treaty of Purandhar. Mahān Singh, father of Ranjit Singh, married.

First Vernacular work printed in India, Halhead's Bengālī grammar.

Death of Shaikh 'Alī Hazīn at 1778 Herbart (German educator) born. Deaths of Chatham, Linnaeus, Rousseau, and Voltaire.

1779 First Iron Bridge in England.

Hājī Karimād Khān governor of Kashmīr under Afghan rule.

- 1780 The twelfth Earl of Derby founded the famous Derby race at Epsom in England.
End of the reign of Maria Theresa.
- 1781 Lutf 'Ali Beg Asar, author of the Atash-kadah, dies.
Pestalozzi's Leonard and Gertrude published.
- 1782 Independence of the U. S. A. recognized by England.
Legislative Independence of Ireland granted.
Froöbel (German educator) born.
- 1783 Peace of Versailles between England and France.
Sunday Schools founded.
The steamboat invented.
- Ranjit Singh born to Mahan Singh.
First Indian newspaper in English, Hicky's Bengal Gazette, appears.
Warren Hastings' duel with Francis.
The Calcutta Madrasa founded by Warren Hastings.
Death of Mirza Muhammad Rafi-Sa'ida.
Death of the poet Mirza Jan-i-Janan Mazhar of Delhi.
Chet Singh, rājā of Benāres, deposed.
- Death of Sultan Haidar 'Ali of Mysore.
Abu'l Path Tipu Sultan (named after the saint Tipu Mastan Vali) becomes Sultan of Mysore.
Treaty of Sālbaī.
- Fox's India Bill.
Warren Hastings censured by Directors.
- Fire in Singar.
Mirza Muhtasham Khan Fidā, poet, dies.
- Cholera.
Haji Karimdad Khan, the governor, dies.

India excluding Kashmīr

The World excluding India

Date

1784 First United States ship to China.
Cavendish discovers hydrogen.

Pitt's India Act.

The Bengāl Asiatic Society established by Sir William Jones.

Resignation of Warren Hastings.

Mir Hasan writes the masnavī Shīr-ul-Bayān (1199 A. H.).

Death of Nīmat Khān-i-'Āli.

Death of Khwāja Mir Dard, Urdu poet, at Delhi, at the age of 66, in 1199 A.H.

Mir Ghulam 'Alī Āzād Bilgrāmī, born in 1704, died.

The Siyar-ul-Muta'akhkhirīn, in four Volumes, is the history of India, written in Persian in 1780—85 A.C., by Sayyid Ghulam Husain Tabatabāi, a noble of Patna, who resided with his father at the Court of the Nawwābs of Bengāl.

1786 Weber, the musician, born.

Building of the Gol-ghar, a hundred foot dome-shaped structure on the banks of the Ganges, at Patna, for storing grain in times of scarcity. This old granary was Earthquake.

Āzād Khān, Karīm-dād Khān's son and successor, as Sūbadār, visits the Parī Mahall.

Mir Dād Khān, Sūbadār of Kashmīr.

used in June 1943 for storing rice and other grain on account of prevailing scarcity.

Lord Cornwallis, governor-general of India.

1787 The American Constitutional Convention met at Philadelphia, U. S. A.

1788 War between Germany and Turkey. First Federal Congress of the United States at New York. Schopenhauer born. Byron born.

1789 The French Revolution commences with the destruction of the Bastille. The French Constituent Assembly met for the first time. George Washington, President of the U.S.A.

Uranium (the metallic element of a hard white metal) essential to the construction of the atomic bomb used against the two cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan in the World War II, discovered in 1789 but not isolated until 1840.

Sayyid Ahmad Brelvī born in Safar 1201 A.H.=1786 A.C.

Trial of Warren Hastings begins in England.

The Riyāz-us-Salātīn, a history of Bengal, written by Ghulam Husain Salīm at Malda in 1788.

Ghulam Qādir Rohilla blinds Shāh 'Ālam.

Scindhia masters Delhi and curbs the Sikhs.

Shaikh Ibrāhīm Zauq, poet, born at Delhi.

Muftā Sadr-ud-Dīn Khān, Sadr-us-Sudūr, born at Delhi.

Khawāja 'Abdur Rahim Shaikhmān Naqshbandī of Tāshqand died in Srinagar and is buried in Mahalla Sayyidwārī of the city in Jamādī II, 1200 A.H.

Sir William Jones draws the attention of Orientalists to Muḥsin Fānī's Dabistān-e-Mazāhib.

- | | | | |
|-------------|---|--|---|
| Date | The World excluding India | India excluding Kashmir | Kashmīr |
| 1791 | Dr. Guillotin invents the guillotine.
Boswell's Life of Johnson .
Muhammad bin 'Alī bin Sanūsī born at Algiers, Africa.
Death of 'Abdul Wahhāb, founder of the Wahābī Movement. | The Urdu Translation of the Qur'ān
by Shāh 'Abdul Qādir of Delhī, chronogramatically entitled
Mūzīh-i-Qur'ān , completed. | Parmānand, Kashmīrī poet, born at Maṭan. |
| 1792 | France became a Republic.
Shelley born. | Permanent Settlement of Bengal.
Siege of Seringapatam.
Mir Taqī Mīr, Urdu poet,
born. | Zamān Shāh Durrānī ascends the throne as the ruler of Kābul.
Mahārājā Gulāb Singh born. |
| 1793 | The Second Partition of Poland.
Louis XVI. beheaded.
Hegel graduates from Tübingen.
Cotton gin invented. | Sir John Shore governor-general.
Mirzā Abū Tālib Khān, of Oudh and Bengal, begins his travels in England, Europe, Asia, Africa, 1793-6, after which he wrote his book of travels in Persian. | |
| | | | Babar 'Alī Khān (Mubārak-ud-Daula II) succeeded his father as Nawwāb of Bengāl, and reigned till his death in 1810. |

- 1794 The Reign of Terror in France.
National Normal School in France.
- Death of Mādhava Rāo Sindhia.
Mr. Jonathan Duncan, Resident at Benāres, endows the Sanskrit College at Benāres for teaching Hindu law and literature.
Nawwāb Asghar 'Alī Khān Nasīm, poet, born.
- 1795 Bonaparte goes to Italy as commander-in-chief.
The Third Partition of Poland.
Keats born.
Carlyle born.
- Acquittal of Warren Hastings.
The commercial enterprise of Sir John Shore to capture a free market in Nepāl by means of the embassy of Maulavī 'Abdul Qādir, son of Wāsil 'Alī Khān, Qāzī-u'l-Quzāt of Warren Hastings.
- 1796 Bonaparte's successful campaigns in Italy.
England takes Ceylon.
Āghā Muḥammad founds the Qājār dynasty of Irān. Teherān made the capital of Irān.
Comte born.
- Mīrzā Asadullāh Khān, Ghulīb, poet, born at Āgra.
Gilchrist's Urdu Grammar.
- 'Abdullāh Khān Alkozaī, Sūbadār of Kashmīr.
- 1797 Destruction of the Republic of Venice.
Reign of Fath 'Alī Shāh Qājār of Irān begins.
- Death of Āsaf-ud-Daula of Oudh.
Ranjīt Singh poisons his mother, on account of her misconduct.

Kashmīr

- Date The World excluding India India excluding Kashmīr Kashmīr
- 1798 Battle of the Nile between England and France.
 Rebellion in Ireland.
 Kant's Anthropology suggested the possibility of the animal origin of man.
 Monitorial System established.
 Samuel Butler becomes Headmaster of Shrewsbury.
 Bonaparte becomes First Consul.
 Cigars take the place of snuff.
 Napoleonic wars disseminate them throughout Europe.
- 1799 Proposed invasion of India by the Emperors Paul and Napoleon.
 Malcolm's Embassy to Iran.
 Lord Macaulay born.
 Public Examination Statute at Oxford.
 The oldest public structure in Washington, executive mansion of the Presidency of the U.S.A., the White House, standing in a
- Marquis Wellesley, governor-general of India.
 Alarm of the Afghan invasion under Zaman Shāh.
 Tipū's mission to Mauritius.
- Conquest of Mysore. Death of Tipū. Re-establishment of the Hindu Dynasty in Mysore.
 Ranjit Singh becomes master of Lahore by receiving the title of Rājā from Zaman Shāh.
 Death of Nāzā Farnavis.
 Rise of Jaswant Rāo Holkar, Amir Khān and of Ranjit Singh.
 Fort William College founded by the Marquess Wellesley at Calcutta for the training of British civil servants in the languages, law, history and customs of India.
 Mūmin Khān Mūmin, poet, born
- 'Allāmah Tafazzul Husain Kashmīrī, Prime Minister of Oudh, dies.
 Mrs. Bhawānī Dās Kāchrū, Kashmīrī poetess, comes to note.

Quarrel between Shi'as and Sunnis in Srīnagar.

The state of the Nawwābs of Karnātik was annexed to British India for their sympathy for Tipū Sultān.
Rise of the Bārakzais in Afghānistān.
Mir Amman Dihlavi writes the Bāgh-u-Bahār.

Union of Great Britain with Ireland.
George Bradshaw, English printer and publisher of Maps and Time
Tables, born.
India Office Library, which contains some 2,50,000 printed books and thousands of manuscripts principally relating to the East, founded by the East India Company.

Ranjit Singh acquires Amritsar.
Kharak Singh born to Ranjit
Singh.

Treaty of Bassien.
The Daryā-i-Latāfat (Ocean of Eloquence), first Urdu Grammar, written by Inshā'ullāh Khān
Inshā' and Mirzā Muhammad
Hasan Qatāl.

Mir Babar 'Ali Anīs, poet, born at Faizābād, United Provinces.
Shari'atullāh of Farīdpur, Bengāl, the founder of the Farāizi movement of Eastern Bengāl, performs the Hajj. The Farāizi Movement was partly religious and partly agrarian.

Peace of Amiens (with England, Spain and Holland) signed by the French.
Victor Hugo, French writer, born.

1801

1802

Date	The World excluding India	India excluding Kashmīr	Kashmīr
1803	France declares war against England.	The translation of the Qur'ān by Shāh 'Abdul Qādir finished.	Earthquake.
1804	Emerson born.	Mirzā Salāmat Ali Dabīr , poet, born at Delhi. The Dastūr-ul-Fasāhat (Urdu grammar) by Ahmad 'Ali Yaktā (1218 A.H.) War with Holkar.
	France made an Empire; Napoleon proclaimed emperor and crowned by the Pope.
	Francis II assumes the title of Francis I, Emperor of Austria.
	Hawthorne born, Benjamin Disraeli, the future Earl of Beaconsfield, born.
	Birth of Ludwig Feuerbach, a German philosopher, the author of Essence of Christianity —proving that the domination of religion over man had come to an end.
	Nudael Glinka, founder of the Russian National School of Music, born on June 1st. He died on

- 1805 Nelson's victory and death at Trafalgar.
- Failure of Lord Lake at Bharatpur. Cornwallis dies.
- Qāzī Sanāullāh Pānīpatī, the Khalīfa of Mirzā Mazhar Jān-i-Jān and the Pēr of Sir Sayyid Ahmad's father, died at Sarhind.
- 1806 Napoleon overhauls the educational system of France.
- Prussia overthrown at Jena.
- Francis of Austria drops the title of the Holy Roman Emperor.
- John Stuart Mill born in London.
- 1807 Scheme of Indian invasion by Emperors Alexander and Napoleon.
- Longfellow, poet, born.
- Louis Agassiz, the father of Natural Science in America, born.
- 1808 Commencement of the Peninsular War.
- Goethe's Faust, Part I.
- Poet Mirzā Habibullāh Qāzīmī born at Shirāz.
- Akbar II is titular king of Delhi. The Vellore Mutiny.
- Hājī Muhammad Muhsin of Hugli, Bengāl, draws up the will by which he dedicates his entire property to charity creating the Muhsin Fund.
- Lord Minto, governor-general.
- Ranjit Singh begins building the fortress of Govindgarh at Amritsar, apparently for the protection of pilgrims, but really for military purposes.
- British Missions to Kābul, the Punjab, and Sind.
- 'Atā Muhammad Khān, Sūbadār of Kashmir.
- Death of Mir 'Abdullāh Baihaqī, a Kashmirī poet.
- Death of Muftī Muhammad Sadr-ud Dīn Wafā, the author of the Masnawī, Tuhfat-ul-Ushshāq, Persian MS.
- Bārāmūla bridge over the Jhelum river built by 'Atā Muhammad Khān.

Date

1809

Tennyson born.

Abraham Lincoln born.

Charles Darwin born.

Edgar Allan Poe born.

Gogol, the Russian writer, born.

Mendelssohn, the musician, born.

W. E. Gladstone born.

Dalton's atomic theory.

Divorce of the Emperor and Empress Josephine decreed by the French Senate.

Edward Fitzgerald, translator of the Rubāyāt or Quatrains of 'Umar Khayyām, was born as Edward Purcell, but his father who had married a Miss Fitzgerald, assumed in 1818 the name of his wife's family.

Independence established by Chili. Berlin University founded.

Cavour born.

1810

Mir Taqī Mīr, poet, dies.

Nidhān Singh Atha disgusted with Ranjit Singh quits the Punjab and enters the service of 'Atā Muhammad Khān.

1811

Rise of the Pindāris.

Mir 'Abdullāh Baihaqī, a great scholar and poet, dies in 1226 A.H.

Govindgarh fortress at Amritsar put into the best state of defence by Ranjit Singh.

Treaty of Amritsar between the British and Ranjit Singh.

"Amritsar is a larger city than Lahore. The wealth of the whole Punjab seems collected in it and the great merchants have made it their abode."—Hügel's Travels, page 391.

Shāh Shujā' expelled from Afghānistān. He enters India.

The Prem Sāgar of Lallūjī Lāl appears, having been written in 1803.

Vissarion Belinsky, Russian revolutionary democrat, educationist, philosopher, and founder of the Russian School of Literary Criticism, born in Swaborg, Finland, on June 13th.

War between England and America commenced.
Napoleon's retreat from Moscow.
Charles Dickens born.

Birth of Alfred Krupp, the founder of the Krupp's Works at Essen, North West Germany.

Commencement of the German War of Independence.
The Order of Iron Cross instituted.

Hājī Muhammad Muhsin of Hugli dies.

'Atā Muhammad Khān fortifies the Pīr Pāntsal route against Sikh invasion.

Ranjit Singh obtains the Kuh-i-Nūr diamond from Shāh Shujā'.
East India Company loses trade monopoly.

Muhammad 'Azīm Khān, governor of Kashmir.
Famine.

The Pīr Pagāro or Pagwāro gaddi was established in Sind. The seventh successor, Sayyid Sibghatullāh, was hanged on 20th March, 1943.

The Gurkha War.

Ranjit Singh's attempt to get Kashmir fails.

Stephenson's Locomotive.
Charles Reade, writer, born.
The Great Ukrainian Poet, Taras Shevchenko, born in March.

Shāh 'Abdul Qādir of Delhi, born in 1167 A. H. = 1753 A.C., died at the age of 63 in 1230 A.H.

Gangā Prashād's Samsār māyā Mohājāl Sukh-Dokh-Charita, a work in Kashmīrī poetry.

Vaikrama Singh, the King of Ceylon, was deposed by the British, and Ceylon became a dependency of the British Crown.

1815 Napoleon abolishes Slave Trade.
Napoleon defeated at Waterloo.
Napoleon arrives at St. Helena to remain for life.

The Congress of Vienna.

Bismarck born.

Davy invents the Safety Lamp for coal miners.

1816 Hegel finishes his Logic.
The Stethoscope invented.
Independence established by Buenos Ayres and other Provinces in South America.

Hindu College of Calcutta established by David Hare (a watchmaker of Calcutta) and Rām Mohan Roy. This same college is now the Presidency College of Calcutta.

1817 Introduction of the Modern Printing Press into Iran.
Hegel's Encyclopaedia of the Philosophical Sciences.
Karl Marx, the author of Capital, born in Trier (Trèves), Germany, on May 5.

Sayyid Inshā'ullāh Khān Inshā' dies.
Sir Sayyid Ahmad Khān born at Delhi.
For diffusion of useful elementary knowledge, the Calcutta School Book Society was founded.

Brevet Major Sylvanus Thayer took over the superintendentcy at West Point (situated some 50 miles up the Hudson River from New York City, U. S. A.) and "developed it from a secondary school to an excellent technical college."

Muhammad 'Alī Pāshā of Egypt, under orders from the Sultān of Turkey, recovers the Holy Cities of Mecca and Medīna from the Wahhābīs, and destroys Darāya, the old capital of Najd, before Ar Riyāz, which is ten miles from the ruins of the old town.

Ivan Turgeniev, the Russian writer, born.

The first Bengālī newspaper entitled the Samāchār Darpana appeared in Serāmpore under the editorship of John Clark Marshman. Ajmer is handed over to the British by Sindhia of Gwālīar.

Mill's History of British India.

Jog Nārāin Ghossāl founds an English school in Benāres.

First cotton mills in India.

The city of Ahmadābād is ceded to the British Government.

A body of officers and citizens start performing the functions of the Municipality at Ahmadābād, which is finally inaugurated in 1834.

The Last Marāṭha war—Bāji Rāo II deposed.

The Calcutta Journal founded by Mr. Buckingham.

Death of Warren Hastings in England.

India excluding Kashmīr

The Diocese of Calcutta inaugurated.
Swāmiji Mahārāj, founder of the Rādhāswāmī Sat-sang and Dayāl Bāgh, born at Āgra, United Provinces.

Ajmer handed over to the British by Mahārāja Sindhia of Gwālīar.
Ranjit Singh takes Multān.
Capitulation of Asirgarh.

Deposition of Rāo of Kutch.

British expedition to the Persian Gulf.

Mountstuart Elphinstone, governor of Bombay.

Bahāism in India.

A terrible earthquake separated the Run of Kutch from the peninsula of India and a large portion of dry land was filled with water.

A British battalion, while fighting the Marāthas, accidentally discovers the caves of Ajanta in the Hvdarābād State of the Deccan.

The World excluding India

1819 Fath 'Alī Shāh Qājār continues his rule over Irān till he dies in 1834.

The First Factory Act passed in England through the efforts of Robert Owen.

Queen Victoria born.

Ruskin born.

Manchester Massacre and Disorders in England.

George III of England dies next year (i.e. 1820).

University of St. Petersburg founded by Alexander I of Russia.

Steamship crosses the Atlantic.

Kashmīr taken by Ranjīt Singh and annexed to the Punjāb.

Diwān Motī Rām, first Sikh governor of Kashmīr.
Cholera.

INDEX

Volume I

CHAPTERS I—VII

[Pages 1 to 341]

[Prepared by Mr. V. R. SASHITAL, M.A. (Bom.), and revised by the Author.]

- Abbé Huc, on the death of Dr. William Moorcroft, 208 f.n.
Abdāl Baṭ, Commander of Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī, 228.
Abdāl Chak, 'Alī Shāh Chak's brother, killed by Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī, 227.
Abdālī, Ahmad Shāh, see Ahmad Shāh Durrānī.
'Abdullāh, Shaikh Muhammad, a leader of the day, his ancestor accepted Islam at the hands of Mīr 'Abdur Rashīd Baihaqī, 116. See also index to Vol. II.
'Abdullāh Khān Halokozaī, his ambitious designs, 320; quarrel with Diwān Har Dās, 321; recall, 321; escape to Kashmīr, 321; defeated by Sher Muhammad and flight, 322; estimate of his régime, 3
'Abdullāh Khān Īshak Aqāsī, Afghān Governor, 309; defeated by Shīwan Mal, 310.
'Abdullāh Khān of Kāshghar, passes through Kashmīr, 278; mentioned in Moore's Lalla Rookh, 278-279.
'Abdullāh Samarqandī, an adherent of Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt, killed in the Shī'ite strife, 207.
'Abdun Nabī Muhtavī Khān or Mahbūb Khān, Mullā, see Muhtavī Khān
'Abdur Rahmān Jāmī, Mullā, his Yūsuf-u-Zulaikhā translated into Sanskrit by Pandit Črīvara, 167, 191.
'Abdur Rahmān, Sayyid, Bulbul Shāh or Bilāl Shāh, see Bulbul Shāh
'Abdur Rahīm Safāpurī, Shāh, see Shāh 'Abdur Rahīm.
'Abdur Rashīd Khān, ruler of Kāshghar, 203.
'Abdus Samad Ahrārī, Governor of Kashmīr under the Mughuls, 291.
Abhimanyu I, Buddhism receives a check in his reign, 43.
Abhimanyu II, infant son of Kshemagupta, 58; regency under Queen Diddā, 58; sets fire to his capital, 105.
Abhinavagupta, Čaiva philosopher, 59; life and writings, 59-60, 70.
Abode of Snow, The, description of Mānasbal 4, f.n. 6.
Abu'l Faiz Faizī, see Faizī.

- Abu'l Fazl, praises of Kashmīr 1, his Akbar-nāma quoted, 1, f.n. 2, description of Kashmīr in the Ā'in-i-Akbarī, 5; area of Kamrāj and Marāj, 8; reference to the legends of Nilanāga, 10, f.n. 2; on the road of Kashmīr, 17, f.n. 2; on the death and burial of Shāh Hamadār 88; records his meeting with Wāhid Sūfi, 96-97; adds music to Mirzā Haidar's accomplishments, 201; on Mirzā Haidar's administration of Kashmīr, 203.
- Abu'l Hasan 'Alī Farrukhī, poet, gives expression to Mahmūd's disappointment at not entering Kashmīr, 59.
- Abu'l Hasan Bānde, Khwāja, Afghān Governor Sukh Jīwan's adviser 309.
- Abu'l Hasan Turbatī, Khwāja, father of Nawwāb Zafar Khān Ahsa, Governor of Kashmīr under Shāh Jahān, 260, 271.
- Abū'l Ma'ālī, Sayyid, Baihaqī, see Baihaqī.
- Abu'l Ma'ālī, Shāh, quarrels with Bairam, 242.
- Abu'l Mughīth al-Husain Mansūr al-Hallāj, Muslim mystic, his saying quoted for similarity of Kashmīr Āivism with Islam, 72.
- Abu'l Qāsim Khān Sāfī, a Mughul nā'ib, 309.
- Abū Sa'īd Mirzā, King of Kāshghar, deposes Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt from the invasion of Kashmīr, 197.
- Aborigines, as first settlers in the Kashmīr Valley, 15.
- Achabal, gushing spring of, 4; village, 4; f.n. 2.
- Achala, son of Rāwanchandra, commander under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn 137; invasion of Kashmīr, 128; repulsed by Shāh Mir, 129.
- Agoka, rules over Kashmīr, 37-39; extent of his dominion, 37; religious toleration, 37; Kalhana's description of, 38; rules Kashmīr through deputy, 38; builds original town of Srinagar, 38; spread of Buddhism 38.
- Ādam Khān, son of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn or Bad Shāh by his second wife, 178; disliked by his father, 179; military exploits, 179-80; maladministration of Kamrāj, 180; stands by his father against H Khān, 180; designs on his father's life, 183; attempts to secure the throne fail, 183; flight to Hindustān, 183; conquest of Ladākh, 179-80; raises the standard of revolt against his father, 180; defeat and flight 180-1; invited by nobles, 181; intrigues for throne, 181; reduces the fort at Sopūr in Kamrāj, 180.
- Administration, pre-Islamic under Jalauka, 39; main state officials, 4 correspond to Tirthas, 40 f.n.; under Muktapīda, 53; under Sult Shams-ud-Dīn I, 133; under Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn, 135; under Sult Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 139; Islamic, under Sultān Sikandar, 144-147; under Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 174-75; under Sultān Hasan Shāh, 185, 186, 187; under Akbar, 247-48, 250-51; under Jahāngīr, 263; under Aurangzāmīr, 275-76.
- Affarwat, hill, 4; above Gulmarg, 4 f.n. 8.
- Afghān, Jewish admixture in the blood of, 17; rule over Kashmīr, 297-300; Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 297-99; Tīmūr Shāh, 300; Zamān Shāh, 300 Shujā'-ul-Mulk, 304-8; bad rule under the Governors, 308-23; clash with Sikhs, 329-338; end of—rule, 337-38.

Afghānistān, Kashmīr annexed to, at the time of Forster's visit, 14; conquered by Kadphises I, 41; comes under Hun rule during Tor māna's reign, 44; conquered by Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 138; condition c 138; becomes independent under Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 138; struggle for the throne of—under the Durrānīs, 297-341; sovereignty over Kashmīr of, 297-338.

Āftāb-i-Pinhānī, name of a descendant of Shāh Hamadān buried at Kolā 116*d*.

Afzal Bukhārī, Maulānā Muhammad, see Muhammad Afzal of Bukhārī

Afzal Husain, Miyān, draws attention to the statement about the death of Kud Māl Ded by swallowing a piece of diamond, 333 f.n.

Āghā Muhammad Khān, founder of the Kājār Dynasty of Irān, demands Balkh from Zamān Shāh, 301.

Agriculture, 22; areas reclaimed for cultivation under Muktāpīda, 5 conditions during the last years of Kārkoṭa dynasty, 55; Kashmīr water-logged valley drained under Avantivarman, 55; extensive drainage and irrigation works carried out, 55-56; irrigation under Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 175; reforms of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 175.

Ahkām-i-'Ālamgīrī, The, compiled by Mir 'Ināyatullāh Khān, Governor of Kashmīr, 290.

Ahmad Aswad, Malik, commander of forces, appointed prime minister by Sultān Hasan Shāh, 185; increasing jealousy between Sayyid Hasan Baihaqī and—, 186; tragic end, 186-7.

Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, annexes Kashmīr at the time of Forster's visit, 14; invited by nobles to annex Kashmīr, 293; Kashmīr passes on to the Afghāns under—, 294; early career of, 298; king of Afghānistān, 299; invasion of India, 299; death, 299; metes out punishment to Sukh Jiwan Mal, 311; offers governorship of Kashmīr to Mughl Begam, 312; reassertion of sovereignty over Kashmīr by, 313.

Ahmad Shāh Walī, of the Deccan, contemporary of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 171.

Ahrārī, 'Abdus Samad Khān, who defeated Banda Bairāgī, deputed to Kashmīr to punish Mullā Sharaf-ud-Dīn, 291, 292. See also 'Abdus Samad.

Ahsan, Zafar Khān, Governor of Kashmīr under the Mughuls, 3. Also see under Zafar Khān.

Ahsanullāh Khān Ahsan, see Ahsan above.

Ahwat, The, Arabic work containing the tenets of the Nūr Bakhsh sect, 109; Sir Wolsely Haig's views on the doctrines in the—, f.n. 5.

Aiba Chak, referred to by Jahāngīr in his Kishtwār campaign, 264.

A'in-i-Akbarī, The, on the Sarkār of Swāt, 87 f.n. 1; on Pakhlī, 87, 1; 238; on where Shāh Hamadān died, 88; on the erroneous inclusion of Kābul and Qandahār in Kashmīr in the reign of Akbar, 251.

Akbar, calls Kashmīr Bāgh-i-Khāss, 8; visit of Jerome Xavier to Kashmīr under—, 14; orders revision of the Bahr-ul-Asmār, 65; compares with Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 175-79; extent of empire, 175; religious tolerance, 176; defects and idiosyncracies, 176-77; family lives, 177-8; general habits, 179; sends embassy to Husain Shāh Chak, 223; Hājī Gar

- deputation to—, 223; Mīrzā Muqīm executed for bigotry by, 223; Husain Shāh Chak insulted by, 223; his ambassadors at the court of 'Alī Shāh Chak, 226; his suzerainty acknowledged by 'Alī Shāh Chak, 226; Yūsuf Shāh Chak seeks help from, 229; Kashmir campaign, 231-33; refuses to ratify the treaty between Yūsuf Shāh and Rājā Bhagavān Dās, 233; invades Kashmir to assist Sunnīs, 234; interference in Kashmir, 241; dispatches army to put down rebellion, 242-43; treatment of Yūsuf Shāh criticized, 244; administration of Kashmir, 247-48, 250-51; rebellion crushed, 247-48; builds Nāgar-nagar, 248; empire route constructed, 251. See also index to Vol. II.
- Akbar-nāma*, The, on Humāyūn's intention to invade Kashmir, 209; on Mīrzā Haidar's regency in Kashmir, 202.
- Akhāṛas*, wrestling pits, 27.
- Akhnūr, Sukh Jīwan Mal, conquers, 310; situation on the Chināb of, 310, f.n. 4.
- Akhyār-ud-Dīn, tomb in Kishtwār, 115; life and work, 116.
- 'Ālamgīr, Aurangzīb, see Aurangzīb.
- 'Ālamgīr II, father of Zuhra Begam, 299; confers the title of Rājā on Sukh Jīwan Mal, 311.
- 'Alā'-ud-Dīn Khān 'Alāī, Nawwāb Mīrzā of Lohārū, on Munshī Mohar Lāl, 340.
- 'Alā'-ud-Dīn Simnānī, Sayyid, teaches Sūfī mysticism to Shāh Hamadān 85.
- 'Alā'-ud-Dīn, Sultān, quarrels with and defeats Sultān Jamshīd, 134; accession, 134; administration, 135; reforms, 135; public works, 135; builds 'Alā'-ud-dīnpūr, 135; death and burial at 'Alā'-ud-dīnpūr 135.
- Al-Bīrūnī, accompanies Mahmūd's expedition against Kashmir, 16; collects information on Kashmir, 17; views on defence measures in Kashmir quoted, 17.
- Aldous Huxley, see Huxley.
- Alexander the Great, no reference to Kashmir in the accounts of his expedition, 13.
- 'Alībād Sarāī, 44 and f.n. 3.
- 'Alī Beg, Mīrzā Kāmran's general, penetrates within sight of Srīnagar 196.
- Al-Idrīsī, Muslim geographer, 18.
- 'Alī Beg, Mughul noble, officer of the Mughul army aiding Abdāl Māgre 195; raised by Nāzuk Shāh as Chief Minister, 195.
- 'Alī Bukhārī, Mīr, Qāzī, see Mīr 'Alī Bukhārī.
- 'Alī Ḍār, minister of Ya'qūb Shāh Chak, 233.
- 'Alī Hamadānī, Mīr Sayyid, known as Shāh Hamadān, 84; Sir Muhammad Iqbal's invocation to, 84; date of birth, 85; parentage, 85; boyhood and education, 85; his spiritual guides, 85; travels, 86; leaves for Kashmir owing to the rise of Timūr, 86, 116c; peace mission on the battle-field of Ohind, 86; pilgrimage to Mecca, 86; ill-health and death 87; various accounts of his burial, 88; his mausoleum at Khatlān, no called Kolāb, Appendix to Chapter III, pp. 116 a, b, c, d; belonged to the Kubrawī order of Sūfis, 89; missionary activities, 89; prominent co-workers, 89; trial of supernatural powers, 89; Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn acknowledges greatness of, 89-90; literary works—The Zakhīrat-ul-Mulūk, 89; other works, 90-91; his poetry—ghazals, religious and mystical poems, 91; summing up of his life by Sir M. Iqbāl, 91; further notices of his life and work, 92; his Khānqāh rebuilt during Sultān Hasan Shāh's reign, 186; his gift of a cap to Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, 193 and 194; f.n. 1; his Avrād-i-Sharīf, 116c.

'Alī Koka, appointed prime minister by Husain Shāh Chak, 222.

'Alī Malik Kashmīrī, noted by Jahāngīr in his dispatch on the conquest of Kishtwār, 264.

'Alī Mardān Khān, governor of Kashmīr under the Mughuls, 272.

'Alī Shāh Chak, intrigues for succession, 224; Husain Shāh abdicates in his favour, 224; ascends throne as 'Alī Shāh, 225; just and wise rule, 225; tolerance to Sunnīs, 225; Irānian impostor found out, 225; puts an end to feuds among nobles, 225; rise of the Baihaqīs, 225-226; ministry and wise administration of Sayyid Muhammad Mubārak Baihaqī, prime minister at the court of, 226; marriage alliance, 226; last Shāh Mīrī's invasion repulsed, 226; famine, 226; accidental death, 227.

'Alī Shāh, Sultān, announced successor by Sultān Sikandar at his death bed, 147.; proceeds to Mecca, 155; entrusts kingdom to Shāhī Khān 155; persuaded to return by the Jammu ruler, 155; advance against and defeat of Shāhī Khān, 155; accession, 155; fratricidal contest 155-56; defeat and death, 156; loss of Little Tibet, 156-57.

Al-Kāmil al-Mubarrad, reference from, 263.

'Allāfi or 'Allānī, Muhammad, see Muhammad 'Allāfi.

Allāhābād, Sir Tej Bahādūr Sapru's family moves from Delhi to, 173; Nehrū family of, 289.

'Allānī, see Muhammad 'Allāfi.

Alluvial deposits in the Kashmīr basin, 9; geologist's evidence about, 11; Almās, Shams-ud-Dīn, one of the divines who tried Yūsuf Māndav, 22; executed by Fath Khān, 223.

Al-Mas'ūdī, Muslim geographer, 18.

Alpine, Kashmīr mountain surroundings similar to, 2.

Alwar State, area compared to that of Kashmīr, 8.

Ameer Ali, Syed, see Syed Ameer Ali.

American visitor and the climate of Kashmīr, 7.

Amīra Kadal, the city vendor around, 21; bridge built by Amīr Muhammad Khān, Afghān Governor, 314.

Amīr-i-Dar, Naurūz appointed to the office of, 185.

Amīr-i-Kabīr's Letters, 90; see 'Alī Hamadānī.

Amīr Muhammad, Mahmūd of Ghazna's son, 59.

Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher, Afghān ruler, see Jawān Sher.

Amīr-ul-Muminīn, title of Mahmūd of Ghazna, adapted to Hamm by Kalhaṇa, 59.

- Amīr-ul-Umarā*, 'Hasan Khān appointed by Sultān Haidar Shāh, 1; Amritsar, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's supposed halt at, 170.
- Anandavardhana, at the court of Jayāpīḍa and Avantivarman, 56; t author of the Dhvanyāloka, 56.
- Ananta, puts down rebellion by Dāmaras, 59; military expedition, 5 his vigorous Queen, 59; abdication, 59.
- Anantnāg (Islāmābād), district of Jammu and Kashmīr, also a tah. of the same district, 7.
- Andarkōṭ, fort of, 130; Koṭā Rānī removes the court to, 130; histo. and description of, 130 f.n. 1; invested by Shāh Mīr, 131; tomb Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I at, 133; Mirzā Haidar's wife and sist. resided at, 207.
- Andijān, former capital of Farghāna, Mirzā Haidar leaves Bābur to go t 201.
- Animals of Kashmīr like the dog, the bear, the wolf, etc., 21.
- Anspach, identifies Janḍiāla with Ḡākala, 44.
- 'Āqil Khān, his couplet on Kashmīr quoted, 274.
- Aq-Quyunlīs, of Āzarbāijān, contemporaries of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn 172.
- Arabic, preserved in Bukhārā, 18.
- Arabs, Bambas claim descent from, 18; invasion of the Indus Valley b at times close to Kashmīr, 18; inhabitants of the U.S.S.R., 18-19 advance from Sind, 52; Muhammad-bin-Qāsim in Sind, 75; ; Multān, 76; advances towards Kashmīr, 76; Muhammad 'Allāfi, a Arab mercenary dismissed by Dāhir, 76; Lalitāditya appeals to th Chinese Emperor against, 52, 77; victory over the Chinese, 77.
- Architecture and sculpture, in stone, introduced by Aṣoka, 38; (Vishṇu temple at Tāpar, 51 note; of Mārtanḍa temple typicall Kashmīrian, influence of Gandhāra, 53; ruins at Avantipōr, 56 golden period in the development of Brāhmanical style under Lalitāditya and Avantivarman, 56; under Sultān Sikandar, 146-47 under Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 158-161; buildings and towns, 158 palaces and mosques, 158-161.
- Arhōm, Stone Age relics found at, 15.
- Arnold, Sir Thomas, his Caliphate quoted regarding the Sultanate, 135 his Preaching of Islam quoted in connexion with the spread of Islar in Kashmīr, 81; 115.
- Arts and Crafts, progress of—under Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 161-62 Also see Chapter IX, Volume II.
- Arūr Singh, Sardār, throws away idols from the Golden Temple, Amritsar 153.
- Ārya Samājīs, discard idolatry, 153.
- Āryans, invasion of India, 15; large element in the people of Kashmīr 19; Nāga inhabitants conquered by, 50 note; "Āryans," Germans forbidden to have dealings with Jews, 150.
- Āsaf Khān, brother of Nār Jahān, stays next to her in Kashmīr, 260
- Ashraf-ul-Wuzarā*, 'title first of Hājī Jamāl Khān, and later of Shāh Wal Khān Bāmīzai, 299.

- Asl*, Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt styles the first part of the Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī as the—, 203.
- Assessment, under Rāmādeva and his successors, 37; under Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 139; under Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 170-175.
- 'Atā Muhammad Khān, Afghān governor, strikes coins in the name of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, 101; acting governor, 321; Nā'ib under Hāfiz Sher Muhammad Khān, 322; benevolent rule, 322-23; declares independence and defeats Shujā'-ul-Mulk's army, 323.
- Atharva Veda*, The, Carkoṭa, poisonous snake mentioned in, 49 note on Kārkoṭa, Yōdhabhaṭṭa studies, 167; Shankar Pāndurang Pandit relies on Kashmīrī manuscript of Yōdhabhaṭṭa for his edition of, 167.
- Aujā*, poet, 273.
- Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr, ascends throne of Delhī, 14; allowance to Bernier granted, 14; bigotry compared to Sikandar's, 103; letter to rebel son compared to the couplet recited by Zain-ul-'Ābidīn to Ādam Khān, 183; visits Kashmīr, 273; unhappy experiences, 273-74; restored to health, 274; administration, 275-76; Qalmūq invasion of Tibet in his time, 277; death, 285-86; Lalla Rookh fastened on—as his daughter, 280.
- Avantipura, former name for Pulwāma, 7; commemorating the name of Avantivarman, 56; ruins at, 56; location and temple ruins at 56, f.n. 2; Sultān Jamshīd defeated at, 134.
- Avanti Swāmin, temple ruin at Vāntipōr, dedicated to Vishṇu, 56.
- Avantivarman, condition of Kashmīr at the accession of, 55; internal consolidation and development of the country under, 55-56; as a builder, 55-56; revival of Samskrit under, 56-57.
- Āzād Bilgrāmī, Mir Ghulām 'Alī, his book, Khizāna-i-Āmirah, quoted about Sukh Jiwan Mal, Governor of Kashmīr under the Afghāns 311-12.
- Āzād Khān, governor of Kashmīr at the time of Forster's visit, 14 succeeds his father Hājī Karīmdād Khān, 317, strong rule, 317 attempts at independence, 317-18; famine, 318; defeat and death 318.
- Āzādpur, on the Delhi-Pānīpat Road, Munshī Mohan Lāl builds the Lā Bāgh at, 340.
- A'zam, Didamari Kaul Mustaghni, Khwāja Muhammad, historian and poet, his chronogram on Bulbul Shāh, 83; on the ruins of Rifichana' mosque, 126; on Shāh Mir's dates, 132; quotes couplets of Husai Shāh Chak, 224. For his life, see pages 373-4, Chapter VII. Volume II; addition of Kaul by Rieu mystifying, see Bibliography p. xliii.
- Āzarbāijān, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn sends ambassador to, 171, description of 171, f.n. 1; contemporaries of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn among Qara-Quyunlī the Turkomān clan, 172; among Aq-Quyunlīs of, 172.
- 'Azīm Khān, Sardār Muhammad, governor of Kashmīr under the Afghān 328, 329; his crushing defeat of Ranjīt Singh in 1814, 329-330; was sent for by his elder brother Vazīr Fath Khān on being blinded 333; handed over charge of governorship to his younger brother Jabbār Khān, 333, 334.
- 'Az Khān's misstatement to Ranjīt Singh, 331, 336.

Bābās or Rīshīs, darvishes or hermits of Kashmīr, 96.

Bābur, Mughul emperor sends his army to invade Kashmīr, 195
Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt related to, 200 ; Mīrzā Haidar treated with consideration by, 201 ; on Mīrzā Haidar's accomplishments, 201 ; his Memoirs compared to Mīrzā Haidar's Ta'rīkh-i-Rashīdī, 203-4.

Bāchh Baṭ, priestly class of Brāhmans come into being during the reign of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 173.

Bactria, Greek Kingdom overrun by Yueh-chi clan, 41.

Badakhshān, Bāmbas stated to have migrated to, 18 ; subdued by Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 138 ; Mīrzā Haidar marches by, 202.

Badāonī, or Bādayūnī, Mullā 'Abdul Qādir, account of Akbar's appreciation of Kashmīr in The Muntakhab-ut-Tawārīkh, 8 ; revises and completes Persian translation of the Rājatarangīnī under Akbar's orders, 65, 163 ; rewrites the Persian translation of *The History
Kashmīr* by Mullā Shāh Muhammad of Shāhābād, 163.

Baḍgām, tāhsīl of Barāmūlā district, 7.

Badī'-ud-Dīn or Gauhar Shāh or Lohur Shāh Chak, which last see
Baḍ Khū, a well, according to a report known after Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 1'
Baḍ Shāh, see Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, as this is the popular name of this Sultān Bādshāh, title adopted by the Chak Dynasty, 136, 218.

Bāgh-i-Khāss, Akbar's name for Kashmīr according to Badāonī, 8.

Bāgh-i-Sulaimān, Shāh Hamadān's name for the Valley of Kashmīr, 1.

Bāgh-i-Zaina-gīr, Sayyid Husain Qummī Razavī stays at, 165.

Baghwāndās, Rājā, Akbar dispatches to Kashmīr, 231, 233.

Bahādur Khān Kakar, son of Bira Khān, 316.

Bahādur Singh, Rājā of Kishtwār, twice defeated by Husain Shāh Chak 226.

Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh, Shaikh, prominent saint at the time
Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 166 ; Baihaqī Begam buried in the ziyārat of, 1'

Bahlūl Lodī, Sultān, receives embassy of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 171.

Bahrām-Gallah, really Bahrām Qullah, note on, 295 f.n. 2.

Bahrām Khān, youngest son of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn by his second wife, 17 appointed minister by Sultān Haidar Shāh, 184 ; left in complete charge of administration, 184 ; seeks safety in exile, 185 ; bids for the throne, 186 ; flight and death, 186.

Bahr-ul-Asmār, The, or The Sea of Tales, translation of a portion of Rājatarangīnī into Persian, 163 ; revised and completed by Badāonī 65, 163.

Baihaqī Begam, wife of Baḍ Shāh, 178 ; sells ornament to erect tomb
Shaikh Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh, 166.

Baihaqīs, ancestry of, and migration into, Kashmīr, 225.

Baihaqī, Sayyid Abu'l Ma'ālī, second son of Sayyid Mubārak Khān
Baihaqī, heads rebellion against Mughuls, 242 ; serves under Rājā
Singh, receives mansab from Jahāngīr, 242 ; the anonymous author of the Bahāristān-i-Shāhī a dependant of—, 242.

- Baihaqī, Sayyid Hasan, marries Baihaqī Begam's daughter, 178; Hayāt Khātūn, Sultān Hasan Shāh's beloved queen, daughter of, 185; appointed minister by Sultān Hasan Shāh, 185; increased rivalry between Malik Ahmad and—, 186; sends expedition to Baltistān and Ladākh, 187; sets up Prince Muhammad Shāh contrary to Sultān Hasan Shāh's last instructions, 187-188; regency, 188.
- Baihaqī, Sayyid Ibrāhīm, seeks safety with Muhammad Shāh, 193; aids Kāji Chak to regain power, 199; captured by Daulat Chak, 209; released and made councillor by Daulat Chak, 210; aids Ghāzī Chak against the Mughul invader Abu'l Ma'ālī, 220.
- Baihaqī, Sayyid Mubārak, becomes prime minister, 225; wise administration, 225-226; resigns his post under Yūsuf Shāh Chak, 227; leads nobles and defeats Yūsuf Shāh Chak, 227; accession as ruler and short régime, 228; abdication, 228; marriage alliance with Yūsuf Shāh, 229.
- Baihaqī, Sayyid Muhammad, Kāndhāmī, 178; his daughter Baihaqī Begam married to Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 178; employes Shams-ud-Dīn Chak, 189; clash with the Chaks, 190; death, 191; intrigue with the deposed kings Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh, 189; defeat of Kāji Chak and Shams Chak, 189-190; Muhammad Shāh regains throne with the help of—, 190; banishes Mir Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī to counteract growing Chak power, 190; death on the battle-field of Khāmpūr, 190.
- Baird, Dr. Irvine, and Dr. J. C. Batt, expedition to Himālayan region of 17-18.
- Bāj and Tamgha taxes, road dues or duties, remitted by Sultān Sikandar 145.
- Bālāditya, of Magadha, leader of confederacy against Mihirakula, Bālāditya, last of the White Huns, 49.
- Balā Hisār, fort, of Kābul, 304; fort of Peshāwar, 305.
- Balkhī, Sayyid Muhammad 'Alī, see Muhammad 'Alī Balkhī.
- Baltistān, or Little Tibet, invaded by Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt, 201 geographical description of, 219.
- Bambas, come to Kashmīr with Dulcha, 18; classed as Rājputs, 1 f. n. 2.
- Bāmī, third son of Popal, 298.
- Bāmizais, descended from Bāmī, 298; Afghān vizārat vested in, 298.
- Bām-ud-Dīn, Bābā, disciple of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, 102, original Bhīma Sādhi (Çāhi), a Hindu, converted to Islam, 102.
- Bandipūr, 4 f. n.
- Bania, petty trader, 21.
- Banū Umayya, Bambas claim descent from, 18 and f. n. 2.
- Bāqī, Mullā, an adherent of Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt, killed in 1 Shī'ite strife, 207.
- Baqqāl, Khwāja Fath, see Fath Chak.
- Bārak, one of the four sons of Abdāl, 298.
- Bārakzais, descended from Bārak, 298, 301, 303.

Bārāmūla, a district of Jammu and Kashmir, and tahsīl of the district, 7; modern name for Vārāhāmūla, 10; location, altit population, 10 f.n. 1; gorge, deepened to drain off the lake, Kishtwār valley resembles, 67; Hājī Khān arrives at, 180; 43, 145, 207. See also Vārāhāmūla.

Baso, Rājā, referred to in Jahāngīr's dispatch, 265.

Bastar State, in Central Provinces, ruled by a Nāga dynasty, 49.

Basu, Major D. B., on Pandit Mohan Lāl alias Āghā Hasan Jān, Baṭa, Kashmīrī form of Bhaṭṭa, a Brāhman or Kashmīrī Pandit, 7
See also Bhaṭṭa.

Batot referred to about the Kashmīrī-speaking area, 7.

Batt, Dr. Jill Cossley, expedition to the Himālayan region, 17-18.

Bazāz, Pandit, see Prēm Nāth Bazāz.

Begam Sāhiba, Jahān Rāi or Ārā Begam known as, 4 f.n. 2.

Begār, the system under which cultivators lived, 29.

Benāres, extent of Kadphises II's kingdom to, 41.

Bengāl, Nasīr-ud-Dīn Mahmūd Shāh of, a contemporary of Zair 'Ābidīn, 171.

Bernier, Dr. Francis, statement on Jahāngīr's view of Kashmir in Travels, 8 and f.n. 2; arrival at Delhi, secures monthly allowance from the State Charity Fund, 14; on the Kashmīrīs' resemblance to Jews, 16; on the people of Kashmir, 21; engaged in translating Rājatarangīnī into French, 164; 273.

Beveridge, Sir W.H., quoted in connexion with espionage in Kashmir, Beveridge, H., translator of the Akbar-nāma, his estimate of Akbar, 1 on Akbar's cruelty, 177.

Bhagwān Dās, Rājā, overcomes Kashmir, 261.

Bhandārkar, Sir R.G., on the authorship of the Spandaśāstra school Kashmir Āivism, 71; on the two systems of Āivism in Kashmir, 72.

Bhaṭṭa Avatāra, author of the Jaina Vilāsa, a scholar of the time Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 168.

Bhaṭṭa, Brāhman or Pandit, derivation of, from the Samskrit word bhaṭṭa, 70.

Bhavabhūti, poet of Vidarbha or Berār, 52.

Bhikshapa Bhaṭṭa, appointed chief minister by Koṭā Rānī, 128, 1; looks after Bola Ratan, Koṭā Rānī's child by Udyanadeva, 1; killed by Shāh Mir by stratagem, 131.

Bhera, Khushāb; in the Punjāb, referred to as the original place of Si Jiwan Mal's family, 311.

Bhimbar, political power of Kashmir during the rule of Durlabhavarādh extends to, 51, 263.

Bhopāl, area compared to that of the Kashmir Valley, 8.

Bhotāland, or Western Tibet, added by Zain-ul-'Ābidīn to his dominion, 170; prisoners from—liberated by Sultān Hasan Shāh, 185.

Bhūlbās pass, referred to by Jahāngīr, 232; see also other names of the pass, 231.

Bhūp Dei, sister of Kirat Singh, married to Farrukh Siyar, 115.

- Biblical type, Kashmīr peasant referred to as, 16.
- Bigotry, in Kashmīr under Sultān Sikandar examined, 103; before the time of Sikandar, during Hindu rulers' days, 104-106.
- Bilāl, see Bulbul Shāh.
- Bilhaña, parentage, education, and travel, 61; romance with the princess of Kalyāña in the Deccan, 61; his works, 61; appreciation of his poetry, 61.
- Bira Khān Kakar, father of Bahādur Khān, 316.
- Birbal Dar, Pandit, revenue secretary of 'Azīm Khān, 332, 333, 334.
- Birbal Kāchur, Pandit, historian, 55 f.n. 1; 132 n; date of Shāh Mīr's accession according to, 132.
- Birbal, Rāja, his invasion of Kashmīr, 232; Akbar's great affection for, 232-33; death, 232.
- Biru, west of Srīnagar, a village, Shaikh Hamza was deported to by Ghāzī Shāh Chak, 113; L'al Khān Khatak retires to the fort at, 313.
- Birūnī, Al, see under Al-Birūnī.
- Bodhisatva, Nāgārjuna, 42. See Nāgārjuna.
- Bōmbur, King, Lōlarē's lover in popular love-story, 36.
- Bosworth Field, Richard III's crown made over to Henry Earl of Richmond at, 212.
- Brahmā, Kaçyapa grandson of, 9; one of the Hindu Triad appearing in aid of Kaçyapa, 10.
- Brāhman, aged, thrown into a lake by demons, seeks audience of King Nīla Nāga and receives the Nīlamata-Purāṇa, 11.
- Brāhmans, rulers of Kashmīr, 35; kingdoms founded, 35 f.n.; killed by Jayāpīḍa to avenge his queen, 55, 105; contributions to literature 60-61; insulted and plundered by Rājadeva, 66, 106; cultural contribution summarized, 70-71; official class in charge of administration 77-8; persecuted under various Hindu rulers, 105-6; give undertaking to Zain-ul-'Ābidīn not to contravene their sacred books, 173 Kārkun and Bāchh Baṭ class of, 173; recall of—under Zain-ul-'Ābidīn 173. See also Brāhmanism.
- Brāhmanism, Açoka breaks through the fetters of, 38; revival under Gonanda III, 43; favoured by Mihirakula, 44; clash with Buddhism 69.
- Brahmo Samājīs, discard idolatry, 153.
- Buddha, influence of the cult of, on the character of the Kashmīrī, 11; 38; Zain-ul-'Ābidīn rescues the golden image of, 170.
- Buddhism, spread under Açoka, 38; under Jalauka, 38 f.n. 1, 39 Kanishka's faith in, 41; Third Council held in Kashmīr, 42; Nāgārjuna and the Mahāyāna system, 42-43; reaction against, and the burnir of the vikāras under Nara, 43; hated by Mihirakula, 44; development in Kashmīr, 51; clash with Brāhmanism, 69; conversion of Buddhist Dard tribes to Islam, 77; paves the way for mysticism, 94.
- Buddhists, number in the population of the Kashmīr Valley, 8; influence 38, and f.n. 1; opposed by Jalauka but finally friendly to, 39; hated by Mihirakula, 44. See also Buddhism above.

- Budhagira, edifice built by Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn, 135; a mahalla of nagar, 135.
- Budil (Budhil), people of, in the Kashmīr army, 137; village and 180 f.n. 3.
- Bukhārā, district, Arabs continuous population in, 18.
- Bulbul Lānkar, place for converts to Islam, 83; built after the convert of Rīfchana and his nobles, 83, 125, 126.
- Bulbul Shāh, Sayyid 'Abd-ur Rahmān, converts Rīfchana, 81-83; v Kashmīr, 82; his original name, 82; his spiritual guide, 82; M Ahmad his lieutenant, 83; Rīfchana's followers converted 83; Bulbul Lānkar, a place of gathering of the followers of, 83 death, 83; mass conversions by, 94.
- Būliyāsa, old Bolyāsaka, now Bunyār, pass, 231.
- Burdawān, in Bengāl where Yūsuf Shāh Chak returned the attack Sher Afgan Khān, 233.
- Burji Mamlūk of Egypt, Zain-ul-'Ābidīn sends ambassador to, contemporaries of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 172.
- Burrard, S. G. and H.H. Hayden, discussion of the alluvial deposit the Kashmīr Valley, referred to from A Sketch of the Geography Geology of the Himalaya Mountains and Tibet, 11-12.
- Butshikan iconoclast, Sikandar acquires wrongly the surname of, 105; Sir Aurel Stein misspells it as Butshikast, 148.

- Çāhis of Udabhāṇḍa, Queen Diddā belonged to, 58 and f.n. 3.
- Çākala, in the Punjāb, identified with Siāl-kōt, 44; capital of Mihirāl 44. See also Çhakla.
- Çakti, manifestation of Çiva, 9; also named Pārvati, 9.
- Çaktī Satī, taking shape of a lake, 9.
- Çakuntalā, The, contains evidence to presume that Kālidās was a native of Kashmīr, according to Pandit Lachhmidhar, 46; allegory of tenets of Pratyabhijñā philosophy.
- Çaivaism, Kālidās's personal religion, 46; based on the doctrine Pratyabhijñā philosophy, 46-47; in Kashmīr, 71-72; Rīfchana's initiation into—declined, 133.
- Caliphate, The, quoted, 135. See Arnold.
- Cambridge History of India, The, on Shāh Mir's wise use of power, on Shihāb-ud-Dīn's defeat of the Jām of Sind, 138; on Hasan Kī raids into the Punjāb, 184; views on Yūsuf Shāh Chak regain his throne, 232; on 'Ināyatullāh, 288 f.n. 2.
- Çamkarapura, built by Çamkaravarman, 57.
- Çamkaravarman, oppressive rule of, 57; plunders town and temple Parihāsapura, 57, 105; military expeditions, 57; decline and degeneration of the court under, 57-58.
- Canada, climate compared with that of Kashmīr, 7.
- Çaṅkarāchāryā, Hindu name for the Takht-i-Sulaimān, 39.
- Çaṅkarāchārya, visits Kashmīr (?), 71.

- Çārada script, inscription on stones in the Vishṇu temple at Tāpar, 51.
- Carus-Wilson, Mrs. Ashley, on the uncleanness of Kashmīrī women, 23; on Kashmīrī children, 25.
- Carter, G. E. L., on the Stone Age in Kashmīr, 15; his book of the same name, 15 f.n. 1.
- Caste system, rigidity one of the causes of conversion to Islam, 79; weakens with the onslaught of Islam, 80.
- Caucasus, Kashmīr hills far exceed the summit of the, 2.
- Çesha-nāg, mountain, 4; name of a serpent or Nāg, 4 f.n. 5.
- Chach Brāhman, father of Rājā Dāhir, usurps the kingdom of Sāhasī Rāi, 75-76.
- Chach-nāma*, The, the Persian translation of the extinct Arabic Futūh-us-Sind by 'Alī Kāfī, 75 f.n. 2.
- Chāḍura or Tsōḍur, a village, 10 miles south of Srīnagar, 258; Malik Haidar belonged to, 258; called Nūrpūr, at the request of Malik Haidar, by Jahāngir, 259.
- Chaks, The, conversion of—to Islam, 111; Lankar Chak receives hospitality at the hands of Sahadeva, 118, 217; raised by Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I, 133; set fire to the Zaina Dab, 173; Zain-ul-'Ābidīn punishes the—, 174; Pāndū Chak who flourished as a feudal lord, was flogged to death, 174, 218; Himmat Chak's younger brother Husain Chak taken into royal favour, 174; his daughter married to Shams-ud-Dīn Chak, 189; rise of the—under Fath Shāh, 189; Shams-ud-Dīn Chak, 189; early career, 189; enters the service of Saif Dār, 189; marries Husain Chak's daughter, 189; intrigues against Saif Dār, 189; succeeds Saif Dār, 189; intrigue against Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 189, defeat by Baihaqī, 189-192; return from Kamrāj, 190; flight to the Punjāb, 190; Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī's measures against the rising power of the—190; history of the—217-218; origin, 217; under Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 217; service under the nobles, 217; embrace the Shī'a faith, 218; take advantage of internecine war between Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh, 218; clashes with the Sunnis, 218; patriotism, and martial spirit of, 218; Kājī Chak, his clash with Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 189; his defeat and flight, 189; retires to the Punjāb, 192; joins Muhammad Shāh, 192; Fath Shāh hands over one-fourth of the country to him, 193; appointed chief minister by Muhammad Shāh, 194; target of faction, 194; defeats his opponents, 194; Mas'ūd Chak, his son, defeats confederacy, 194; Mas'ūd Chak's advance against, and death by insurgents, 195; repulses Bābur's invading army, 195; reinstalled in king's favour, 195; forces Kāmran's army to retreat, 197; deposes Muhammad Shāh and installs his own nephew Ibrāhīm Shāh, 195; defeated by Abdāl Māgre, 195; he and Abdāl Māgre defeat the invading Kāshghar army, 197; peace with Mughuls, 198; minister under Shams-ud-Dīn II, 199; controls Chak-Māgre faction fight, 199; establishes matrimonial relations with the ruling family, 199; prime minister under Sultān Ismā'il Shāh, his son-in-law, 199; loss of influence, return to power, 199; division of Kashmīr, 199; imposes Shī'a doctrines, 199; unpopularity and flight, 199-200; defeated by Mughul-Māgre combination under Mirzā Haidar, 200; seeks help of Sher Shāh Sūr, 200; invades Kashmīr, 204; Rīgī Chak approaches Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt to conquer Kashmīr, rebels against Mirzā Haidar, 205; Daulat Ch chief commander, beats back the invader, Haibat Khān Niy, 209; defeat and disintegration of the 'Idī Raina party, 209; ascenda of Chaks, 209; dethrones Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, 209; raises Sul Ismā'il Shāh II, 210; imposes his will and Shī'ite tenets, 210; riv between Ghāzī Chak and—, 210; flight, capture and death, 2 deeds of personal prowess, 210; Ghāzī Chak, son of Kāji Ch rivalry between Daulat Chak and—, 210; his soldiers put to de Daulat Chak, 210; deposes Sultān Ismā'il Shāh II, 210; installs Ha Shāh, 211; accuses Sultān Habīb Shāh of misdemeanour, 2 replaces Sultān Habīb Shāh by his own brother Ghāzī Shāh C as the monarch of Kashmīr, 211; the Chak Dynasty, 217-238; to power, 217-18; Husain Chak becomes Shī'a, 218; Sunnī-Sl clashes, 218; causes of Chak downfall, 235-36.

Chakla, modern Chaklāla, near Rāwālpindī, identified with Qākala 44, f.n. 2.

Chakravarman, dethroned several times, 57; assassination, 57-58; st gles with Pārtha compared to those of Muhammad Shāh and I Shāh, 190.

Chamba, Rājā of, defeated by Ananta, 59; Kalaṣa's power felt by, Chandragupta Maurya, Jalauka's coup de main, compared to that of, Chandrāpīḍa, sends embassy to China, 52; feudatory of the Chi Emperor, 52.

Charār Sharīf, tomb of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn at, visited by thousa 99; description of, 99 n; Bābā Nasr buried at, 102. monuments at—see pages 514-5, Chapter IX, Volume II.

Charles VII, of France, a contemporary of Zain-ul-Ābidīn, 172.

Chaugān, in Kishtwār, 237.

Chenāb, mentiond in connexion with the boundary of Kashmīrī-spea people, 7.

Children, Kashmīrī, 25.

Chillah-Khāna or the place of retreat and devotion of Shāh Hamadān,

China, Kadphises II compelled to pay tribute to, 41; Vincent A. Smi views on fighting with China, 41 f.n.; dependencies of, conquered Kanishka, 43; story of Nāgī ancestress, 49; aggressions aga Turkistān and Western Tibet, 51; Chandrāpīḍa, a feudatory of, embassies to the Emperor of—sent by Chandrāpīḍa and Lalitādi 52, 77; Lalitāditya appeals to the Emperor of—against Arabs, defeated by the Arabs in 75 A.C., or 134 A.H., 77; earliest refer of the Chinese to Kashmīr, 13.

Chinār, the, note on the history of this tree, 252.

Christ, in Kashmīr (?), 40; identical with Saṁdhimati (?), 40-41; bu in Srinagar according to a certain class of writers, 40; no proc his visit to India, 40.

Christianity, religious zeal of Portuguese for its spread in Kashmīr, visits of Jesuit Fathers—Jerome Xavier and Francis Xavier, 14 Father Desideri, 14; 95; Father Hierosme Xavier and Beroist Gois visit Kashmīr at the request of Akbar, 250.

Christians, number of—in the population of the Kashmīr Valley, 8

Chronograms, some ten striking

A. H. 727=A. C. 1327	خاصِ اِلٰہِ	page—83
A. H. 842=A. C. 1438	شمسُ العارفينِ	„ 99
A. H. 984=A. C. 1576	مخدومِ مرحومِ	„ 113
A. H. 743=A. C. 1342	امدہ شمس باز زيرِ سحابِ	„ 133
A. H. 847=A. C. 1443	حُرِّمِ	„ 161
A. H. 925=A. C. 1519	فتحِ شاهِ فنا	„ 193
A. H. 938=A. C. 1531	فتحِ نيمِ فردوسِ	„ 196
A. H. 947=A. C. 1540	جلوسِ دارالملکِ کشميرِ	„ 202
A. H. 948=A. C. 1541	فتحِ مکررِ	„ 204
A. H. 951=A. C. 1544	قوتِ سردارِ	„ 205
A. H. 957=A. C. 1549	دشتِ کربلا	„ 206
A. H. 970=A. C. 1563	خسروِ عدلِ	„ 221
A. H. 1003=A. C. 1594	گوهرِ بے بها ز دنیا رفت	„ 250
A. H. 1221=A. C. 1806	افضالِ رجائی	„ 322

Çiti Kanth, Rājānaka, translates works from Arabic into Samskrit during the reign of Sultān Hasan Shāh, 186.

Çiva, Çakti a manifestation of, 9; one of the Hindu Triad, 9, 10 the Triad appear in aid of Kaçyapa, 10; worshipped by Jalauka, 39

Çivabhaṭṭa, personal physician of Baḍ Shāh, 168.

Çivaite, Kalhaṇa being a—, 39.

Çivasvāmin, one of the gems at Avantivarman's court, 56; his works 57; the Kapḥinabhyudaya by—, 57 and f.n.

Cochin State, area compared with that of the Kashmīr Valley, 8.

Constantinople, suburbs of Srinagar compared to those of, 48.

Conversion, Rīfchana's—to Islam, 69, 75, 77, 81; one of the causes of the spread of Islam, 75; of Dard tribes, 77; motives for, 79; of depressed castes of Hindus, 80; missionary movement of the Faqirs or Friars for 81; other reasons for mass—in Kashmīr, 81; Bilāl Shāh and the—: Rīfchana, 81-83, 123-4; of Rīfchana's followers, 83, 125; activities of the Sayyids for—84; Shāh Hamadān's and his disciples' activities for—, 89; Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī's, 92-94; mass conversions, 94 the Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr's effort for, 96-98; Sultān Sikandar's share in, 103-9; Khakhas' and Hatmāls'—108; Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīr

'Irāqī's effort for, 109-12; of Chaks, 111; of Ādar Sūh Brāhma 113; Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm's activities for, 112-14; Mugh influence on—, 115; of Rājā Jaya Singh and his subjects, 115; Rājā Kirat Singh and his subjects, 115; influence of Afghān on—, 116;—under Dogrā rule, 116; work of the Friars Fuqarā for, 116; discussion about Sultān Sikandar in this connexion 148-54; campaign under Sūhabhaṭṭa in this connexion, 155; 1 Shams-ud-Dīn 'Iāqī's religious campaign for—192; under Jahāṅg 262-63; under Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr, 277-78. See also under Isla Copper mines, one of the sources of Baḍ Shāh's income, 175.

Çriḡobhā Mahādevī, queen of Sultān Sikandar, 106, 143, 144, 151.

Çri Deva Swāmī, referred to for religious guidance by Riñchana, 123.

Çri Kanta, Pandit, appointed judge by Jahāṅgīr, 264.

Çurapura, ancient name of Hūrapūr, 223 f.n.

Çrivarā, Hindu scholar and historian at the court of Baḍ Shāh, 167; continued Jonarāja's work, 167; his Kathā Kautuka, translating Jān Yūsuf-Zulaikhā, 167, 191; Baḍ Shāh repairs and rebuilds temp according to, 173; on the death of Baḍ Shāh's beloved queen ' Khātūn Baihaqī Begam or Voḍha (Boḍ) Khātonā, 178; on the to of the Dogrā queen, 178; on the death of Baḍ Shāh, 181; on I Shāh's tomb, 181; on Lūli the barber, 184, also f.n. 2; Sultān Hai Shāh poisoned according to, 185; on Hasan Shāh's coronation, 186 and also his study of six philosophic schools, 186.

Çuka, Pandit, on Fath Shāh's death, 194.

Cunningham, Captain, quoted about the Sikh rally in the Kashmīr campaign, 334.

Dabistān-i-Mazāhib, The, quoted on the appointment of Pandit Kanta as judge by Jahāṅgīr, 264. See also the Index to Vol. II.

Dachigām, rakkh, the viper in, 21.

Dāhir, Rājā, 75; succeeds his father Chach, 76; slain by Muḥamr bin Qāsim, 76.

Dā'im 'Alī, Mīr, lieutenant of Mīrzā Haidar, contacts Abdāl Māgre, 19

Dal Lake, the beauty of the, 3-4. See Vol. II, pp. 534-5.

Dakhan referred to in connexion with the lack of the Atharva Veda, 1

Dāmaras, feudal lords, 53; Muktāpiḍa's instructions against, 53; near of the term, 54; rebellion during Ananta's reign crushed, 59; po broken by Ucchala, 62; rebellion against Sussala, 63; Sussala's atte to break their power without much effect, 63; controlled by Riñch 122; commanders under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 137.

Damascus, latitude compared to that of Kashmīr, 8.

Dāmodara I, killed by Krishṇa, 36.

Dāmodara II, succeeds Jalauka, 40; associated in stories with Dāmodara Uḍar, 40.

Dāmodara Uḍar, the, plateau associated in stories with Dāmodara 40, also f.n. 2.

INDEX—Vol. I

- Dānagal, a fort, 207 f.n. 2.
- Dānī Malik, see under Māgres.
- Dānishmand Khān, Aurangzib's Foreign Minister, Bernier sect allowance through the intervention of, 14; 274.
- Dāniyāl, Mīr, son of Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, executed after a year's imprisonment, 205, 206; chronogram of his death Dasht-i-Karbālā, 2
- Dāniyāl, Mughul prince, 271.
- Dārāb Jūyā, Mīrzā, born in Kashmīr, his Divān, 275.
- Dardic, Kashmīrī language belongs to the, 17. See also pages 395 Chapter VIII, Vol. II.
- Dardistān, 7. See details on pages 395-7 of Vol II.
- Dārhal pass, Sikh army led by way of the, 334.
- Dā'ūd Khākī, Bābā, a lieutenant of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm, Qasīda-i-Lāmiyyah or the Rishī-nāma on Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn quoted 100; on 'Alī Shāh Chak, 225. See also index to Vol. II.
- Dā'ūd Mīr, a courtier of Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī, 228.
- Dayā Karan, Rājput king of Jammu, 35 f.n.
- De, Brajendranāth, on Sultān Sikandar's breaking of idols, 152-3.
- Deccan, Ahmad Shāh Walī of the, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 17
- Delhī, Jasrat Gakhar fails to conquer, 170; ruler of—a contemporary Baḍ Shāh, 171.
- Desideri, Father, visits Kashmīr, 14.
- Desu, near the kotal of the Pīr Panjāl, 264.
- Dilāwar Khān, Mughul governor, constructed gardens, etc., 263, 264, 2
- Diddā, Kshemagupta's queen, 58; queen consort and regent, 58; ruled as sovereign, 58; nominates her nephew Samgrāmārāja, 58.
- Dīndār Khān, title of Mullā 'Abdun Nabī Muhtāvi Khān, see Muhtāvi Khān.
- Diogenes (Diyūjānus al-Kalbī), Shāh 'Abdur Rahīm's reply resembles that of, 97.
- Diyūjānus al-Kalbī, see Diogenes above.
- Dogrās, Nāzīr, a governor of Kashmīr under the, 3; conversion to Islām during Dogrā rule, 116; Baḍ Shāh's second wife belonged to the family of, 178; Kashmīr under the—see Chapter XII.
- Domba girl, Chakravarman assassinated in the chamber of, 58.
- Dow, Lt.-Col. Alexander, on women of Kashmīr, 22; on Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr 275; his version basis of the story of Thomas Moore's Lalla Roo, 278 f.n.; on the ability of Mughul princes, 294.
- Dowson, see Elliot and Dowson.
- Draper, Dr. John William, on western indebtedness to the Saracens 28 and f.n. 2.
- Draupadi, her marriage with the Pāṇḍus, a classical instance of marriage with the husband's brother, 128.
- Dūdhgāṅgā, the, leaving mountains near the Nilā-nāga, 10, f.n. 2.

Dūghlāt, Mirzā Haidar, observations on the people of Kashmīr quot from his Ta'rikh-i-Rashidī, 19; on the temples of Kashmīr, 107-10 on conversions by Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, 109; accompanies Sikand Khān of Kāshghar to Kashmīr, 197; details of the campaign, 197-8; sends congratulations to the Sultān of Kāshghar, 198; related to Bābī 200; his history, The Ta'rikh-i-Rashidī, 203-4; leads expedition Kashmīr to help the Māgres, 200; defeats Kāji Chak, 200; parents and early life, 200-1; military career, 201-2; in the service of Sult Abū Sa'īd Khān of Kāshghar, invades Tibet, 201; marches on Lhasa and retreats, 201-2; enters Mughul service in India as governor the Punjāb, 202, becomes adherent of Humāyūn, 202; conquers Kashmīr, 202; regency on behalf of Humāyūn, 202-3; administration of Kashmīr, 202-3; 204-205; literary work, 203; his Ta'rikh-i-Rashidī compared to Bābur's Memoirs, 203-4; defeats Kāji Chak, 204; territorial conquest, 205; industrial policy, 205; religious policy against the Shī'as, 205-6; faction of nobles against, 206; assault Muḥammadkōt and death, 206-7; date of his death, 207; Shā attempts to desecrate his remains, 207-8; Shī'as wreak vengeance the descendants of, 207; account in the Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī about the remnants of the army of, 208; remains buried at Srinagar 208; grave repaired at the instance of Dr. Moorcroft and inscription installed by Mir 'Izzatullāh, 208.

Dulcha, Bambas claim to have come to Kashmīr with, 18; invades Kashmīr 67; plunders Kashmīr, 68; perishes with his army on his return journey, 68; his invasion, 117-18; Mughul desolation under Dūghlā Kāshghar army revived memories of, 199; origin, 118; a Hun (?), 118.

Durlabhaka, Pratāpaditya, 51; Chinese aggression over Western Tibet at Turkistān, at this time, 51; builds Pratāpapura, 51 note.

Durlabhavardhana, founder of the Nāga (Kārkoṭa) Dynasty, 49; origin and family of, 49; visit of Hiuen Tsiang during the time of, 50; prosperity in Kashmīr, 51; extent of his empire, 51.

Durrānī, correct addition to the name of Ahmad Shāh and not Abdī 299.

Durrānī and Ghilzai riots in Kābul referred to, 304.

Durr-i-Daurān (The Pearl of the Age) style preferred by Ahmad Shāh of Afghānistān, 299.

Earthquake, destroys Samdhitmatnagar, 37; responsible for the destruction of temples, 108 also f.n. 3.

East India Company, The, George Forster, a civil servant under, 14. Edward IV, the Wars of the Roses and, 190.

Egypt, Bernier's visit to, 14; ambassador at the court of Bad Shāh from 40; Bad Shāh sends ambassador to, 171; Burji Mamlūks of, contemporaries of Bad Shāh, 172.

Elias, Ney, on Bābur and Mirzā Haidar, 204; on the locality where Mir Haidar Dūghlāt fell, 207.

Elliot and Dowson's History of India ascribes translation of the Rājatarangī to Maulānā 'Imād-ud-Dīn, 164; deplors gap of Sind history relating to the period of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn; reference to restrictions on Jāts and Lohānas of Brāhmanābād compared to those of Muḥammad Muhtavi Khān, 292.

- Elphinstone, Mountstuart, reference to his estimate of the Chach-nā 75 ; according to him Durrānīs were democratic, 298 ; his book Account of the Kingdom of Kabul, 298 f.n. 2 ; on Ahmad Sh Durrānī being a “divine” and an “author,” 299.
- Elsingre, Mr., of Volkart Brothers, Karāchī, translates from Russian Kashir, 116*d.*
- Encyclopaedia Britannica*, The, quoted in respect of Sultān Sikand 151 ; in respect of the birth of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 297.
- Encyclopaedia of Islam*, The, quoted about the date of birth of Ahm Shāh Durrānī, 297, about his title, 299.
- England, climate compared to that of Kashmīr, 6 ; Henry VI of, a c temporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.
- Europe, first information about Kashmīr reaching—through 1 Portuguese, 13,14 ; Baḍ Shāh’s contemporaries in, 172.
- European, the Kashmīrī vendor’s rate of sale of commodities to the, Eugenius IV, Pope, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 172.
- Excavations, at Tāpar, 51.

Fahmī, poet, 273.

Faizi, Abu’l Faiz, Abu’l Fazl’s brother, quoted, 5 ; gives informatior Abu’l Fazl about the saint Wāhid Sūfī, 96, qasida on Kash extracted, 245-6.

Famine, during the reign of Harsha, 62 ; during Sultān ‘Alā’-ud-Di reign, 135 ; during the reign of Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, 142 ; at Mughul conquest of Kashmīr by the Kāshghar army, 198 ; dur the reign of Akbar, 250.

Faqrullāh, Mīr Muqīm Kanṭh’s son, 313.

Farghāna, a province of Turkistān, 201, f.n.

Farhād and Shīrīn, alluded to in the hemistitch of Hafiz, 1.

Farīd-ud-Dīn Qadīrī, Sayyid Muhammad, converts Rājā Jaya Si and Rājā Kirat Singh, 115 ; early life and education of, 115 ; tomb in Kishtwār 115 ; his sons, 115-16.

Farnesan Hercules, see Hercules, 27.

Farrukhī, Abu’l Hasan ‘Alī, his couplet on Mahmūd’s disappointm at the failure of his desire to enter Kashmīr, 59.

Farrukh Siyar, Emperor, 287-88 ; Rājā Muzaffar Khān subdued Farrukh Siyar’s governor, 287, his mother a Kashmīrian lady, 2

Fasīhī, poet, 273.

Fatahāt-i-Kubrawiyya, The, MS., written by Shaikh ‘Abdul Wahhāb N quoted on the order of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī’s disciples, 102 ; Shihāb-ud-Dīn’s minister, 137 ; on Baḍ Shāh’s name when young, 1

Fath ‘Alī Shāh Kājār of Irān threatens Afghanīstān under Zamān Sh 301.

Fath Chak, surnamed Khān-uz-Zamān, attacks the king’s palace, 2 is defeated and executed, 222,

Fath Khān, struggle for the throne, 188; Muhammad Shāh in close confinement of, 188; ascends throne with the title of Sultān Fath Shāh, 189; intrigues for power by Shams-ud-Dīn Chak against—, 189-9; withdraws favour in case of Saif Dār, his prime minister, 18; Shams-ud-Dīn Chak, prime minister of, 189; downfall and flight to the Punjāb, 190; rejoined by Shams Chak, 190; defeats Muhammad Shāh at the battle of Khānpōr, 190; wreaks vengeance on the family of Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 191; re-ascends the throne second time, 191; a figurehead under his ministers, 192; leaves for Hindustān, 192; recalled by Ibrāhīm Māgre, Muhammad Shāh re-ascends the throne third time, 193; Fath Shāh re-appears after five months and re-ascends the throne third time, 193; his rule lasts this time for one year and one month, 193; divides the country into four parts, 193; Ibrāhīm Māgre slain: Muhammad Shāh re-invited, 193; flight of Fath Shāh and death at Naushara, 193; Fath Shāhnama, the satirical chronogram of his death, 193; Pandit Čuka Fath Shāh's death, 194.

Fath Khetūn, originally Shankar Devi, which see.

Fathpur-Sikrī, Akbar's court at, 232.

Fath Shāh, Sultān, see Fath Khān above.

Fāzil Khān, Mīr, chief secretary to the Afghān governor of Kashmir 315.

Feudalism, under Hindu rule, 53-54; rebellion under Ananta, 59; power broken by Uchhala, 52; rebellion against Sussala, 63. See also Dāmar Fergusson, James, on the origin of the Nāgas, in Tree and Serpent Worship 50.

Fez, in Morocco, Kashmir latitude corresponding to that of, 8.

Fidāi Khān, grandmaster of the Mughul artillery, guarded the passage of Bhimbar on Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr's visit to Kashmir, 274.

Fire, destroys buildings during the reign of Abhimanyu II, 58; the Jām Masjid, Srinagar, twice partially destroyed by fire previous to the reign of Jahāngīr, 258.

Firishta, the author of the Gulshan-i-Ibrāhīmī or the Ta'rīkh-i-Firish the historian, praises Muslim Rīshīs, 97; on the spiritual guide Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, 110; on Shāh Mīr being called Shāh Mīr, 130; on Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn's zealous attention to public business, 141; on Sūhabhaṭṭa's ministry under Sultān 'Alī Shāh, 155; anecdote about Baḍ Shāh's sense of justice, 157-8, 174; on Sultān Haik Shāh, 184.

Firūz Ganāi, Mullā, a divine who tried Yūsuf Maṇḍav, 223.

Firūz Shāh Tughluq, Sikandar's passion for buildings compared to, 1.

Firūz-ud-Dīn Abu'l Barakāt, Mīr, father of Abu'l Qāsim Khān Sāfi 3.

Fleet, identifies Čakala with modern Siālkōṭ, 44.

Floods, villages protected against, 9; in the reign of Harsha, 62.

Folklore, love-stories of Hīmāl and Lōlarē, 36.

Formosa, referred to in connexion with the legendary sinking of an island in the Wulur Lake, 160.

Forster, George, author of The Journey, visits Kashmir, 14; on the people of Kashmir, 22; on women of Kashmir, 24.

France, women of the south of, 24; Charles VII of—a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 172.

- Frederick IV, Emperor, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 172.
- Fuqarā*, 'their work really responsible for the spread of Islam in Kashm 116.
-
- Gaddis, Hindu Bakarwāns, raid on Kashmīr Valley repulsed Rāmachandra, Sahadeva's commander-in-chief, 68.
- Gagangīr, fort, Rāwanchandra retires to, 120 ; on Ḍulcha's invasion, 120 now a village in Lār, 120 f.n. 1.
- Gaggha, his son, is connected with the Vishṇu temple at Tāpar, 5
- Gakkhars, brought into subjection by Ghāzī Chak, 219.
- Gakkhar, Jasrat, misnamed Jasārat Khān, 155 ; extends influence in t Punjāb on release from Timūr's captivity, 156.
- Gāndarbal, milky waters of, 4 ; village 13 miles from Srinagar, 4 f.n.
- Gandhāra, Svayamvara held by the king of, 36 ; conquered by Mihiraku 44 ; modern North-West Frontier Province, 127, f.n. 2.
- Gaṅgabāl, the glen of, 4.
- Gauhar Chak, referred to by Jahāngīr in connexion with the Kisht campaign, 264.
- Gauhar Shāh Chak, or Lohur Shāh Chak, which see.
- Ghāzī Chak, early career, 210-11; conquests, 219 ; stern rule, 219-20 ; C and Raina revolts suppressed, 220 ; Mughul invasion repulsed, 21 abdication in favour of Husain Shāh Chak, 221. See also under Ch
- Ghāzikōt, in Pakhlī, battle of, 192.
- Ghilzaī and Durrānī riots in Kābul, 304.
- Ghulām 'Alī Āzād Bilgrāmī, see Āzād Bilgrāmī.
- Ghulām Muhammad, Shaikh, lends his MS. to Dr. Sufi, 102 f.n. 2.
- Gilān, Baḍ Shāh sends ambassador to, 171 ; description, 171, f.n. 2.
- Gilgit, Ghāzī Chak recovers, 219.
- Gird 'Alī, Mīr Bahr, referred to in Jahāngīr's dispatch on Kishtwār, 2
- Gogji Pathar (Patar ?), village, Nīla-Nāga situated in, 10, f.n. 2.
- Gompertz, Major M.L.A., author of Magic Ladākh, on Kashmīris, f.n. 1 ; on civilization, paintings, etc., of Ladākh, 219.
- Gonanda Dynasty, the, 43.
- Gonanda I, first historical king of Kashmīr, 35, 36.
- Gonanda II, infant king, 36 ; killed by Harandeva, 37.
- Gonanda III, founder of the Gonanda Dynasty before the White Hu 43; his revival of Brāhmanism and reaction against Buddhism,
- Gond chiefs claim descent from Nāgavamṣa, 49.
- Gondwāna, Suraja Ballāl Singh (Sher Sāh Ballāl Sāh) of, contempor of Baḍ Shāh, 171.
- Gondolier of Venice, compared to Kashmīrī boatman, 2i.
- Gopādri, old name for the Ḍankarāchārya hill or the Takht-i-Sulaim 39 f.n. 2.
- Gopāditya, rebuilds the Ḍankarāchārya temple, 39.

- Granada, Spain, Baḍ Shāh's Nasrid contemporaries of, 172.
- Grasmere, compared with Mānasbal by Andrew Wilson in The Abode of Snow, 4 f.n. 6.
- Greece, Kashmīr compared to, 2.
- Grierson, Sir George, on the origin of the Khaḡas, in his Linguistic Survey of India, 12 f.n. 1; researches into the Kashmīrī language, 171.
- Gujrāt, (Punjab), Ḡaṃkaravarman's expedition to, 57; Sultān Mahr Begarha of Gujarāt (Kāthiāwār), receives Baḍ Shāh's ambassador, 171.
- Gulmarg, the Meadow of Flowers, 4 and f.n. 8; snowfall at, 6; situated on the Pīr Panjāl, 44; name changed from Gaurimarg by Yūsuf S Chak, 229; description, 230.
- Gupta, Dr. Harīrām. See under Harīrām Gupta.
- Guṇavarman, Prince, painter-missionary of Kashmīr, visits the East, 70.
- Gwālīār, Towār Rājā of, love of music a common bond with Baḍ Shāh, 1.

- Habīb, makes gun-powder during Baḍ Shāh's rule, 161.
- Habīb Kaifī, his verses on the Pīr Panjāl quoted, 45.
- Habīb Shāh, Sultān, the last of the Shāh Mīrīs, his accession 211; accused of misdemeanour by Ghāzī Chak, 211; dethroned by Ghāzī Chak and imprisoned, 211; this event compared to that of Richard I crown presented to Henry, who became Henry VII of England, 1.
- Habībullāh Khwārizmī, Sayyid, Qāzī'l-quzāt, wounded by Yī Māṇḍav, 222.
- Hāfiz Baghdādi, lecturer at the royal university of Baḍ Shāh at N Shahr, 164.
- Hāfiz, Khāwja Shams-ud-Dīn of Shīrāz, on the beauty of Kashmīrīs of Turks in his Divān, 24.
- Hāfiz, of Jālandhar, Abu'l Asr, quoted, 1. Also see Index to Vol. II
- Haibat Khān Niyāzī, see Niyāzī.
- Hajus de Rebus Japonicis, Indicis, St. Xavier's remarks on Kash published in, 14.
- Haidar Hasan of Hydarābād, Āghā, grandson of Pandit Mohan Lāl Aghā Hasan Jān, 340.
- Haidar Khān, infant son of Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn (Rīfchana) Kōṭā Rānī, 124, 126.
- Haidar Khān, son of Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, 226.
- Haidar Malik Chāḍura, brings out an abridged edition of the Rājātaraṅgī of Kalhana, 65; elegy on Sultān Sikandar 153-4; quoted in several places in Kashir, for instance, on Mullā Nādirī 165; quotes M Ahmad, 168; miracle about Baḍ Shāh, 182-3; on Sultān Hasan Shī rule, 187; reasons for the Chak defection, 191; lines quoted by from Mahram Beg's congratulatory poem to Kāmran, 196; version of the death of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, 206; statement on treatment given to Mirzā Haidar's descendants untrustworthy, 207; note his life, work and History, 257-59.

- Haidar Shāh, Sultān, accession and rule, 184; character, 184; lea administration in the hands of Bahram Khān, 184; Lūli, the barb his favourite, 184; Ādam Khān's intrigue against, 184; on Ād Khān's death, his son Hasan Khān's bid for the throne, 184; confus and turmoil, 185; death, 185; Ğrivarā's praise for the love of mu and poetry of, 185.
- Haidar Muhammad, Maulānā, mentioned in Zafar Khān's Divān, 2
- Haig, Sir Wolsley T., on Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, 109 f.n. 5, continu on 110; on Shāh Mīr, 133; on comparison of Bād Shāh and Akh 176.
- Hājī Adham, a saint of the time of Bād Shāh, 166.
- Hājī Bānde, Khwāja, forms a faction against Mīrzā Haidar Dughlāt, 2
- Hājī Ganāi, leads a Kashmīrī deputation to Akbar against the treatme of the dead bodies of certain divines, 223.
- Hājī Karīmdād Khān Bāmīzāi, appointed governor, defeats Jaw Sher, 315; military conquests, 315-16; maladministration, 316; dea 317.
- Hājī Khān, favourite younger son of Bād Shāh by second wife, 17 conquest of Lohkot in Pūnch, 180; revolts against his father, 18 defeat and flight, 180; attack on and defeat by Ādam Khān at Soj 180; welcomed by Bād Shāh and declared heir apparent, 18 character, 181; nominated successor, 181; ascends the throne with title of Haidar Shāh, 184. See Haidar Shāh, Sultān.
- Hājī Muhammad Sāhib, Pīr, Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn's tomb near the ziyi of, 143.
- Hājī Paḍar, won over by Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 189.
- Hakīm Mansūr, his work on medicine, the Kifāyah-i-Mansūrī, 165.
- Hakīm, Mīrzā, Akbar's stepbrother, 232.
- Haloko, one of the four sons of Abdāl, 298.
- Hamadān, native-place of Shāh Hamadān, 85; description, 85 f.n.;
- Hamadān, Shāh, see Shāh Hamadān.
- Hamīd Qāzī, Qāzī at the court of Bād Shāh, 166; author of a history Kashmīr, 166.
- Hamīm the Syrian, first Muslim to enter Kashmīr, 76; accompanies Jais to Kashmīr, 76; succeeds him at Shākālāh, 76; founds masjids,
- Hamnīra*, Kalhāṇa's name for Sultān Mahmūd of Ghazna, 59; ada tion of the title Amīr-ul-Muminīn, 59.
- Hamza Makhdūm, Shaikh, birth, parentage and education, 112; ported by Ghāzī Shāh Chak, 112-3; Khwāja Tāhir Rafiq Ashā'i, co-worker, 113; builds masjids, 113; death and burial-place, 1 Kashmīrī's veneration for—versified by Mīrzā Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shu and Bābā Dā'ūd Khākī, 114.
- Handwāra, tahsil of the Bārāmūla District, 7, 165.
- Hānji, boatman, clever like the gondolier of Venice, 21; rather prol 25; most of the evil reputation of the Kashmīrī due to the, 28.
- Hāpūt, in Kashmīrī, the bear, 21.
- Harandeva, a scion of the Paṇḍus, usurps the throne according to account of Pīr Hasan Shāh. 37.

- Hargopāl Kaul Khasta, Pandit, his Guldasta-i-Kashmīr quoted about Rīñchana's conversion, 123;
- Harirājā, succeeds Samgrāmarājā, 59.
- Harirām Gupta, Dr., on Āghā Hasan Jān's (Pandit Mohan Lal's) grandson, 340.
- Harī Singh, Mahārājā Bahādur of Jammu and Kashmīr, ridicules the idea of raising a Kashmīrī regiment, 141; re-names Shergarhī a Narsinghgarh, 314 f.n. 1. See also index to Vol. II.
- Harī Singh Nalwa, general of Mahārājā Ranjīt Singh, 334. Also Vol. I
- Harsha, deposes Kalaça, 59, 61; character 61-62; supports Turushk (Muslim) captains, 62, 77; spoliation of temples, 62, 105; oppressive taxation, 62; Kashmīr visited by many calamities under—, 61; revolt against, 62; ignoble death, 62.
- Harsha of Kanauj, or its Arabic form Qannauj, related to Mammat; 64; visits Kashmīr, 64.
- Hārūt, angel, ensnared by the beauty of women of Kashmīr in legend, 2;
- Hārvan, Nāgarjuna's residence, 42; excavations at, 42 f.n. 2.
- Hasan, Dilāwar Khān's son, referred to by Jahāngīr in his Kishtwā dispatch, 264.
- Hasan Khān, Sultān Haidar Shāh's son, 183; nominated successor and made Chief of the Noblemen, 184.
- Hasan Kuchche, treasury officer, Lūlī, the barber, seeks the beheading of, 184.
- Hasan Mantiqī, Mir Sayyid, with others adorns the age of Baq Shāh, 16;
- Hasan Shāh, Pir, historian, had a copy of the translation of the Ratanākār Purāṇa, 36, also the f.n.; quotes couplets of Husain Shā Chak, 224. See pages 374-5, Chap. VIII, Vol. II, for his life and work
- Hasan Shāh, Sultān, accession and coronation, 185; Hayāt Khātūn, beloved queen of, 185; ministers, 185; administration, 185-186; studies the six schools of philosophy, 186; Bahrām Khān's bid for the throne and defeat, 186; power of Sayyids at the court of, 187; literary activity during the reign of, 186; failure of expedition to Baltistān and Ladākh, 187; Malik Haidar Chāḍura's account of the reign of, 187.
- Hastivanj, ridge, Mihirakula drives one hundred elephants over, 44.
- Hatmāl, a Rājput tribe, embraces Islam, 108.
- Haura, Sultān Sikandar's mother, regent during his infancy, 143; suppresses rebellion by her daughter and son-in-law against her own son, Sikandar, 143.
- Hayāt Khān, Sardār Muhammad, his Hayāt-i-Afghānī quoted, 299.
- Hayāt Khātūn, Sultān Hasan Shāh's beloved queen, 185, 188.
- Hayden, H. H., and Col. S. G. Burrard, see Burrard.
- Hazārā, hill state, Çamkaravarman's expedition to, 57; failure of Ananta's expedition against, 59; Kalaça's power felt by, 59.
- Hazār Khān, Mir, Afghān, governor of Kashmīr, see Mir Hazār Khān.
- Hazrat Begam, daughter of the Emperor Muhammad Shāh of Delhi, married to Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 299.

- Hebraic, 16-17. See Jews.
- Henry IV of Spain, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 172.
- Henry VI of England, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 172; the Wars of the Roses and—, 190.
- Henry VII of England, his enthronement compared to that of Ghāz Chak, 212.
- Herāt, 297, 298, 304.
- Hercules, Farnesian, Kashmīrī physique compared to, 27, f.n. 2.
- Himālaya, position of Kashmīr in the higher, 2; rainfall in the hill stations of, 6.
- Himālayan Ice Age, Kashmīr provides first evidence for, 1.
- Himāl, heroine in a popular love-story, 36.
- Hindāl, Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's younger brother, afterwards Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, 140; 141-143. See Qutb-ud-Dīn.
- Hindu rule, maintains itself in Kashmīr for two centuries after Kalhana's time, 66; causes of ruin of, 69; termination of, 117.
- Hindu Triad, Īva one of the Gods of, 9; appearing in aid of Kaçyapa, 10.
- Hinduism, clashes with Buddhism one of the causes of the failure of Hindu rule, 69; contrasted with Islam, 78-80.
- Hindus, number in the population of Kashmīr, 8; Nilanāga considered holy by, 10, f.n. 2; not allowed to enter Kashmīr according to Bīrūnī 17; in Kashmīr, 19; rulers of Kashmīr Valley, 35; causes of the ruin of their rule, 69-70; last phase of their rule, 117-123; persecution by Sikandar discussed, 148-153; image-worship comparatively modern 153; tolerance towards—under Baḍ Shāh, 172-74;—traditions reassessed themselves during Baḍ Shāh's reign, 166.
- Hirosonī, (Māh-i-Khurāsānī?), sister of Shāh Hamadān, 116*d*.
- Historians' History of the World, The*, quoted in respect of a lesson from the history of Bulgaria, 236.
- Hsien Tsiang, more than half a dozen forms of his name, 50; visit to Kashmīr, his description of Kashmīr, 50; on the development of Buddhism, 51.
- Holland, area compared to that of the Kashmīr Valley, 8.
- Honigberger, Dr. John, a Transylvanian, visits Kashmīr during Sikh rule, 15. See footnote, p. 786, Chapter XII, Vol. II, for a note on him.
- Hügel, Baron Charles, on first information about Kashmīr reaching Europe in his Travels, 13; visits Kashmīr during Sikh rule, 15; on Sikhs being hampered in their first invasion of Kashmīr, 329; on Ranj Singh's favourite horse, Lailā, 330 f.n. 1.
- Humāyūn consents to Kāmran's expedition to Kashmīr, 196; Māgh seek help of—against Kāji Chak, 200; Mirzā Haidar's faithfulness to 202; a refugee in Īrān, 203; intention to invade Kashmīr abandoned 209; Shams Raina seeks the help of, 220; death of, 220.
- Hun invasion, puts an end to Kushāna rule in Kābul and the Punjāb, 4.
- Huns, White, 43-44; Toramāna, 43; Mihirakula's rule, 43-44; place of origin, 44 f.n. 1; Kālidāsa's reference in the Raghuvamsha to, 46.

Hūrapōr, Achala marches into Kashmīr across, 128; Hāji Khān's flight to, 180; Jahānāra's hospice at, 180 f.n. 2; Husain Shāh Chak receives Akbar's embassy at, 223; repair of the—road by 'Alī Mardān Khā 272.

Husain Marvī, Khwāja, a courtier, interprets the dream to Humāyū 209.

Husain Qummī Rizavī or Razavī, Sayyid, theologian and preacher, invited by Baḍ Shāh to stay in Bāgh-i-Zaina-gīr, Tahsīl Handwāra, 165.

Husain Shāh Chak, accession, 221; mild and beneficent rule, 221; rebellion of Shankar Chak and his brothers crushed, 221-22; revolt of Fa Chak, his minister, called also Khwāja Fath Baqqāl and that of his son Bahādur Khān suppressed, 222; Malik Muhammad Nāj services, 221-22; Mas'ūd Nāyak rewarded, but imprisoned later on 222; trial of Yūsuf Māṇḍava Shī'a fanatic and his death by being stoned, 222-23; embassy from Akbar's court, 222-23; Mirzā Muqī leader of the embassy, interferes in Yūsuf Māṇḍav's affair, 222; Akbar's return of presents sent by, 223; religious tolerance 223-24; patronage of letters, 224; charity, 224; succession intrigue 224; abdication in favour of 'Alī Khān, who becomes 'Alī Shāh Chak afterwards, 224; death at Zaina-pōr, 224.

Husain Simnānī, Sayyid, deputed by Shāh Hamadān to survey the field for the propagation of Islam in Kashmīr, 84.

Huška, Kushāna king, founder of Huškapura, 10 f.n. 1. See Hūvishl Huškapura, founded by Huška, 10 f.n. 1; 43; modern village of Uška (Wuškur), near Bārāmūla, 43.

Huss, burnt alive, 149.

Hussites, Papal bull against the, 149.

Huvishka, succeeds Kanishka, 43.

Huxley, Aldous, on the Kashmīris, 26, 27, 28.

Hydarī Begam, Āghā Hasan Jān's (Mohan Lāl's) favourite wife, 340

Ibrāhīm Khān Chak, brother of Ya'qūb Shāh Chak, deputed by Yūsuf Shāh Chak to Sayyid Mubārak Baihaqī, 228.

Ibrāhīm Māgre, see Māgres.

Ibrāhīm, Qāzī, continues the work on the history of Kashmīr by his father, 166.

Ibrāhīm Shāh I, Sultān, installed on the throne by Kāji Chak and succeeds Sultān Muhammad Shāh, 196; Abdāl Māgre's invasion 196; defeat at Tāpar and flight, 195.

Ibrāhīm Shāh II, Sultān, succeeds his father 'Ismā'il Shāh I, 199; unpopularity and flight of Kāji Chak, his minister, 199; Mughul invasion of Kashmīr by Mirzā Haidar, 200; untimely death, 200.

'Idi Raina or Rīna, won over by Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 187. See also Rainas.

Idolatry, discussion on the attitude of the Christians and the Hindu reformist movements towards, 153; in the Vedic religion, 153.

- Illiteracy, effect on the growth of children, 25 ; effect on the Kashmīrī, 27.
- ‘Imāl-ud-Dīn, Maulānā, author of the Rauzat-ut-Tāhīrīn, 164 ; Persian translation of the Rājatarangīnī attributed to, 164.
- Immolation, committed by Jayāpīḍa’s Rānī, 55. See Suttee.
- ‘Ināyatullāh Khān Kashmīrī, Mīr, governor of Kashmīr. See Mīr ‘Ināyatullāh Khān Kashmīrī.
- Incest, in England 28 f.n. 1.
- Indians, compared to Kashmīrīs, 21 ; on Kashmīrī women, 24.
- Indo-Āryan influence on the Kashmīrī language, 17 ; on the people, 19
- Indo-Irānian group, Kashmīrī belongs to the, 17.
- Indra, the ‘thunder god,’ annihilates the demons, 10.
- Indus, the, Mihirakula drowns lot of people in, 44 ; Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn encamps on the banks of, 137.
- Iqbāl, Sir Muhammad, his couplet on Kashmīr quoted, 2 ; quoted on pessimism, poverty and dirtiness of the Kashmīrī, 27 ; on Realization of Self, 72 ; invocation to Shāh Hamadān, 84 ; summing up of Shāh Hamadān’s life and work, 91 ; condemns the enervating type of Tasawwuf, 94 ; on Islam and man, 153 ; belonged to the Sapri family, 173 ; lines on the fate of a patricide, 183. See index to Vol. II
- ‘Irādat Khān, Mughul governor, constructs gardens, 263.
- ‘Irān, beauty of the women of, 24 ; Bad Shāh invites craftsmen from 161.
- Irānian group, Kashmīrī belongs to the, 17.
- Ireland, resemblance to Kashmīr in a number of characteristics, 22.
- Irish, Kashmīrī cultivator resembles the, 22.
- Irrigation, under Bad Shāh, 175.
- Irvine, William, his Later Mughals referred to, 288 f.n. 1, 3.
- ‘Ishqī, Maulānā, Akbar’s ambassador to Husain Shāh Chak, 226.
- Islam, influence on Kashmīrī character, 19 ; teachings, 20 ; Kashmīrī Āivism very near to, 72 ; spread of—in Kashmīr, 75-116 ; Rīfīchna’ conversion to, 69 ; 75, 123-126 ; gradual conversion in Kashmīr to 75 ; early contact with Sind of, 75-77 ; state religion under Rīfīchana 77 ; does not effect Kashmīr at first, 77-78 ; comparison with Hinduism by Sir Herbert Risley and Guy Wint, 78-80 ; motives for conversion to—discussed by Risley, 79 ; interaction of the two cultures, 80 ; missionary activities of Faqīrs and Darvishes, 81 ; conversions by Sayyids, 84 ; Sayyid ‘Alī Hamadānī’s great work for, 84-92 ; Mīr Muhammad Hamadānī’s, 92-94 ; conversion of Malik Sūhabhaṭṭa to 93 ; mass conversions to, 94 ; work of the Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr for 96-98 ; Sultān Sikandar’s share in the spread of, 103-9 ; Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn ‘Irāqī’s, 109-114 ; Mughul influence on conversion to 115 ; influence of Afghān rule, 116 ; the work of the Fuqarā or Friar 116 ; suffers a reverse after Rīfīchana’s (Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn’s) death 127 ; Sikandar’s zeal for religion, 144, 146 ; Mīr Shams-ud-Dīn ‘Irāqī’s campaign among the Hindus, 192 ; Shī’a-Sunnī clashes, 21 277 ; such clashes in Afghānistān, 304. See also Conversion.
- ‘Itiqād Khān, related to Farrukh Siyar’s mother, 288.

- Islāmābād, (Anantnāg), 4 f.n. 2, 7, 9. See also Index to Vol. II.
- Islām Shāh Sūr, aids faction against Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, 206.
- Īsmā'il Shāh I, Sultān, accession of, 199; a mere stipendiary under Kāj Chak, 199; brief reign and death of, 199.
- Isma'il Shāh II, Sultān, accession with the help of Daulat Chak 210; deposed by Ghāzī Chak, 211.
- Ismā'ilian preachers from Alamūt in Irān, among the 'ulamā' in Kashmīr 81.
- Israelites in Kashmīr 16; evidence of settlements, 16.
- Istanbul, compared to Srinagar, 48.
- Ivanow, Vladimir, Russian Orientalist of Bombay, translates a paragraph from a Russian work for Kashīr, 18; translate Professor E. Pavlovsky's letters to Dr. Sufi on Shāh Hamadān' Mausoleum at Kolāb, 116b. See also Index to Vol. II.
- 'Izzatullāh Khān, Mir, attaché of Dr. William Moorcroft, visits Kashmī in 1812-13, 109; sets up the stone-slab and the inscription on the grave of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, 209.
-
- Jabbār Khān, last of the Afghān Governors, 334; Ranjīt's invasion of Kashmīr in the time of, 334; is wounded and retreats, 334.
- Jacquemont, Victor, French Naturalist, visits Kashmīr during Sik rule, 15; on women of Kashmīr, 22. See Index to Vol. II.
- Ja'far Barmakī, passing reference to his epigrammatic style, 263.
- Jahān Rāi or Arā Begam, Sāhibābād (Achabal) called after, 4 f.n. 2.
- Jahāndād Khān, Governor 'Atā Muhammad's brother carries Shāh Shujā to Peshāwar, 305.
- Jahāngīr, his appreciation of Kashmīr according to Dr. Bernier, 8; Akba expresses horror at the cruelties of, 176; on Bad Shāh's piety, 177; on the miracle about Bad Shāh, 182-3; visits Kashmīr with Nūr Jahān 251-56; as a builder, 252-53, 263; Justice Shāh Dīn's delineation of the love-scenes of Jahāngīr and Nūr Jahān, 253; Thomas Moore on Jahāngīr's romantic days, 253-56; Malik Haidar Chāḍura's service under—, 257; a Dutch Protestant's view of Kashmīr under—, 259-62 suppression of Chaks, 262; reforms, 262-63; administration, 263-64 snubs his governor, Qalich Khān, in the Barmakī style, 263 conquest of Kishtwār, 264-65; plague and fire, in Kashmīr under— 265-66; famous poets under—, in Kashmīr, 273.
- Jahāngīr Paḍar, Fath Shāh's adherent joins Muhammad Shāh, 192; Fath Shāh hands over three parts of the country to, 193; revolts against Fath Shāh, 193; Muhammad Shāh welcomed by, 193; leads faction against Kājī Chak and is defeated by him, 194; attempts securing the throne for Sikandar Shāh, Fath Shāh's eldest son, 195.
- Jahāngīr, Prince, son of Kāmran of Kābul, nominal ruler, 308.
- Jainollabhadina, Gri, Jonarāja's name for Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn (Ba Shāh), 166.
- Jajja, see Chach.

- Jaisiya, son of Dāhir, seeks help of the Rāy of Kashmīr, 76; Shākallhā assigned to, 76; succeeded by Hamīm, 76.
- Jalāl, Dilāwar Khān's son, mentioned by Jahāngīr in his Kishtwāf dispatch, 264.
- Jalāl-ud-Dīn, Sayyid, of Bukhārā, known as Makhcūm Jahāniyān Jahāngashī, arrives in Kashmīr for a short stay, 84.
- Jalandhara, Kaçyapa reaches modern Jullundar or Jālandhar in the East Punjāb, 9; chief of—a feudatory of Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, 52.
- Jalauka or Jaloka, power of Budhists in the time of, 38 f.n.; successor of Açoka, 39-40; unknown in Indian history, 39; builds the Çankarāchārya temple, 39; military conquest of, 39; administration 39-40.
- Jalodbhava (water-born), demon, living in Satīsaras, crushed to death by gods, 9-10.
- Jalūs-i-Dār-ul-Mulk-i-Kashmīr*, the chronogram of Mīrzā Haidar's descent into the Valley, which is the year 947 A.H.
- Jamāl, Hāji, father of Pāinda Khān and grandfather of Amīr Dūst Muhammad Khān, 298-9.
- Jamāl-ud-Dīn, Qāzī, petition-writer, appointed chief justice, 157-165 early life of, 164; receives Baq Shāh's patronage, 165.
- Jām Banhatiya, of Sind, defeated by Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 138.
- James II, of Scotland, a contemporary of Baq Shāh, 172.
- Jāmi' 'Masjid of Srinagar, built by Sultān Sikandar, 146; mosaic work in, 146; rebuilt during the reign of Sultān Hasan Shāh, 186; again burnt and rebuilt during Jahāngīr's reign by Malik Haidar Chāḍura 257-58; chronogram illustrating same, 258.
- Jammu, State 7; added to Kashmīr by Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 137; rule converted to Islam by Timūr, 155 f.n. 4; assists his son-in-law 'Alī Shāh to recover his throne, 155; Baq Shāh's second wife, daughter of the ruler of, 178. See also index to Volume II.
- Jamshīd, Sultān, succeeds Shams-ud-Dīn I, 134; quarrels with and is defeated by, 'Alī Shāh his younger brother, who becomes Sultā 'Alā'-ud-Dīn, 134-35; builds a bridge at Sopōr, 134.
- Janḍiāla, in the Amritsar District, East Punjāb, identified with Çakala (according to Anspach, 44.
- Jān Muhammad, nephew of the Afghān governor, Nūr-ud-Dīn, 313.
- Japan, story of Nāgī ancestress in, 49.
- Jarasandha, king of Magadha, Gonanda I of Kashmīr goes to war on his behalf against Krishṇa, 35-36.
- Jasārat Knān, Baq Shāh's son by his second wife, probably died early 178.
- Jasrat Khān, chief of Gakkhars (or Khakar), assists Shāhī Khān afterwards Baq Shāh, 155; captivity in Samarqand, 156; defeats Sultā 'Alī Shāh, 156; fails to conquer Delhi, 170.
- Jaswāl, rājā of, mentioned by Jahāngīr in his Kishtwār dispatch, 26
- Jaunpur, referred to as the seat of the Sharqī dynasty, 143; Mahmi Shāh of, a contemporary of Baq Shāh, 171.

- Jawān Sher, Amīr Muhammad Khān Jawān Sher Qizilbāsh, instals his self as governor, 314; builds Shergarhī and Amīra Kadal; 31; oppressive rule of, 315; defeated and sent to Kābul, 315; commended—by George Forster in his Journey, 315.
- Jayāpīḍa, 54-55; expedition to the Gangetic Valley, 54; partonage learning, 54; Pandit Birbal Kāchru's account of the Rānī's love for Brāhman youth, 55; persecution of Brāhmans to avenge his Rānī immolation, 55; 131.
- Jayapura-Andarkōt, town, near Sunbal, founded by Jayāpīḍa, 5; Andarkōt has the grave of Shāh Mīr, 130, 133.
- Jayasīmha, succeeds Sussala 63; Sanjapāla his Senāpati goes into cam with Yāvanas, 63.
- Jaya Singh, Rājā, converted to Islam by Sayyid Shāh Farīd-ud-D. Qādirī, 155.
- Jerome of Prague burnt, 149.
- Jesuits referred to, 14; Father Desideri, 14; Fathers notice the Jewi appearance of the people of Kashmīr, 16.
- Jews, in Kashmīr, 15-18; similarity of features with Kashmīrīs noticed by travellers, 16; allowed to enter Kashmīr according to Al-Bīrūr 17; admixture of Jewish in Afghān blood, 17; affinity to the people of Kashmīr, 19; persecution in Germany and Austria of, 150-51.
- Jhelum, Ver-nāg, the reputed source of the, 4, f.n. 3-4; 8; responsible for the varying relief of the Kashmīr Valley, 9; carries away alluvial deposits, 11; Bambas living on the right bank of the, 18; Srīnag extends along both the banks of the, 48.
- Joad, C.E.M., the well-known psychologist, discussion on the changing mind of Britain, 95.
- Jonarāja, the annalist, on certain kings of Kashmīr during the pre-Muslim period in his Rājāvalī, 34; his record refers to nearly two centuries of Hindu rule, 66; on Rājā Sahadeva, 117; on breaking of Hindu images by Sultān Sikandar, 108; on Rūchana, 68, 118, 119, 123, 124; on Shāh Mīr, 128, 130, 131, 132, 133; on Achala, 128, on Koṭa Rānī end, 131; on Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn, 135; on Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 133, 137, 138; on his ministers; 137; on Qri Çobhādevī's children, 14; anecdote of Baḍ Shāh's sense of justice, 174; Baḍ Shāh's virtue according to, 179; brings Kalhana's work up-to-date, 164.
- Jullundhur, in the East Punjāb, see Jalandhara.
- Juma' Khān Durrānī Halokozai, arrival and assumption of governorship of Kashmīr, 319; defeats restive nobles, 319; intolerance, 319.
- Jushka, or Vasudeva, dies when Kushāna rule comes to an end in Kashmīr 43.
- Jūyā, poet, see Dārāb Jūyā.
-
- Kā'ba, the, making a niche in temples towards, 153.
- Kabīr, death in the time of Sultān 'Alī Shāh, 157. See also pp. 706-Vol. II.
- Kabīr, Maulānā, Shāhī Khān's (afterward Baḍ Shāh's) education under 157; head of the ecclesiastical department at the court of Baḍ Shāh 162; his tomb, 164.

Kabir-panthis, discard idolatry, 153.

Kaṣyapa, the grandson of Brahma, 9 ; performs penance, 10 ; one of the Hindu Triad appears in aid of, 10 ; Nila Nāga, his son, 10-11. •

Kadphises I, Kushāna chieftain, conquers Afghānistān, 41.

Kadphises II, Eastern Turkestān expedition of—ends in disaster, 41 ; pays tribute to China, 41 ; Vincent Smith's views on, 41, f.n. ; conquers Northern India, 41.

Kailāsh Dar, Pandit, councillor of Nūr-ud-Dīn Khān Bāmizai, Afghān governor, 313, 314, 315.

Kaimūl, old name Kaṭimusha, two miles from Bijbihāra, place of burial of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn's relations, 98-99.

Kāji Chak, see under Chaks.

Kalaṣa, misrule of, 59 ; military conquests, 59 ; Kshemendra, his teacher 60 ; deposed by Harsha, 61.

Kalāl, a saint, exhorts Sundarsena and his subjects to give up dissolute conduct, 159 ; legend of the Wulur Lake, 159.

Kalānaur, on account of famine corn to Kashmīr exported from, 272.

Kalhaṇa, or Kalyāṇa, the Nilamata-Purāṇa one of the main sources of his work, 11 f.n. ; 17 ; chronological basis for Gonanda I, 35, f.n. 2 Pāṇḍu dynasty, 36 ; description of the Emperor Aśoka, 37 ; admirer of the Buddha though a Ṣaivaite, 38 ; refers to Saṃdhimati, 40 ; c Mihirakula, 44 ; on Lalitāditya, 52 ; on Vajrāditya's relations with Mlechhas or Muslims, 54 ; criticism of Kshemendra, 60 ; life and work, 64-65 ; the Rājatarangīnī, 65-66 ; cultural contribution of, 70 ; Jonarā brings his work up-to-date, 167 ; imitated by Ṣrīvāra, 167.

Kālidāsa, the dramatist, 46-47 ; birth, 46 ; his date, 46 ; his travels, 46 Pandit Lachhmīdhar's arguments about his being a native of Kashmīr (?), 46-47. •

Kalimāt-i-Tayyibāt, The, compiled by Mir 'Ināyatullāh Khān, 290.

Kalīm, poet, 273.

Kālī Nāg, Kishtwār, 237.

Kallata, originator of the Spandaśāstra, 56.

Kamāl Dūli (not Dūbī), challenges and kills Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt the gate of Muhammādkōt, 206.

Kamāl-ud-Dīn, Mir, later Mullā Kamāl, saves his father-in-law Sayyid Habībullah Khwārizmī, 222. See also pp. 375-77 in Vol. II.

Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidā, Mirzā, see Mirzā Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidā. See index to Vol. II.

Kāmrān, Mirzā, Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt enters the service of, 202.

Kāmrān of Herāt, Shāh, delighted with Munshī Mohan Lāl's Pers 339 ; wreaks vengeance on Fath Khān, etc., 308.

Kamarāj, or Kamrāj, one of the two divisions of the Valley, 7 ; area misruled by Ādam Khān, 180 ; personal estate of Hasan Khān, 1 flight of Shams-ud-Dīn Chak to, 190.

Kāngra, chief of—a feudatory of Lalitāditya, 52 ; Ṣaṃkaravarm expedition to, 57.

Kanishka, his accession, 41 ; extension of his empire, 41 ; annexes Kas

41; builds monuments in Kashmīr, 41-42; the Third Council mee under his patronage, 42; Nāgārjuna, his contemporary, 42-43; h conquests, 43.

Kanishkapura, built by Kanishka, 42.

Kānispōr, modern village, site of the old Kanishkapura, 42.

Karewas, the plateaus, studied by Oldham, their origin, 12.

Karewa Hills, the Dūdhgāngā enters, 10, f. n. 2.

Karkhī, Ma'rūf, Wāhid Sūfi's mode of living compared to, 96; note on, f. n. 4.

Kārkoṭa, origin of the name, 49; dynasty, 49-50; Durlabhavardhan the founder of, 49-51, Durlabhaka, 51; Chandrapīḍa, 52; Tarāpīḍ 52; Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, 52-54; Vajrāditya, 54; Jayāpīḍa, 5 Avantivarman, 55-57; Çāmkaravarman, 57-58; Yaçaskara, 58.

Kārkun, the class of Brāhmans came into being during the reign of B Shāh, 173.

Karmasena, King, his commander, Dūlcha, invades Kashmīr, 67.

Karnāh, the valley of, 7.

Karpūrabhaṭṭa, physician of the time of Baḍ Shāh, 168.

Karshāshab, an ancestor of Shāh Mīr, 130.

Ka-Samīra, Satīsaras the old name of Kashmīr replaced by, 12.

Kash, a Semitic tribe, 12; theories of its origin, 12 f. n. 1; a town in t Bukhārā district, founded by them, 12 f. n. 2; extent of their dominic 13.

Kāshān, town in Īrān, founded by the Kash, location, population, clima etc., 12 f. n. 3.

Kāshghar, founded by the Kash, 12; location and description, 12, f. n. 13; conquered by Kanishka, 43; invasion of Kashmīr, 197; resu of invasion of Kashmīr from—, 198, 202, 203.

Kashīr, name given to Kashmīr by the inhabitants, 12, 13, 17, 35.

Kāshur, or Kōshur, the inhabitant and the language of Kashmīr, 13

Kashmīr, praised by Abu'l Fazl, 1; description, 1-15; essential data the study of early man in, 1; comparison with Switzerland, Piedmo Greece, 2; the beauty of the Dal, 3-5; garden of perpetual spring, other chief attractions, 5-6; variety of climate, 6-7, 11; the Vall area and polulation, 8-9; extent, 7-8; lake in pre-historic times (9; the legend of the lake, 9-11; geological evidence, 11; name, 12-13; foreign references to—13-14; travellers and not visitors, 14-15, annexed to Afghānistān at the time of the visit of Geo. Forster, 14; Stone Age in, 15; early inhabitants, 15; the Jews, 15-1 expedition of Mahmūd repulsed, 16-17; language, 17; Indo-Āry influence, 18; origin of the people, 19; character, 19-22; poetry, 2 craftsmen, 20, 21; business men, 21; resemblance with Ireland, 2 women and children, 22-25; criticism of the Kashmīrī, 25-29; earli known kings of, 35-37; anarchy and confusion in, 39; administrat under Jalauka, 39-40; the Kushāna Dynasty, 41-43; Hun rule, 43-4 Kālidāsa, a native of, 46; Çaivism in, 46; suzerainty of Vikramādi Harsha over, 47; conquered by Pravarasena II of Malwa, 47; Srīnag 47-49; Kārkoṭa (Nāga) Dynasty, 49-58; description by Yüan Chwa or Huen Tsiang, 50-51; political power of—extended, 51; glorious r under Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, 52-54; Vaijṛāditya and Jayāpīḍa 54-55; decline of power, 55; Avantivarman and the Sanskriti revival, 55-57; misrule under Çamkaravarman, 57; anarchy and confusion, 55; mild rule of Yaçaskara, 58; establishment of the First Lohara Dynasty, 58-62; Kshemagupta and his successors, 58 Sultān Mahmūd's invasion, 59; Harirāja and his successors, 59 literature, 59-61, 63-66; calamities during Harsha's misrule, 62; an Second Lohara Dynasty two centuries of misrule, 62-63; period of decay under Jayasimha's successors, 66-69; Achala's invasion, 69 causes of the ruin of Hindu rule in, 69;—Çaivism, 71-2 spread of Islam in, 75-116; early contacts of Sind with—75-78 interaction of Hindu-Muslim cultures in, 80; Muslim majority, 80-81 missionary movement under friars and darvishes, 81; other reason for mass conversion, 81; Bulbul Shāh's missionary activities 81-83; the Sayyids, 84-94; the Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr, 96-102 Fuqarā, 116; last phase of Hindu rule in, 116-22; Rīñchana o Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn in—, 123-27; Kōṭa Rānī's reign, 127-31; Sultā Shams-ud-Dīn I, 132-134; his successors, 134-36; Sultān Shihāb-ud Dīn's conquests, 136-141; Sultān Sikandar, 143-154; era of peace, prosperity and expansion under Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn or Baq Shāh, 157-183; arts and crafts, 161; literature, 162-69; peace and prosperity, 162-75; Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's successors, 184-212; faction fights for the throne between Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh 187-95; rise of the Chaks, and conflict with the Baihaqis, Māgres an Rainas, 189-95; Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh and his successors, 195-200 Mughul invasion, 196-198, 200; Mīrzā Haidar Dughlāt's reform 205; end of the Shāh Mīris, 212; the Chak Dynasty, 217-238; Mughl invasions, 231-33, 234; end of the Chak Dynasty, 234; causes of their downfall, 235-36; Mughul rule, 241-295; Akbar, Jahāngī Shāh Jahān and Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr, 244-86; Mughul administration 247-48, 250-51, 263, 275-76; an outpost of the Mughul empire, 278 riots and internecine struggles under the later Mughuls, 290; benefits of Mughul rule, 294-95; summer resort of Mughul emperors, 294 Afghān rule, 293-94; 297-341; its bad start, 308; misrule and Afghān Governors, 309-313, 316, 318, 323; attempts at independence by them, 312-315, 317, 319, 322, 323; Ranjīt Singh's interest —324-28; Ranjīt Singh's invasions, 329-332, 334-37; end of Muslim rule in—337-41.

Kashmīris, inhabitants, different from surrounding races, 15; resemblance to Jews, 16; Kashmīrī not the name of the language by its inhabitants 17; valorous defence against Mahmūd, 17; defence measures adopted in Kashmīr according to Al-Bīrūnī, 17; Arab influence on, 18; stro Indo-Āryan admixture with, 19; character, 19-22; imagination, 2 craftsmen, 20, 21; business men, 21; sense of humour, 22; criticism of, 25-29; classed with the Kambūh and the Afghān, 25; boatmen 25; coward, liar and dirty fellow, 26; coolie, 26; professional wrestler, 26-27; Aldous Huxley's criticism of, 27-28; character vindicated, 29; hopes for the future, 29; traditions, 26; Buddhist influence, 38; Hhuen Kwan, (Hsien Tsiang) on, 50.

Kashmīrī era, introduced by Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I, 133.

Kashmīrī language, called Kōshur, 1, f. n.; area where spoken, 7; related with Dardic, not Sanskrit group, 17; belongs to the Indo-Irān group, affinity with other languages, 17; influence of Sanskrit on, 19 ; Uttha-Soma's Jaina-Charita, or Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's life in, 167 literature receives a great impetus under Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 168.

Kashtavār, Kishtwār valley, 67-68 ; location, 67 ; Hindu rājās, 67 Rājās Jaya Singh and Kirat Singh, 115 ; embrace Islam, 67 independence lost owing to conquest by Mahārājā Gulāb Sing 67 ; Ya'qūb Shāh Chak takes shelter in, 67 ; description of tl valley, 67 ; Kishtwār Town, 68 ; shrines, 68 ; added to Kashmīr l Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 137, 226 ; death of Ya'qūb at, 236 ; grave Ya'qūb at, 237.

Kasia Regio of Ptolemy, inhabited by the Kash (?), 13.

Kasii Montes of Ptolemy, inhabited by the Kash (?), 13.

Kaspatyrus, Greek name for Kashmīr (?), 14.

Kathā Kautuka, The, sanskritized version of Jāmī's Yūsuf-Zulaikhā l Ḡrīvava, 167, and f.n. 3, 191.

Kaṭimusha, old name of Kaimūh, which see.

Kauravas, or Kurus, Gonanda I, a contemporary of the, 35 f.n. ; 36.

Kausar-nāg, mountain lake, 44.

Kāyasthas, their claim to origin from a serpent king, 49 ; rapacious a ministration before Avantivarman, 55.

Kaye, John William, on Zamān Shāh's threatened invasion of Ind 303 ; on Shāh Shujā's failures, 307 ; on Munshī Mohan Lāl, 341.

Keith, Sir A. Berriedale, misstates the date of the Sanskrit translati of Jāmī's Yūsuf-Zulaikhā by Ḡrīvava, entitled the Kathā-Kautu 167 and f.n. 3 ; 191.

Khaḡas, Himālayan hill tribe different from the Kash, 12 f.n. 1.

Khakha, Rājput tribe embraces Islam, 108.

Khākī, Bābā Dā'ūd, see Dā'ūd Khākī.

Khalāzman, a Muslim Rīshī, who, with his two other brothers, liv in the time of Sultān Jamshīd, 134.

Khalīl Marjānpurī's history of Kashmīr quoted, 287 f.n. ; 291 ; 293.

Khān, title, adopted by rulers of petty provinces, 136.

Khānam, Mīrzā Haidar's wife, 208.

Khandalvan Vihār near Hārvan, the Third Buddhist Council meets at, Khānji, Mīrzā Haidar's sister-in-law, 208.

Khānpōr or Kāmpōr, a village of 100 souls, 12 miles from Srīnag Mīrzā Haidar killed at, 207, 206.

Khānqāh and ziyārat defined, 125, f.n.

Khānqāh-i-'Ālā, at Trāl near Vantipor, 146.

Khānqāh-i-Kubrawī, in Maṭan, 146.

Khānqāh-i-Mu'allā, in Srīnagar, 146 ; ziyārat or shrine, 89.

Khānqāh-i-Wālā, in Wachī, pargana Shāvara, 146.

Khān-uz-Zaman, title of Fath Chak, which see.

Khānyār, mahalla, of Srīnagar, 166.

Kharwār. meaning ass-load, 251 also f.n. 1. See also p. 644, Vol. II.

- Khasta*, Hargopāl Kaul, Pandit, which see.
- Khatak, La'l Khān, see La'l Khān Khatak.
- Kharak Singh, Prince, deputed by Ranjit Singh, 335; order by him to advance on the Pīr Panjāl, 336. See also index to Vol. II.
- Khatlān, the burial-place of Shāh Hamadān, 87, f.n. 2; Appendix to Chapter III, 116 a, b, c, d. See Khuttalān.
- Khawand Mahmūd of Bukhārā, Khwāja, comes to Kashmīr, 272.
- Khazīnatu'l Asfiyā*, The, explanation for Shāh Hamadān's burial at Khutlā 88.
- Khotl, see Khuttalān.
- Khūb Nigār Khānam, younger sister of Bābur's mother, 200.
- Khizāna-i-Āmira*, The, of Mīr Ghulām 'Alī Āzād Bilgrāmī quoted, 31
- Khurāsān, one of the five great provinces of Īrān, 110 f.n., 100.
- Khurram Khān, Afghān governor, 314.
- Khutan, conquered by Kanishka, 43.
- Khunamush, birth-place of Bilhāṇa, 61.
- Khuñjyarāja, whose sister Čobha was Sultān Sikandar's queen, 143.
- Khushāb, Bhera in, 311.
- Khybar Pass, the, Shāh Shujā' fled to, 304.
- Khuttalān, or Khatlān or Khutlān or Khotl, the burial-place of Shāh Hamadān, 87; location, history, etc., 87, f.n. 2; explanation for burial at, 88; shrine over the burial-place at, 88; Appendix Chapter III, 116 a, b, c, d.
- Kifāyah-i-Mansūrī*, The, Hakīm Mansūr's Persian work on medicine, 1
- Kījak (distortion of Kūchak) Khwāja, alias Khwāja 'Abdullāh, administrator's nā'ib under Rājā Sukh Jīwan, 309.
- Kings of Kashmīr, dynastic lists according to Kalhana and Jonarāja 30-
- Kishangaṅgā, the, watershed, 9. [133A; 213—16.
- Kishtwār, valley, 7; see Kashtavār, 67-68.
- Kōh-i-Nūr, the, or the Kūh-i-Nūr diamond, history of, 325-26.
- Kolahai, the Matterhorn of Kashmīr, 6.
- Kolāb Truth*, The, newspaper, containing an article of Mr. Kolpakoff the Mausoleum of Shāh Hamadān at Kolāb, 116 a, c.
- Kolpakoff, Mr., his descriptive note on Shāh Hamadān's Mausoleum at Kolāb, 116 a, b, c, d.
- Kolāb 87 f. n. 2, appendix to Chapter III, 16 a, b, c, d.
- Kōshur, inhabitant of Kashmīr and the language, 1 f. n. 1, 13, 17.
- Koṭā Rānī, Rīfichana marries, 69, 121; Queen-Regent, 127; mar Udyānadeva, 69, 128; her religion, 127; invasions of Dulcha Urwan or Urdil (Achala) 128-29; appeal to her subjects, 129; Ach defeated, 129; return of Udyanadeva and popular resentment against him, 129; her rule, 69, 130; revolt of Shāh Mīr, 130-31; rejection of Shāh Mīr's offer of marriage, 131; forced to marry Shāh Mīr, 1 commits suicide (?), 131.
- Koṭṭabhaṭṭa, minister, receives many favours from Sultān Shihāb-ud-140,

- Kramarajya, Sanskrit name for Kamarāj, 8. See also Kamraj.
- Krishṇa, Gonada I makes war on, 35 ; attacked by Dāmodara I, 36.
- Kṣhemagupta, rājā, marries Diddā, 58.
- Kshmendra, poet, birth and education, 60 ; character, 60 ; work Darpadalana, Desha Upadesha, 60 ; Nṛpvali criticized by Kalhaṇ 60 ; Keith's discussion of the Bṛhatkathāmañjarī, 60 ; his cultu contribution, 70.
- Kud Māl Ded, wife of Pandit Birbal Dar, puts an end to her life, 33 also f. n. 2.
- Kūh-i-Nūr or the Kōh-i-Nūr, which see.
- Kukar-nāg, gushing spring of, 4, and f.n. 3-4.
- Kūhistān, the, Highlands of Kashmīr, people from it recruited for the Kashmīr army, 137.
- Kulgām, Tahsil of Anantnāg or Islāmābād, 7.
- Kulū, or Kulūtā, Baḍ Shāh takes the town of, 170.
- Kumārajīva, the Buddhist, his University in Kashmīr, 70-71.
- Kūnār or Kunār-with-Nūr-gal in Kāfristān, Shāh Hamadān dies ; according to Bābur, 87, 88.
- Kurus, do not seek aid of Kashmīr, 36.
- Kushāna Dynasty in Kashmīr, 41-43 ; Kadphises I, 41 ; Kadphises II 41 ; Kan'ishka, 41-43 ; Huvishka, 43 ; Vasudeva or Jushka, 43 ; the dynasty comes to an end in Kashmīr, 43.
- Ku-shih-mi, Chinese name for the Valley of Kashmīr, 13.
- Kuttarāja, kingdoms founded by Brāhmans, according to tradition 35, f. n. 1.
-
- Lachhmidhar, Pandit, Mahāmahopādyaaya, arguments for presuming that Kālidāsa is a native of Kashmīr in his book, The Birth-place Kālidāsa, 46-47.
- Lachhmī-nagar, built by Sultān Shihāb-ūd-Dīn, 139.
- Ladākh, Western Tibet, Rīñchana belonged to, 68, 81 ; visited by Shihāmadān, 86 ; gold dust in the rivers of, 175 ; Ādam Khān conquest of, 179-80 ; Mīrzā Haidar's march on, 201 ; geographic description, 219.
- Lāhore, minarets of, seen from the top of the Pīr Panjāl Pass, 46.
- Lāhul, in Kāngra, Baḍ Shāh returns by way of, 170 ; addenda Chapter IV, p. 212.
- Laili, Ranjīt Singh's favourite horse lost in the first Kashmīr campaign 330 ; Hügel on the story of this horse, 330 f.n. 1.
- Laks of Kashmīr, 1, 2, 4, 56, 158, f. n. 3.
- Lakshmana, architect of the Vishṇu temple at Tāpar, 51.
- Lāl Bāgh, built by Munshi Mohan Lāl, near Āzādpur on the Delhi-Panī Road, 340.

- Lalitācītya-Muktāpīḍa, glorious rule, 52-54, 60; conquests, 52; embas-to the Chinese Emperor, 52; appeals against the Arabs, 52, 77; 1 feudatories, 52; his city of Parihāsapura and his additions to t temple at Mārtaṇḍa, 52-53; improvement of agriculture, 53, a ministration, 53, instrument of instruction on the art of governan 53-54.
- La'ī Khān Khatak displaces Jān Muhammad as governor of Kashmīr, 31
- Lalla, the hermitess, birth during Udyanadeva's reign, 69; attrac general notice during the reign of Sultān 'Alā'ud-Dīn, 135.
- Lalla Rookh, reference to the celebrated poem of Thomas Moore known the, 278-285; Moore on Lalla Rookh, 279-85; details of the histo and romance of the poem, 278-81, f.n.; supposed to be the imagina youngest daughter of the Emperor Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr married the son of 'Abdullāh Khān of Kāshghar, 280.
- Lashkar Khān, last governor under Shāh Jahān, 272, Kashmīr prosper under him, 272.
- Lankar or Langar Chak, ancestor of the Chaks, receives hospitality fr
Sahadeva, 118, 217, 218.
- Laulaha or Lōlauy, ancient name of modern Lōlāb, 37.
- Latif-ud-Dīn, a disciple of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, 102; originally Hindu, converted to Islam, 102.
- Lava, elected king after Sundarasena, 37.
- Lawrence, Sir Walter R., description of the Valley, quoted from his bo
The Valley of Kashmīr, 8 and f.n. 1; on the Jewish cast of Kashn faces, 16; on the resemblance of the Kashmīrī cultivator to an Iri man, 22; quoted on the shade given by the Kābulī poplar, 97; Sikandar, 108; date for Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, 109. See also Vol. I
- Legend of the Lake, regarding Kāçyapa's pilgrimage for the destruct of Jalodhbhava, 9-10; reference to the king Nīla-Nāga and Nīlamata-Purāṇa, 10-11.
- Leh, King of Kulū vassal of the king of, 170; 208 f.n.; town of Ladā 219.
- Loman, Lake, the Wulur, reminds one of, 159 f.n.
- Lenin, Sayyid Mubārak Khān Baihaqī acts socially like, 228.
- Leningrad, 116a,b.
- Les Lettres Edifiantes*, a letter containing observations of Fat
Desideri on Kashmīr, 14.
- Lhassa, Father Desideri's letter from, 14.
- Liddar Valley, contains Çeshanāg, 4.
- Literature, Abhinavagupta's writings, 60; Kshemendra's studies,
Bilhāṭī's works, 61; Mammaṭī's contribution, 63-64; Mañk poetry, 64; Kālhana's Chronicles, 64-5; the Rājatarangīnī, 65 patronage of Sultān Sikandar, 145-6; patronage of Zain-ul-'Ābi 162-169; Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī and his works, 163; other sch and their works, 164-66; patronage of Samskr̥t, 166-168; H scholars and their works, 167-8; poets and poetry, 168-9; lite activities during the reign of Sultān Hasan Shāh, 185-6; Çrivi Kāthā Kautuka, 167, 191; famous poets during the reign of Jahā and Shāh Jahān, 273. See also pages 343-500, Chapter VIII, Vol.

- Lohara Dynasty (First), 58-62; Kshemagupta, 58; Abhimanyu II, 58
 Queen Diddā, 58; Sultān Mahmūd's invasion, 59; Harirāja, Anant and Kalaga, 59; Sanskrit scholars, 59-61; Harsha and the end o the dynasty, 61-62.
- Lohara Dynasty (Second), 62-63; Uccala, 62; two centuries of misrule
 63; Sussala, 63; Jayasimha, 63; Mammata and other poets, 63-66
 Jayasimha's successors, 66; Sahadeva, 167; Dulcha's invasion, 67-8
 Rinchana, 69; Udyanadeva and Kotā Rānī, 69.
- Lohāru, Nawāb Mirzā 'Alā'-ud-Dīn Khān 'Alāī of, 340.
- Lohur Shāh Chak, Badī'-ud-Dīn or Gauhar Shāh, known as, accession of 228; Yūsuf Shāh Chak's invasion, 229; abdication, 229.
- Lolāb, reminding one of Scotland and Wales, 6; see Laulaha.
- Lōlare, heroine in a popular love-story, the beloved of Bōmbur, 36.
- Lollards, persecution of the—in England, 149; contemporaries wit
 Sikandar's rule, 149.
- Los Angeles, Kashmir climate compared to, 7.
- Lost tribe, Kashmiris considered one of them (?), 16; Dr. Batt and Dr Baird's theories on, 17-18.
- Lūdhiana, Shāh Shujā's journey to, 307, Mohan Lal's Imāmbāra at, 340
- Lui Shor temple, Sultān Sikandar buried on the former site of, 148.
- Lāli, barber, Sultān Haidar Shāh's favourite, 184 and f.n. 2.
- Lāli Lōn, Malik, one of Husain Chak's bodyguard, 222.
- Lūristān, province of Irān, Sayyid Muhammad, a mosaic worker for th
 Jāmi' Masjid, Srīnagar, belonged to, 146, and f.n. 2.

Maāthir-ul-Umarā, The, of Shāh Nawāz Khān, referred to, 271.

Madad Khān Durrānī, Saif-ud-Daula, governor under the Afghāns, nin months' bad rule of, 318-19.

Madavarājya, Sanskrit name for Marāj, 8.

Madanī, Muhammad, see Muhammad Madanī.

Māgres, family raised by Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I, 33; Sultān Sikandar minister, Rāy Māgre and his exploits, 144; defeated by Sultā
 Sikandar, 144; Jahāngir Māgre defeats Fath Khān, son of Adan
 Khān, 188; wounded and defeated by Fath Khān, 188; Ibrāhīm
 Māgre won over by Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqi, 189; becomes Suni leader, 192; Fath Shāh seeks the help of, against Mūsā Raina persecution of Sunnis, 192; becomes prime minister, 192; vacates h post for Malik 'Usmān after 40 days, 192; reinstates himself, 192 replaced by Malik 'Usmān, 192; joins Muhammad Shāh, 192; Dā
 Malik, a Māgre notable, blamed and exiled for Shams Chak's murder
 192; recalled by Ibrāhīm Māgre, 192; instals Sultān Muhamma
 Shāh on the throne, 193; invited by Jahāngir Padar and others, 193 slain in battle against Fath Shāh, 193; Lohur Māgre, leader of faction of nobles defeated by Kāji Chak, 194; Abdāl Māgre devastate the country, 194; invades Kashmir with the Mughul army, 195 defeats Ibrāhīm Shāh, 195; pursues Kāji Chak, 196; chief minist of Nāzuk Shāh, 195-196; reinstates Muhammad Shāh, 196; Kā

Chak and he jointly forced the Kāshghar invaders to sue for peace 197; peace treaty with the Mughuls, 198; strife with the Chak during the reign of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn II, 199; seeks help Mughuls, 202; defeats Kājī Chak with Mughul help, 200; rules over one-third of the kingdom, 200; Husain Māgre, intrigue against R Chak, 205; campaign against Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, 205; captured by Daulat Chak, 209; released and made councillor, 210.

Mahābhārata war occurs during the time of the infant king Gonan II, 35, 36.

Māh-i-Khurāsānī, a descendant of Shāh Hamadān, buried at Kolāb, 116
Mahram Beg, wrongly written Mujrim Beg, Mirzā Kāmran's general sends a congratulatory poem to Kāmran, 196.

Mahāpadama-saras, ancient name of the Wulur Lake, 158 f.n. 3; continue below page 159.

Mahādev, Pandit, 'Alī Mardān Khān's secretary, profits by his master's generosity, 272.

Maharāshtra, Yōdhabhaṭṭa studies the Atharva Veda in, 167.

Mahāyāna system, founded by Nāgārjuna, 42; introduced into Tibet,

Mahmūd I (Khaljī) of Mālwa, contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.

Mahmūd Begarha of Gujarāt, receives Baḍ Shāh's embassy, 171.

Mahmūd Shāh, of Jaunpur, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.

Mahmūd of Ghazna, invades Kashmīr unsuccessfully, 59; Kalhana calls him Hammīra, 59; never enters Kashmīr, 59.

Malik, title adopted by rulers of petty provinces, 136.

Malik Haidar Chāḍura, see Heidar Malik Chāḍura.

Malik Saif-ud-Dīn, see Sūhabhaṭṭa.

Mālwa, Pravarasena II, a prince of, 47.

Māmalladevī, mother of Harsha of Kanauj or Qannauj, 64.

Mamata, a noted littérateur, and his brothers, 63; his works, relation to Harsha, 64.

Mānasbal, mountain lake, 4, and f.n. 6.

Māndadeva, referred to in the inscription in the Vishṇu temple at Tā 51.

Mandal Badr, referred to by Jahāngir as the capital of Kishtwār, 2

Mānglī, between Mansehra and Abbotābād, 207; annexed by Ghāzī C 219.

Maṅkha, poet, ; director of Dharmārtha and foreign minister, 64; his l Grīkaṇṭhacharita, 64.

Mansūr al-Hallāj, Muslim mystic, see Abu'l Mughith.

Marāj, Mara-rāj, Marāz, one of the two divisions of the Valley, 8.

Marco Polo, refers to the presence of Muslims in Kashmīr, 77.

Marriage of widows, 128; with husband's brothers, 128.

Mārsar, a lake in the Phāk pargana, 230.

Mārtanḍa temple, 52-53; architecture of the Kashmīrian style, 5.

Martin, Pope, issues a bull against heretics, 149.

Ma'rūf Karkhī see Karkhī.

Mārūt and Hārūt angels, ensnared by the beauty of Kashmīrī women, in legend, 22.

Mary, Queen of England, causes people to be burnt at the stake, 149.

Mashrabī, poet, on Kh. Khāwand Mahmūd Naqshbandī of Bukhārā, 272

Mas'ūd, son of Sultān Mahmūd, 59.

Mas'ūd Nāyak, officer of Husain Shāh Chak's bodyguard, 222.

Mathurā, 35 f.n.; besieged by Gonanda I, 36; country around—a great centre of Nāga worship, 49.

Matterhorn, compared to Kolahai, 6; addenda to Chapter I, p. 73.

Mauri-ga-Sima island, near Formosa, sinking of—a striking parallel to the Wulur Lake legend, 160.

Maurya Dynasty, 37-41; Aśoka, 37-38; Jaloka or Jalauka, 39-40; Dāmodara 40.

Mayasūm, island, formerly European quarter in Srinagar, 49.

Mayef, Mr., on Kolāb, 87, f.n. 2.

Mecca, Shāh Hamadān's pilgrimage to, 86; Mir Muhammad Hamadān's pilgrimage to, 94; proposed pilgrimage of Sultān 'Alī Shāh to, 155
Baḍ Shāh sends ambassador to the Sharīf of, 171; contemporaries of Baḍ Shāh among the Sharīfs of, 172.

Meghaduta, The, by Kālidāsa, argument of the work points to Kashmīr as the home of the poet, according to Pandit Lachmidhar, 47.

Menander, the Bactrian king of Northern India, delights in controversies with Nāgārjuna, 42, f.n. 2.

Mexico, Northern, warmth of climate compared to that of Kashmīr, 7

Mīhrakula, seizes throne of Kashmīr, 43-44; his revolting acts of cruelty 44; defeated by Magadhan confederacy, 44; commits suicide, 44.

Mīra of Ohind, queen of Sultān Sikandar, 143; her son, Shāhī Khān, afterwards Baḍ Shāh or Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 144.

Mir 'Alī Bukhārī, Qāzī, scholar, recipient of Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's patronage 165.

Mir Ashātāk, Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's early name according to the Siyar 136.

Mir Dāniyāl, see Dāniyāl.

Mir Fāzil Khān, see Fāzil Khān

Mir Hazār Khān, independent Afghān governor, 319; intolerance towards the Shī'as and Hindus, 319-20; chastized by Zamān Shāh, 320.

Mir Ilāhī, poet, 273.

Mir Husain Rīshī, a Muslim mystic, 96 f.n. 2.

Mir 'Ināyatullāh Khān Kashmīrī, appointed governor, 290; character and talents, 290; administration, 291; measures against corruption 291; riots and rebellion, 291-92; re-appointed governor, 292; 'Ināyatullāh II (originally, 'Atīyatullāh), the younger son of Mir 'Ināyatullāh, later also becomes governor of Kashmīr.

Mir Khān, first son, announced successor by Sultān Sikandar, 147; see Sultān 'Alī Shāh,

INDEX—Vol. I.

- Mir Muhammad Hamadānī, Sayyid, early life and education, 92; literary works, treatise on Sūfism and the Shamsiyah, 93; receives great honour from Sultān Sikandar, 93; conversion of Malik Sūhabhaṭṭa who then becomes Malik Saif-ud-Dīn, 93; marries Sūhabhaṭṭa daughter, Bibi Bārī'a, 93; social reforms, 93-4; present of villages to Sultān Sikandar to, 94; leaves for the Hajj, 94; Sayyid follower 94; death, 94; warns Sūhabhaṭṭa against persecution of Hindu 106; respected by Sultān Sikandar, 147; advises Sikandar against violence towards Hindus, 147.
- Mir Muqīm Kanṭh, a notable, conspires to drive away Khwāja Abu Hasan Bānde, 310, 313.
- Mirzā Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidā, on the Kashmīrī's veneration for Shail Hamza Makhdūm, 114. See also Kamāl-ud-Dīn Shaidā. And ind to Vol. II.
- Missionaries, Buddhist, 42, 51; Christian, 14, 95, 250; Muslim, 81; faqī darvishes and the 'ulamā,' 81; Bulbul Shāh's activities, 81-8 conversions by Sayyids, 84; Shāh Hamadān and his disciples, 8 Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr, 96-102; Shaikh Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, 109-11 Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm, 112-14.
- Mlecchas, or Mongolian hordes, harass Aṣoka's empire, 39; Muslim Vajrāditya sells many men to, 54, 77; Lalitāditya seeks aid from China against Arabs, 52; Harsha employs Muslim captains, 62; re Persian translations of Hindu sacred books in Samskr̥t, 167.
- Modern Review, The*, of Calcutta, quoted, 289, f.n.
- Mohan Lāl Kashmīrī, Pandit, parentage, 338; education and travel, 338 honoured by kings, 339; literary works, 340; called Āghā Hasan Jān, 340; critical estimate, 340-41, Major B.D. Basu on, 341.
- Mont Blanc, Kashmīr hills out-top, 2.
- Montgomerie, opinion on the Wulur Lake, 11-12.
- Montpellier, in Southern France, Dr. Bernier attached to the Faculty 14.
- Monuments, Buddhist erected by Kanishka, 41; at Avantipura, 56; re at Čamkarapura, 57; Muslim monuments—see under Sultān Sikandar Baḍ Shāh, and under Mughuls and Afghāns. See also pages 505-6 Volume II, about Architecture.
- Moorcroft, Dr. William, a noted visitor to Kashmīr, 15; on the physi of the Kashmīrī, 27; transcript of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī obtained during his visit to Kashmīr, 65; Mirzā Haidar's grave repaired at the instance of, 208; birth, early life and education, etc., 208 f.n.; George Trebe his companion, 208, f.n.; Abbé Huc on the death of Moorcroft, f.n.; an intelligence officer (?) according to Mr. H. L. O. Gair 208 f.n.
- Moore, Thomas, 278 footnote. See Lalla Rookh.
- Morocco, Fez in, 8.
- Mosaic workers in the Jāmi' Masjid, Srinagar, 146.
- Moscow, in reference to Professor Pavlovsky's stay at, 116a.
- Mount Bisutūn, referred to by Hafiz Jālandharī, 1.
- Mount Imaus, Kasia Regio and Kasii Montes of Ptolemy, beyond, Mubārak Khān, of Khāndesh, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.

Mughlānī Begam, the governor of Lāhore, offered the governorship of Kashmīr by Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 312; offered annual tribute by Sukh Jiwan Mal which prevented her acceptance of Ahmad Shāh's offer, 313.

Mughuls, the, garden ruins on the Mānsabal, 4 f.n.; appreciation of the Valley of Kashmīr, 8; hospice at the 'Alīābād Sarāi, 44, f.n. 3; Ādan Khān killed by a party of, 184; Bābur sends army to Kashmīr, 195; Abdāl Māgre assisted by, 195; Akbar's reign supposed to begin 231, 241-51; rebellion of the Chaks against, 241-42; Akbar dispatches troops, 242-43; Akbar's reign in Kashmīr, 244-51; Jahāngīr's reign 251-66; Shāh Jahān's visit and rule, 266-73; Aurangzīb 'Ālamgīr's reign, 273-86; the Later Mughuls, 286-98; benefits of Mughul rule 294-95.

Muhammad Afzal of Bukhārā, Maulāna, head of the college during the reign of Sultān Sikandar, 146.

Muhammad 'Alī Balkhī, Sayyid, gives up sovereignty for saintly life, 166

Muhammad 'Allāfī, or 'Allānī, Arab mercenary, dismissed by Dāhir, 76; granted safe passage by Muhammad bin Qāsim, 76; Hamīm, one of the attendants (?) of, 76.

Muhammad bin Qāsim's invasion of Sind, 75; slays Dāhir, 76; erects the Jāmi' Masjid at Multān, 76; proceeds to the boundary of Kashmīr 76.

Muhammad Husain 'Arif, K. B. Pīrāda, on the uncleanness of the women of Kashmīr, 23; on the ruined condition of the tomb of Baq Shāh, 182.

Muhammad Khān, appointed prime minister by his brother, Baq Shāh 157.

Muhammad Madanī, Sayyid, foreign envoy and scholar at the court of Sikandar, 146. See also index to Vol. II.

Muhammad Murād Kashmīrī, early life and career, 288; victim of intrigues and death, 288.

Muhammad Nazr, an adherent of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, killed in the Shī'ite strife, 207.

Muhammad Shāh Dīn, Justice Miyān, on the beauty of the Dal, 4; on the romantic entry into the Shālāmār gardens of Nūr Jahān and Nūr-ud-Dīn Jahāngīr, 253.

Muhammad Shāh, Emperor Nasir-ud-Dīn (Later Mughul), intrigues for the throne, 286; Nādir Shāh's invasion of India, 287; accession, 289; character, 289; riots and internecine struggles in Kashmīr, 290; death, 290.

Muhammad Shāh, Sultān, regency of Hasan Baihaqī, 187; struggle for the throne, 187; Fath Khān's advance and victory, 187; vacates throne and is imprisoned, 187; regains throne with the help of his uncle Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 190; defeat at Khāmpōr and loss of throne, 190-1; Chak defection ascribed to the meanness and parsimony of, 191; Çivara samskritizes Jāmi's Yūsuf-u-Zulāikha for the edification of, 191; advance against Fath Shāh, 192; victory at Ghāzikōṭ, 192; Ibrāhīm Māgre and other notables join, 193; seeks help of Sikandar Lodī of Delhi, 193; rewards Kājī Chak for his services, 194; faction fight and rebellions, 194-5; Bābur's invasion repulsed by Kājī Chak, 195 ; deposed by Kājī Chak, prisoner at Lohkōṭ, 19 reinstated by Abdāl Māgre, 195 ; Māgre domination, 196 ; Kāmra invasion repulsed by Kājī Chak, 197 ; invasion of Sikandar Kh of Kāshghar accompanied by Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, 197 ; plun of Srinagar, 198 ; invaders forced to sue for peace by Kājī Chak a Abdāl Māgre, 197 ; desolation and famine, 198 ; relief measures, 19 death, 198.

Muhammad-ud-Dīn Fauq, Munshī, historian of Kashmīr, controve about the authorship of the lines ascribed to Mullā Ahmad Kashn by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, 169 ; his works : the Mukam Ta'rikk-i-Kashmīr and the Ta'rikk-i-Baḍshāhī, 169. See also pa
377-8 footnote for his life in Volume II, Chapter VIII.

Mu'izz-ud-Dīn Mubārak, of Delhī, contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.

Muhtavi Khān or Mahtūb Khān, Mullā Abdun Nabī, Shaikh-ul-Isl trouble caused by his attitude to Kāshmirī Pandits, 291-2.

Mukhtār-ud-Daula, Sher Muhammad Khān son of Shāh Walī Khān, designated by Mahmūd when ruler of Afghānistān, 304.

Mukhtasar, Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt styles the second part of his *Ta'rikh
Rashīdī* as the—, 203.

Muktāpīḍa, 52-54, see Lalitāditya.

Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī, scholar, poet and historian at the court
Sultān Zain-ul-Ābidīn (Baḍ Shāh), his well-known chronogr the royal palace of Baḍ Shāh, 160, 163 ; life and works, 163 ; Ta'rikk-i-Waqā'i-i-Kashmīr, 163 ; translations of the Mahābhā and of the Rājatarānginī, 163-64 ; his poetry, 168 ; his works, 1 lines quoted by Malik Haidar Chāḍura, 168.

Mullā Nādirī, see Nādirī.

Mullā Pārsā, see Pārsā.

Mullā Shāh Muhammad, see under Shāh Muhammad.

Mūmin, Khwāja, poet, 273.

Multān, Qutb-ud-Dīn Shāh of, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171

Muqīm Jauharī, Muhammad, mentioned in Zafar Khān's Divān, 27

Muqarrab Khān, governor of Delhī, in attendance on Jahāngī
Kashmīr, 260.

Muqīm, Mīr, see Mīr Muqīm, a notable during early Afghān rule.

Murree, rainfall compared to that of Gulmarg, 6.

Mūsā, one of the four sons of Abdāl, 298.

Musalmān-nī, compared to the Panditānī in features, 24.

Musalmāns of Kashmīr and saint-worship, 20 ; Vajrāditya sells men to, 54 ; troop leaders under Harsha, 62 ; under Jayasinha Rīṣhchana's conversion, 69 ; conversion of the people, 75 ; Hamīn first Muslim to enter Kashmīr, 76 ; peaceful relations with the H during Baḍ Shāh's reign, 173-74 ; majority in the population, 8 missionary activities, 81-116. See also Islam and Conversion.

Mūsa Raina, see under Rainas.

Muslih-ud-Daula Bāmīzāī, Nūr-ud-Dīn's title, 303, see Nūr-ud-Dīr

Muslim Geographers, al-Mas'ūdī, al-Qazwīnī, al-Idrīsī, 18.

Muslims, number in the population of Kashmīr, 8. See also Musalmān; Muzaḥḥar, Dr. S. D., his opinion on a person's death by swallowing a piece of diamond, 333 f.n. 2.

Mysticism of Islam in Kashmīr, 19; ingrained in the nature of the Kashmīrī, 19; stimulation under the Sayyids, 94-95; under the Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr, 96-102.

Nadīm, poet, 273.

Nādirī, Mullā, Malik Haidar bases his authority on—in respect of 'Alī Shāh's father-in-law being the ruler of Jammu, 105 f.n. 3; poet laureate at the court of Bad Shāh in succession to Mullā Ahmad 165; controversy regarding the authorship of the lines ascribed to Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn and Khwāja Qutb-ud-Dīn Bakhtiyār Kākī of Delhī, 169.

Nādir Khān, a pawn in Abdāl Māgre's game, 195; ascends the throne as Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, 195. See also Nāzuk Shāh.

Nādir Shāh of Irān, effects of his invasion on Kashmīr, 293; Afghān revolt, 298; murdered, 293.

Nāga, name of the capital of a province in the Philippines, 49.

Nāga Hills, a district in the Surma Valley of Assam, 49.

Nāgām, Bahrām Khān's jāgīr, 184.

Nāgarāja Kārkoṭa, in epic literature, 49.

Nāgārjuna, the great Bodhisatva, 42-43; presides over the Third Buddhist Council, 42; birth, parentage, and education, 42; becomes a monk connexion with the Nāgas, 42; Menander's delight in controversy with, 42 f.n. 2; founder of the Mahāyāna system, 42-43.

Nāgar-nagar, the wall around the slopes of the Kūh-i-Mārān or the Hari-parbat, built by Akbar, 248; tomb of Bahā-ud-Dīn Ganj Bakhsh outside the—178.

Nāgas, 11 f.n.; relations with Nāgārjuna, 42; note on, 49-50; worship of 49-50; dynasty established, 49; of Nepāl, 49; origin, 50; mixed up with the cult of Āivism, 50.

Nāga worship, prevalent in Kashmīr before the Buddhist period, 15, 226

Nāgī, ancestress, story in the Far East of the, 49.

Nāgrāi, Himāl's lover in popular love-story, 36.

Nājī, Malik Muḥammad, forms a faction against Mirzā Haidar Dughlāt, 206; advises Yūsuf Shāh Chak to be generous to his opponents, 227.

Nālanda, Nāgārjuna arrives at, 42.

Nand Rām, Diwān of Vafādār Khān, prime minister of Zamān Shāh, 321.

Nara, sixth in the line of the Gonanda Dynasty, burns Buddhist viḥāras, 43.

Nārāin Singh, prince of Kishtwār, offered as hostage to 'Alī Shāh Chak, 226.

Nārān Nāg, Stone Age relics found at, 15.

Narkōṭ, a Kishtwār stronghold, 264.

- Nārwan, on the road by the Būdil pass, Hāji Khān's flight from Hūrapōr to 180.
- Nasīr-ud-Dīn Khānyārī, Sayyid, entrusted with ambassadorial duties by Baḍ Shāh, 166.
- Nasīr-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh, see Muhammad Shāh Emperor.
- Nasīr-ud-Dīn Muhammad Shāh of Bengāl, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh 171.
- Nasrids of Granada, in Spain, contemporaries of Baḍ Shāh, 172.
- Nasr-ud-Dīn, disciple of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, 102 ; remembered as Bāl Nasr by the Kashmīrīs, 102.
- Nasrullāh 'Arab referred to by Jahāngīr, as partaking in the Kishtw campaign and guarding Kishtwār, 264, 265.
- Nau Shahr, near Srinagar, like New Delhi, capital of Baḍ Shāh, 161.
- Naushahra, Fath Shāh's exile to and death at, 193 ; Kāmran leads expedition from, 196 ; town, 196, f.n. 2.
- Nāzir, Chaudharī Khushī Muhammad, Governor of Kashmīr under t Dogrās, his couplets on the Dāl quoted, 3 ; on the romantic days at scenes of Nūr-ud-Dīn Jahāngīr and Nūr Jahān versified, 256.
- Nazis, persecution of Jews in Germany and Austria, 150-1.
- Nāzuk Shāh, Sultān, accession, 195 ; appoints Abdāl Māgre prime minister 195 ; dethroned by him, 197 ; Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt carries on the government in the name of, 204-207 ; elevated to the throne titular king under Mīrzā Haidar Dūghlāt, 204-207.
- Nehrū, Pandit Jawāhar (Jawāhir ?) Lāl, produced by the Nehrū family Allāhābād, 289 ; his Autobiography referred to, 288 f.n. 4 ; on Moh Lāl who became a Muslim, 340, 341.
- Nehrū, Pandit Motilāl, Ranjit Pandit's translation of the Rājatarang entitled River of Kings dedicated in affection to his Kashmīrī father-in-law, 66 ; produced by the Nehrū family of Allāhābād, 289.
- Nehrūs, leave Kashmīr for Delhi in Farrukh Siyar's time, 288 ; migrate from Delhi to Allāhābād, 288-289.
- Neapolitan of the East, Kashmīrī called by the traveller G. T. Vigne, Nepāl, Karkoṭa and Nāgas of, 49.
- Neve, Dr. Arthur, on climate of Kashmīr more suitable than that England for chest cases, 6.
- Nikrūz, Shāh Mīr a descendant of, 130.
- Nīl-āb, Kashmīrī name of the Indus, 181.
- Nilamata-Purāṇa*, The, King Nīla-Nāga's gift to the aged Brāhman, source for legends regarding origin of Kashmīr, used by Kalhaṇa f.n.
- Nilanāga, Lake, Vēr-Nag, also known as, 4 f.n. 3-4 ; aged Brāhman carries to, 10 ; location, Abu'l Fazl's reference to its legends, 10 f.n. 2
- Nīla Nāga, Kaṇyapa's son, 10 ; king presents the Nilamata-Purāṇa to aged Brāhman, 11.
- Nishāpūr, Irān, Baihaq north-west of, 166.
- Niyāzī, Haibat Khān, attacks Kashmīr, 209.

Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad, Bakhshī, Akbar's historian, on the ancest Shāh Mīr, 130; appreciation of Shāh Mīr, 134; case illustrating Shāh's sense of justice, 157; on Bad Shāh's austere life, 177; on nobles' advice to Haidar Shāh, 184; broad details of his life works, 249-250.

Nizām-ud-Dīn (Nanda), Jām of Sind, receives embassy of Bad Shāh Nūr Bakhsh, Sayyid Mu'in-ud-Dīn 'Alī known as Shāh Qāsim Zarba the son of Sayyid Muhammad Nūr Bakhsh of Khurāsān, 110.

Nūr Bakhshī sect, 109 and f.n. 5.

Nūr-ud-Dīn Ja'far al-Badakhshī, Shāh Hamadān's pupil, 91; deputy Timūr by Sultān Sikandar, 145.

Nūr Jahān, her romantic days with her consort Jahāngīr in the V 251, 252, 253, 256, 259.

Nūr-ud-Dīn, Shaikh, Rishī, birth and parentage, 98; nourished on milk, 99; brought up in happy surroundings, 99; renounces and retires to caves, 99; cave of contemplation, 99; death Bad Shāh accompanies his bier to the grave, 99; tomb at (99; appreciation in the Rishī-nāma, 100; sayings preserved in Nūr-nāmah, 100; venerated by the Kashmīrīs, 101; coins in his name by 'Atā Muhammad Khān, the Afghān Governor anecdotes, 101; attack on hypocrisy, 102; disciples, 102; birth in the reign of Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, 142.

Nūr-ud-Dīn Khān Muslih-ud-Dawla Bāmīzai, appointed governor, prosperity of the people, 313; intrigues and journey to Kābul, appointed governor again, 314; strong rule, 314.

Ohind or Udabhāṇḍa, Ḡahīs of, 58; f.n. 3; Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's election against, 86-138; subdued by Sultān Sikandar, 143.

Oldham, R. D., abandons the idea of Kashmīr as a prehistoric lake Orissa, Kapilēṣvara or Kapilendra Deva of, contemporary of Bad 171.

Osburn, Lt.-Col. Arthur, on incest cases in England, 28 f.n. 1.

Ou-k'ong, or Wu-k'ong, Chinese pilgrim in Kashmīr, 104; v in Kashmīr during the time of, 104.

Oxus valley, settled by the Yueh-Chi, 41.

Pacha Baṭ Kākāpurī, another name of Bhikshapa Bhaṭṭa, Koṭā minister, 128.

Pāḍar valley, 7.

Pahalgām, or the 'Shepherd's Village,' 60 miles from Srinagar, 4.

Pāinda Khān or Sarfrāz Khān, father of Vazīr Fath Khān, leader Brārakzais, 300, 302, 303, 304.

Pakhlī, or Paklī, Shāh Hamadān's halt at, 87; location, etc. 87 f also 238; once a dependency of Kashmīr, 87, f.n. 1; according to Abu'l Fazl, 87, f.n. 1; Sultān of, marries B Begam's daughter, 178; 192; annexed by Gāzī Chak, 219.

- Palestine, in reference to Christ, 41.
- Pallaçilā, in Baḍgām Tahsīl, battle between Hājī Khān and Ādam Khā at, 180.
- Panchāyats*, for settling disputes between Hindu and Muslim subjects under Baḍ Shāh, 173-4.
- Pāṇḍavas, or Pāṇḍus, Gonanda I, contemporary of the, 35, also f. n. 2; 36.
- Pāṇḍavlārih, or Pāṇḍu edifice, 36.
- Pandit, influences the Kashmīrī character, 19.
- Pandit, Shankar Pārḍurang, relies on the Kashmīrī Manuscript for his edition of the Atharva Veda, 167.
- Pandit, Ranjīt Sitārām, presents his book River of Kings to Motilāl Nehrū 66; on Āṇi Cōbhā, 106. See also Index to Vol. II.
- Panditānī, compared to the Musalman-nī, 24.
- Pāndreṭhan, Stone Age relics found at, 15; another name for Pravarapurī (Srinagar) founded by Pravarasena I, 47.
- Pāṇḍu Dynasty, 36-37; Harandeva, 37; Rāmadeva, 37; Sundarasena 37.
- Pāṇḍus, do not seek aid of Kashmīr, 36.
- Pānipat, defeat of Marathas at, 299; Hājī Karīmdād takes part in the battle at, 315.
- Panikkar, K. M., part of a false tradition added by a Kashmīr Pandit referred to in Gulab Singh by, 35, f. n.
- Paradise, Kashmīr had the reputation of being the, 1.
- Paradise Lost*, of Milton's Book IX, lines 115-118, referred to in connexion with the beauty of the Dāl, 5.
- Parakkama-Bāhu VI, ruler of Ceylon, contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171
- Parihāsapura, of Lalitāditya-Muktāpīḍa, fourteen miles from Srinagār 52; Çamkaravarman plunders temples of, 57.
- Parnotsa, now Pūnch, political power of Kashmīr extended to, 51. See also Pūnch; note on—in Chapter XII, Vol. II.
- Pārsā, Mullā, a scholar, who spent his life in the royal university at Nāi Shahr, 164.
- Pārsīs, their population in the Kashmīr Valley, 8.
- Pārtha, King, builds temple at Pāndreṭhan, 39; dethroned several times, 57; his struggles with Çakravarman compared to those of Sultān Muhammad Shāh and Sultān Fath Shāh, 190.
- Pārvatī, another name of Çakti manifestation of Çiva, 9.
- Paṭan, ancient Çamkarapura, 57; ruins of the temples at, 57; Ghāz Chak defeats Abu'l Ma'ālī near, 242.
- Patilāla, area compared to that of the Kashmīr Valley, 8.
- Pavlovsky, Professor E., Member of the Academy of Sciences, Leningrad his letter to Dr. Sufi on the Mausoleum of Shāh Hamadān, 116 a, b, c, d
- Peasantry, robust and muscular physique of the Kashmīrī—, 27.
- Pelsaert, Francisco, a Dutch Protestant, his glimpses of Kashmīr under Jahāngīr's rule over Kashmīr, in his commercial report entitled the Remonstrantie, 259-262.
- Peshāwar, the capital of Kaniskha, 41.

- Persian poetry compared to Kashmīrī poetry, 21 ; words in Lokapṛakāṣa, 78. For Persian Poetry see pp. 446—491 of Vol. I
- Philosophy, extensive field for research in—in Kashmīr, 5 ; Pratyabhijñā, 46-7 ; 70 ; Āiṇism, 71-72 ; Yoga-Vaṣiṣṭha, Hindu Philosophy, studied by Baḍ Shāh, 166.
- Piedmont, Kashmīr the Indian, 2 ; addenda to Chapter I, p. 73.
- Pīr, influence on the Kashmīrī character, 19.
- Pīr Hājī Munammad Sāhib, see Hājī Muhammad Sāhib.
- Pīr Hasan Shāh, see Hasan Shāh.
- Pirie, on the boatmen of Kashmīr, 21.
- Pīr-Panjāl or Pāntsāl, Kashmīrīs resembling Jews on crossing the mountain of the, 16 ; the range, 44 ; some details of, 44-45 ; Haḍ Kaifī and the Pādshāh-nāma of Hājī Jān Muhammad Qudsī the, 45 ; the route, 193.
- Pīr-parastī, saint-worship, blocking the real advance of the Musalmān of Kashmīr, 20.
- Plague, visits Kashmīr during the reign of Harsha, 62 ; during that of Jahāngīr, 265.
- Popal, one of the four sons of Abdāl, 298.
- Pope, the, see under Eugenius IV.
- Population of the Valley of Kashmīr, 8 ; of Bārāmūla, 8 f.n. ; of Kashmīr at present, 19 ; of Srinagar, 48 ; Muslims of the Valley of Kashmīr, 80 ; Muslim majority, 81.
- Portuguese, information about Kashmīr reaches Europe through them, 13 ; enter Kashmīr, 14.
- Porus, King of Kashmīr marches to the aid of (?), 13.
- Poverty, its effect on the growth of children, 25 ; of Kashmīrīs in general, 25, 26, 27.
- Prakrit, name Kashmīr a compound of, 12.
- Pratāpaditya I, brought from abroad by discontented ministers of Kashmīr, 51.
- Pratāpaditya II, 51 ; see Durlabhaka.
- Pratāpapura, built by Durlabhaka, 51 ; excavations at, 51.
- Pratyabhijñā philosophy in Kālidāsa's Çakuntalā, allegory of the tenet of, 46 ; date of the origin of this philosophy, 47 ; Somānada the originator of, 47.
- Pravarapura, ancient name of Srinagar, 47 ; built by Pravarasena I, 47.
- Pravarasena I, Çreshṭhasena, also called Tunina II, 47.
- Pravarasena II, conquers Kashmīr, 47 ; builds Pravarapura, 47 ; constructs for the first time bridge of boats, 47.
- Preaching of Islam, The*, by Sir Thomas Arnold, quoted, 81 ; 115. See Arnold. See index to Vol. II
- Prēm Nāth Bazāz, Pandit, on harm done by misreading of history, 103-4
- Prithvi Rāj Chauhān, the Rājatarāṅgiṇī written 50 years before the time of, 65.
- Prohibition, under Sultān Sikandar, 146, 149.

INDEX—Vol. I

- Prophet of Islam, the, his wonder-working rests on the truth of teachings, 20.
- Prostitution, banned under Sultān Sikandar, 146.
- Ptolemy, his Kasia Regio and the Kasii Montes, inhabited by the K (?), 13.
- Pulwāma, a tahsīl, in the Anantnāg (Islāmābād) district, 7.
- Pūnch, included in the Kashmīrī-speaking area, 7; political power Kashmīr extends to, 51; chief a feudatory of Lalitāditya, Sussala's flight to, 63; people of—in the Kashmīr army, 137; See also Parpotsa; note on—in Vol. II.
- Punjab, the, 9, 11; Kushāna dynasty in—swept away by the Hun inva- 43; conquered by Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 137, 146; sweep by Baḍ Sh 170, 192.
- Purāṇādhiṣṭhāna, Pāndrēṭhan, old capital before Srīnagar, 38.
- Pushtu, its affinity with Kashmīrī, 17.
-
- Qaisar, prince, Shāh Zamān's son, 304, 305.
- Qalīch Khān, governor under Jahāngīr, suppresses the Chaks, 262.
- Qannauj, Arabic for Kanauj, Farrukhī accompanies Mahmūd's expedi to, 59; Bilhāṇa moves to, 61; Harsha of, 64.
- Qarā Bahādur Khān, cousin of Mīrzā Haidar Dughlāt, 206, also f.n marches to Muhammadkōṭ, 206; warns Mīrzā Haidar against Kashmīris, 206; captured by Kashmīris, 206; allowed to repa. Kāshghar, 207.
- Qarani, Uwais al, see Uwais.
- Qarāqul, ta'luqa, of Bukhārā, Arab inhabitants speak Arabic in, Qara-Quyunlis of Āzarbāijān, contemporaries of Baḍ Shāh, 172.
- Qāsim, Mullā, an adherent of Mīrzā Haidar, killed in the Shī'ite strife.
- Qatāqurghān, in the Samarqand province, Arabs continuous popul in, 18.
- Qaur Shāh, grandfather of Shāh Mīr, 130.
- Qāzī-zādah, Qāzī Muhammad Qāsim, poet, 273.
- Qizilbāsh and Afghān clashes in Kābul referred to, 304.
- Qudsi, poet, 273.
- Qutb-ud-Dīn Bakhtiyār Kākī, Khwāja, of Delhī, wrongly suggest the author of the two lines of Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī, 169.
- Qutb-ud-Dīn Shāh, of Multān, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.
- Qutb-ud-Dīn, Sultān (Hindāl), acts for his brother Sultān Shihāb-ud- 86; the ziyārat of Shāh Hamadān built by, 89; acknowledge greatness of Shāh Hamadān and divorces one of his wives, 90; suc Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 141; invites Prince Hasan Khān to become th apparent, 141; revolt of Lohara, 141-142; conspiracy of Uda 142; generosity to the famine-stricken people, 142; death, 14; tomb, 143; founds Qutbuddīnpūr, 142; his two infant sons, 1
- Qutbuddīnpūr, or Langarhaṭṭa, built by Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, 14; tomb in, 143; Adām Khān raises the standard of revolt at, 1
- Qutlugh Nigār Khānam, Bābur's mother, 200.

Rafi'ud-Dīn Ahmad Ghāfil, author of the Nawādir-ul-Akhbār, quoted, 236 f.n.

Raghuvamsha, by Kālidāsa, reference to the Huns, in 46.

Rāḥimād Khān, brother of Pāinda Khān, 300.

Rahmatullāh Sadozai, had the title of Vafadār Khān, which see.

Raina, Abdāl—(Achaladeva) commander under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn 137; Halmat Raina and Ahmad Raina, commanders under Baq Shāh, 157; Sarhang and Mūsā Raina won over by Shams-ud-Dīn Chak, 189; death of Sarhang in the faction fight with Saif Dār, 189; Malik 'Idi Raina won over by Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqi, 189; Mūsā Raina's services to Muhammad Shāh go unrewarded, 191; invested with authority by Fath Shāh, 191; Shams Chak's intrigues against, 191; Shams Chak killed by the armed men of, 191; lays blame for murder on Māgre nobles, 192; becomes prime minister, 192; religious persecution of the Sunnis, 192; Ibrāhīm Māgre, Kāji Chal and Jahāngīr Paḍar join Muhammad Shāh, flight and death, 192; 'Alī Raina's clever coup, 192-193; Sunkar Raina, Fath Shāh hands over one-fourth of the country to, 193; revolt against Fath Shāh 193; welcomes Muhammad Shāh, 193; Nusrat Raina, leader of the faction killed by Kāji Chak, 194; 'Idi Raina's effort to secure the throne for Sikandar Shāh, 195; alliance against Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt 206; comes to power after Mirzā Haidar's death, 209; conflict with Chaks and death, 209.

Rājatarangīnī, The, Nīlamata Purāna, one of the main sources of Kalhana 11 f.n.; date of composition, 65; translations into Persian, 65; French translation, 65; Bādāonī's translation, 163; Bernier engaged in translation into French, 164; abridged translation into Persian by command of Jahāngīr, 164; Sir Aurel Stein's translation criticized 66; Ranjit Sitarām Pandit's translation, 66; its affectionate dedication to his Kashmiri father-in-law, Pandit Motilāl Nehrū, 66.

Rājadeva, succeeds Jayasīma, 66; insults and plunders Brāhmins, 66.

Rajauri or Rājapuri, political power of Kashmir extended to—under Durlabhavardhana, 51; 336. See Rājapuri below.

Rājapuri, or Rajauri, 51; Çamkaravarman's expedition to, 57; people of—in the Kashmir army, 137; raja of—assists Sultān 'Alī Shāh to recover his throne, 155; Sundarasena, the chief of—sends his eldest daughter to Baq Shāh, 177; 206. See Index to Vol. II.

Rājkaul, Pandit, attracts notice of the Emperor Farrukh Siyar, migration of the family to Delhī, 288; thence to Allāhābād and produce the noted Nehrūs, 289.

Rājput, Daya Karan from Jammu called in to restore order in Kashmir 35 f.n. I; Akbar's matrimonial alliances with, 176.

Rajya Devi, eldest daughter of Sundarasena, sent to Baq Shāh, 177; embraces Islam, 177; builds the Rajauri Kadal, 177.

Rakh, the, of Dachigām, 21.

Rāksas, a demon, mentioned in the Legend of the Lake, 9.

Rāmachandra, hero of the Rāmāyana, said to have conquered Kashmir 35 f.n. I.

INDEX—Vol. I

- Rāmchandra, commander of Sahadeva, defeats Gaddis, (Hindu Ba wāns) 68 ; retires to the Gagangīr fort on Dulcha's invasion, refuses to acknowledge Rīfchana's authority, 120 ; Rīfchana's st gem against, 120-121 ; slain by Rīfchana, 122.
- Rāmadeva, vanquishes many kings, 37 ; extent of his empire, 37 ; assessment of land, 37.
- Rāmananda, a chemist and scholar, author of an exposition Mahābāṣya, 168.
- Rāmban, a place in the Jammu territory, 7.
- Rangyil, Stone Age relics found at, 15.
- Ranjīt Dēv of Jammu, his contingent placed under the command Nūr-ud-Dīn Khān Bāmīzai, 310.
- Ranjīt Singh, William Moorcroft, the traveller, reaches Srinagar permission of, 65 ; loss of boats in the storm over the Wulur to, 159 ; sends emissary to Shāh Shujā, 306 ; dishonours agree with him, 306-7 ; escape of Shāh Shujā, 307 ; interest in Kasl 324-8 ; invasion of Kashmīr, defeat and retreat, 329-32 ; Bīrbal seeks help from, 334 ; second Sikh invasion, 334 ; victory over Afghāns, 334 ; causes of victory, 335 ; some details of account of the victory, 335-7.
- Rashīdī, The Tārīkh-i-, note on, 203-4.
- Rasūm-i-Faujdarī, vexatious tax, abolished by the Emperor Jahā 262.
- Ratnākara, a writer, at the court of Jayāpīḍa and Avantivarman his work Haraviḡaya in fifty cantos, 56.
- Ratnākara Purāṇa, The, manuscript discovered written on birch- 36 f.n. ; Persian translation made under Baḍ Shāh's orders, 3
- Rauza-bal, the area of the grave of Yūz Āsaf known as, 166.
- Rauzat-ut-Tāhīrīn, The, a general history of Kashmīr by Ma 'Imād-ud-Dīn, 164.
- Rāwanchandra, Rāmachandra's brother, captured by Rīfchana, appointed commander of the army, 121 ; embraces Islam, 12
- Rāy Māgre, minister of Sultān Sikandar, 144 ; poisons Haibat Khān 151 ; invasion of Little Tibet and revolt, 144 ; defeated by S Sikandar, 144.
- Realization of Self, Islamic way of, 72 ; Kashmīr Ćaivism nearer to 72 ; Sir Muhammad Iqbāl on, 72.
- Relics, of the Stone Age in Kashmīr found, 15.
- Rhetoricians of ancient India, sixteen in all, fourteen from Ka alone, 70.
- Remonstrantie, The, the commercial report of the Dutch Prot. Francisco Palsaert of Antwerp, 259.
- Riāsī, Kashmīrī-speaking area around, 7.
- Richard III of England, Wars of the Roses and, 190 ; his end con to that of Sultān Ḥabīb Shāh, the last of the Shāh Miris, 21
- Rieu, Dr. Charles, his Catalogue of Persian Manuscripts in the Museum quoted in connexion with the Persian translation of Rājatarangīnī, 164 ; about the Bahāristān-i-Shāhī, 242.

Riñchana Bhoṭṭa or Bahuṭa, comes to the scene for the first time, 68-69 ; becomes ruler of Kashmīr, 118-119 ; joint invader with Dulcha, according to Jonarāja, 119 ; details about his name, 68 ; 119 ; marries Koṭā Rānī, 69 ; details, 121 ; stratagem against Rāmachandra, 120 ; becomes king, 69, 120-121 ; sense of justice, 121-123 ; Dāmaras brought under perfect control by, 122 ; quest for religion, 123 ; conversion to Islam, 69, 123-126 ; assumes the name of Sadr-ud-Dīn, 69, 124. See also Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn.

Rīsh Bābā, a Muslim mystic, 69 f.n. 2.

Rīshiyān-i-Kashmīr, the, Rīshīs, Muslim mystics, 96-102 ; some well-known Rīshīs, 96, f.n. 2 ; admired by Abu'l Fazl, 96-97 ; mode of life, 96, 97 ; Emperor Jahāngīr's appreciation of, 97 ; ziyārāt constructed by, 97 ; their example and precept smooth the way of conversions to Islam, 98 ; Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn's life and work, 98-99 ; venerated by Kashmīris, 191 ; his disciples, 102.

Rogers, Charles J., numismatist, on Sūhabhaṭṭa's persecution of Brāhmins, 149 ; generosity of Sikandar, 152 ; appreciation of Baḍ Shāh, 179.

Rome and Carthage, engaged in the Punic War when Aḷoka ruled in Kashmīr, 38.

Rom Rīshī, a Muslim mystic, 96, f.n. 2.

Royal Asiatic Society of Bengāl, the, publishes an edition of the Rājatarangīnī, 65. See also Index to Vol. II.

Rupyabhaṭṭa, astronomer during the reign of Baḍ Shāh, 168.

Ruq'āt-i-'Ālamgīrī, The, or the Letters of Aurangzib 'Ālamgīr, quotation from, regarding the Kashmīrī's ability, 275.

Sābir Shāh, Muhammad, pīr of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 299.

Sabūr Rīshī, a Muslim mystic, 96, f.n. 2.

Sa'dī, on the beauty of the Turk, 24 ; couplet from his Būstān quoted, 98.

Sādozaīs, one of the branches of the Popalzaīs of Afghānistān, 298.

Sadr-ud-Dīn, Qāzī, ambassador of Akbar to Husain Shāh Chak, 226.

Sadr-ud-Dīn (Riñchana), Sultān, 69 ; 124 ; builds Bulbul Lānkar and the Jāmi' Masjid, 125 ; palace and mosque for private use, 126 ; death, 126 ; survivors of his family, 126-27.

Safavi Kings of Irān, forestalled by Baḍ Shāh in building sarāīs, etc., 158.

Sahadeva, condition of Kashmīr under, 67 ; Dulcha's invasion, 67 ; flight to Kashtavār, 67 ; Gaddis raiding expedition repulsed by his commander-in-chief, 68 ; called rākshasa by Jonarāja, 117 ; generosity and hospitality of, 118.

Sāhasī Rāi, his throne usurped by Chach Brāhman, 75-76 ; extent of his dominions, 75 ; government by Malīks or governors, 76.

Sāhiba Niswān, a Kashmīrian lady, mother of Farrukh Siyar, 288.

Sāhibābād, another name for Achabal, on account of Jahān Rāi or Ārā Begam known as Begam Sāhiba, 4, f.n. 2.

“Saidas”, Çrīvara’s name for Sayyids, 178.

Sa’id Khān, Sultān, ruler of Kāshghar dispatches Mīrzā Ha Dūghlāt to Kashmīr, 203.

Saif-ud-Daula, see Madad Khān Durrānī.

Saif-ud-dīnpūr, Malik Saif-ud-Dīn (Sūhabhaṭṭa) buried at, 155.

Salīm Khān, son of Sultān Nāzūk Shāh, 226.

Salīm Shāh Sūr, deposes Haibat Khān Niyāzī to attack Kashmīr, 20

Sālih ‘Āqil Dīwāna, Akbar directs him to Yūsuf Shāh Chak, 232.

Salt Range, the, included in Durlabhavardhana’s kingdom, 51; 76.

Samarqand, Arabs’ continuous population in the district of, 18; Ja Khān’s return from captivity at, 156.

Samdhitmatnagar, old capital of Kashmīr submerged in an earthquake, 37.

Samdhitmatī Āryārāja, the greatest of sages, according to Kalha minister of Jayendra, 40; turns ascetic, 40; identical with Christ, 41.

Samgrāmarāja, nominated king by his aunt Queen Diddā, 58; four of the First Lohara Dynasty, 58; Mahmūd of Ghazna’s invasion of Kashmīr in the time of—59; Kashmīr troops defeated, 59; Mahmūd retires without entering Kashmīr, 59.

San Francisco, climate compared with that of Kashmīr, 7.

Sāngala Hill, identified with Çākala (?), 44.

Sangrām, rājā of Jammu, 265.

Sanskrit or Samskr̥t, influence of—on the Kashmīrī language, 17, revival under Avantivarman, 56; influence on Musalmāns, Sanskrit jargon of the Lokaprakāṣa, 78.

Sanyāsīs, two leading ones embrace Islam with their followers, 89.

Sapṛū, the Right Honourable Sir Tej Bahādur, his family migrates Kashmīr to Delhī, 173.

Sapṛūs, believed to be first Brāhmins to take up the study of Persian Muslim learning in Kashmīr, 173.

Saracens, Western indebtedness to, for many of modern comforts, Sārdar Muhammad ‘Azīm Khān, Afghān governor of Kashmīr, see ‘Ā Khān.

Sarhang Raina, see Rainas.

Sarkār, Sir Jadu Nāth, on the Emperor Muhammad Shāh, 289; on six of the Mughul Empire to India, 294.

Sarfrāz Khān, the title of Pāinda Khān, which see.

Satī, a Çaktī manifestation of Çiva appearing in the form of water daughter of Dakṣa, 9 f.n. 2.

Satīsaras, the place where Çaktī Satī took the shape of a lake, 9; supposed to be replaced by Ka-Samīra, 12.

Sayyid Hasan, commander under Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 137.

Sayyid Muhammad, of Luristān, a mosaic worker, 146.

Sayyidpūr, or Saidahpūr, name of the Bāgh-i-Zaina-gīr, after Sa Husain Qumūnī Rizavī or Razavī, 165.

Sayyid Sadr-ud-Dīn, of Khurāsān, a mosaic worker, 146.

Sayyids, the, their missionary activities, 84; prominent Sayyids; Sayyid Jalāl-ud-Dīn of Bukhārā, Sayyid Taj-ud-Dīn, Sayyid Husain Simnānī, 84; sent to Kashmīr by 'Alī Hamadānī, 84; Timūr contemplates massacre of Sayyids, 84; Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, known as Shāh Hamadān, 84-92; Mir Muhammad Hamadānī, 92-4; emigration into Kashmīr, 94; mass conversions by, 94; effect on Kashmīrī thought, 94; revival of religious faith due to political oppression of Timūr, 94-96; stimulation of mysticism, 94-95; Baihaqī Begam belonged to the family of, 178; powerful at the court of Sultān Hasan Shāh, 186-7.

Scotland, Lolāb reminding one of, 6; James II King of, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 172.

Sculpture, see Architecture, also pages 522-3, Chapter IX, Volume II.

Sehyār, tomb of Prince Ādam Khān at, 184. See also Sūhyār.

Semenov, Mr. A., photographs of Shāh Hamadān's Mausoleum taken by, appendix to Chapter III, 116a.

Serpent worship, 49-50; see also Nāgas.

Shāhābād, modern name for the pargana of Vēr, 4 f.n. 3-4; Shāh Muhammad of, 163-164.

Shāh 'Abdur Rahīm Safāpurī, his reply to Mahārājā Pratāp Singh reminding one of Diogenes (Diyūjānus-al-Kalbī), 97.

Shāh 'Ālam, brief reign, 287; practice of governors sending representatives, 287; revolt of Rājā Muzaḥḥar Khān Bamba during the reign of—, 287.

Shāh 'Arif, impostor from Īrān, found out, 225.

Shāh Dīn, Justice Miyān Muhammad, see Muhammad Shāh Dīn.

Shāh Dūst, title of Vazīr Fath Khān, 304.

Shāh Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī, see Farīd-ud-Dīn Qādirī.

Shāh Hamadān, saint, names the Valley of Kashmīr 'Garden of Solomon' 16; see 'Alī Hamadānī for details.

Shāh Jahān, Emperor, Bernier's visit at the time of—'s sons contending for the Mughul throne, 14; Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn called the—of Kashmīr, 158; enchanted by Kashmīr, 266; administration, 266-273; Zafar Khān's conquest of Tibet, 267; removal of hardships of people, 268-70; famine and relief measures, 272; famous poets, 273.

Shāh Valī Khān Bāmīzāi Ashraf-ul-Wuzarā, Ahmad Shāh Durrānī's prime minister after Hājī Jamāl, 299, 304, 310, 311.

Shaibānī Khān or Shāhī Beg Khān, Uzbek leader, 201.

Shaikh Abu'l Barakāt Taqī-ud-Dīn 'Alī Dūstī, Shāh Hamadān's preceptor, 85.

Shaivism, see Āiavaism.

Shākalhā, a dependency assigned to Jaisiya by the king of Kashmīr, 76; possibly Kuller-Kahar in the Salt Range according to General Cunningham, 76; Jaisiya's death at, 76; Hamīm succeeds Jaisiya, 76.

Shakandhra, Jonarāja's name of Sultān Sikandar, 142.

- Shāh Mir, receives hospitality at the hands of Sahadeva, 118; Rīnchana Vazīr, 69-81; commander under Koṭā Rānī, 128, 129, 130; defends Kashmīr against the invader Achala, 69; superseded by Bhikshap, 130; revolt against Koṭā Rānī, 130-131; ancestry, 130-131; his marriage proposal rejected by Koṭā Rānī, 131; entrusted with the upbringing and tutelage of Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn's infant son, 12; imprisons Koṭā Rānī and the children, 128; invests Andarkōṭ and kills Bhikshap, 131; marries Koṭā Rānī, 131; ascends the throne as Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I, 69, 131; founds the Kashmīrī era, 131; his reign, 132-134; buried at Andarkōṭ, 130 f.n. 1; Col. Haig on-Bakhshi Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad's appreciation of—, 134.
- Shāh Mirīs, descendants and successors of Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn Shīr Mir or Shāh Mirzā, 65, 132, 211, 212, 218. See Sultāns of Kashmīr.
- Shāh Muhammad, Mullā, of Shāhābād, a learned man, author of the history of Kashmīr, revised by Badāyūnī, 163-164.
- Shāh Nazīr, armour-bearer, kills Mirzā Haidar by mistake at Khānpōr, 20.
- Shams-ud-Dīn Almās, see Almās.
- Shams-ud-Dīn Andrābī, scholar of the time of Bad Shāh, 166.
- Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī, Shaikh, or Mir, 109-112; birth and parentage, 10; belonged to the Shī'a sect according to the Shī'as (?) 109; an orthodox Sunnī according to Sir Wolsley Haig, 108 f.n. 5; conversion of Chal 111; death, 111; gift of confiscated lands by Fath Shāh to, 111; finds asylum in Kashmīr, 190; Chaks embrace his doctrines, 190; banish by Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqī, 190; returns to Kashmīr from exile 192; religious campaign and persecution of the Sunnīs, 192; K Chak imposed on Kashmīr Shī'ite doctrines promulgated by, 19; his son, Mir Dāniyāl executed by Mirzā Haidar on the ruling of the Qāzīs, 206; his grave desecrated, 206; conversion of Chaks by, 2.
- Shams-ud-Dīn I, Sultān, Shāh Mir or Mirzā, see Shāh Mir.
- Shankar Devī, daughter of Bahādur Singh, married to Ya'qūb Sh Chak, becomes Fath Khātūn, and takes her husband to Kishtw 226; 236; 237.
- Shari'at, the law of Islam, 19; Qutb-ud-Dīn marries two sisters contrary to, and divorces one at the bidding of Shāh Hamadān, 90; Sh Hamadān's and Mir Muhammad Hamadānī's work for the enforcement of, 92; Sikandar puts an end to practices contrary to, 1. See also Vol. II, pp. 599-628.
- Shaikh Sharaf-ud-Dīn Mahmūd Muzdaqānī in Ray, the capital of Irānian 'Irāq, Shāh Hamadān's preceptor, 85.
- Shams-ul-'Arifīn or 'the Sun of the Pious,' the chronogram of the death of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī, 99.
- Shaikh-ul-Islam, head of the ecclesiastical department, Maulānā Ka appointed, 162. See also Vol. II, Chapter X, pages 604-5.
- Sharaf-ud-Dīn, Mullā, Shaikh-ul-Islam, son and successor of Muht Khān, 292.
- Sharaf-ud-Dīn 'Alī Yazdī, the historian of Tīmūr, 152. Also see Index Vol. II.
- Sharif of Mecca, Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn sends ambassador to, 171; the temporaries of the Sultān, 172; names of Sharifs detailed, 172.
- Shāhshab, an ancestor of Shāh Mir, 130.

Shel (pronounced Shē), or Sayā-desha, above Leh, on the Indus, famous for large Buddhist images, 170.

Sher Afgan Khān, Yūsuf Chak's bravery in returning the attack of, 233.

Shergarhi, built by Amīr Muhamad Khān Jawān Sher, Afghān Governor of Kashmīr, 314, also f.n. 1.

Sher Muhamad Khān, son of Shāh Valī Khān, Bāmīzai is named Mukhtār-ud-Daula, 304, which also see.

Shi'as, 109, 111, 112; Sayyid Muhammad Baihaqi's measures against, 190, 192; imposition of—doctrines by Kāji Chak, 199; persecutor under Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt of, 205, 206, 207; imposition of Shi'a doctrines by Daulat Chak, 210; clashes with the Sunnis 218; trial of Yūsuf Māndav, a Shi'a fanatic, 220-223; tolerance to Sunnis under 'Alī Shāh Chak, 225; persecution of Sunnis, 234; clashes with Sunnis, 277.

Shihāb-ud-Dīn of Baghdād, Sayyid, shrine at Achabal of, 4 f.n. 2.

Shihāb-ud-Dīn, Sultān, formerly known as Siyāmuk, 135; Shāh Hamadān enters Kashmīr in the reign of, 86; expedition against Ohind, 86, 138; accession, 135-6; glorious reign, 136-141; conquests, 137; reorganizes military power, 137; a builder, 139; Lachhmīnagar and Shihāb-ud-dīnpūr, 139; cantonment and barracks for soldiers, 139; campaign in Sind, 137-38; subjectior of Kāshghar, Badakhshān and Kābul, Tibet, Kishtwār and Jammu 137-138; generosity, 139; placed along with Lalitāditya-Muktāpīda 136; tolerance, 139-40; Sir Muhammad Iqbāl's couplet referring to the Kashmīri of the days of—, 139; critical estimate, 140-1.

Shihāb-ud-dīnpūr, modern Shādīpūr, built by Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 139; Akbar's visit to, 139; appreciation by Abu'l Fazl and Jahāngīr, 139.

Shir-āshāmak, 'the little milk drinker,' early name of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 136.

Shinsawbu, Queen, of Burma, contemporary of Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 171.

Shirshātaka, Jonarāja's early name of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 136.

Shirīn and Farhād, reference to the stream of milk drawn by Farhād, 1

Shönberg, Baron Eric von, visits Kashmīr during Sikh rule, 15; extracts from his Travels quoted in Chapter XI, Volume II.

Shujā'-ul-Mulk, proclaims himself King of Afghānistān, 304; defeat and flight, 304; enthroned at Kābul, 304; expedition to Kashmīr abandoned, 305; trouble at home, unsuccessful attempts, 305; prisoner in Kashmīr, 305; Sikh-Afghān invasion of Kashmīr, 306; agreement with Ranjit Singh, 306; hands over the Kōh or Kūh-i-Nūr, 306; imprisonment and escape from Sikh custody, 307; unsuccessful attack on Kashmīr, 307; attack on Kābul fails, 308; baulked of the throne, 308; seeks British help, captures Qandahār and Kābul, 332; assassination, 332.

Shupiyān, 7 miles S. W. of Hūrapur, 180; town attacked by Ranjit Singh, 329.

Siālkōt, identified with Çakala, Mihirakula's capital according to Fleet 44; Shāhī Khān flies to, 155; Sultān 'Alī Shāh successful at, 156; Sir Muhammad Iqbāl's family migrates to, 173.

Siddhapuri palace, temples rebuilt by Bad Shāh in the, 173.

- Sikandar, Sultān, Jonarājā calls him Shakandhara, 142 ; share in the spread of Islam, 103-109 ; bigotry discussed, 103-6 ; wrongly called Bu shikhan (iconoclast), 103 ; criticized for his attitude to temples, 103 ; persecution of rival religions before the time of, 104-105 ; a false charge against responsibility for Sūhabhaṭṭa's actions against Hindus, 106 ; charges discussed, 108 ; early life, 142 ; accession, 143 ; his contemporaries, 143 ; under his mother Haura's regency, 143 ; subdues Ohin and marries Mira, daughter of its chief, 143 ; Minister Rāy Māgre's ambition, 143 ; defeats Rāy Māgre, 144 ; invasion of Little Tibet, 144 ; exchanges courtesy with Tīmūr, 144 ; proceeds to meet Tīmūr, 145 ; sends ambassadors to Tīmūr, 145 ; remits taxes, namely, to Bāj and the Tamgha, 145 ; also the f.n. ; patronage of learning, 144-6 ; zeal for religion, 146 ; architecture, 146 ; builds mosques, madrasas and hospices, 146 ; regard for Sayyid Muhammad Hamadānī, 147 ; death, 147-148 ; persecution of Hindus discussed, 148, 153 ; religious policy discussed, 151-52 ; prosperity in Kashmir under, 152.
- Sikandar Khān, Sultānzāda, a second son of Sultān Abū Sa'īd of Kāshghar accompanies Mirzā Hadiar Dūghlāt to invade Kashmir, 197.
- Sikh rule, visits of certain travellers referred to during, 15 ; invasion, 329-337. See also Chapter XI, Kashmir under the Sikhs, Volume I pp. 699-750-A.
- Sikhs, number in the population of the Kashmir Valley, 8 ; restore the name of Srinagar in place of Kashmir, or as locally known Kash, 47 ; discard idolatry, 153.
- Simha, astrologer of the time of Baḍ Shāh, 168.
- Simhadeva, condition of Kashmir under, 67.
- Simhapura, political power of Kashmir extends to, 51.
- Simnān, village, 145 miles east of Teherān, Irān, 84, f.n.
- Sirkōṭ, tank, in Kishtwār, 237.
- Sinha, Dr. Sachchidananda, quoted on Mughul visits to the Valley Kashmir, 295.
- Siyāmuk, nickname of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 136.
- Siyar-ul-Muta'akkhirīn*, The, on Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn's early name, 136 ; Akbar draws lots about the leader of the Kashmir campaign according to, 233.
- Sīstan, Baḍ Shāh sends ambassador to, 171.
- Skārdu, Mir Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī returns from, 192 ; reference to 'Alī's chief of, 219.
- Smith, Dr. Vincent A., his assertion on Akbar, 177.
- Smuts, General, on revival of religious faith, 95.
- Snakes, of Kashmir not poisonous, 21. See also Serpent-worship.
- Société Asiatique, Paris, French translation of the Rājataranginī by Captain A. Troyer under the auspices of, 65.
- Somananda, originator of Kashmirī Āivism, 71.
- Somanātha (Sōmnāt), Mahmūd's expedition to, 59.
- Sonamarg, glacier valley of, 4.

Sopōr, headquarters of Kamrāj during Muslim rule, 8 ; village, seat of Suyyapura, commemorating the name of Suyya, the great engineer, 56 ; population, 56 ; residence built by Sultān Hasan Shāh, 56 f.n. 1 ; Bad Shāh built a bridge over the Jhelum at, 56 f.n. 1 ; Ādam Khān's march against and reduction of, 180 ; Hājī Khān's reverse at, and Ādam Khān's flight to, 180.

South Carolina, U.S.A., latitude corresponding to that of Kashmīr, 8.

Spain, Kashmīrī women would be called brunettes according to George Forster in, 24 ; contemporaries of Bad Shāh among the Nasrids of Granada in, 172.

Srinagar, 4 and f.n. 1, 6 ; described as Venice in the heart of Switzerland, 6 ; a tahsil and district of Anantnāg (Islāmābād) 7 ; chief city of Marāj during Muslim rule, 8 ; road from Bārāmūla, 10 f.n. 1 ; distance from Nila-nāga, 10 f.n. 2 ; built originally by Açoka, 38 ; present city built by Pravarsena II, 47 ; descriptive note on, 47-49 ; references in Buddhist literature to, 50 ; described by Bilhaña, 61 ; 'Alā'-ud-dīnpōr and Budhagira now mahallas or quarters of Srinagar, 135 ; Shihāb-ud-dīnpōr a mahalla of, 139 ; Qutb-ud-dīnpōr a mahalla of, 142.

Sripṛatāpsinghpōr, another name for Badgām tahsil in the Bārāmūla district, 7.

Stālīnābād, reference to—in Professor E. Pavlovsky's letter to Dr. Sufi about Shāh Hamadān's Mausoleum at Khatlān in Kolāb, 116*a*, b.

Stein, Sir Aurel, English translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, 7 f.n. ; on the derivation of Kama-rāj and Mara-rāj, 8 ; on the name Kashmīr, 13 ; his exhaustive exposition of the pre-Islamic period, 35 ; his method of translation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī criticized, 66 ; life and work, 72-73.

Stone Age relics found in Kashmīr, 15.

Stuti Kusmāñjali (Offering of Prayer Flowers) the, written during the reign of Sultān Hasan Shāh, 186.

Subhātā, or Qobha, queen of Sultān Sikandar, 143, 144.

Sūfis, mystics, 19. See Sayyids and Tasawwuf.

Sugandhā, queen of Çamkaravarman, builds temples at Paṭan, 57.

Sūhabhaṭṭa's conversion to Islam, 93, 106, 148 ; adopts Islamic name of Saif-ud-Dīn, 93 ; his daughter married to Mīr Muḥammad Hamadānī, 93 ; buildings commemorating his name, 93 ; destroys temples, 106 ; regency of—during Sikandar's childhood, 147, 149 ; persecution of Hindus, 148-9 ; minister under Sultān 'Alī Shāh, 155 ; death, 155.

Suhraward, town, 82 f.n. 1.

Suhyār or Sehyār, Masjid, landing place, and mahalla, built by Sūhabhaṭṭa, 93. See also Sehyār.

Sukh Jiwan Mal Khatrī, originally of Bhera, Khushāb in the Punjāb, Nāzim, declares independence, 309 ; defeats Kashmīrī nobles and the former Afghān governor, 309-10 ; military disasters, 310 ; Afghān invasion repulsed, 310 ; defeated in second invasion, 310-11 ; tragic death, 311 ; career, 311-12 ; religious intolerance, 312 ; Azād Bilgrāmī's note on, 311 ; his pathetic verses, 312.

Sulaimān Rīshī, a Muslim mystic, 96 f.n. 2.

Sultān, title adopted by the Shāh Miris, 135; Mahmūd of Ghazna first to adopt this title, 136; dignity of the title, 136.

Sultān Muhammad, a poet of the time of Baḍ Shāh, 166.

Sultānate, the, note on its origin and application, 135-36.

Sultāns of Kashmīr, the, territory under, 7; Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn I, 132-135; Sultān Jamshīd, 135; Sultān 'Alā'-ud-Dīn, 134-35; Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 136-41; Sultān Qutb-ud-Dīn, 141-3; Sultān Sikandar, 143-5; Sultān 'Alī Shāh, 155-7; Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 157-83; Sultān Haidar Shāh, 184-85; Sultān Hasan Shāh, 185-7; Sultān Muhammad Shāh, 187-9, 190-1, 193, 194-5, 195-8; Sultān Fath Shāh, 189-191-3, 193-4; Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh, 195; Sultān Nāzuk Shāh, 195-204-10; Sultān Shams-ud-Dīn II, 198-9; Sultān Ibrāhīm Shāh, 199-200; Sultān Ismā'il Shāh II, 210; Sultān Ḥabīb Shāh, 211-2.

Sultān 'Umarov, of Tāshqand, see 'Umarov.

Sundarasena, twenty-second in the line of the Pāṇḍu dynasty, perished in the earthquake along with his subjects, 37.

Sundarasena, the chief of Rājāpurī, modern Rajaurī, sends his eldest daughter to Baḍ Shāh, whom he calls his mother, 177.

Sunnīs, Arabs in the U. S. S. R., 19; Shams-ud-Dīn 'Irāqī an orthodox Sunni, 109 f.n. 5; alarmed by spread of Shi'ism, 112; persecuted the Shi'as, 192; clashes with Shi'ism, 218, 270; Sunni divines executed, 223; tolerance under 'Alī Shāh Chak, 225; persecution under Ya'qūb Shāh Chak, petition to Akbar for help by, 234.

Superstition, ingrained in the nature of the Kashmīrī, 19.

Sūr Sultāns, forestalled by Baḍ Shāh in building caravanserais, 15.

Suraja Ballāl Singh of Gondwāna, a contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 15.
Suraj Mal, son of Rājā Baso, referred to in the Kishtwār campaign of Jahāngīr, 265.

Sūrat, Bernier's visit to, 14.

Sūryamatī, queen of Ananta, 59; her character and ability, 59; Ananta abdicates on her advice, 59.

Sussala raises the standard of revolt against Harsha, 62; accession, Dāmara rebellion and flight to Pūnch, 63; restoration, 63; murder, 63.

Suttee, prohibited by Sultān Sikandar under Mir Muhammad Hamadī influence, 93, 146, 149; under Akbar and Jahāngīr, 262-63.

Suyya, engineer under Avantivarman, 55, 56.

Swayamvara, held by the king of Gandhāra, 36.

Switzerland, compared with Kashmīr, 1, 2; climate compared, 6, compared, 8.

Syed Ameer Ali, on the real teachings of Islam, quoted from his The Spirit of Islam, 20.

Syria, Damascus in, 8; Bernier's visit to, 14.

- Tabaqāt-i-Akbarī*, The, on the failure of Jasrat Khān Gakhkhār's conquest of Delhi, 170; on Bad Shāh's allowing treasuries of conquered countries to be plundered, and assessing the revenue on them on the same scale as that of the country round the capital, 170; on Sultān Hās Khān's conquest in Hindustān, 184; on educational foundations by Husain Chak, 224; note on the history and its author, Khwā Nizām-ud-Dīn Ahmad Bakhshī, 249-250.
- Tāhir, father of Shāh Mīr, 130.
- Tāhir, Mīr, Akbar directs him to Yūsuf Chak, 232.
- Tājik, or Uzbek, population of Arabs in isolated groups in Turkistān among the, 18.
- Tājikistān, the Academy of Sciences in, in reference to Mr. Semenov, 116a Kolāb, in—, 116b.
- Tāj Khātūn, Baihaqī Begam, Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn's beloved Queen, 178, called by Qrīvara Voḍha Khātunā, 178.
- Tāj, the, Shāh Jahān's dream in marble, 3.
- Tāj-ud-Dīn, Sayyid, and his disciples, 84; cousin of Shāh Hamadār arrives in Kashmīr in the reign of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 84.
- Takht-i-Sulaimān, the, view from, 3; Stone Age relics found at, 15 religious edifice on, 39.
- Tālikhān (Tolikon), a town in Afghānistān, 116d.
- Tamgha*, tax, remitted by Sultān Sikandar, 145, 146.
- Tāpar, ancient Pratāpapura, 51; excavations at, 51; the Vishṇu temple of, 51.
- Tārāpīḍa, his cruel rule, 52.
- Tarbiyat Khān, governor of Kashmīr under Shāh Jahān, 272.
- Tarīqat*, the 'True Way,' comment by Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt on, 19.
- Tārsar, a lake in the Phāk pargana, 230.
- Tasawwuf*, mysticism of the Sūfis, Shāh Hamadān studies, 85;—of the enervating type not countenanced by Islam, 94. See Sūfis and Sayyids.
- Tashkent or Tāshqand, Mr. Sultān 'Umarov, Rector of the University of, 116a.
- Tāzī Baṭ, aids Fath Khān against the Sayyids, 188.
- Taxila, Takkasilā or Takshaṣilā, political power of Kashmīr extends to, 51.
- Teachings of Nīla, or the teachings of the sage Nīla, the chief of the Nāgas, the oldest extant written record dealing with the legends about the origin of Kashmīr and its sacred places, 11 f.n.
- Temples, of Pāndrethan, built by King Pārtha excavated, 39; Çankar-āchārya, built by Jalauka and rebuilt by Rājā Gopālāditya, 39; Vishṇu temple at Tāpar, 51; Mārtaṇḍa, 52-3; Avanti Swāmin and Avantīvara, 56; ruins at Çamkarapura, 57; converted into mosques by converts to Islam, 89; destroyed by Sultān Sikandar, 103-109; destroyed by Hindu and Buddhist kings, 105; destroyed by Dūlchā, (?) 106; destruction of, by Malik Sūhabhatṭa, 106; accounts of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt and Jahāngīr, 107-8; chief temple in Kishtwār converted into a mosque, 115; temples converted into mosques, 150; demolished temples rebuilt and new temples erected during Bad Shāh's rule, 173.

- Terra Dr. H. De, and T. T. Paterson, essential data for the study early man contained in Kashmīr, in studies on the Ice Age in India and Associated Human Cultures, 1; comments on the terraces of Valley, 9.
- Tibet, Mahāyana system introduced by Nāgārjuna, 43; into western part annexed to the Chinese Empire, 51; Lalitāditya's victory over, Rīṣhāna in Kashmīr from Western—, 69; conquered by Sul Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 137; Bhōṭṭaland or Western Tibet added to dominions by Sultān Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 170; ruler sends gift to Zain-ul-'Ābidīn, 171, 175; invaded by Mīrzā Haidar, Dāghlāt, 201; conquered by Ghāzī Chak, 219; final conquest by Zafar Khān, wāli governor under Shāh Jahān 267-8.
- Timūr, intolerance towards the Sayyids, 84, 94, 96; disagreement with Shāh Hamadān, 116c; graves of one of—'s descendants at Kolahāṭ, 116d.; invasion of India by, 144; exchange of courtesy with Sul Sikandar, 145; Sikandar's ambassadors and presents to, 145.
- Timūr Shāh, son and successor of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, ten years on throne at the time of Forster's visit to Kashmīr, 14; accession, 14; transfers capital from Qandahār to Kābul, 300; conquests, 300; deposes, 300; appoints Hājī Karīmḍād Khān Bāmizai, governor of Kashmīr, 315; confers the title of Shujā'-ul-Mulk on Hājī Karīmḍād, 315.
- Tolikon, 116d. See Tālikhān.
- Tonwār Rājā of Gwālīār, love of music, a common bond with Baḍ Shāh, 171.
- Toramāṇa, establishes the Hun empire, 43-44.
- Torrans, Lieutenant-Colonel, H. D., his Travels quoted, 25; comparison between the suburbs of Srīnagar and Istanbūl quoted, 48.
- Tosha Maidān, 10 miles south-east of Gulmarg, 141, 329; note on, 330.
- Trade routes, Srīnagar a terminal of, 48.
- Trāgabāl, heights of, 4 and f.n. 7.
- Trebeck, George, accompanies Dr. William Moorcroft, 208, f.n.
- Travellers' visits to the Valley, 13-15; comments on the terraces of Valley, 9, 14. See also Index to Vol. II.
- Troyer, Captain A., Principal, Calcutta Sanskrit College, translates French the Rājataranṅinī, of Pandit Kalyāṇa or Kalhaṇa, 61.
- Tsunt-i-kol canal, forms the Māyasum island of Srīnagar, 49.
- Tuberculosis among Panditānis, 24.
- Tughhrā*, poet, 273.
- Tunina II, 47; see Pravarasena I-Prashāsana.
- Tūrān, Baḍ Shāh invites craftsmen from, 161.
- Turānian stock, the, Nāgas belonged to, according to James Fergusson, 50.
- Turk, bracketed with the Kashmīrī in comeliness, 24.
- Turkey in Europe, area compared to that of the Kashmīr Valley, 8; Shāh sends ambassador to the Sultān of, 171.

Turkistān, Eastern, expedition by Kadphises II, 41; annexed to Chinese empire, 51; Baḍ Shāh invites craftsmen from, 161; se ambassador to, 171.

Turkmān, republic in the U.S.S.R., isolated groups of Arabs living in, Turushka, captains of hundreds supported with money by Harsha, 77.

Ucchala, raises the standard of revolt against Harsha, 62; accession, breaks down the power of the Dāmaras, 62; conspiracy and death, Udakpati, Rājā of Nagarkōṭ's excursion into Firūz Tughluq's territory, 138; acknowledges fealty to Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 139.

Udayaḡri, prime minister of Sultān Shihāb-ud-Dīn, 139-40; a Mus (?), 140; Sultān's indignation at the suggestion of—for melt Buddha's brass image, 139.

Udbhaṭa, the teacher of the theory of three Vṛttis, 70.

Udyānadeva, succeeds Riñchana (Sultān Sadr-ud-Dīn), 69; flees to S or Gandhāra before Dulcha, 128; invited by Kōṭā Rānī, 1; marries Kōṭā Rānī 128; raised to the throne by Shāh 1 or Mirzā, 128; his character, 128; flight before Achala's invasion, 69; popular resentment, 129; a mere cypher: Shāh Mir all power 69; nominal rule, 129; character, 128; death, 130.

Ujjain or Ujjayini, Kālidāsa halts at, 46; Vikramāditya Harsha, king 47.

Umarov, Sultān, Rector, Central Asian University of Tāshqand, 116a.

United States of America, South Carolina situated in, 8.

University, Kashmīr of the age of Prince Guṇavarman a seat of, Baḍ Shāh's, 162. See also Index to Vol. II.

Uraḡā, (Hazāra) political power of Kashmīr extends to, 51.

Urdu culture, emerges in Northern India owing to interplay of Hindu and Muslim cultures, says Mr. Guy Wint in India and Democracy, 8.

Urī, 7, 155.

Urwan or Urdil, invades Kashmīr, same as Achalā (?), 128.

Uškara, (Wuškur) village, site of ancient Huṣkapura, 10 f.n. 1.

Usmān Uchchap Ganāī, Makhcūm Bābā, led the burial prayers Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, 99.

Utpala Dynasty, founded by Avantivarman, 55.

Uttar-machipōr, another name for the Handwāra taluk in the Bārām district, 7.

Uttha-Soma, Hindu scholar of the time of Baḍ Shāh and author of Jaina-charita in Kashmīrī, 176.

Uwais-al-Qaranī, a saint, Abu'l Fazl compares Wāhid Sūfī to, 69; Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn compared to, 100; also f.n.

Uzbek, republic in the U.S.S.R., isolated groups of Arabs living in, 1

Vafadār Khān, title conferred on Rahmatullāh Sadozai by Shāh Zaman 301.

Vajrāditya Bappiyaka, sells men to the Mlechhas, 54, 77.

- Valley of Kashmīr, width 2; altitude, climate, districts and tahsils, 7; number of villages, 7; Kashmīrī-speaking area, 7; divisions, 7-8; area compared with other states and countries, 8; latitudes compared, 8; uniqueness, 8; population, 8; shape of the Valley, 9; conspicuous features, 9; a vast lake in pre-historic times (?), 9; not known to Alexander the Great, 13; discussion about the name, 12-13; Chinese name of, 13; the Kashmīrī's name Kashir, 13; material prosperity fading under Jayasimha's successors, 66-68; 624, 55, 68.
- Valley of Kashmīr, The*, by Walter R. Lawrence, quoted for description of the Valley, 8. See index to Vol. II.
- Vālmiki, Ṛgveda's recitation of the Vāshishṭa Brahma-darshana of, heard by Sultān Zain-ul-'Abidīn, 167.
- Vamana, the founder of the Riti School, 70.
- Vantipōr, modern name of Avantipura, 56; location and ruins, 56 f.n. 2.
- Varāh mihirā's Bṛhatsamhitā referred to, 35 f.n. 2.
- Varāhāmūla, Viṣṇu as Varāha strikes the mountains of Kashmīr, at 10; modern Bārāmūla, 10. See also Bārāmūla.
- Vasishka, predeceased his father Kanishka, 43.
- Vasudeva or Jushka, last Kushāna ruler, 43; Kushāna rule in Kashmīr comes to an end, 43.
- Vedānta, influence on the character of the Kashmīrī, 19; mysticism, 94; influence on idol-worship, 153.
- Vendrahōm, Stone Age relics found at, 15.
- Venice, gondolier of—compared with the Kashmīrī boatman, 21.
- Vēr, spring of, 4 and f.n. 4.
- Ver-nāg, the, gushing spring of, 4 and f.n. 3-4; 10 f.n. 2, 259; Jahāngīr builds a garden at, 263; also had a picture gallery there, 263.
- Vidarbha (Berār), Nāgārjuna's birth-place, 42.
- Vigne, G.T., views on Kashmīr, 2, 5 f.n. 3; a noted visitor to Kashmīr, 15; the Kashmīrī called the Neapolitan of the East by, 21. See Vol. II, p. 724, footnote on—.
- Vihāras*, Buddhist, destroyed after Ou-k'ong or Wu-k'ung, a Chinese pilgrim, 104.
- Vijayanagar, Devārāya II of, contemporary of Baḍ Shāh, 171.
- Vikrama era, not called after Vikramādityā till the tenth century, 47.
- Vikramāditya Harsha, rule over Kashmīr, 47; no indisputable proof of the existence of, 47; Vikrama era, 47.
- Villages, number of, in Kashmīr, 7; on the terraces of the Kashmīr Valley, 9; inhabitants of frontier villages resemble Jews, 16.
- Viṣṇu, one of the Hindu Triad, appearing in aid of Kaçyapa, assumes the form of Varāha and strikes mountains, 10; ruins of the temple at Tāpar, 151.
- Visitors to the Valley, noted, 15.
- Vitastā (the Jhelum), the, Valley of the, 7.
- Vrees, Dr. K. De, edits the Nilamata, 11 f.n.
- Vular, Lake, see Wulur.

- Wāhid Sūfi, a saint, Abu'l Fazl on—, 96-97.
- Wā'in, also called Woin, or Wōñu, a petty trader, 21.
- Wales, Lolāb reminding one of, 6.
- Warwick of Afghānistān, or its King Maker, Vazīr Fath Khān, 304.
- Wars of the Roses, struggles of Muhammad Shāh and Fath Shāh compared to, 190.
- Wāza, considered an excellent cook in Kashmīr, 21.
- Wells, H.G., on the Council of Constance, 149.
- Widows, re-marriage, 128; deprived of husband's property if childless 135. See also Suttee.
- Wilson, Andrew, description of the Mānasbal in The Abode of Snow, f.n. 6; on the Wulur Lake, 158, f.n. 3.
- Wint, Guy, contrasts between Hinduism and Islam, 79-80; on the interaction of the two cultures, 80.
- Women of Kashmīr, outsiders' impressions, 22; uncleanness, 23-4 Panditānī and Musalmān-nī compared, 24; compared with Turkish Irānian or Afghān beauty, 24; health and enlightenment, 25; widow re-marriage, 128.
- Wulur, Lake, 4 and f.n. 7; last relic of the great expanse of water according to Montgomerie, 11-12; 56; Baḍ Shāh builds his palace in, 158-161 legend of, 159-60; location, name, description and appreciation 158; f.n. 3; Baḍ Shāh engaged in sport on, 177; Zaina-lān on the, 161.
- Wu-k'un, Chinese pilgrim in Kashmīr, 104; see Ou-k'ong.
- Wuṣkur (Vṣkara), village, site of ancient Huṣkapura, 10 f.n. 1.
- Wycliffe, his bones burnt, 149; Papal bull against—, 149.
-
- Xavier, St. Francis, Apostle of the East, 14.
- Xavier, St. Jerome, first European in Kashmīr, 14.
-
- Yaṣaskara, mild rule in the midst of anarchy and confusion of, 58.
- Yaṣovarman, of Central India, leader of the confederacy against Mihirakula, 44.
- Yaṣovatī, installed on the throne by Krishṇa on Dāmodara I's death, 31.
- Ya'qūb Shāh Chak, accession, 233; misrule and rebellion, 234; persecution of the Sunnīs, 234; Sunnī petition to Akbar and Mughul invasion 234; flight, 234; end of the Chak Dynasty, 234; attempt to recover Kashmīr fails, 236, 241-43; death, 236-7.
- Yār Muhammad Khān, son of 'Abdullāh Khān Halokozaī, 304; Lail Ranjīt Singh's favourite horse originally belonged to, 330 f.n. 1.
- Yārqaṇḍ, 113 f.n.; conquered by Kanishka, 43.
- Yāsman Rishī, converts Sālār-Sanz (Shaikh Sālār-ud-Dīn), 98; life in the forest, 98; Sālār-ud-Dīn's visit during illness of, 99.
- Yāvanas, Jayasīṃha's commander goes into camp with, 63.
- Yazīdī, Sharaf-ud-Dīn 'Alī, see Sharaf-ud-Dīn.
- Yōdhabhaṭṭa, a noted scholar of the time of Baḍ Shāh, 167.

INDEX—Vol. I

- Younghusband, Sir Francis, compares Kashmīr with Switzerland his book, Kashmīr, 1 f.n. 7 ; comparison with Greece quoted, 2 ; the Jewish cast of the Kashmīrī face, 16 ; on the character of Kashmīrī people, 21 ; on Martandā, 53 ; on two centuries of mis- following Uccala's death, 63.
- Yüan Chwāng, or Hiuen Tsiang, the Chinese pilgrim, having more than half a dozen forms of his name, 50. See Hiuen Tsiang.
- Yüdhisṭhira, Pāṇḍava hero, 35, f.n. 2.
- Yüdhisṭhira I, last of the Gonanda line, 49.
- Yueh-chi, their origin, early history, 41 ; Kushāna section extinguish Greek kingdoms of Northern India, 41 ; welded together Kadphises I, 41.
- Yūsuf Māṇḍav, a Shī'a fanatic, assaults Sayyid Habībullāh Khwāri : 222 ; sentenced to be stoned to death by a jury of divines, 222
- Yūsuf Mirzā, an adherent of Mirzā Haidar Dūghlāt, killed in the Sh strife, 207.
- Yūsuf Shāh Chak, crowned king before the death of his father 'Alī Sh Chak, 227 ; accession, 227 ; estrangement with his minister Sa Mubārak Baihaqī, 227 ; lack of diplomacy, 227 ; Sayyid Mub Baihaqī accepts the challenge of, and defeats, 227 ; revolt of no 227 ; loss of throne and flight, 227 ; unsuccessful attempt to re throne, 228 ; seeks help of Akbar, 229 ; marches on Srīnagar regains throne, 229 ; conspiracy and revolt, 230 ; Mughul inva 231-3 ; death of Bīrbal and peace terms, 233 ; prisoner at the M court, 233 ; critical estimate, 233 ; command in the Mughul arm Bihār, 243 ; death, 243 ; Dr. V.A. Smith's comment on the treat of the ex-ruler of Kashmīr, 244 ; Yūsuf Shāh corrects Akbar's singer Miyān Tān Sen, 244.
- Yūsuf-Zulāikḥā of Maulānā Jāmī, The, sanskritized by Çrīvara, 191.
- Yūz Āsaf Hazrat, misunderstood for Christ, 40 ; Egyptian ambassa the court of Baq Shāh, 40 ; one of the scholars at Baq Shāh's c 166.
-
- Zafar Khān Ahsan, Nawwāb, his couplets on the Dal quoted, 3 ; parer patronizes the poet, Mirzā Muhammad 'Alī Sā'ib of Irān, early Sa 271 ; reappointed governor, 267 ; final conquest of Tibet, 267 ; re of the hardships of the people of Kashmīr about saffron-plu etc., 268-70 ; plants gardens, 270 ; his Persian masnawīs : the Manzil, the Jahwa-i-Nāz, and the Maikhāna-i-Rāz, 270-1.
- Zafar-nāma*, The, of Sharaf-ud-Dīn 'Alī Yazdī, referred to for T envoys to Sultān Sikandar bringing him a robe of honour, 145 ;
- Zafar-nāma-i-Ranjūt Singh*, The, of Kanhaiyā Lāl, quoted about Sikh campaign, 324-325, 335. See Index to Vol. II.
- Zai Dea, married to Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn Rīshī, renounces the worl is buried at Kaimūh, 100.
- Zaina Kadal, tomb of Baq Shāh at, 181.
- Zain-ud-Dīn, Bābā, disciple of Shaikh Nūr-ud-Dīn, 102 ; original Ziyā Singh, 102 ; a convert to Islam, 102 ; contemporary of Zain-ul-'Abidīn, 166.

Zain-ul-'Ābīdīn, Sultān, Baḍ Shāh institutes a search for ancient manuscripts, 36, f. n.; orders the translation of the Rājatarangīnī, 65; contrasted with Sultān Sikandar, 103; conversion of Khakha and Hatmāl tribes during the reign of, 108; second son of Queen Mira, 144; known as Shāh Rukh or Shāhī Khān (sometimes wrongly written as Shādi Khān) before accession, 144, 157; entrusted with the care of the kingdom by his elder brother, Sultān 'Alī Shāh, 155; defeated at Uṛī by 'Alī Shāh, 155; fratricidal contest, 156; early education and accession, 157; sense of justice, 157-8; passion for architecture and town-planning, ruins of townships, 158 and f. n. 1; Zaina-lānk on the Wulur Lake, 158-61; Mullā Ahmad Kashmīrī on this structure, 160; builds palace at Nau Shahr and Suratāppōr, 161; patronage of arts and crafts, 161-2; medical facilities and maternity welfare, 162; patronage of letters, 162-169; student and patron of Samskrt, 166-8; his compositions, questions and answers, and on the preparation of explosives, 168; his Shikāyat (Plaint) treating of the vanity of all objects, 168; love of poetry and poets at his court, 168-9; translation of the Mahābhārata by his command, 168; collects a library, 168; loves music, 171; his army and conquests, 170; statesmanship and foreign relations, 170-1; contemporaries in India, 171; European contemporaries, 172; Muslim contemporaries, 172; benevolent attitude towards Hindus, 172-4; as a law-giver, 174; his prison reforms, 174; agricultural reform, 174-5; sources of income, 175; compared with Akbar in the extent of empire, 174; their family lives compared, also general habits, 175-179; closing days and death, 179-182; burial, 181-182; attitude towards women, 177; grief at the loss of the beloved Queen Tāj Khātūn Baihaqī Begam, 178, his children, 178; jealousy among his sons, 179; like Jahāngīr, Baḍ Shāh's eldest son rebels and is defeated, 180.

Zaitī Chak, known as Zait Shāh, disciple of Shaikh Hamza Makhdūm, 226.

Zamān Shāh, ruler of Afghānistān, accession and invasion of India by, 301; conspiracy discovered, 303; rebellion and flight, 303; critical estimate and last days, 300; chastizes Mīr Hazār Khān, 320; Dīwān Nand Rām, Kashmīrī Pandit, a minister at Kābul, 321.

Zangī Chak for Rīgī Chak in Ross's English translation of the Ta'rikh-i-Rashīdī, 202.

Zewar, village in Kishtwār, 237.

Ziyārāt, shrines, beauty of those constructed by Muslim Rīshīs, 97, the Khānqāh defined, 83 f. n.

Zōjī Lā Pass, the, Dulcha enters Kashmīr through, 117; Rīnchana, 119; Mīrzā Haidar Dāghlāt, 119; connects Kashmīr with Ladākh, Tibet and China, 119. See Index to Vol. II.

Zoroastrian, Kashmīr once a Zoroastrian country according to Sir J. J. Modi, 15, f. n. 2.

Zuhra Begam, the daughter of 'Ālamgīr II, married to Tīmūr, son of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 299.

Zuhūrī, famous poet of Bijāpur, on Kashmīrīs' beauty, 23, 24.

Zulchu, see Dulcha.

Zulfaqār or Zulfiqār Khān, elder brother of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, 298.

